

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. PREFACE.

This Edition, the sixteenth, of the 'Handbook for North Italy' has been subjected to very careful revision; and with the view of obtaining the latest and most accurate information, the Editor has visited every city which falls within the scope of the present volume. With regard to the practical and important question of Hotels, as it is manifestly impossible that he should have tested in person the merits of them all, he has been at much pains to acquire trustworthy information from others—a matter of no small difficulty, inasmuch as the statements of travellers on this point are sometimes strangely conflicting.

Considerable additions have been made to the work, while much obsolete matter has been removed. The Routes, moreover, have been entirely re-cast, and adapted to the recent extensive development of the Railway system in Northern Italy.

This volume relates to the great physical feature of the Peninsula, the valley of the Po, comprising the countries between the Alps, the Apennines, and the Adriatic; and to the Ligurian provinces. For a description of Florence and Tuscany, the traveller is referred to the 'Handbook for Central Italy.' Several frontier Towns and Routes leading into Italy have been transferred from the Handbooks of France, Switzerland, and S. Germany, for the traveller's convenience.

The Publisher is indebted for much valuable information to numerous correspondents, both in Italy and at home, and he begs them to accept his best acknowledgments. He may Historical and Topographical Sketches of the Divisions of North Italy.— Abbreviations, &c., employed in the Handbook.

1.—PLAN OF THE WORK.

The sixteenth edition of this Handbook has been not only revised, but to a great extent re-written. The enormous development of the Railway System has rendered this necessary, with a view to bringing practical information up to a recent date; while the researches of Art critics have created almost a revolution in the literature of Painting and Sculpture, and involved an entire re-casting of the descriptive accounts of Public Galleries and Museums. The Handbook does not of course profess to be an exhaustive treatise on the Art or Scenery of any country. Italy in particular has been so long studied, and so repeatedly and carefully described by persons of ability and acquirements, that the most difficult task is that of selecting materials; and the great object of the Editor has been to furnish the traveller on the one hand with practical information obtained on the spot, and on the other hand with the means of best employing his time during a presumably limited tour.

2.—Passports, Custom-houses, and Registration of Luggage.

Although no longer officially indispensable, a Passport † in Italy will often be found extremely useful as a means of identification at the Post Office, and may sometimes prove a good friend to the traveller, should any unforeseen difficulty arise. No pedestrian should be without one, as the [†] Foreign Office passports may be obtained at a trifling cost from Messrs. Lee and Curter, 440, West Strand, Edw. Stanford, Charing Cross, or Adams, 59, Fleet Street.

mere act of walking for any long distance is a cause of suspicion, and the tourist is almost certain to be challenged by a couple of gendarmes on the road between any two country towns.

Custom-house.—The examination on the frontier is generally lenient and formal, unless the traveller himself, by impatience, or by an apparent desire to evade search, should excite suspicion. Persons are strongly recommended to be as frank and obliging as possible, and to "declare" at once any articles, especially lace or tobacco, which they may carry either in their pockets or among their luggage, otherwise they render themselves liable to inconvenient detention, and a heavy fine. It is unwise, and sometimes dangerous, to offer a bribe.

REGISTRATION OF LUGGAGE.

Luggage registered from London to	Viâ	Will be examined at
Paris or intermediate Stations Brussels or Antwerp Brussels or Antwerp Cologne and the Rhine Any German Station (viâ Herbesthal) Any Swiss Station Basle and Strassburg	Calais Calais Ostend Calais or Ostend Calais or Ostend Ostend Calais or Ostend	Paris Blandain Ostend Cologne Cologne Cologne Luxemburg.

The Luggage of passengers with through tickets for Italy can only be registered as far as Paris. On arriving there, passengers must provide for its transport across Paris to the Terminus from which they depart, where it must be re-registered to its destination.

Luggage passing through Belgium for France or England is not examined at all by the Belgian customs.

3.—ROUTES TO ITALY: TIME AND COST.

The following are the chief Routes by which the traveller can approach Italy; the principal Stations have been inserted, with the approximate duration of journey, and cost of 1st and 2nd class tickets by express train. Direct tickets for the principal towns of Italy are issued in London, Brussels, and Paris, with liberty to stop en route. It must be remembered that in France there is no Second Class to an Express train.

For particulars about Tickets see p. [16].

5.—BAILWAYS-TICKETS-LUGGAGE-CARRIAGES-EXPENSES.

Railways.—Express Thains (treni diretti). The charge for travelling by these trains is 10 per cent. higher than by the ordinary trains. Average speed, including stoppages, 19½ miles an hour. An extra Express (direttissimo), called by the Italians lampo (lightning), on account of its great rapidity, runs between Turin and Rome by Genoa (312 m.) in 14 hrs. 37 min., and between Milan and Rome by Florence (416 m.) in 13½ hrs., giving an average of 19½ and 31 miles respectively.

Smoking carriages are provided on all trains. The notice on the door is sometimes permissive (pei fumutori), sometimes prohibitory (è vietato il fumare). In cases where there is no notice at all, the traveller is recommended to come to an understanding with the Guard.

Tickets (Biglietti).—Single, return, or Circular Tickets can be obtained for all parts of the Continent at Messrs. Thos. Cook and Son's Tourist Offices in London, at 5 Ludgate Circus, 445 West Strand, or 35 Piccadilly; in Paris at 9 Rue Scribe. Messrs. Cook and Son will be found very obliging in supplying all kinds of information with regard to travelling.

Circular Tickets in Italy can be procured at the offices of the Railway Company, in any of the principal towns.

The traveller is strongly advised to be at the Station in good time. Except at Genoa, and one or two important terminal or international Stations, there is only one guichet for all classes, and no Official in attendance to preserve order and prevent crushing and confusion. The arrangements, in short, at most Italian Stations, are in this respect by no means creditable to the authorities. Children under 3 years of age free; between 3 and 7 half-price. Above 7 the full fare.

The 2nd-class carriages are fairly comfortable, and many English travellers make use of them.

The clerks at the stations sometimes refuse to give change; it is therefore desirable to be always prepared with the exact amount of the fare. Italian paper money of the Banca Nazionale is now generally accepted, even when the journey extends across the French or Austrian frontier.

Luggage.—Small hand-articles not exceeding 20 chilo. (44 lbs.) in weight, or about 2 ft. x 1 ft. in size, are free, on condition that they can be stowed away in the carriage without inconvenience to the other passengers. Everything consigned to the luggage-van is paid for according to weight, and a ticket (scontrino) obtained for it, which must be produced at the end of the journey. Travellers should examine their luggage ticket at the time it is handed to them, to see that the destination is properly stated.

Cloak-room (Deposito).—Articles of luggage may be left at the Station, and claimed whenever required on production of the deposit ticket, for which a trifling charge is made, always stated on the ticket.

Luggage by quick trains accompanying passengers who have through tickets to France, Switzerland, or Austria ought not to contain any articles that are liable to duty, as the declarations and formalities of payment involve delay, and sometimes loss of train.

Persons are allowed to change from a lower to a higher class carriage on paying the difference. Express fare, 1st class, is about 20 c. a mile; 2nd class, 14 c. On several of the main lines there are Sleeping Cars and carriages with couches (coupés a letti), which must be secured beforehand. The extra charge is about 10 per cent. on the ordinary fare. They may be engaged from Modane (or Turin) to Florence, from Modane (or Turin) to Venice, and from Milan or Venice to Florence.

Private Carriages.—Although most places of interest to travellers in North Italy can now be reached by railway, it is sometimes desirable and more pleasant to hire a carriage; especially between Spezia and the French frontier, to enjoy the beauties of the Cornice Road, &c., and also amidst the Lake scenery. In these districts a private carriage can always be procured through the proprietors of the principal hotels.

Public Carriages.—At every town of any importance in North Italy, in addition to the omnibus from the hotels, there are Cabs waiting at the station. The charge is sometimes fixed by tariff, but it is generally advisable to bargain. The same rule applies to cabs hired in the town. At all the larger cities there is a Tramway from the Stat. to the centre of the town (10 c. to 15 c.), but it is naturally only available for persons without luggage.

Expenses of Travelling in Italy.—No question is more frequently asked, and few so difficult to answer, as the probable cost of a journey through any part of Italy. Speaking generally, it must of course depend on the length of ground gone over in a given time; but for bachelors who travel for the purpose of seeing the country, and whose railway expenses each day will consequently be inconsiderable, 20 fr. ought to cover all charges; and for a journey of not less than two months the average cost per day of Bank-notes of 5, 10, 25, 50, and 100 lire, form the chief current money of Italy, there being practically no gold in circulation. In 1883 the compulsory bank-notes (a corso sforzoso), were recalled, and replaced by a new series (convertibile in moneta metallica), to meet which there is an abundant supply of silver. A few Napoleons may generally be obtained from any Banker or Money-Changer, by the traveller who is leaving Italy, at a small premium, or sometimes at par.

Local Bank notes should be avoided. Those of the Banca Nazionale, Banca di Napoli, Banca Romana, and Banca Toscana, will pass anywhere.

Circular Notes of 10l. to 50l. are issued by all the leading bankers, and are a very safe and convenient form of money for a long journey. The agents in the various towns cash them at the rate of exchange of the day, but English gold and 5l. Bank of England notes are readily taken everywhere. The exchange is often more favourable at a Money-Changers, whose sign is Cambio Valute. Many travellers now carry a Cheque-book of the Cheque Bank instead of Circular Notes. They may be obtained at 4, Waterloo Place, Pall Mall, S.W.

Throughout N. Italy, but especially at Venice, no one should think of paying the price asked for any article in the shops. Bargaining, unpleasant though it be, is usual, and is expected. The traveller should avoid also making any purchase, or even entering a shop, when accompanied by a commissionnaire or courrier, who will of course receive from the shopman a commission of 5 or 10 per cent. on the sum expended. Collectors of bric à brac may be reminded that a tax of 20 per cent. is levied by the Italian Government on all antiquities taken out of the country.

The traveller setting out to see sights should provide himself with ample store of coppers and half-franc pieces. Two soldi will satisfy the boy who 'runs to tetch the key,' and 4 or 5 is ample for the Sacristano of a church.

7.—WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

In 1861 the decimal-metric system of Weights and Measures was adopted and legalized for the whole of Italy, the names of the weights and measures being Italianized.

In this system the fundamental unit is the Metro (identical with the French mètre), which is the ten-millionth part of the carth's meridian-quadrant.

From the Metro are derived the other units of measure and weight as follows:—

Of measure of surface, the unit is the Ara, a square of ten Metri; of that of capacity, the unit is the Litro, a cubic tenth part of a Metro; of that of weight, the unit is the Gramma, the weight in vacuo of a cubic-hundredth part of a Metro of distilled water at the temperature of 4° Centigrade or 39.2° Fahrenheit.

Multiples and parts of these units are denoted by prefixes derived from the Greek and Latin respectively.

Prefixes denoting multiples are—

Deca = 10 times Etto = 100 ,, Chilo = 1,000 ,, Miria = 10,000 ,, Prefixes denoting the parts are-

Deci = the 10th part Centi = ,, 100th ,, Mille = ,, 1000th ,, 8.—Post Office; Letters and Postage: Telegrams.

Postage stamps (francobolli) can be purchased at most tobacconists' shops as well as at the post-offices. A cautious traveller will take important letters to the post-office himself, or drop them into some one of the letter boxes that are now distributed through an Italian town, since if given to an untrustworthy person to carry to the post-office they run the risk of being made away with for the sake of the stamps. Travellers cannot too much impress on their correspondents at home the necessity of writing the address with perfect legibility, especially those marked poster restante, which are frequently placed in the wrong compartment at the office from the difficulty of deciphering the first letter of the name. Much provoking delay and trouble are thus caused before the mistake is discovered.

In addressing gentlemen it is best to omit the terminal Esq., and to prefix al Signor, or all'illusto. Signor, to the name. On enquiring for letters at the Poste Restante the production of a visiting card saves trouble.

Italian Rates of Postage.

Ordinary Letters.—For each 15 grammi, 20 cents., throughout the Kingdom of Italy, including Sardinia and Sicily.

Registered Letters (Lettere raccomandate) must be presented at the office at least an hour before the making up of the despatch. They are charged, in addition to the ordinary letter stamp, 25 c. In case of loss an indemnity of 50 fr. can be claimed.

Letters insured with a declaration of value.—The maximum value allowed is 5000 fr.; such letters must first be registered, after which a tax at the rate of 20 c. on each 100 fr. of the declared value must be paid. Large sums of money are best transmitted by means of a Vaglia, which may be had gratis at the Banca Nazionale in any town. The traveller has nothing to do but fill in a paper, and leave his money with the Clerk. Post-office Order is Vaglia Postale.

Manuscripts (not being letters) and samples of merchandise may be sent prepaid from one part of Italy to another, at the following rates:—Up to 50 grammi for 20 c.; from 50 gr. to 500 gr., 40 c.; and from 500 to 1000 gr., 80 c.; and so on at the rate of 40 c. for each additional 500 or fraction. Samples of merchandise, however, of a greater weight than 300 gr. cannot be sent by post. Double these rates are charged if not prepaid.

Newspapers in Italy are charged 1 c. for each 40 gr. or fraction.

Letters to Great Britain and the Postal Union are charged at the rate of 25 c. for 15 gr. (= $\frac{1}{2}$ oz.). If registered, 25 c. extra.

Manuscripts (not being letters) can be forwarded, properly secured but open at the sides, to Great Britain and the Postal Union at the rate of 5 c. for 50 gr. They can be registered (raccomandate) for 25 c. Printed Matter is Stampati; Proofs, Bozze di Stampa.

Post cards to Great Britain and the Postal Union 10 c.

Telegrams are charged to any part of Italy at the rate of one franc for fifteen words, including the names and addresses of the sender and receiver; each additional word, 5 c. Urgent despatch, three times as much. For France, 14 c. a word; England, 47 c.; Gibraltar, 53 c.; Malta, 33 c.; United States, 2 fr.; Canada, and most of the British Colonies in N. and S. America, 2 fr. 95 c.; India, 4 fr. 45 c. to 5 fr. 35 c. a word.

9.—Courriers.

A courrier, to accompany a family into Italy, should be an Italian. He is in general active, ready to do or attend to any and every thing; he will serve, if required, as a personal servant, and, understanding the language, will not refuse to act as a guide or cicerone in large towns—a thing rarely to be obtained of a German or Swiss. There is a place of meeting or club of Italian courriers at No. 38, Golden-square, and one of Germans and Swiss, 12, Bury-street, St. James's, where travelling servants may be found.

In addition to receiving very high wages—10 to 15 guineas a month, according to the length of time they are employed—they are lodged and fed in reality at the traveller's expense, and are often more difficult to satisfy in the matter of hotel accommodation than their employers. Sometimes also they demand a commission from the proprietors, for bringing travellers to the hotel, which comes, of course, out of their master's pocket.

10.—Sight-seeing.—Commissionnaires and Ciceboni.

There are few things more disagreeable than being led about by a guide; and as plans of all the principal towns of Northern Italy are given in the present volume, his help will be scarcely needed. Travellers, however, who are ignorant of the language and pressed for time, may sometimes find his services useful.

Having made up your mind what you want to see, insist upon seeing it, in spite of your guide's favourite assertion, "non c'è niente da vedere."

In order to enable the tourist to dispense as much as possible with local guides, we have inserted in the description of every town of importance a list of the objects worth seeing, arranged in topographical order.

Churches, including Cathedrals, except one or two of the very largest, are usually closed from twelve to three; and during this interval, when the sacristan takes his dinner and his nap, it is difficult to obtain admittance. When the days are long and the light sufficiently good, the early morning and the late afternoon are the best times for making a round of the Chapels. Between 7 and 9 A.M., or better still, between 6 and 8, the traveller will find Chapels open, and works of art accessible, which it will cost him an infinite amount of trouble to examine leisurely later in the day. The Sacristy is generally locked up after the last Mass, and not opened again until a comparatively late hour.

It is always a useful preliminary to the examination of any city to obtain a bird's-eye view of it from some Church tower.

11.—INNS AND ACCOMMODATION.

In the large towns of N. Italy the hotels are comfortable and well kept—as at Turin, Milan, Venice, Bologna, and Genoa. In all these places the resort of foreigners has enabled the proprietors to meet the expenses required for such establishments; but this, of course, cannot be the case in places which are not equally frequented, and here the traveller will very frequently have to content himself with the accommodation of a national or Italian inn.

He must, when this contingency arrives, not expect a choice and well-furnished larder. The stock of provisions is on the average but scanty, and the choice in this scanty stock limited. The wine, however, is often excellent. Two dishes are almost invariably good—the national minestra, or zuppa di pastine in brodo (vermicelli broth), and bistecca ai ferri (broiled steak). Macaroni is pastine asciutte (dry, without the broth). Pudding is dolce; cake, pasta.

It is advisable, especially when the travelling party is large, to order rooms beforehand by letter or telegraph, the charge seldom exceeding a franc.

The best hotels, though not cheap, are not extravagant, and, if any ladies are of the party, no house except a first-rate one should be used; but bachelor travellers may frequently be comfortably accommodated, and at a lower charge, at houses of a second grade. One great secret of keeping down bills is to avoid having anything out of the common way. The table d'hôte (tavola rotonda), common in the large towns, should be preferred.

Ask the price of everything beforehand, especially bedroom, dinner at table d'hôte (with or without wine), and luncheon. In ordering dinner it is the best plan for the traveller to mention the price he will pay, with or without ordinary wine. This is termed dining a prezzo fisso. It is also safest and most satisfactory to order the wine of the country (see Notice of Wines, below). If exorbitant charges be made, refuse to pay them, putting down a reasonable sum upon the table.

In spite of the universal charge for attendance in the bill, servants always expect something extra, but are generally contented with very little. When dining at a Trattoria, 20 c. to the waiter is the usual fee, and 5 c. at a Casé. It is desirable to examine hotel bills carefully before leaving, and insist upon objectionable extras being taken off or reduced. For this purpose, the prudent traveller will order his bill over-night, so that he may not have to pay it in a hurried moment of departure.

12.—THE WINES OF NORTHERN ITALY.

The traveller who has tasted good Barolo at Turin, or Chianti at Florence, will sometimes order the same wine at Venice, Naples, or Brindisi, under the impression that the beverage is national rather than local, and that it may be had in perfection all over the country. As a matter of fact, each Province has its own peculiar vintage, and other growths are almost as foreign as if they were imported from France or Germany. Tuscan wine in Calabria, or Piedmontese in Rome, must of necessity be dear, and will certainly be more or less adulterated.

The following short account of Wines grown within the scope of the present volume may assist the traveller in his choice, and enable him to extend his acquaintance with the produce of Italian vineyards.

The greatest height at which vines may be successfully cultivated is about 1650 ft., though in certain Alpine districts they are grown as high as 2650, and in Sicily up to 3300. Just 82 per cent. of the population of Italy are more or less directly dependent upon the vine for a livelihood. The average consumption of wine is 40 gallons a year for each person throughout the kingdom, the consumption decreasing towards the S., where the wines are more alcoholic, in the ratio of about 11 to 6. In summer, when lighter drinks are preferred, less wine is drunk than in winter.

Government Institutions for the study of wines have been established at Coneyliano and Alba in N. Italy, at Avellino near Naples, at Catania in Sicily, and at Cagliari in Sardinia. There is also a wine-testing Station at Asti.

PIEDMONT produces red table wines of an intense colour, which are extensively used for blending. The best are Gattinara, Ghemme, Barolo, and Nebbiolo, which are rough when young, but have a delicate bouquet when matured. Somewhat harsher and more tonic are Barbera, Freisa, Grignolino, and Dolcetto. The sweet sparkling Muscat wine, commonly known as Asti Spumante, is produced chiefly at Canelli, a Stat. about 25 m. S.W. of Alessandria on the Rly. to Alba. Asti, however, is the most important wine-market in N. Italy, and the traveller who alights there in Sept. or Oct., during the period of the sales, is immediately beset by dealers. The annual production of wine in Piedmont is 96 million gallons. This district also furnishes the better qualities of Vermuth, and a good deal of brandy is made at Alessandria.

In Lombardy, the cultivation of the vine has of late years given way to that of pasture and the mulberry. The hills of Bergamo and Brescia, however, produce excellent wine, and the district of Sondrio, or Valtellina, has long been famous for its products, about one-half of which is exported. The total yield of Lombardy is 36 million gallons a year.

The best red Venetian wines are Valpolicella, Valpantena, Raboso, and Corvino, all grown near Verona. They are not very intense in colour, but sufficiently alcoholic, and of an agreeable flavour. Excellent dry white wines are produced in the Province of Vicenza, especially at the head of the Valley of the Piave. Average yield of Venetia, 30 million gallons a year.

The rough and mountainous Province of LIGURIA produces exquisite wines, though the quantity is small. Among others are the famous white wines of Cinque Terre, grown between Spezia and Sestri Levante. Average annual production, 9 million gallons. Half the wine consumed in the province is brought from Tuscany, Sardinia, and Sicily, and sold or deposited in the docks of Genoa, which has thus become the largest wine-market in Italy for the import trade.

In the plains of EMILIA, between Piacenza and Forli, is produced a large quantity of wine in considerable variety, both red and white. The best of the purely native red kinds are Negrettino, Sangiovese, Cagnina, Canina, and Lambrusco, of which the last is slightly effervescing. Good white varieties are Albana, Trebbiano, and a Muscat wine grown on the hills near Bertinoro. The wines of Emilia are often ready for use during the first months of the winter. In the neighbourhood of Bologna foreign grapes have been for some years successfully cultivated, and the wines known as Pinot, Cabernet, Malbec, Sirah, and others, are almost equal in body and flavour to the best average Burgundies and Clarets. The annual yield of this province is about 54 million gallons.

13.—OBJECTS TO BE NOTICED.

Within the districts described in this volume, some few Celtic remains in Piedmont and the Euganean Hills are the only vestiges anterior to the Roman domination.

To the era of the Empire belong the amphitheatre, theatre, and gates of Verona, the villa of Catullus, on the Lake of Garda, the arches of Susa and Rimini, the ruins of Villeia, the columns of San Lorenzo at Milan, and the Temple at Brescia. Among these, the amphitheatre at Verona is the most remarkable, and the arches of Susa and Rimini the oldest; but none are in a very pure style of architecture. The only one which we can ascribe to the Augustan age (the arch of Susa) is rude in taste. To the Imperial times belong the buried city of Velleia—the Pompeii of Northern Italy—and the ruins of Industria and of Luni.

The museum of Turin has one of the richest collections in Europe of Egyptian antiquities; and the smaller one at Bologna is interesting. The museums of Parma, Modena, Bologna, Verona, Brescia, Milan, and Adria are of considerable local importance. The Etruscan Museum at Bologna deserves special notice. Of Christian antiquities during the Roman period, or the middle ages, Ravenna stands pre-eminent for its early ecclesiastical edifices; Milan, Pavia, Cividale, and Verona offer also remarkable vestiges. The Baptisteries of Ravenna, Novara, Cremona, and Parma, also belong to this class, although there is uncertainty about their date. The Basilica of St. Mark, at Venice, forms a class of its own.

Although frequently much altered, Northern Italy abounds in magnificent specimens of the Lombard style, called Romanesque, a variety of which is familiarly known amongst us as Norman. The cathedrals of Verona, Parma, and Modena, and the Churches of San Zenone at Verona and San Michele at Pavia, are very remarkable. Most of the larger Lombard churches are interesting from the symbolical sculptures on their fronts, as well as from their impressive grandeur. This Lombard style was never entirely superseded in Italy till the revival of classical architecture; and, generally speaking, so many schools and styles had a coeval existence in Italy, that the data by which we judge of the age of a building in France or England lose much of their certainty when applied here.

Pointed Architecture in Italy exhibits itself in many marked varieties, and four distinct schools may be observed: (1) Tuscan or Italian-Gothic, more properly so called, remarkable in the earlier periods for its simplicity and in the latter for the extreme beauty of its forms. (2) Venetian-Gothic, of which the great type is the Palazzo Ducale at Venice, and which may be traced at Padua, Udine, Verona, and as far west as Brescia. (3) Genoese-Gothic, more than any other disclosing an imitation of the Arabian or Saracenic models. (4) Lombard-Gothic, an exuberant variety of the French and German, of which the Duomo of Milan is the finest example.† Bergamo, Como, Pavia, and Cremona, have also interesting edifices in this style.

The Campanili, or bell-towers, often detached, constitute a remarkable feature. Those of Cremona, Modena, and Venice deserve attention, and in all cases they form a characteristic and pleasing feature in the scenery of Italy. The Circular Bell-towers of Ravenna, the most ancient of all, are peculiar to that locality. Among the most beautiful are those of Pomposa, S. Zenone at Verona, and S. Frediano at Lucca.

So much for the styles which we commonly term mediæval. During

[†] For more detailed information on the different styles of architecture met with in Italy and its monuments, we must refer our readers to Mr. Fergusson's 'Illustrated Handbook of Architecture' (2 vols. 8vo.), and 'History of Architecture from the Earliest Times to the Present Day' (1862 and 1865); to Mr. Ruskin's 'Stones of Venice,' and Signor Selvatico's work, for the edifices of that city; to Mr. Street's 'Brick and Marble Architecture in Italy' (1 vol. 8vo., 2nd ed. 1874); and for the early Christian edifices to Mr. Gally Knight's large work on the Ecclesiastical Architecture of Italy, and to Canina's 'Tempi Cristiani' (1 vol. fol.).

their prevalence in Italy an imitation of Roman or classical architecture had never ceased to exist. But it had not been usefully introduced till the times of Brunelleschi and of L. B. Alberti. The Churches of San Lorenzo and Santo Spirito at Florence are noble examples of the genius of the first of these great men. He also possessed great influence throughout Italy, though few direct imitations of his style appear out of his native city. Brunelleschi's tendency is to assimilate his Italian to the Lombard. But others united the Italian to somewhat of Gothic feeling, after the manner which in France has been termed the style of the Renaissance; and this style in Italy has great elegance. The Certosa of Pavia may be mentioned as an example; but it is more generally discernible in subsidiary portions, in chapels, and in tombs. Leon Battista Alberti, one of whose best works will be found at Mantua (Sant' Andrea), devoted himself to church architecture: while Sammicheli, Scamozzi, and Palladio excelled in their civil buildings, which are among the chief ornaments of Vicenza, Venice, and Verona.

Domestic Architecture in Italy affords a high interest. Its progress may be traced at least from the fifteenth century. The interiors of the period of the Renaissance, which are frequently well preserved, should be carefully examined, and will well relay this study; as also will some of the palaces of Genoa. In Venice, besides the great beauty of the buildings, the ingenuity of the architect in adapting his plans to their confined and untoward sites will often be found peculiarly interesting. At Verona buildings of this class have a character of their own, of strength and elegance united in the details.

The Municipal Buildings of Lombardy are of great and varied merit. In the Town-hall, or Broletto, of Como, Bergamo, Monza, Cremona, and Brescia, beauty of structure is enhanced by varied styles of decoration.

The ancient Military Architecture of Italy has received little attention from travellers. Northern Italy abounds in noble mediæval strongholds and fortifications. The Scaligerian castles in and about Verona are peculiarly interesting. In Italy, also, will be found the earliest examples of regular fortification, by which the ancient modes of defence were superseded.

Sculpture offers a great number of objects of high interest. The names of Niccolò and Giovanni da Pisa, Mino da Fiesole, Bambaja, Donatello, Orgagna, Ghiberti, and Michel Angelo, are of world-wide celebrity; but the merits of many second-rate Italian sculptures have not yet attracted the notice they deserve.

Of all the more remarkable works of sculpture we believe that we have given sufficient notices; and the traveller should recollect that of some of the best of the Italian sculptures so few specimens exist, that, unless he avails himself of the opportunity of examining them where they now stand, he will never meet with them again. Thus, there is scarcely a first-rate fragment of Luca della Robbia out of Tuscany, or of Bambaja out of Milan and Pavia; very few works of Mino da Fiesole out of Florence and Fiesole; no work of Begarelli out of Parma and Modena. They have rarely been multiplied by casts, and, when engraved, the representations have been most inadequate.

Working in the Precious Metals was a branch of the sculptor's art, or as would be better said, trade, for, in the earlier periods at least, they followed it as a craft. Some magnificent specimens, in which enamelled work and precious stones are introduced, exist as altar-fronts or coverings (paliotti). Those of San Marco at Venice, and Sant' Ambrogio at Milan, are the most remarkable. Many specimens of the same description, together with votive offerings, cups, vessels, and the like, are still preserved in the sacristies of the churches.

Very early and fine specimens of Mosaic, formed of prisms of coloured or opaque glass or enamel, with a gilded ground of the same material, will be found at Milan (Sant' Ambrogio and San Lorenzo), Venice (San Marco and Torcello), and especially at Ravenna, where the finest and oldest works of the kind exist, dating as far back as the sixth century. The art continued to be practised at Venice till the sixteenth century, but not so late in Lombardy. At Novara and Cremona, also, are some specimens of early Christian tessellated pavements. In Tuscany, about the thirteenth century, a richer kind of working was introduced, employing serpentine, porphyry, and various coloured marbles, which mode of workmanship has been improved into the present beautiful Florentine mosaic in pietra dura. This is composed of natural mineral productions and of the finest marbles, and may be seen in perfection at the Certosa of Pavia.

The stained glass of Italy is exceedingly beautiful. In the cathedrals of Milan and at some of the Churches of Bologna it is most brilliant. In Venice the colours are not so good. Stained glass, however, does not appear to have become common; there are few examples of it in the smaller churches or in civil buildings.

THE SCHOOLS OF PAINTING OF NORTH ITALY.

By Sir A. HENRY LAYARD, G.C.B.

The schools of painting of Northern Italy hold a distinct place in the history of Italian Art, and are well worthy of the attention of the tra-Although Giotto, by the great works he executed at Padua, may have contributed to a certain extent to their development, long before his appearance there a race of painters had existed in Verona, whose names are for the most part forgotten, but traces of whose wall paintings are still to be found in the ancient Church of S. Zeno in that city. The Veronese School which they founded is distinguished by an individuality which it maintained until its extinction, and it had a more continuous history than any other in Italy, except that of Tuscany. It produced in the middle of the 14th century two remarkable men-Altichiero da Zevio and Jacopo d' Avanzo-who decorated the churches and public buildings of Verona with frescoes, some of which still exist. But it is at Padua that their most important works are to be seen. It is probable that the great series of frescoes by Giotto in the Arena Chapel may have had an influence upon them; but they cannot be considered his pupils. They have a softness of colouring, and a grace of form, which are peculiar to them, and characteristic of the Veronese School. They excel Giotto and his followers in the forcible delineation of action and in the representation of architecture and landscape in their backgrounds. The two worked together, and it is not easy to assign to each his share in the fine and interesting frescoes still preserved in the Chapels of San Felice and San Giorgio at Padua. Altichiero was probably the more able of the two, and was unquestionably a man of genius.

These masters were followed by Vittore Pisano, better known as Pisanello, equally distinguished as a painter and a medallist. His works in the former capacity are exceedingly rare; but frescoes by him exist in the Churches of S. Anastasia and S. Fermo Maggiore in Verona. They show great elegance and refinement. He was very skilful in the representation of dogs, horses, and other animals.

Morone, who flourished at the end of the 15th century. He is seen in the public Gallery at Verona, and to great advantage in the decoration in fresco of the sacristy of the Church of S. Maria in Organo in that city. By a contemporary artist of considerable merit, Liberale, altar-pieces exist in the Veronese churches, and in the chapel of the Episcopal Palace three beautiful "predella" pictures are by him. Another contemporary painter was Bonsignori, by whom there is a remarkable altar-piece in the Church of S. Bernardino. The works of another painter, who lived at the end of the 15th and beginning of the 16th century—Carotto—are but little known out of Verona. He is best seen in the public Gallery, and especially in the Church of S. Fermo Maggiore.

Girolamo dai Libri is a master who is very characteristic of the school, introducing into his pictures festoons of flowers and fruit, orange and lemon-trees, and beautiful angels playing on musical instruments, and views of the castellated hills of Verona in his backgrounds. An excellent example of his bright and pleasing colouring is afforded by an altar-piece in the Church of S. Giorgio in that city.

But the greatest painter of the Veronese School (Paolo Veronese must be placed amongst the Venetians) was unquestionably Paolo Morando—commonly called Cavazzola—in whom it culminated. His countrymen proudly style him "the Veronese Raphael," and he may be compared to the great Umbrian on account of his precocious genius and early death. His splendid picture of the 'Deposition of Christ from the Cross,' in the Verona Gallery, may be classed amongst the master-pieces of Italian painting, for its originality and its strength of colouring.

After Cavazzola the Veronese School declined. A series of painters of inferior merit, with the exception of Torbido, known as "il Moro," a powerful colourist, by whom there are excellent portraits, ended in Antonio Badile, the uncle and first teacher of Paolo Veronese, who, although to be classed amongst the great Venetian masters, shows the traces of his early education, which, to a certain extent, connect him with the Veronese School.

The attention of the traveller and art-student should be next directed to the Venetian School of painting. Its early history is less well known than that of Verona. The names of a few painters of the 14th century, and even of an earlier period, have been preserved; but their works have no marked features, except that they show, more or less, an Oriental or Byzantine influence in the want of movement and expression in the figures, in their defective composition, in their monotonous colouring, and in the prodigal use of gold. Examples of this early Venetian Art may be seen in the 'Coronation of the Virgin,' by Niccolò Semiticolo (1351) in the Venice Academy, and in a large altar-piece of later date by Fra

Antonio da Negroponte in the Church of S. Francesco della Vigna.

The first painters to give a distinctive character to the Venetian School were the Vivarini-members of a family established in the Island of Murano in the first half of the 15th century. Associated with them was one Giovanni, who describes himself as a German (Alemannus), and who, from the peculiar type of face and delicate rosy colouring to be observed in pictures in part assigned to him, is conjectured to have belonged to the School of Cologne. The Vivarini were the first to free themselves from the Byzantine influence, and to give life-like expression and movement to their figures. It is probable that the works executed by Gentile da Fabriano and Pisanello in the Ducal Palace may have led to this change. The family produced in the middle of the 15th century two painters of remarkable merit—Bartolommeo and Luigi (or in the Venetian dialect, Alvise). Pictures by both are to be seen in the Venice Academy. the painters who gave that development to Venetian Art, which placed it on a level with that of the greatest schools of Central Italy, and prepared the way for those colourists who are the glory of the Venetian School, belonged to the family of Bellini. Its founder, Jacopo Bellini, flourished in the early part of the 15th century. Few of his works have been preserved, the only one of importance being a much injured representation of the 'Crucifixion' on canvas, now in the public Gallery at Verona; but his drawings and sketches, of which a large collection exists in London and Paris, show that he was an artist of great vigour and originality. sons, Gentile and Giovanni, were both men of genius, and inherited the qualities of their father. Their works show no traces of the Byzantine manner; but are remarkable for grace and refinement, a fine sense of colour and dignified character and expression, qualities which specially mark the best period of Venetian painting. The great canvases with which Gentile decorated the Ducal Palace, and upon which his fame was founded, perished in the fire which destroyed a part of that edifice in 1577. 'The Procession of the Corpus Domini' in the Square of S. Mark, in which the church as it was in the 15th century is introduced, and the 'Miracle of the Relic of the True Cross,' highly interesting for the representation of Venetian architecture of the period, both in the Venice Academy, and 'The Sermon of St. Mark' in the Brera at Milan, although all three have suffered greatly from the restorer, "show his remarkable ability for treating historical subjects, his power of giving individuality of expression and action to the numerous figures he introduced into them, and of representing with correctness elaborate architectural backgrounds." †

Gentile's brother Giovanni was a painter of wider reputation, whose works, distinguished by their grace, their delightful colouring, and the pure and holy expression given to the Virgin, angels, and saints, are to be seen in several of the churches of Venice and in the Academy. One of the most noteworthy productions of the master is a picture representing the Doge Barbarigo, kneeling before the Madonna in the Church of S. Pietro Martire at Murano—still a splendid work, although greatly injured by the restorer. Giovanni Bellini had numerous scholars and imitators of more or less merit—Basaiti, Catena, Rocco Marconi (observe his fine altar-piece in the Venice Academy), Bissolo, Benedetto Diana, and others—whose works frequently pass for those of the master, and may be best studied in Venice. Of Previtali, another of his followers, pictures may be seen in the Churches and Gallery of Bergamo. Two painters, upon whom he exercised considerable influence, deserve special notice—Carpaccio and Cima da Conegliano—both men of original powers and strong individuality, who are better represented in Venice than elsewhere. Carpaccio's principal works are the series of large pictures representing the history of S. Ursula in the Academy; that in the Church of S. Giorgio degli Schiavoni; and a great altar-piece in the Church of S. Vitale. They display his fertile and lively imagination and his skill in the delineation of character; they are, moreover, of the highest interest as representing the manners, dresses, and daily life of the Venetians in the 15th century. Cima da Conegliano was inferior to Carpaccio as a dramatic painter, and the subjects he treated were for the most part religious. But he had a fine sense of colour, the expression and action of his figures are generally agreeable and refined, and his treatment of landscape, and architecture in his backgrounds, and the accessories and details—such as variegated marbles, flowers, and fruits -are worthy of all praise. His altar-pieces in the Churches of S. Giovanni in Bragora and the Madonna dell' Orto in Venice, and in the public Gallery of Parma, are excellent examples of his best qualities as a painter. The influence of Giovanni Bellini may be traced in the works of another painter of eminent merit, principally known for his portraits—Antonello da Messina. Venice possesses no work of importance by him; but an example of his powers may be seen in the fine portrait of a poet crowned with laurel in the Municipal Museum at Milan.

The influence and teaching of the Bellini produced the two greatest colourists the world has seen—Giorgione and Titian. Authentic pictures by the former are exceedingly rare. An altar-piece by him, unfortunately much repainted, still exists in the Church of Castelfranco, his native town. In Venice only two of his works remain, the so-called 'Family of the Painter,' in the Gallery of the late Prince Giovanelli, and a picture, representing the legend of 'Daphne and Apollo,' almost entirely repainted, in the Manfredini Collection in the Seminario, adjoining the Church of She is richer in the works of his great contemporary and fellow-student, Titian, although she has been despoiled of the portraits and easel-pictures by him, which once adorned the palaces of her patrician families. The progressive development and the decline of the painter may still be studied in the 'Christ bearing the Cross' in the Church of S. Rocco, and in 'The Man of Sorrows' in the 'Scuola' of the same name; in a small picture representing the Infant Christ between SS. Andrew and Catharine in the Church of SS. Ermagora and Fortunato (more generally known as S. Marcuola), and in an altar-picture in the Salute representing S. Mark enthroned—examples of his early, or Giorgionesque, manner; in his great altar-piece, in which he has introduced portraits of the Pesaro family, in the Church of the Frari, and 'The Assumption of the Virgin,' and the 'Presentation of the Virgin' (much over-painted) in the Academy-productions of his best period; and in the 'Baptist' and 'Pietà' in the same Gallery, the first painted when he was nearly eighty

Bonifazio was another great colourist, who, although a native of Verona, practised his art at Venice, where his best works are still preserved. must be remembered that there were two other painters of the name, and of the same family, whose productions are frequently assigned to the elder Bonifazio, by far the most able of the three, and by whom pictures of exquisite beauty, such as the 'Dives and Lazarus' and the Judgment of Solomon, are in the Venice Academy, and the 'Finding of Moses,' long attributed to Giorgione, in the Brera. Two other remarkable colourists of the Venetian School were Paris Bordone and Palma By the former a truly splendid masterpiece—the Fisherman presenting the ring of S. Mark to the Doge in Council—is in the Academy; one of the finest works of Palma Vecchio is an altar-piece in the Church of S. Stefano at Verona. Of Tintoretto and Paolo Veronese, two of her greatest masters, Venice fortunately retains numerous works. The former is perhaps best represented in the 'Miracle of St. Mark' in the Academy, of marvellous force of colour, and singularly fine as a composition, and in the 'Bacchus and Ariadne' in the Ducal Palace. His versatility and extraordinary facility of execution are displayed in his series of paintings in the Scuola di San Rocco, and in the vast canvas with the 'Last Judgment' in the Ducal Palace. Of his contemporary Paolo Veronese, the best examples in North Italy are his many works at Venice in the Church of S. Sebastian; the 'Feast of the Levite' in the Academy; and the 'Rape of Europa' and the decorative pictures in the Palace of the Doges; his 'Supper of St. Gregory the Great' in the suppressed convent of Monte Berico at Vicenza; and several masterpieces in the public Gallery at Turin. With Pordenone, by whom there is a fine altar-piece in the Venice Academy, and some remarkable frescoes in the Church of Sta. Maria di Campagna at Piacenza, the list of the great Venetian painters may be concluded. After them the school rapidly declined, and the traveller will find little worthy of his attention, as works of art, in the historical subjects represented in the halls of the Ducal Palace. However, a painter of undoubted genius, who, had he lived at a more fortunate period than the latter half of the 18th century, might have revived the glories of Venetian Art, was Tiepolo, whose most important works are to be seen in Venice. He was distinguished as a painter in fresco, in which material he nearly approached Paolo Veronese—as is proved by the decoration of a hall in the Palazzo Labia and of the ceiling in the Church of the Gesuati. examples of his skill as a colourist are an altar-piece in the same church representing three female saints before the Virgin, and the ceiling of the Scuola del Carmine. Venetian art died out in Longhi, a skilful but monotonous painter of scenes of Venetian domestic life, in which the dress and manners of the Venetians of the last century are represented. To what a low degree it has sank may be judged by the collection of modern pictures in the Venice Academy.

Although the Veronese and Venetian Schools of painting were the most important and continuous in Northern Italy, almost every town in the territories of the Republic had its local school which produced distinguished painters. In Padua, Squarcione, more remarkable as a teacher than as an artist, trained his pupils upon casts and models from antique sculpture. The result of his attempt to revive classic art is seen in the works of several painters of the 15th century who flourished in the north of the Peninsula, such as Marco Zoppo and Gregorio Schiavone. Among his scholars were the brothers Bellini and their relative Mantegna, a man of great originality and of consummate skill as a painter, who, unlike the Bellini, continued under the influence of his classic studies to the end of his career. In his frescoes in the Church of the Eremitani at Padua, and in those in the old Ducal Palace at Mantua, he introduced noble figures of classic form and dignity; other noteworthy works by him are to be found in the Venice Academy (a beautiful small easel-picture of St. George); in the Brera at Milan (an altar-piece of his early time); and in the Church of S. Zeno at Verona. The early works of Mantegna and of Giovanni Bellini bear so much resemblance to each other that they are frequently confounded. Examples of this may be seen in the Municipal (Correr) Museum at Venice.

Vicenza may boast of several able painters, who may be best studied in the local Museum. The principal of them was Bartolommeo Montagna, of whom works, remarkable for the grand and dignified treatment of the figures, by rich and powerful colouring, and by much poetical sentiment in the backgrounds, exist in the Church of the Santa Corona, and in the Santuario of Monte Berico at Vicenza; in the Brera, and in the Church of SS. Nazzaro and Celso, in Verona. In them may be traced the influence of both Giovanni Bellini and Mantegna.

Bergame and Brescia, during the most flourishing period of Venetian Art, produced several painters of eminence, whose great qualities may be best appreciated by a study of their works in their native cities. Amongst them may be specially noticed Lorenzo Lotto, a brilliant colourist, endowed with a highly poetical imagination and a lively fancy; Moretto of Brescia, whose splendid altar-pieces adorn the churches of that city; Savoldo, who has been rarely exceeded in the poetical rendering of landscape, and whose sense of colour was singularly original (see a fine example in the Brera); Romanino, who in an altar-picture, now in the public Gallery of Padua, almost rivals Giorgione in depth and richness of colour; and, lastly, Morone, more celebrated for his portraits than for works of imagination, in which he was far from successful.

In Lombardy, beyond the confines of the Venetian territories, several schools of painting existed in the 15th, 16th, and 17th centuries; the most interesting and important was that of Milan. Although Leonardo da Vinci settled in this city, and exercised no little influence upon its art, and Bazzi commenced his artistic career there, both these painters properly belong to Central Italy. Of the first all that remains in Milan, with the exception of a few sketches and studies, is the immortal wallpainting of 'The Last Supper'—a mere wreck from the effects of time and ill-treatment. Of Bazzi, who in his youth was under the influence of Leonardo, nothing exists in Lombardy. The true founder of the Milanese School was Vincenzo Foppa, by whom part of a fresco, 'the Martyrdom of St. Sebastian,' of original treatment, and showing much knowledge of form and power of expression, is preserved in the Brera. From his school came two distinguished painters—Bramantino, who may be best studied in frescoes by him in the same collection, and Ambrogio da Fossano, better known as Borgognone, whose works, characterised by their religious feeling and delicate silvery colonring, are chiefly to be seen in the Certosa of Pavia, and in the Galleries and Churches of Milan.

But the painter who holds the foremost place in the Milanese School, and who was most influenced by Leonardo, was Bernardino Luini, whose genius has been tardily recognised beyond the Alps, and whose works were at one time usually attributed to the great Tuscan. For purity, grace, spiritual expression, and exquisite delicacy of colour, his best pictures, whether in oil or fresco, take the very highest rank. Milan is rich in them. The interior of the Church of S. Maurizio, usually known as the "Monastero Maggiore," is covered with frescoes by him and his scholars. The Brera and the Poldi-Pezzoli Gallery contain many delightful examples of his easel-pictures. A fine altar-piece by him may be seen in the Church of Legnano, a small town near Milan; and he executed frescoes of great delicacy and beauty in the Church at Saronno, also in the vicinity of Milan, where he was employed in conjunction with Gaudenzio Ferrari, another Lombard painter of great and original powers, whose principal works, in oil and fresco, are to be seen there and at Varallo.

Luini had many contemporaries, who, like him, were under the influence of Leonardo. Amongst them may be mentioned Andrea Solario, of whom an exquisite small picture is in the Poldi-Pezzoli Collection at Milan; Beltraffio, a vigorous and original painter; Cesare da Sesto, and Giovanni Pedrini, or Giampietrino, all men of considerable powers, whose works may be best studied in the Galleries of the Lombard capital. The Milanese School may be said to have died out in the feeble imitators of Luini and Gaudenzio Ferrari.

Carlo Crivelli, a quaint but original and highly-gifted painter, holds an exceptional place in the history of Art. He came from the Venetian School, but struck out a line of his own. Some of his best works, which are distinguished by the extraordinary beauty of the details, such as fruits, flowers, and marbles of divers colours, but, at the same time, by a certain grotesqueness, will be found in the Brera. He was chiefly employed in the March of Ancona, where he had several imitators.

A notice of the painters of the North Italian Schools would not be complete without the mention of those of Ferrara, Bologna, and Parma. The true founder of that of Ferrara was Cosimo Tura, born about 1420, a painter of great energy and originality, an able draughtsman, but rude and even archaic in his forms. His contemporary, Francesco Cossa, was even more powerful and massive in his representations of the human figure. remarkable example of his vigorous treatment of it may be seen in a picture in the public Gallery of Bologne, representing the Virgin and Child with Saints, and a kneeling figure of the Donor. Another contemporary painter was Ercole Roberti de Grandi, who nearly approached Mantegna in grandeur of conception and in the classic treatment of his figures. Whilst works by Cosimo Tura, and Francesco Cossa still exist in Ferrara, amongst them the much damaged frescoes in the Schifanoia Palace, none by Ercole Roberti are to be found in his native city. most interesting and accomplished master of the school was Lorenzo Costa, whose graceful figures and the charm of whose landscape backgrounds, give him a high place among the Italian painters of the 16th century. To him, it would appear, Francia, the ornament of the Bolognese School, owed his great excellence as a painter. The works of both are best seen in the public Galleries and Churches of Bologna and Ferrara. The fine frescoes in the Church of S. Cecilia, in the former city, will furnish almost a complete history of the School, to which also belongs Dosso Dossi, a powerful and brilliant colourist, by whom there is a magnificent altarpiece in the Pinacoteca at Ferrara.

In connection with the School of Parma it is scarcely necessary to do more than mention Correggio, who, according to an eminent writer on art, derived his manner from a Ferrarese teacher. The public Gallery of that city contains some of the most important works of this great colourist and master of chiaroscuro, and his marvellous skill as a painter in fresco is shown in the convent of S. Paolo and in the Duomo.

For a full and complete notice of the Schools of North Italy the traveller is referred to the 6th edition of Kugler's 'Handbook of Painting—the Italian Schools.'

HISTORICAL AND TOPOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF THE DIVISIONS OF NORTH ITALY.

By a most surprising series of events occurring within the space of a few years, Italy ceased to be merely a geographical expression. The country is no longer divided into fragments, each with its petty sovereign of Pope, or King, or Duke; and no longer are some of the fairest parts in the possession of a detested foreign power. With regard to that section of Italy which falls within the scope of this volume, the old divisions of Piedmont, Lombardy, &c., have much less importance than they formerly possessed; but they have still more than an historical interest, and the traveller will probably desire some such information respecting them as is comprised within the following brief notes.

PIEDMONT AND SARDINIAN LOMBARDY.

TERRITORY.—GOVERNMENT.—What Frederick said of Prussia, that it was made up of pièces rapportées, was particularly applicable to the continental dominions of the King of Sardinia. On the Italian side of the Alps, the following were the component parts, united under the authority of the house of Savoy:—Piedmont proper, the nucleus of the kingdom, gained from the Counts of Provence, by Peter, Count of Savoy, in 1220, and inherited from the Marchioness Adelaide, and subsequently an Imperial donation. The Marquisate of Susa, which, at an earlier period, included the greater part of Piedmont, but which was afterwards confined to narrower bounds. The Principality of Carignano, a modern dismemberment of the Marquisate of Susa. The Marquisate of Ivrea, ceded to Savoy by the Emperors Frederick II. in 1248, and Henry VII. in 1313. The small Marquisate of Ceva, at the foot of the Apennines. The Lordship of Vercelli, which, after several changes of masters, was ceded by Milan to Savoy in 1427. The County of Asti, ceded by Charles V. to Duke Charles IV. in 1531. The Marquisate of Saluzzo, long contested by the French, and, though cutting into the heart of Piedmont, not fully acquired by the Dukes of Savoy till 1588. The Duchy of Montferrat, obtained by the Dukes of Savoy in 1630; Val Sesia from the Emperor Leopold in 1703; the County of Arona and the Province of Domo d'Ossola in 1743 by the treaty of Worms. Several dismemberments of the Duchy of Milan, namely, the Provinces of Alessandria, Tortona, and Novara, with the Lomellina, in 1736; the Oltre Po Pavese in 1743, subsequently of the vine in Piedmont, with the grain crops, and the silkworms, the most important of the agricultural productions of the country.

The nature of the agricultural produce consumed for food varies in different parts of the country. In the towns wheat is extensively used. The inhabitants of the plains and low hills of Piedmont consume at least as much Indian corn and rye as wheat. In the Alpine valleys wheat is an article of luxury, and Indian corn, potatoes, rye, and buckwheat are the food of the great majority of the inhabitants. In the Apennines and the hills of Montferrat and Susa chestnuts form an important article of sustenance; and lastly, rice, produced in large quantity in the provinces of Vercelli and Novara, is consumed in the country, and exported beyond the Alps.

The Piedmontese peasantry are strong and well-built, very active and industrious, and form excellent soldiers; and, in the rural districts, are very simple and honest. The Roman Catholic religion is the established and dominant creed everywhere, except in the Valle del Pellice. After the accession of the grandfather of the present sovereign the Protestants ceased to be persecuted; and they have been permitted to erect churches at Turin and other cities, towards which the Government has contributed.

LOMBARDY.

TERRITORY.—The ancient kingdom possessed by the Longobardi, or Longbeards, extended from the Apennines and the Po to the Alps, excepting Venice and some few border districts. From this great and opulent territory large portions were acquired at various times by the Venetians, constituting nearly half of their inland dominions. A considerable portion was taken by the Dukes of Savoy on the W. Mantua, Modena, Parma, Piacenza, Guastalla, all were dismembered from Lombardy, and erected into Imperial or Papal fiefs. The Swiss appropriated the Valtellina; and the Italian Balliages of Switzerland, now the canton Ticino (which still retains so many features of ancient Lombardy), resulted from this acquisition. The republic of Milan became subject to the lordship of Matteo Visconti I. in 1288. The Visconti gained a great extent of territory which had belonged to the other Lombard republics; and their domains were erected into the "Duchy of Milan" by the Emperor Sigismund, in 1395. Milan, when acquired by the Spanish branch of the House of Austria, was thus reduced within comparatively narrow bounds. treaty of Vienna, in 1814, restored to Austria all the possessions enjoyed by that house before the wars arising out of the French revolution, and also gave a great deal more—Venice, and the whole of the Venetian mainland, the Valtellina, and some smaller districts. These possessions were erected into a distinct kingdom, which continued in the possession of Austria until 1859, when Lombardy was ceded to France by the treaties of Villafranca and Zurich, after the disastrous campaign of that year, and by France transferred to the kingdom of Italy.

Lombardy contains the Provinces of Bergamo, Brescia, Como, Cremona, Mantua, Milan, Sondrio, and Pavia—in which is now included the district of the Lomellina, transferred from Piedmont.

NATURE OF THE COUNTRY .- AGRICULTURE .- PRODUCTIONS .- In the earliest times of the history of Italy, the whole of that rich country which now bears the name of Lombardy was possessed by the ancient and powerful nation of the Tuscans. Subsequently numerous hordes from Gaul poured successively over the Alps into Italy, and by degrees drove the Tuscans from these fertile plains. At about the beginning of the second century before Christ it became a Roman province. Large tracts of country, which, from being swampy or covered with forests, were uninhabited and unfit for cultivation, were now drained and levelled, and the whole assumed an appearance of prosperity and opulence which was not surpassed by any part of the Empire. The splendour of Verona may be traced in its remains; yet Verona was less celebrated than Padua, Milan, or Ravenna. But from the reign of Tiberius the decay of agriculture was felt in Italy. In the division and decline of the Empire the country was exhausted by war, famine, and pestilence. St. Ambrose has deplored the ruin of a populous region, which had been once adorned with the flourishing cities of Bologna, Modena, Regium, and Placentia. The barbarians who took possession of Italy on the fall of the Western Empire were compelled by necessity to turn their attention to agriculture, which had been long in such a state of depression, that the country could not furnish the imposts on which the pay of the soldier depended, nor even a certain supply of the necessaries of life. After the occupation of Northern Italy by the Lombards, and the restoration of a tolerable degree of security and quiet, agriculture gradually improved. In spite of the constant warfare of the neighbouring cities during the existence of the Italian republics, both the towns and country advanced in population and wealth. Though the greatest territorial improvement of Lombardy took place, perhaps, at an era rather posterior to that of her republican government, yet from this it primarily sprang, owing to the perpetual demand upon the fertility of the earth by an increasing population. The rich Lombard plains, still more fertilised by irrigation, became a garden, and agriculture seems to have reached the excellence which it still retains. Though Lombardy was extremely populous in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries, she exported large quantities of corn. Many canals were cut: the Naviglio Grande was commenced in 1177, and completed in 1272; that of Pavia, though only recently brought into its present complete state, was begun in 1359; that which runs through Milan, in 1440, and finished in 1497; those of Bereguardo and the Martesana were begun in 1457; and that of Paderno in 1518. These canals, and the general character of the land, give to the districts of the plain a considerable similarity to Flanders.

Modern Lombardy is confined on the west by the Canton of Ticino and the Italian Provinces of Novara and Alessandria (Piedmont); on the east by the Mincio and the Province of Rovigo. The region is separated on the north from Switzerland by the wall of the Alps, and, on the south, is bounded by the river Po, which separates Lombardy from the Provinces of Piacenza, Parma, and Modena. The territory contains 23,377.74 square kilometres, of which about 10,399.54 are mountains and hill, and 12,978.20 plain land. The total population, in 1885, amounted to four inches wide, open one inch below the surface of the water, which, with its pressure, determines a given velocity. The value of a property depends on the command, the conveniency, and the goodness of the water. Hence the distribution of the waters is the object of local statutes, of diligent care and keeping.

The best irrigation is that in the lands about Milan, Lodi, and Pavia. In the country between Milan, Lodi, and Pavia, the cheese called in the country Grana, and by us Parmesan, is made.

In the eastern part of Lodi and Crema flax is largely cultivated, and exported to foreign countries by way of Venice and Genoa. For various reasons, partly on account of the change in the climate of Italy, the cultivation of rice is on the decrease. The summers are not sufficiently hot, and the temperature at that season, formerly constant, has become variable.

Lombardy is a highly industrial region, and its manufactures include silk (especially at Como), cotton yarns and stuffs, wool, flax and hemp, furniture, paper, and leather.

In the more elevated parts of the Cremonese country, where irrigation is impossible, the cultivation of various kinds of grain, flax, mulberry-trees, and the vine is followed. In the low parts, along the Po, towards Casal Maggiore, wine is the principal production.

The inhabitants of the low country are less inclined to be industrious, or to engage in commerce, than those of the upper. Hence in the lower countries manufacturing industry is greatly restricted. Nevertheless, in the Cremonese territory much linen is manufactured about Viadana; and at Pralboino, in the Province of Brescia.

The rich cheese called Stracchino is made from cream and unskimmed cow's milk. The best is produced about Gorgonzola, 12 m. E. of Milan.

Masserie (farms).—The average size of the tenancies in the mountain and hill districts and non-irrigated plain is from 2 to 12 hectares. The general system of tenures in these territories is the metayer (mezzadria, masseria, or colonia), or a modification thereof. One of these modifications is the corn rent, which prevails in the Upper Milanese and the district of Como. The grapes and cocoons are divided "a mezzadria," the money rent for the house and the "appendizi" are the same, but the immediate products of the soil are subjected to a fixed rent in kind, generally wheat. The modifications of this system of tenancy are innumerable.

In Lombardy the true mezzadria seems only to be preserved in the Province of Bergamo.

It does not appear that rent is always paid for the house, except in the most fertile districts, with, in most cases, a rent for the meadow land attached to the farm. The appendizi mentioned above, also called onoranze, consists generally of fresh eggs, chickens, &c., which the metayer agrees to give to the Lombard, with so many days' labour or carriage of material, if required, either gratis or at a fixed rate. These dues are sometimes commuted for a payment in money.

Silk.—The following statistics of the average annual yield of cocoons in Italy, and comparative yield of raw silk, must be taken as only approximation:

			-					Cocoons.	Raw Silk.
Piedmont . Lombardy Venetia Rest of Italy	•	•	•	•	•	•	•	Kilograms. 6,744,521 15,500,303 8,250,030 8,581,244	Kilograms. 501,235 1,122,011 600,212 754,603
	Tot	al	Kil	•	• .	•		39,076,098	2,978,061

As to value, taking It. lire 3.75 for a kilogram of cocoons, and It. lire 47 as the approximate value of a kilogram of raw silk in 1889, some idea might be arrived at, but it would only be approximation.

Silkworm grain is hatched about end of April and beginning of May. The spring season begins in June, some days before the crop is all gathered in, and is carried on generally till the end of November. As a rule the largest filatures never stop work, except for two or three weeks at the end of the year, but in some years they close early in October, and only a few re-open in April. The small mills have in great part disappeared. The modern filatures are generally large, and are all worked by steam, though the motive-power may in some cases be water.

The culture of the mulberry and the rearing of the silkworm have, in commercial value, become the most important branch of Lombard industry. The white mulberry grows chiefly in rows, surrounding grounds under other cultivation, over a great extent of Lombardy. In most places it is pollarded, in a dwarf thickly-leaved tree. When allowed to grow naturally it attains a tolerable size.

FINE ARTS.—Of ancient sculpture little has been found in Lombardy, except at Brescia. The reliefs of the Porta Romana, at Milan, executed about the year 1169, immediately after the rebuilding of the city, are a striking specimen. About a hundred years afterwards sculpture produced a class of figures almost peculiar to Lombardy. These are frequently colossal, of lions and other animals, supporting the pillars of the portals of the churches, or sepulchral urns. In the fourteenth century several Tuscan sculptors were called in; but there appear to have been also many Lombards, though few of their names have been preserved, as they do not seem to have adopted the custom, so much practised in other parts of Italy, of inscribing them upon their works. The records of the Certosa of Pavia, begun in 1473, suddenly afford us ample information respecting the artists employed upon that splendid building—Amedeo, Brioschi, Ettore d'Alba, Stefano, Battista, and Paolo da Sesto, Nava, Agrate, Fusina, Solari, and others; but without giving us the means of distinguishing, at least in this building, the parts upon which they were severally employed. They have, however, one uniform character—extraordinary delicacy of finish in the details and a pictorial management of their figures in relief; so that it seems as if the works of Mantegna, or Pietro Perugino, were transferred to marble. Many of these sculptors were also architects; and in estimating the works of this school it must be recollected that sculpture was seldom used by them as a detached ornament, but was always attached to some architectural structure.

The pride, however, of Lombard sculpture is Agostino Busti, also called Bambaja (1490–1548), by whom the cinquecento style, or that of the Renaissance, was carried to perfection. The minute ornaments in which he excelled are usually arabesques of elegant invention, intermixed with fanciful ornament—animals, weapons, pieces of armour, flowers, insects. Brambilla, who worked some time before the death of Busti, has much of his character. The colossal terms of the Doctors of the Church in Milan Cathedral, supporting one of the great pulpits, are by him: his minuter ornaments are scarcely inferior to those of Busti. Most of the workmen and artists employed upon the Cathedral of Milan were from the neighbourhood of Como, where the profession has been hereditary in families from the time of the Lombards. In recent times Marchesi, Monti, Magni, and Vela have given a well-deserved reputation to the Milanese school of sculpture.

In mediæval architecture Lombardy offers much, both in civil and ecclesiastical buildings. The town-halls are interesting: they usually stand upon open arches; and above is the Ringhiera, or balcony, from which the magistrates proclaimed the laws and addressed the people.

Military architecture also exists in great variety—the rude towers of the periods of Queen Theodolinda or King Berengarius; the castellated palace of the Signori, in the ages of the Italian republics; and the regular fortifications which, invented in Italy, have become universal throughout Europe.

The earlier Lombard churches exhibit a very peculiar character, allied to that which we find in many of those of Germany, especially near the Rhine. It is very marked, and will be found to exist in almost every structure of that class. Of pointed architecture there are two distinct styles: the one simple, and bearing much analogy to the Italian Gothic of Tuscany; the other florid or highly ornamented, and introduced from Germany: to the latter belongs the Duomo of Milan.

Many of the Gothic and some of the cinquecento buildings are moulded brick, to which are added terra-cotta reliefs. This kind of work has been carried to a degree of excellence which can only be appreciated in Lombardy, "the great country of brick," as Thomas Hope styled it. The colour is a shade lighter than that of our Tudor buildings; the durability of the material is such as to be nearly as lasting as marble. It was during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries that the art of terra-cotta attained its greatest development—that is, during the prevalence of the Renaissance style, "as noble monuments both sacred and profane attest. From the most celebrated architects who flourished along with Luca della Robbia, that pre-eminent modeller in terra-cotta, down to the period of the Renaissance, ceramic ornament invariably entered into designs for buildings." -Gruner.† In the style of the Renaissance Lombardy excels. The works of Bramante and Solari are full of imagination and effect. times Palladio had comparatively little influence; in civil architecture, the palaces of Milan, Pavia, and Cremona, are inferior to those of Vicenza and Genoa. At present the most eminent architects have been formed, either directly or indirectly, by the French and Roman Schools.

[†] See 'The Marble and Brick Architecture of North Italy during the Middle Ages,' by G. E. Street, 1 vol. 8vo., 2nd ed. 1874; and 'The Brick and Terra-cotta Buildings of North Italy, 12th to 15th Centuries,' by Lewis Gruner. 1866.

In the middle ages Lombardy was the great instructress of Christendom in civil law and in medicine; and in modern times science has been cultivated here with success; while, in imaginative literature, Monti was one of the most elegant of modern Italian poets, and the name of Manzoni is an honour, not only to Lombardy, but to the Italian tongue. His historical novel, the Promessi Sposi, should be in the traveller's hands in his excursions in and about Milan. It is a real guide-book, both to the scenery and the history of that lovely land.

THE RIVIERA AND GENOA.

POLITICAL CHANGES.—CHARACTER OF THE COUNTRY.—At the beginning of the present century the dominions of Sardinia on this coast consisted of the county of Nice (ceded to France by the Treaty of March 24, 1860), the principality of Oneglia, and some smaller districts; the remainder belonged to the republic of Genoa. The "imperial fiefs" in the interior were small feudal sovereignties; but they all belonged to Genoese nobles, and, though by law subject to the empire, still, politically speaking, they had no independent existence, and had become mere private domains. After the transitory duration of the Ligurian republic (1797), the whole was incorporated with the French Empire (1805). The Congress of Vienna transferred it to the King of Sardinia; and the House of Savoy thus not only regained their old possessions, but also obtained the territories for which they had more than once struggled. A nominal existence had been given to the "duchy of Genoa," and the title of duke was taken by the sovereign; but the whole was politically united to the rest of the Sardinian states, though very distinct in its physical features and the national character of its population. Between the Var, fixed in the time of Augustus as the boundary of Italy on the W., and the Magra, the ancient boundary of Tuscany, the greater part of this territory is situated. A small district beyond the Magra, won by the Genoese from their ancient rivals of Lucca, and composing a part of the Tuscan Lunigiana, was retained by the Sardinian monarch as the successor of the republic.

The country is a continued series of mountain ridges, valleys, and ravines, formed by the spurs of the Maritime Alps and the Apennines. The breadth of the district, which is now denominated "Maritime Liguria," varies (always supposing the central ridge of the Maritime Alps and Apennines to form its N. limit) from 25 m. at Nice, to 5 m. between Arenzano and Voltri, where the latter chain (at Monte Reisa) approaches nearest to the shores of the Mediterranean. The climate is most agreeable, the atmosphere remarkable for its transparency and purity. In several of the districts on the seaside, which are protected from the N. and N.E. winds, the thermometer rarely falls below freezing-point; and hence the singular beauty of the vegetation, in which the botany of the temperate zone of the southern coasts of Europe, and of the northern coasts of Africa, is combined with that of warmer regions. When the ravines epen into the mountains the sharp wind occasionally penetrates, and sometimes the winters are severe; but the olive rarely suffers, and this affords a test of N. Itals.

the mildness of the climate. The transient variations of temperature, or perhaps some less perceptible cause, render pulmonary complaints common amongst the inhabitants of the Riviera; and the foreign invalid who resorts hither in search of health finds the natives moved down by the disease from which he seeks to fly. The mountains abound in valuable marbles, furnishing many of those with which the palaces of Genoa are adorned. Liguria consists of the Provinces of Genoa and Porto Maurizio, and has a population of 919,185.

Agriculture.—Towns.—The special shelter afforded by the mountains to the terrace or strip at their base running along the Mediterranean shore produces a climate such as is not found again until you reach the latitude of Naples, Palermo, and Alicante. The consequence is that not only wheat, vines, and maize flourish, but oranges, lemons, aloes, and cactuses grow in the open air; while the date-palm occurs not only singly, but at Bordighera in large groves. The chief source of wealth, however, is the olive, which is the prevailing tree, and is cultivated with great care. It requires assiduous watering and trenching to let in air to the roots, and once a year receives a manuring with old rags, of which the traveller becomes aware through the foul smell which fills the air at such times.

'the Riviera di Ponente, appear strikingly picturesque and beautiful from the sea; but, on entering them, with the exception of those which strangers have enriched, dirt and discomfort, windows without glass, a want of all that we consider convenient within doors, dilapidation and a general absence of completeness without and within, are their ordinary characteristics. Improvement is, however, making advances.

The chief ports are Spezia, Genoa, Savona, and Porto Maurizio.

Roads.—At the beginning of the present century there were only two roads practicable for carriages, and those but indifferent—the road from Nice to Turin by the Col di Tenda, and that from Alessandria to Genoa over the Pass of La Bocchetta; all the others were mountain paths, some of which could not be crossed, even on mules. The Cornice road which connects France with Central Italy was planned and executed as far as Mentone by Napoleon I., but was completed by the Sardinian Government, together with many other carriage-roads by which the traffic of the country is carried on, and to which its rapid improvement is to be in part attributed.

Character of the Population.—The Ligurian tribes were amongst the last of the inhabitants of Italy incorporated in the Roman Empire. We are not acquainted with the government and constitution of the people prior to that event; it seems probable, however, that, being Celta, they constituted a confederacy of claus and tribes bound by their own laws and customs, but not acknowledging any common head or superior. Having allied themselves to the Carthaginians, the Romans, after the second Punic war, assailed them with eighty years' hostility, and they were for a time rendered obedient; yet they were not finally subjugated until conquered by Augustua, who commemorated his triumph by the remarkable trophy of which the ruins are still existing at Turbia. By him—or, at least, during his reign—the Alps became the limits of Italy. But this conquest did not break up the nationality, nor indeed the government, of the Ligurian states. They continued to retain their identity, though under Roman supremacy; and this corporate succession (as in the large cities of the south of France) was continued, in a great measure, until the great European revolution of the nineteenth century. Thus Noli, Savona, Albenga, San Remo, Porto Maurizio, and Ventimiglia, were rather the allies than the subjects of Genoa; and even much smaller communities enjoyed a species of independence. The inhabitants of this coast possess a very decided national character, and present all the physical characteristics of a pure and unaltered race, excepting at Genoa, where there appears to have been a considerable mixture of Lombard blood.

From the earliest period the Ligurians have been a nation of sailors and merchants. Mago the Carthaginian reduced the city of Genoa B.C. 205. The ancestors of Doria and of Columbus were distinguished by their aptness for maritime enterprise. In the middle ages Genoa alone vied with Venice; and at the present day she has recovered her ancient commercial prosperity, and far surpasses her rival of the Adriatic.

Figs. Arrs.—Little is known respecting the arts of Genoa in the middle ages. There are Roman remains at Cimies, near Nice; others exist at Turbia, at Ventimiglia, and at Albenga; but the ancient masters of the world have left few traces of their domination in Liguria. The "Gothic" architecture of the country is of a peculiar character, and, in Genoa at least, exhibits more orientalism than perhaps in any other part of W. Europa. But, in the sixteenth century, architecture burst out in Genoa with splendour. The palaces of Genoa exhibit fine specimens of domestic architecture. Galeazzo Alessi (1500–1572), by whom the best of them were designed, gave the impulse which continued till the last century, when the art declined, giving way to extravagant decoration.

VENETIA.

The Veneti, a race of uncertain origin, but probably not Italian, planted themselves in very early times as colonists, not upon the Islands of the Adriatic, but upon the main land. For purposes of defence against their enemies they formed an alliance with Rome, and upon the conquest of the Cisalpine Gauls became included under the Roman dominions. Their chief towns were Patavium (Padua), Altinum, near Torcello, and Aquileia; but in the fifth century, all of these having been overrun and almost destroyed by Goths and Lombards, the entire population migrated for safety to the Islands of the Lagoons, using as a harbour for their shipping the port of Malamocco. The chief of these Islands were Torcello, Mazzorbo, Burano, and S. Erasmo; the seat of government was first at Heracleia, afterwards at Malamocco, and was removed to the Rivo-alto, the nucleus of Venice, at the commencement of the ninth century. The following List of Doges, with a brief allusion to the most prominent events of their time, will serve as a short summary of Venetian history:—

DUCHIES OF PARMA AND PIACENZA.

Modern Emilia comprises the Provinces of Bologna, Ferrara, Forll, Modena, Parma, Piacenza, Ravenna, and Reggio. Pop. 2,261,660. The following short account, for reasons of historical interest, follows the ancient divisions.

These two dismemberments of ancient Lombardy, ceded to Leo X. by Francesco Sforza in 1515, were bestowed by Pope Paul III., in 1545, on his illegitimate son Pier Luigi Farnese; they remained in the possession of his descendants until the extinction of the male line of that family in 1731, when they devolved to the Spanish branch of the House of Bourbon, in virtue of the inheritance of Elizabeth Farnese, daughter of the last duke, Ranuccio III., who had married Philip V., and who left heirs. This transfer was confirmed by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. At the breaking out of the war which followed the French Revolution, these duchies were governed by Ferdinand, grandson of Elizabeth, and were invaded by Bonaparte in 1796. After that period they may be considered as dependencies of France; they formed the Departments of the Trebbia and Taro in the kingdom of Italy. On the fall of Napoleon, Parma and Piacenza, to which Guastalla had been annexed, were made over at the Congress of Vienna to the Empress Maria Louisa for her life, with reversion to the descendants of the last duke of the House of Bourbon, to whom in the meantime the duchy of Lucca had been given in compensation. On the demise of Maria Louisa, in December 1847, Charles II. of Bourbon became Duke of Parma and Piacenza; but abdicated in 1849 in favour of his son, Ferdinand III., who was assassinated in 1854, leaving several children. The eldest, Robert, being under age, the government of the duchies was assumed by his mother, as Regent, during his minority. In the event of failure of male issue in the reigning family, the duchy of Parma was to have passed to Austria, and that of Piacenza to the King of Sardinia; when the events of 1859 upset the stipulations made at the Congress of Vienna, the Provinces of Piacenza and Parma annexing themselves by an almost unanimous vote to the kingdom of Italy, under the rule of Vittorio Emanuele.

The sovereignty of Parma from 1815 to 1859 embraced the duchy of that name, the duchy of Piacenza; and the district of Pontremoli, ceded by Tuscany on the sovereign of the latter coming into possession of the duchy of Lucca. Guastalla had been transferred to the Duke of Modena on the death of Maria Louisa.

The territory comprised in the two duchies of Parma and Piacenza, now forming the provinces of the same name of the kingdom of Italy, has a population of nearly 500,000. It extends from the Po on the N. to near the Mediterranean on the S. The portion of its territory in the plain between the Apennines and the Po is fertile, and watered by numerous rivers descending from these mountains. The districts in the Apennines are arid, rocky, and thinly peopled, and so inadequate to maintain their scanty population, that many of the inhabitants annually leave their homes to seek employment during the agricultural season in Lombardy and Tuscany, returning with the money thus earned to maintain themselves and their families; others, for a much longer period, as itinerant musicians, &c. Most of those Italians with organs, &c., whom we see about our streets, come from the districts of Parma and Modena bordering on the Apennines.

DUCHY OF MODENA.

Francesco V., Duke of Modena, on the breaking out of the war with France and Piedmont in the spring of 1859, was obliged to abandon his States, which, in the year 1860, by an almost unanimous vote, annexed themselves to the kingdom of Italy. They now form the Provinces of Modena, Reggio, and Massa-Carrara.

The Modenese territory was of somewhat greater extent than Parma. Its soil and productions are similar, except to the S. of the Apennines.

where the olive and orange grow in the open air. The farms are small, and the masseria system prevails. Agriculture is the chief industry; chestnuts form the principal food of the peasantry in the mountain districts, pollenta or porridge of Indian corn-meal in the plain. Wheat, maize, wines, olives, silk, hemp, and some flax, are the principal objects of culture. Large flocks of sheep pasture on the Apennines and the slopes of the mountains, on which pine, oak, and chestnut trees abound. The vine is extensively cultivated about Reggio and Modena, from which a large quantity of wine, of a strong rough description, is exported to Lonbardy. The marble of Carrara forms the most valuable article of its Some silk-works, linen and canvas, leather, paper, and mineral riches. pottery, all on an insignificant scale, comprise the manufacturing industry of the country. Its trifling commerce is, like that of Parma, confined to an interchange of its few surplus products for colonial commodities and articles of luxury; all of which, from both, are comprised in the trade of the surrounding maritime states. The duchies of Modena and Parms, together with Piacenza, Bologna, Ferrara, Forll, Reggio, and Ravenna, are now included in the Province of Emilia.

The former possessions of the Holy See on the northern side of the Apennines, constituted, in the most recent division of the Pontifical States, the Legation of Romagna, consisting of the four Delegations, now Provinces, of Bologna, Ferrara, Ravenna, and Forlì. This territory, one of the most luxuriant in Italy, containing a population of 1,040,574, extends from the Duchy of Modena, on the W., to the Adriatic, and from the Po to the N. declivity of the Apennines, where it joins Tuscany.

These provinces, which had been acquired at different times by the Popes, partly by cessions from Pepin and Charlemagne (Ravenna), partly by a pretended suzerainty over some of their feudal rulers, on the extinction of their families in the male line (Ferrara), and others by violence, as in the case of the free towns of Bologna, Forlì, &c., formed for upwards of three centuries the Northern Legations of the Holy See.

In consequence of the discontent that reigned, and the inability of the government of Rome to maintain its power over the populations without foreign intervention, the assistance of Austria was called in. Besides garrisons which that empire was authorized to maintain at Ferrara and Comacchio by the Treaty of Vienna, she held military sway over Romagns from 1848 until 1859, exercising a degree of arbitrary power which not only created a deadly animosity against the German protectors of the Holy See, but extreme hatred of the Papal rule. When, therefore, the Austrian protecting force was obliged, by the military events of 1859, to withdraw, a general rising against the pontifical authorities immediately followed. Juntas were formed in all the larger towns, and subsequently a central one at Bologna, which, during a period of considerable difficulty. governed Romagna with great moderation and ability. In August, 1859, a parliament, elected by universal suffrage, was called together by this governing Junta, which met on the 2nd of September, and declared unanimously their separation for ever from the government of Rome. The same question having been re-submitted to universal suffrage on the 12th of March, 1860, the country declared, by an almost unanimous vote, its desire to form a part of the Italian monarchy—a declaration which was accepted by King Victor Emanuel and the parliament then sitting at Turin.

Romagna now contains the Provinces of Ravenna and Forli, with part of Imola and Bologna.

Paris.—P. L. M. Terminus, 20 Boulevard Diderot. The Lyons route is followed as far as 275 m. Mâcon Junct. Thence E. through Bourg and Ambérieu to 350 m. Culoz Junct. Here the line turns off S. from that to Geneva, and proceeds through Aix les Bains and Chambéry to 434 m. Modane (good Buffet). Custom House. The examination of luggage is very cursory. British subjects are not required to produce passports. 35 to 42 min. halt, and change of carriages. Views on the Italian side generally on the left.

On quitting the Stat. the Rly. makes a horseshoe curve of nearly 4 miles, round the old straggling village, and ascends rapidly one of the slopes of the Cottian Alps, passing through two tunnels, and looking down successively on the village and station, until it reaches the so-called Mont Cenis Tunnel under the Col de Fréjus. At its mouth a mountain of rubbish, extracted during the formation of the Tunnel, forms an artificial terrace on the hillside.

The very ancient Mont Cenis Pass lies nearly 20 m. E., and is traversed by an excellent carriage-road, completed in 1810. Being the lowest carriage-way across the Alps, it was much frequented. In 1867 an English company constructed a Rly. from St. Michel to Susa, on the Fell system, having, besides the usual pair of rails, a central rail, which was nipped upon the inclines by a pair of horizontal wheels attached to the under side of the engine. The hold of the horizontal wheels on the central rail could at any time be relaxed or applied at the will of the engine-driver. By this contrivance the trains were enabled safely to ascend and descend all the steep parts of the line, which ran for the most part by the side of the carriage-road. This railway was, however, never very popular; the receipts did not cover the working expenses; and the Fell rails have been removed. The adventurous shareholders lost the whole of their capital, about 640,000*l*.]

It seems that the first person who suggested the present tunnel was M. Médail of Bardonnecchia, who in 1832 ascertained that from Fourneau, near Modane, to Bardonnecchia the distance was shorter than at any other known place of equal height in the Alps. He died in 1850; but the Piedmontese Govern- they were charged with gunpowder, and ment adopted his scheme, and, after careful surveys, the work was begun on The piercing the N. side in Aug. 1857. of the mountain was completed on 25th Dec. 1870, after 13 years and 3 months' labour, and the tunnel was opened for traffic in Sept. 1871. engineers were Signori Grandis, Grattoni, and Sommeiller, all Piedmontese. bargain between the French and Italian Governments and the Railway Company of Northern Italy was that the Company should contribute 20 millions of francs towards the expenses; that the French Government should pay 19 millions of francs if the work was completed in 20 years, reckoning from 1862; and that the Italian Government should meet the remainder of the cost. It was, however, further agreed that if the work were finished at an earlier date, France should pay 500,000 francs more for every year gained upon the 20 years. Now, as the period was shortened by 11 years, France had to pay an additional sum of five and a half millions of francs. If the completion of the tunnel had been delayed beyond the 20 years, then Italy would have had to pay 500,000 francs for every year in excess of that period. When the work commenced, it was not possible to say what its duration might be. A mass of very hard quartzite was encountered at one time, which threatened to delay the operations considerably, but luckily it proved to be only 1 m. thick. One of the chief difficulties was that, as the tunnel would be very deep below the surface of the Alps overhead, no shafts could be sunk, and the work could be carried on from the ends only. The progress of the tunnel was very slow, until improved boring machines had been invented and perfected. These machines were worked by air compressed by means of water power. On the N. side a cut was made from the river Arc, leading water to work six overshot water-wheels. Each of these wheels worked two pumps which drove compressed air into a large number of receivers, shaped like long From these the comsteam boilers. pressed air was carried by an iron pipe up the face of the mountain and into the tunnel. By means of this compressed air acting on pistons, about fifty iron the machine was withdrawn, and the rock blasted. Workmen then cleared away the rubbish, and the process was repeated. As long as the boring machine was at work there was an ample supply of air, but while the rubbish was being cleared away no air came in. To supply air, therefore, a mountain stream with a good head of water was led to near the mouth of the tunnel, where it worked four enormous pistons in as many cylinders, by means of which the foul air was drawn from the tunnel.

The borings from the N. and S. ends met accurately, although starting more than 7 miles apart, and working up different slopes.

The tunnel was made perfectly straight, in order to avoid the risk of the proper direction being lost; and short curved branches to the tunnel were made at each end, to connect with the line as made outside.

The length of the tunnel, with its curved branches, is 14,050 yards, or 8 miles all but 30 yds. The height The height above the sea of the N, end is 3942 ft.; the S. end is higher by 438 ft. N. portion of the tunnel is on an incline of 1 in 45, and for a short distance 1 in 34. The S. portion is on an incline in the opposite direction of 1 in 2000. The middle of the tunnel is thus about 15 ft. higher than the S. end.

The tunnel is lined with brick or masonry throughout, and has a double line of rails, with a footpath on each The total cost was 3,000,000/., or 2201. a yard. The internal width of the base is 25 ft. $3\frac{1}{2}$ in., its height varies from $24\frac{1}{2}$ ft. to $25\frac{1}{2}$ ft., and the width of the rails is 4 ft. $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. The highest point of the Gran Vallone, the hill through which it passes, is 9500 ft. The great mass of the rocks perforated were calcareous schists.

The passage of the tunnel occupies from the N. about 28 minutes, from the S. somewhat less. The carriages are well lighted, and the tunnel is

The scenery is very wild, and there are 24 tunnels and galleries between this place and Bussoleno; two of them more than a mile long.

The Rly, runs along the valley, hemmed in with high mountains, to 8 m. Beaulard, on the hill to the rt. The name is supposed to be derived from the Bellari, a tribe which in former times inhabited the Cottian Alps, and whose name is inscribed upon the Roman arch at Susa. Following the muddy Bardonnecchia torrent, which the Rlv. crosses at Savaux, we enter the valley and pass the torrent of the Dora Riparia, before reaching

12 m Oulz (pronounced Ols). This village (3500 ft.) is one of the largest in the valley of the Dora, along which the diligence road ascends to the Col de Mont Genèvre and to Briançon beyond the French frontier. The Rly crosses the Dora by a lattice bridge, to follow the opposite bank of the torrent as far as Church, early 16th cent. On the L rises the Ambin; on the rt. is the Col de l'Assiette, over which there is a path to Fourriers. Fénestrelles, and Perosa. Near Salbertrand a battle took place in 1689, between Henry Arnaud, the Vaudois leader, and the Marquis de Larrey, in which the Piedmontese general was defeated, and the Valdese leader was thus able to regain his valleys over the Col de Seu.

At Salbertrand a special engine is attached for the steep descent to Bussoleno.

The scenery now becomes very imposing; the Rly, being carried along the face of a steep mountain high above the river.

The line crosses the Dora, and enters a long tunnel. On emerging from this, a glimpse is caught on the left of the village of Salbertrand, with its pasture some 500 ft below; after this many tunnels are threaded, and the intervals afford but scanty glimpses of the relies.

The view looking down upon the town and singular fort of Exilles is very striking. In this part of the valley of the Dora a battle took place in 1767, between the French, who were then invading Piedmont under the Comte de Belleisle, and the Piedmontese, in which the French commander lost his life, after a hardfought action.

22 m. Chiomonte (2525 ft.), in a wider valley, which the Bly. soon leaves and again comes out upon the face of the mountain. The old Mont Genèvre road is crossed, the zigzags of which are conspicuous on the slope. The town of Susa is seen in the valley, with the magnificent peak of the Roccia Melone above it.

The line continues to descend rapidly, until the Dora Riparia is crossed to 5 m Susa (3000), the Segusium of the Romans, and the seat of a bishopric. It is picturesque in its mediæval towers and gates, and is surrounded with lovely scenery. The Dora-Susina runs by the side of the town.

The Arch or City Gate, erected by Julius Cottius, son of King Donnus, about B.C. 8, in honour of Augustus, is on a road leading up from the S.W. of the Cathedral to the Old Castle outside the town, and is supposed to have stood on the Roman road.

which crossed Mont Genèvre. This chieftain of the Alpine tribes, having submitted to the Roman authority, records his dignity under the humbler title of Prefect. The Corinthian arch is of white marble, and the upper part is destroyed. It is somewhat remarkable that the columns are set on a pedestal which raises them considerably above the pilasters of the arch. The inscription, now nearly effaced, gave the names of his 14 mountain clans, and all that can be made now are the words IMP. CAESARI AUGOSTO DIVI F. PONTIFICI MAXIMO TRIBUNIC. POTES-TATE XV. IMP. XIII. The reliefs represent the sacrifices (Suovetaurilia) and other ceremonies by which the treaty was ratified and concluded.

There are two other Arches of Roman construction close by.

The Cathedral of St. Justus is of the 11th cent., and has a lofty campanile, in the Lombard style. The arches and massy piers of the nave belong to a more ancient fabric; the rest is in a simple Gothic style. In the Chapel of the Virgin is a gilded statue in wood (12th cent.) of Adelaide, Countess of Susa, the princess through whom the House of Savoy acquired dominions which became the origin of its power in Italy. celebrated lady was thrice married, her third husband being Otho, son of Humbert I., Count of Maurienne. In the right transept is a triptych, with the figure of Hugh Scott, Bishop of Lincoln (1126). In one of the chapels is a curious mediæval group in bronze of our Lady of Roccia Melone with St. George and Bonifacio Rotari, a crusader of the 12th cent. The 11thcent. font, of green Susa marble, has an ambiguous inscription, leaving it doubtful who "Guigo" was. In the Sacristy is a large silver Cross, said to have been given by Charlemagne.

Ancient towers, gateways, and Gothic remains add to the picturesque effect of the town.

Above Susa are the extensive ruins of the fort of La Brunetta, which once guarded the valley, and with the fortresses of Exilles and Fenestrelles, defended Piedmont on the side of France. It was destroyed by the French in 1798, in virtue of a treaty with Sardinia. The road over Mont Cenis passes near the ruins.

The Rochemelon (11,675 ft.), or Roccia Melone (Mons Romulea), N. of Susa, is crowned with a chapel, founded by Bonifacio of Asti (see above), who, having been taken prisoner by the Mahometans, made a vow that, if set free, he would erect an oratory here in honour of the Virgin. 3 m. from Susa are the remains of the Abbey of Novalesa, founded by Abbo, lord of Susa, about the year 739, and situated upon the old and now almost abandoned road to the Hospice. It was ruined by the Saracens not long after its foundation, but was rebuilt in the 10th cent.

Just outside of Susa, the view, looking back upon the town, in which the koman arch is conspicuous, is very beautiful. The extremity of the valley appears closed by the lofty Monte Pirchiriano, upon the summit of which may be descried the tower of the Abbey church of San Michele. The Roman road over the Alps, which was constructed when Cottius submitted to Augustus, passed up this valley, and, turning to the S.W. at Susa, along the valley of the Dora, crossed by the pass of Mt. Genèvre. This became the road most frequented by the Romans between Italy and Cisalpine Gaul. The military road of Pompey and Cæsar passed through Oulx, and over the Col de Sestrières.]

time, called Verde di Susa, resembling verde antico, but less durable and of a duller green. Near at hand is the Cavern of the Orrido di Foresto, into which the stream flowing from the glaciers of Roccia Melone is precipitated. Not far distant is the Orrido di Chianoc, another fine cave. On the rt. is

San Giorio (Giorgio), displaying its array of walls and towers, and an ancient fortress ascending the hill.

38 m. Sant' Antonino, a small town with an ancient Lombard tower

The conspicuous height in the distance, upon the summit of which a building can be fairly discerned, is Monte Pirchiriano, between which and Monte Caprasio was the ancient fortified line erected A.D. 774 by Desidecius, King of the Lombards, to defend his kingdom against Charlemagne, but of these defences no traces are now to be found, except in the name of the neighbouring hamlet of Chiusa (Clusse). The wall was defended by bulwarks and towers; but Charlemagne did not attack them a minstrel from the Lombard camp betrayed the existence of a secret path, through which the forces of the King of the Franks penetrated. Desiderius fled to Pavia, and the Lombard monarchy was overthrown, 42 m. Sant' Ambrogio, with a rather remarkable Church, hes at the foot of Monte Pirchiriano. The houses with their projecting galleries are picturesque.

A steep mountain path (donkeys may be hired) leads in 14 hr. behind the old Church by San Pietro, and through fine groves of chestnut-trees up to

*La Sagra di San Michele, one of the most remarkable churches of Piedmont, perched on the summit of the Pirchiriano (3100 ft.). Originally an oratory, founded by Amisone, Bishop of Turin in the 10th cent, it was marked out by beams of fire, which descended from heaven, and lighted the tapers employed for its consecration As a monastery, it was rebuilt about 998 by Hugh de Montboissier, a nobleman of Auvergre, who for some hemous crime had been enjoined the penance of founding a monastery in the Alps. In its flourishing days the Sagra contained 300 monks of the order of St. Benedict; and its history is connected with several of the most important personages and events of Piedmont and Savoy

Like most of the monasteries dedicated to St. Michael, this Sagra has the character at once of a castle and a church, great masses of ruins surround the habitable portion. Notwithstanding injudicious repairs, it is yet a complete castle of romance, walls growing out of rocks, and rocks built in and forming walls and foun-

Passing by a ruined outwork, we traverse a low vaulted gallery, and reach a small terrace. Before us is a Tower, rising out of and also leaning against the rock; the lower part contains the staircase to the monastery; the upper portion forms the apse of the Choir, and terminates in an open Lombard gallery of small circular arches supported by pillars. staircase is supported by an enormous central pier: here and there the rocks jut out, and portions of sepulchres are dimly seen. At the summit is a great arch, filled with desiccated corpses. The beautiful circular marble arch, by which we pass from the staircase to the corridor leading to the Church, is sculptured with the signs of the zodiac and inscriptions in very early Longobardic characters. A fine Gothic tomb, representing an abbot, has excited much controversy

King Charles Albert caused the remains of several members of the royal family to be removed hither from Turin. The remainder of the Sagra is a wilderness of ruined halls, corridors, cells, &c. The Benedictures have disappeared; and long before the Revolution their possessions had been much dilapidated. It was considered as one of those good "pieces of preferment" which the crown might dispose of; and the celebrated Prince Eugene, all booted and spurred, appears in the lists of abbots. The monastery has been given over to the priests of the Istituto della Carità, called Rosminians, from the name of their founder—an order of recent origin. They are principally employed in Education.

The views from the summit of the mountain, and those from the outer gallery of the choir, are of great beauty.

A rock in the neighbourhood is called the Salto della Bella Alda. The fair Alda leaped from the summit and reached the ground in safety, under the protection of the Virgin. Vainglorious and rash, she attempted the leap a second time, and perished by the fall.

middle ages, and some of the lower part of the Palazzo Madama, are perhaps the only ancient remains now existing. The reconstruction of the city, begun by Emanuele Filiberto and Carlo Emanuele II. is mainly due to Carlo Emanuele II. and Vittorio Amedeo II. Still further improvements have been more recently made, under the three late kings and the reigning monarch. At least one-fourth of the city has been erected since the restoration of the Royal Family, and of later years nearly one-third has been added to it on the S. side, where entire streets and squares have rapidly risen.

The climate of Turin, although variable from its proximity to high mountains, is healthy. Autumn is the pleasuntest season, for the winter is cold, the spring changeable, and the summer hot.

SQUARES, PUBLIC GARDENS, AND MONUMENTS.

The streets are all straight lines, intersecting each other at right angles. The blocks or masses of buildings formed by these intersections are called isole, an architectural Latinism retained here and also in Provence. The houses, which are of brick, intended for a covering of stucco, are divided into several apartments, occupied by distinct families. Through the perspective of the streets, the hills which surround the city, and the more distant Alps, are continually in view. The lofty colonnades running under the houses are a prominent feature, but the interminable succession of arcades, and windows of the same height, is a little monotonous.

The spacious Piazza Castello (D. 3) has in its centre the Palazzo Madama, on the N. the Royal Palace, and on the E. the Teatro Regio. Over the Palace is seen the fantastic spiral dome of the Sudario Chapel, and in front of it on the left is the dome of San Lorenzo. E. the broad and handsome Via di Po extends to the Piazza V. Emanuele and the Bridge, beyond which is seen the beehive-like Church of La Gran Madre di Dio.

W. of the Palazzo Madama is the Monument erected in 1857, by the Milanese, to the Sardinian Army, in commemoration of its heroic deeds for the liberation of the country in 1849. A Piedmontese soldier in white marble holds a flag, and below is a bronze relief by Vela, representing Victor Emanuel at the head of his troops.

From the S.E. corner of the Piazza Castello opens the Galleria dell' Industria Subalpina, a covered Arcade.

On the opposite side of the square the Via Garibaldi leads to the Piazza dello Statuto (A. 3), in which is the monument to commemorate the opening of the Mont Cenis Tunuel. It is a pile of granite rocks, 60 ft. high, studded with Titans contending with the forces of Nature, and surmounted by a bronze Genius of Science. The inscribed names are those of the Engineers.

The Piazza Carlo Alberto, on the E. side of the Palazzo Carignano (D. 3), has a fine bronze equestrian Statue of King Charles Albert, by Marocchetti, erected in 1861; at the base are four Piedmontese soldiers, and above as many allegorical figures of Italy. On the sides are four reliefs of military exploits of the King, and of his abdication.

The small Piazza Carignano, on the W. side of the same Palace, contains a marble Statue of the philosopher Gioberti (d. 1848), on a pedestal of pink granite, by the Piedmontese sculptor Albertoni (1860).

The spacious Piazza San Carlo (D. 4) has on its S. side the churches of Sta. Cristina and San Carlo Borromeo, from the latter of which it derives its name. In this Piazza stands a bronze equestrian *Statue of Emanuele Filiberto (d. 1580), in armour, sheathing his sword, presented to the city by King Carlo Alberto, and executed by Baron Marocchetti (1838). The original suit of armour is preserved in the Armeria Reale. The brouze reliefs on the pedestal represent the battle of St. Quentin, and the treaty of Château Cambrésis (1557, 1559).

The Piazza del Palazzo di Città

(Town-hall) has a monument to Amedeus VI. The bronze group by Palagi (1853) represents this Duke of Savoy (d 1383), better known as the Conte Verde, slaying a prostrate Saracen. Beside the entrance to the Palace are marble Statues of Prince Eugene of Savoy and Duke Ferdinand of Genoa (d. 1854); and under the portico are Statues of Carlo Alberto, "il Magnammo," by Cauda, and of Victor Emanuel II., by Vela. Tablets containing the names of the citizens of Turin killed in the campaigns of 1848, 1849, and 1859, are fixed to the wall of the portico. The clock in front was made by Dent of London.

The Piassa Savoia has a pink granite obelisk erected in 1853, by public subscription, to commemorate the reforms of Siccordi, particularly the abolition, in 1850, of ecclesiastical jurisdiction in civil affairs in Piedmont. On the sides are engraved the names of the members of the legislature who took part in the vote of the Chambers.

The Piazza Carlo Felics (D 5), in front of the Rly. Stat., is decorated with plants, flowers, and a fountain. Here is a bronze Statue of Massimo d'Azeglio (d. 1860), erected in 1873 by Balzico. Opening out of it on either side are two smaller squares: on the E. the Piazzetta Lagrange, having a Statue, erected in 1867, of the great mathematician Lagrange, who was born, in 1736, in the Via Lagrange (a tablet marks the house), although of French or Savoyard descent. On the W. is the Piazzetta Paleocapa: the sitting figure of rough white marble is that of the engineer Paleocapa, for many years Minister of Public Works.

The Piama Vittorio Emanuele II. (B. 5) is adorned with a Statue of the late king, by Costa.

In the Piazza Solferino (C. 4) is a bronze Statue, representing Duke Ferdinand of Genoa in the act of springing from his mortally wounded horse at the battle of Novara, by Bulzico. In the adjoining Gardens are monuments of Gen. Gerbaix de Sonnas (bronze), and the historian La Farina (marble).

The Piama Carlo Emanuels II usually called Piazza Carlina (E. 9 contains a large *Monument to Cavou who was born in 1810 at the corner of the Via Lagrange and Via Cavour (tablet marks the house); the status of Cavour and Italy are by Dupré of Florence (1873). The poor brom reliefs on the pedestal represent the return of the Sardinian army from the Crimea, and the Congress of Paris.

The Piazza Vittorio Emanuele 👢 (E. F. 3) is principally remarkable for its extent, and the fine view which it commands of the Collina range with the Superga rising to the 1 At its E. extremity is a Bridge leading to the church of La Gran Madre d Dio. It was begun by the French in 1810, and completed by Vittoria Emanuele II. It has five elliptic grante arches, each of about 80 fa spau Good view S. of the Palassa Valentino, with a background of Alpa and of the Capuchin monastery over hanging the Po. Rehind the Gran Madre Church is the Vigna della Regina (see below). Looking down the stream, the Superga is seen towers ing on its hill, Pietro Micca, a soldier who, at the cost of his own life, blew up a mine that destroyed the French troops, as they entered the citadel in 1706.

Tasso's house is 2, Via della Basilica (C. 2); a tablet records that the poet lived here in 1578.

Gardens and Promenades. — The well-shaded Giardino Reale attached to the Royal Palace is open daily in summer from 11 to 3; military band on Sun. afternoon. The pretty and spacious Giardino Pubblico, extending along the banks of the Po from the Suspension Bridge to the Valentino palace (E. F. 5, 6), is charmingly laid out and much frequented (Café and S. of it is a Model Restaurant). CASTLE and VILLAGE, erected in 1884 as a memorial of the Exhibition, and representing a Piedmontese Château of the middle ages. It was designed by Brayda and decorated by Andrade. (Adm. 50 c.) The small and unattractive Giardino di Cittadella (B. 3) has white marble Statues of the orator Brofferio, and Cassinis the jurist (1866). The Piazza d'Armi is sur-(1866). rounded by shady avenues, much frequented on fine afternoons (military band daily on summer evenings). besides, Boulevards are, planted with trees on the outskirts of the city.

The Botanical Garden is near the Valentino Palace, and can be seen at any time on application to the keeper.

N. of the Suspension Bridge, on the l. bank of the Po, is a bronze Statue of Garibaldi, with allegorical reliefs in white marble, erected in 1887.

CHURCHES.

The architect principally employed at Turin by Carlo Emanuele II. was the Theatine Guarini (1624-1683), an able mathematician, noted for his bold and daring constructions. Juvara, a Sicilian by birth (1685-1735), was much patronised by Vittorio Amedeo II. There is much difference in the style of these two architects, but they generally agree in their deplorable want of taste.

The Cathedral (C. D. 2), dedicated to St. John the Baptist, was founded by Agilulphus, King of the Lombards, about 602. The present building was begun in 1492, and consecrated in 1505. It has been much altered, and some arabesques in the pilasters of the façade are the only remarkable portions of the original structure. The interior is not attractive, and has been decorated with frescoes (1835). The vaulting contains Scripture subjects from the expulsion of Adam and Eve from Paradise to the giving of Over the arches are the the Law. principal events in the life of St. John Baptist; at the W. end is a copy, by Fran. Sagna, of the Cenacolo of Leonardo da Vinci. The 2nd chapel rt. has a Virgin and Child, with four Saints and eight small subjects, by Deferrari.

In the First Sacristy, opening out of the rt. transept, is the monument of Claude Seyssel, who, after filling successively the places of Professor in the University of Turin, and of Master of Requests in France, where he was employed by Louis XII. on several diplomatic missions, became Bishop of Marseilles, and subsequently Archbishop of Turin, where he died in the royal family.

The high altar is richly ornamented: over the l. transept is the gallery for

Behind the cathedral, seen through the arch over the high altar, and entered by a double flight of black marble stairs, is the *Cappella del SS. Sudario, or Santa Sindone (open until 10 or 11 A.M.). It is lined with black Its cupola is formed of arched ribs, from the summits of which others spring in succession, thus forming a sort of dome. The capitals of the columns, and some other ornamental portions, are of bronze. pavement is inlaid with bronze stars. In the centre is the altar, upon which is placed the shrine, brilliant with gold, silver, and precious stones. The Sindone, according to the legend, is one of the folds of the shroud in which our Lord was wrapped by Joseph of Arimathæa, and on which an impression was left of the body; other folds being preserved at Rome, at Besançon, and at Cadoum in Perigord. The one at Turm was brought from Cyprus, and presented in 1452, by Marguerite de Charal, the descendant of a hobleman of Champagne, who was said to have obtained it during the Orusades; but there is no mention of its existence until the 15th cent., when, having been given by Marguerite to Duke Louis II, it was deposited at Chambery. Hence it was brought to Turin, in 1578, by Emanuel Philibert, for the purpose of enabling S. Carlo Borromeo to venerate it without the fatigue of crossing the Alps. While at Chambery it was invoked by Francis I, previous to the battle of Marignano, and on his return to France he went on foo, from Lyons to adore it. A sitting marble figure of Queen Maria Adelaide (d. 1855), the wife of King Victor Emanuel, by Revelle, a Genouse sculptor, has been erected in this chapel.

In the niches round the sanctuary King Charles Albert piaced, in 1842, monuments to four of the most renowned members of the house of Savoy—Emanuel Philibert, whose remains are belieath—a fine work by Marchesi; Prince Thomas of Savoy (d. 1656), from whence descend the present sovereigns of Italy, of the branch of Carignano, by Gaggini, a Genoese pupil of Cahova; Charles Emanuel II. (d. 1675), by Fraccaroli; and Amedeo

VIII. (1451), by Cacciatori.

San Lorenzo (D. 3), an extreme example of the fancy of Guarmi, is curious from its fantastical dome, formed on ribs, each of which is the chord of 3-8ths of a circle. It was built in 1634.

San Domenico (C 2) contains on the rt. of the high altar a large picture of the Virgin and Child presenting the rosary to the patron saint, by Gueromo St. Catharine kneels beside St. Dominic, wearing a crown of thorns.

La Consolata (B. 2), the joldest an unitation of the Pautheon at Church in Turin, derives its name from a miraculous image of the Virgin. The present edifice was constructed by Guarina in 1679, on the site of one founded in the 10th cent. In a recess on the l. are marble statues, by Vela, to the two Queens of Sardinia, who both died in 1855, Maria Teresa, wife of Charles Albert, and Maria Adelaide, wife of Victor Emanuele II. The corridor on the rt. is covered with ex-voto paintings of the rudest kind, many of them extremely comic. The brick campanile belonged to the original Church, then dedicated to St. Andrew. In the Plazza stands a handsome column of grey Biella grante, erected in 1835, to com-memorate the cessation of the first invasion of the cholera,

Corpus Domini (C. 2) was built in 1609-1753. On the floor of the nave is a railed-in marble inscription, to commemorate the miracious recovery of a piece of Sacramental plate containing the consecrated wafer. This had been stolen curing the pillage of Exilles by a soldier, and hidden in one of his pauniers, but the ass carrying it refused to pass the church door, the sacred pyx fell to the ground, and the wafer, rising into the air, remained suspended there, encircled with rays of light, until the bishop and his clergy came out to receive it. This singular miracie, said to have taken place on the 6th of June, 1453, is represented in three paintings by Vacca on the vault of the nave of 16 (1728).

8. Giulia (F. 2, is a modern Church in the Gothic, style, built by Ferrants at the expense of the Marchesa di Barolo.

La Gran Madre di Dio (F. 4, was begun in 1818, to commemorate the restoration of the royal family in 1814, and finished about 1840. It is an inutation of the Pauthern at Rome, by the architect Buonsignore, and is said to have cost 100,000l. sterling, chiefly contributed by King Carlo Felice.

S. Gioachino, by Ceppi, in front of the Lanzo Rly. Stat. (C. 1), and S. Secondo, near the Central Stat. (C. 5), are good examples of modern Churches.

A Protestant Church (Tempio Valdese) was built in 1853, on the S. side of the fine Corso Vittorio Emanuele II. (D. E. 5), chiefly for the use of the Vaudois, of whom there is a considerable number settled at Turin. Service on Sunday at 11 in French, according to the Vaudois rite. The principal part of the expense was contributed by the Government, for which it has been visited with great animadversion by the bigoted party.

The Jewish Synagogue, in the Via Sant' Anselmo (D. 5), is worth a visit.

PALACES AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The ROYAL PALACE (Palazzo Reale) on the N. side of the Piazza Castello (D. 2), was raised by Carlo Emanuele II. from the designs of the Conte di Castellamonte in 1660, and subsequently enlarged by Juvara. exterior has no pretension to magnificence, and its effect has been much injured by wings awkwardly attached The iron railings and gates to it. which separate it from the Piazza are from designs by Palagi; the bronze figures of Castor and Pollux by Sangiorgio (1842). The interior is to be seen on Sun. and Thurs. from 10 to 12, and 2 to 4. Tickets at No. 1, Piazza S. Giovanni, N. of the Cathedral, gratis. On the principal staircase is a bronze equestrian Statue of Vittorio Amedeo I., commonly called Il Cavallo di Marmo, the animal being much more prominent than his rider. captives at the feet of the horse are by Adriano Frisio, a scholar of Giov. Bologna. By a noble marble staircase, ornamented with paintings and statues, we reach a great old-fashioned hall, Guards. In this is a large painting of the battle of St. Quentin (1557), attributed to Palma the younger. Thence we pass into the hall of the Body Guard, adorned with frescoes and paintings. The state apartments are splendidly furnished, modern luxury being united to the heavy magnificence of the last century. They were restored and decorated during the reign of Charles Albert. The inlaid floors, in woods of different colours, are remarkably beautiful. In the King's Private Room are modern paintings of members of the House of Savoy remarkable for their piety, or members of religious orders. The Great Gallery, overlooking the gardens, contains portraits of sovereigns of the reigning family, and of men of eminence in every department, natives of the country. Beyond this is the Apartment of the Queen, with magnificent boudoirs, no longer shown. In the Guardaroba della Regina are some good Etruscan vases, and a large picture of Taormina, with Ætna in the distance, by Massimo d'Azeglio; near this is the Chapel, gaudy and heavy. The State Drawing-room contains several indifferent pictures - one of a tournament at the Court of France between Amedeus VIII. of Savoy and the three English Earls of Harrington, Arundel, and Pembroke. The Drawing-room is richly decorated with a profusion of Chinese and Japan porcelain. The State Ball-room has a remarkable inlaid floor. The Chapel of the Santo Sudario, generally closed during the afternoon, on the side of the cathedral, can always be entered from the palace, near the antercom of the state apartments.

The King's Library on the ground-floor (open from 9 to 11 and 2 to 4, with the permission of the librarian), is a very handsome hall, containing upwards of 60,000 printed volumes and 3000 MSS. Amongst the latter are some curious documents and correspondence; the materials sent by Frederick the Great to Count Algarotti, for the history of the Seven Years' War; letters of Emanuel Phili-bert, Prince Eugene of Savoy, and Napoleon; many Arabic and Syriac manuscripts. There is also a valuable collection of 2000 drawings by old masters, formed by the Roman engraver Volpato, and including specimens of Mantegna, Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, M.chel Angelo, &c, and a very fine Miniature by Cristoforo da Predia (1474). K. In the passage leading into the library are several early Christian inscriptions from the Catacombs at Rome, a few in Greek characters.

Adjoining the state apartments, but entered from the side of the Piazza (No. 13, under the arcade), is the *Armeria Reale (open daily from 11 to 3, by Permesso obtainable only at the 1st door to the rt. on the staircase. Catalogue, 5 fr.). This valuable collection of arms and armour was formed in 1834, partly from the arsenals of Turin and Genoa, and partly from private collections, especially that of the Martinengo family of Brescia.

The Armoury contains upwards of 3000 articles, deposited in two halls. In the first is a collection of standards of the Sardinian and Italian armies at different periods; of modern warlike implements, and of numerous presents made to the late King,-such as the crown presented by Turin in 1861; and a sword, presented by Rome in 1859, the work of Castellani of Rome, from the designs of the Duke of Sermoneta. The two Imperial eagles of Napoleon's Italian Guard, presented by one of its commanders, General Lecchi. The sword worn by Napoleon at Marengo; several Neapolitan flags taken by the Piedmontese. In the centre of the room is the favourite horse, of English breed, of King Carlo Alberto, which accompanied him in his different campaigns, and during his last residence at Oporto. Here also are some marble busts of Piedmontese military celebrities, sundry warlike engines, apparatus, &c. The marble group of the Archangel Michael overcoming Satan is by Finelli, and was presented by the widow of Carlo Felice in 1844 mont, contains the most important objects of the collection.

Four splendid suits which belonged to the Brescian family of Martinengo in the 15th cent, ornamented with damasquine and other engravings of excellent design that of Antonio IV.

being the finest of all.

The full suit of Duke Emanuele Filiberto, or Tête de Fer, worn by him on the great day of the battle of St. Quentin Emanuele himself was a very good armourer, not only in the coarse smith's work, but in the finer department of inlaying with silver, or damasquining, and it is said that the armour which he wore was his own manufacture. Pacific as he was in the later years of his life, he never went into public except in his panoply, and bearing his good sword under his arm. This armour is copied in Marocchetti's statue in the Piazza S. Carlo.

Gigantic suit, bearing a ducal coronet and the letter F. The staff of command of Alfonso da Ferrara (1515). That of the celebrated Tiepolo. A magnificent suit of damasquined steel. The cuirass of Frince Eugene of Savoy, with three deep bullet indentations, worn by him at the battle of Turin in 1706, with his sword and pistols.

Cuirass worn by Carlo Emanuele III. at the battle of Guastalla in 1734, and that of the celebrated leader, Carmagnola, with fine reliefs.

Helmets in the style of the Renaissance One formed part of the collection of the celebrated anatomist Scarpa of Pavia. It is covered with figures, representing Jove thundering upon the Titans

Shields and targets in the same style. One is exceedingly rich, embossed with subjects representing the contests between Marius and Jugurtha. Among the ornaments is introduced a crescent, supposed to be the device of Diana of Poitiers; but more probably the armorial bearings of its owner. It is of the best period of 16th cent art, and is attributed to Benrenuto Cellini Another very splended shield, representing the Labours of Hercules.

Three very delicate triangularbladed stilettoes, which, it is said, were carried by Italian ladies for the purpose of ridding themselves of husbands or lovers.

Sword of Duke Emanuele Filiberto, formerly preserved in the "Camera de Conti," and upon which the officers of state were sworn; an ancient Roman standard of an eagle, bearing the inscription S. O. T. and Leg. VIII., found in Savoy; the sword of St. Maurice, leader of the Theban Legion, given to Duke Charles Emanuele by the Abbey of Agauno in 1571; the sword of Constantinus Palæologus XIV., last Emperor of Constantinople; the rostrum of an ancient galley in bronze, in the form of a wild boar's head, found in the port of Genoa; also a sword-handle, attributed to Benvenuto Cellini.

The collection of Oriental arms presented by General Solaroli is extensive, as also those from S. America. Amongst the former is a sword of Tippoo Saib, given by him to Gen. de Boigne, a Savoyard officer, who had been much employed by the native princes of India. The series of firearms of different periods is also considerable, and very many interesting as works of manufacture and art, amongst which may be particularised -1534, the arquebus and pistols which belonged to Emanuel Philibert, having been given to him by Charles V.; 1547, another, incrusted with ivory, with designs of mythological subjects; and, 1548, a third, having subjects beautifully sculptured on ivory, representing Meleager and Atalanta.

At the extremity of the Armoury is adoor, usually closed. Over it is a bust of King Carlo Alberto with his swords, and two Austrian standards, captured at Somma Campagna during the campaign of 1848. The door leads to the private Collection of coins and medals (Medagliere del Re) formed by King Carlo Alberto. It contains upwards of 30,000 Greek, Roman, and Italian pieces, and is especially rich in those of the house of Savoy, and of It can only be the Italian states. visited by the express permission of the Conservator.

Adjoining the palace, and in communication with it, are the Offices of the Prefect, and the Archivi, in which is deposited a rich collection of diplomas and charters. Annexed to these archives is a valuable library of early printed books and manuscripts.

The Accademia Militare forms also a part of the same pile. It encloses a large quadrangle, of handsome and scenic effect.

PALAZZO MADAMA. — This ancient Castle stands in the centre of the Piazza del Castello. It was founded by William Marquis of Montferrat in the latter part of the 13th cent., and enlarged about 1416, by Lodovico, last prince of Achaia, at which time the two great brick polygonal towers were erected. The principal front was added to the old structure in 1720, after the designs of Juvara, and is a good specimen of palatial architecture. The other three were to have been completed on the same plan. It was fitted up in 1718 as a palace for the widow (Madame Reals) of Charles Emanuel II. and mother of King Victor Amedeus II. A double flight of stairs leads up to some handsome rooms in the Louis XIV. style, appropriated to the offices and committeerooms of the Italian Senate, which held its assemblies in the large hall from 1848 until the transfer of the government to Florence in 1865. On the principal landing-place there is a statue of King Carlo Alberto, by Cevalto, placed here by Vittorio Emanuele and the Italian Parliament.

On the ground-floor the Academy of Medicine has rooms with a library and a Craniological Museum. Upon the high N.W. tower is the Royal Observatory.

Palazzo Carignano (D. 3) is a characteristic specimen of the fancy of Guarini (1680). The inside front, facing the court, was intended to be covered with stucco. Several of its rooms contain allegorical frescoes by painters of the last century. This palace has considerable historical interest; it was the residence of King Carlo Alberto before his accession to the throne, and several members of the royal family were born here. A bronze inscription records the birth of Victor Emanuel in 1820 It was here that the Constitution was proclaimed in 1821, and it was in it that the Chamber of Diputies or Lower House of the Italian Parliament held its sittings from 1860 until removing to Florence in 1865 The front towards the Piazza Carlo Alberto, constructed by Boliati and Ferri in 1864, principally of granite, and adorned with columns and statues, is very handsome roof of the fine hall in the new portion is decorated with paintings by Gonin, and that of the antechamber by Sereno (1870).This Palace now contains the Museum of Natural History (see below).

The Palazzo Valentino (F. 6), built in 1833 by Christine of France, the wife of Vittorio Amedeo J., and daughter of Henri IV, and Marie de Medicis. The style is that of a French château; the decorations of the apartments are heavy, and in the bad taste of the 17th cent. This Palace is now used as a Government Engineering School, and contains a collection of mechanical models, as well as lecture-rooms and a library

There is also here a good collection of the rocks and minerals of Piedmont, which can be seen on application.

The *Museum of Antiquities—Museo Egizia e d'Antichità—has acquired much importance by the addition of the Collections formed by Cavaliere Drovetti, a Piedmontese by birth, while Consul-General of France in Egypt, and purchased by King Carlo Felice in 1820. They comprise some of the most valuable Egyptian remains in Europe. On the ground-floor are placed the more massive objects, statues, sphinxes, sarcophagi, and inscriptions; the second floor containing the smaller Egyptian objects, Roman bronzes, &c.

The d.vision on the ground-floor consists of three large halls. Catalogue by Signor Rossi, the director

The Drovetti specimens having been collected about Thebes, Luxer, &c., belong, like the more massive objects in our British Museum, to the period of the 18th and 19th dynastics, or from the 17th to the 13th centures B.C. The following are best worthy of attention:—

Four lion-headed female statues of Pasht, or Bubastes; group in what marble of Ammon Rha and Horns. 2nd Hall: sitting statue of Phiah, the Vulcan of the Greeks, of the time of the 18th dynasty (1500 years B.c.); grantte statue of Pasht; sitting statue of Thothmes III., in black granite (16th cent. n.c.); crouching colossal statue in granite of Amenophis IL. the contemporary of Moses (16th cent. B.C); statue in basalt of Amenophis III, or Memnon (1430 years B.C.), the most powerful of Egypt's kings; a group of two statues of the period of Amenophis I.; a very beautiful barcophagus with its cover in green basalt, pedestal of an *Altar in black granite (this is perhaps the most interesting relic in the whole collection, for its remote date; it bears the name of Meri of the 12th dynasty, who lived 2654 years n.c.); a Lollow marble plinth, with a Greek inscription in honour of Ptolemy Epiphanes 230 years B.C.). On the floor of this Hall are several *mosaics of the Roman period, discovered at Stampacei, in Sarainia, with representations of Lions, bears, and antelopes, and a male figure playing on a lyre, supposed to be Orpheus. Statue of Phtha with a Nilometer; group of three sitting statues in black granite of *Rhamses Sesostris,, between Ammon Rha and Mut (14th cent. B.C.): Rhamses is of life-size, the other figures are in miniature; colossal head of a ram in sandstone; group of Horus and his daughter Muthmet (15th cent. B.c.); statues in gramte of Rhamses II., Meinmonn, or Rhamses the Great, or Sesostris, who reigned in the 14th cent. B.C.); foot of a colossal statue of Menepthan, or Amenophis, son of Rhamses the Great; colossal statue, in red sandstone, of Seti or Se Ptah, son of Menepthah (it was in his reign that the Exodus of the Jews took place); two colossal Sphinxes, in sandstone, from before the palace at Karnac, erected in the 17th cent. B.C.; *bilingual inscription on a slab of granite, in demotio and Greek characters, containing a decree of the priests in honour of Callimachus during the reign of Cleopatra and of Ptolemy Casarion, her son by Jahus Cosar (BC. 44); circular altar, dedicated to several divinities—probably of the 28th dynasty, in the 5th cent. n c.; figures of Osiris, Isis, and Horus, the Egyptian trinity, in a single piece of red granite Several models of Egyptian ruins and temples.

In the 3rd Hall on the ground-floor, Greek and Roman statues and busts A Sleeping Cupid or Genius is perhaps the finest object; it is supposed to be Greek, a though some consider it a copy made in the 16th cent of an ancient work, colossal Oracle Head of June, found at Alba, in Predmont, hollowed out behind, and intended to be fixed to a wall, so that the priest could deliver answers to devotees without being seen; black marble statue or Medea, with illegible letters on it, a head of Antinous; busts of Vespasian and Julian; statue of Augustus, found at Susa. At the extremity of this Hall is the collection of Ancient Roman Bronzes, with a collection of silver vessels discovered in Savoy, some with reliefs in the handles. Roman inscription on bronze, found at Industria (Rte 2,, an elegant tripod, with brazier, and the muchinjured *statuette of a kneeling Faun, found at the same place; bronze *statuette of Minerva, found, in excellent condition, in 1829, in the bed of the river Versa, near Stradella; a few engraved Greek pateræ; several small Roman bronzes and utensils from Industria. Good bust of Agrippina, Nero's mother, and a bust of young Caligula. In this hall are some large specimens of ivory carvings by a German artist of the 18th cent., they represent the Judgment of Solomon and the Sacrifice of Abraham, and are more remarkable for their size than for their artistic sculpture. Finally, an indifferent collection of Etruscan wases from the S. of Italy, and a *series of earthenware vessels of the Roman period from the ruins of Pollentia (Rte. 6); a long series of Phoenician Divinities, and figures in bronze from the Island of Sardinia, &c.

On the second floor are smaller objects of the Egyptian collection. In the first, or long saloon, is a very interesting series of human mummies (the hair perfectly preserved in many instances), with their cases, some highly decorated; on the walls numerous papyri, and below, several smaller Egyptian statues, votive tablets, &c.

In the middle of the second Hall is the Isiac Table, a tablet in bronze, measuring 4 ft, 2 in. by 2 ft. 54 in., covered with sunken Egyptian figures and hieroglyphics, part of the outlines being filled with silver-forming a kind of Niello. It seems to have been first discovered on the Aventine at Rome, near where a Temple of Isia once stood, and it was given by Pius III, to a son of Cardinal Bembo. of Diana; black marble bust of Circe | Having disappeared during the pillage of Rome by the Connétable de Bourbon, it was re-discovered in 1709, at Turin, amongst some lumber; it was carried off to Paris in 1797, and restored to Italy at the Peace. The Isiac Table is interesting, as being one of the first objects of Egyptian antiquity in recent times that led to serious investigations as to the meaning of hieroglyphics; but it is now clearly ascertained that these have no meaning at all, being pseudo-Egyptian productions extensively fabricated during the reign of Hadrian. In this room are several glass cases containing Egyptian ornaments of every kind, a complete collection of the smaller divinities in terra-cotta, enamel, and glass, a series of nearly 2000 scarabær with inscriptions; amulet, and some beautiful specimens of jewellery, mounted with precious stones, whilst in presses around are several mummies of monkeys, cats, heads of calves and bulls, of the ibis, falcons, crocodiles, and of several species of fishes from the Nile. Articles of food: bread, corn, eggs, onions, dates, &c. -even to dacks ready for the spit of some Egyptian chef 3000 years ago. Clothing for the dead: masks to cover the faces of mummies; sandals, upon the soles of which are painted captives—some negroes, others Jews-with their hands bound, a singular mode of expressing a posthamous traumph

Amongst the numerous illustrated Papyri hung on the walls, two are remarkable; the celebrated Book of the Kings, first published and ably illustrated by Sir Gardner Wilkinson, and a funerary roll, 40 ft. in length (illustrated by Dr. Lepsius, of Berlin), on which is represented the trial of a Soul before the tribunal of Amentis. Osiris is seen acting as President, and the divinity Tot as Secretary, with a court of 42 judges, before whom the goddess of Justice leads the accused Soul.

In the smaller room leading from the second Egyptian Saloon is an extensive series of steles, or votive tablets, some of which are said to belong to as remote a period as the 8th dynasty, at least 30 centuries B.C. Numismatic Collection. - Attached to the Section of Antiquities is the Cabinet of Medals, consisting of a collection bequeathed by Cavaliere Lavy to the Academy of Sciences, of others added by the King, and modern acquisitions. It contains 25,000 specimens, of which 5000 are Greek, 6000 Roman, and the rest medieval and modern. It is not shown except by special permission.

The Museum of Natural History, in the Palazzo Carignano (open daily, I to 4), contains a good collection of minerals, including specimens from Savoy and the valleys descending from Mont Blanc. The geological and palæontological collections are very extensive as regards the Piedmontese territory, having been formed by Professor Sismonda during his labours for the geological map of the continental portion of the kingdom, and by General Alberto della Marmora for that of the island of Sardinia. A series of the rocks traversed by the great Alpine tunnel between Modane and Bardonecchia has been placed here. are also some large meteorolites, and the specimens of diamonds, the gift of Signor Falco in 1872, are interesting. Among the fossil organic remains of the tertiary formations of the Montferrat, is the skeleton of a Mastodon, found in a fresh-water deposit near Baldichieri. The skeleton of the Megatherium, from Buenos Ayres, is the most perfect hitherto discovered. Another is of the Glyptoond, from the same country The series of birds of Piedmont in the Zoological department is particularly good.

Museum of Articlery (Museo Nazionale d'Artigieria). A valuable Collection of pre-historic and ancient Arms, formerly in the Arsenal, but at present in course of rearrangement, and invisible.

Università Reale (D. 3), erected in 1713, by Ricca. The Universities of Turin and Genoa formed the two great educational establishments of the Sardiman monarchy. There are upwards of 80 professorships, and | about 2000 students. The square court shows the effect produced by columns encircled by bands, storey above storey. Under the portico are placed a number of Roman inscribed stones, reliefs, and statues discovered in Piedmont, among which are two mended torsos of men in armour found at Susa. Many of the inscriptions and monuments are sepulchral. Upon the cippus of Quintus Minutius Faber, a wheelwright, he is represented, below, working upon a wheel; and at the top, lying in bed. The inscription on an altar raised to an almost unknown divinity by a certain Sempronia Eutychia, does not speak well for the modesty of the devotee. There are also several mediæval inscriptions; some of the times of the Lombard kings, Grimoald, Aripert, and Lothair.

Biblioteca Nazionale, 17, Via di Po. This valuable Library (8 A.M. to 6 P.M. from May to Nov., 9 to 4 and 7 to 10 p.m. from Nov. to May) contains about 200,000 volumes of printed books, and 4000 MSS., many of which belonged to the Dukes of Savoy. was placed here by Carlo Emanuele I.; and many collections have been succes-Calusio, the author of sively added. the Hebrew Concordance, bequeathed his Oriental manuscripts to it; and it contains a part of those from the Benedictine monastery of Bobbio. latter are very ancient and authentic. A large collection of the Greek writers on alchemy, mostly inedited. A manuscript of the 'De Imitatione Christi,' the celebrated work commonly attributed to Thomas & Kempis, but written more probably by Gersen, abbot of the Benedictines of Vercelli, who lived a century before. This codex vas found in a Benedictine convent at Arona in 1604. Several Bibles, from the 10th to the 16th cent., some curichly illuminated; a nously and Catena Patrum, probably of the 9th cent., with portraits of the 12 minor prophets, interesting for the time when they were executed, showing the long prevalence of Roman art. A Book of school, of great beauty; four or five seem to be by Memling. ("I know of nothing so fine in this class of art—the Kiss of Judas is a marvel of its kind."—H. A. L.) Seyssel's translation of Appian, illuminated, with a portrait of himself presenting the work to Louis XII. Hebrew MSS., several inedited.

ACCADEMIA ALBERTINA DELLE BELLE ARTI (E. 3). This Academy derives its name from King Carlo Alberto, a liberal benefactor. Here are schools for drawing, painting, &c., and a collection of 256 pictures, of which very few are of much value. (Open daily, 10 to 4, fee, ½ fr.)

104, Jordaens, Dying Martyr; 107, Schedone, Holy Family; 108, Rubens, The Youth of Bacchus; 127, Macrino d'Alba, Two Saints and the Donator; 128, Defendente Deferrari, Nativity: 132, Francia, St. John the Baptist; 140, 141, Filippo Lippi, Four Saints; 153, Raphael, Madonna di Loreto—an old copy; 160, Jan Mabuse, Lady Writing; 174, Romanelli, St. Cecilia: 201, Sassoferrato, Madonna; 220, Giovenone, Nativity.

There are also some valuable cartoons, by Gaudenzio Ferrari and Lanini, and one, by Leonardo da Vinci, of the well-known Vierge aux Rochers, at the Louvre.

INDUSTRIAL MUSEUM (Reale Museo Industriale Italiano), in the Via dell' Ospedale (E. 4), close to the Exchange. An extensive collection, formed at great expense by the present Government; and consisting not only of machines and models, but of manufactured articles, mineral productions, plans, &c. Open on Sun. and holidays, 12 to 4; on other days, 9 to 11 and 2 to 4. Collections on the 1st floor, Thurs., 1 to 4.

Catena Patrum, probably of the 9th cent., with portraits of the 12 minor prophets, interesting for the time when they were executed, showing the long prevalence of Roman art. A Book of Offices, with miniatures of the Flemish suite of 12 rooms, three of which are occupied by a miscellaneous collection comprising busts, majolica, glass medals, nielli, illuminated books, ivories, wood carvings, and autographs. Here may be seen in wall cases 6 fragments of reliefs from the tomb of Gaston de Fora (see Milan, Brera); also a collection of medals of the sovereigns of Savoy and Piedmontof coins struck at the different mints of Italy-a collection of autographs of the sovereigns of the house of Savoy down to Charles Albert in 1849; of the great men of the country, including Lagrange, Plana, M. Azeglio, Cavour, Botta the historian, Silvio Pellico, a part of Ariosto's comedy of 'Caprana,' some illuminated MSS., amongst others a good copy of the Grimani Breviary. in the library of St. Mark at Venice, and the statutes of Turin in the 13th cent., old books, &c. In one room is a head of Sappho by Canova, with his receipt for it to the purchaser in 1820, of 440 Roman scudi. Here also is a collection of all Bodoni's type print-Then follow ings, with his likeness. 7 rooms with oil-paintings by modern Italian artists. In the 11th are watercolour drawings, and in the 12th a display of Italian pottery, and a few old pictures, including a Coronation of the Virgin by Bart Vivarius (1473), a Madonna by Bugiardini and Sassoferrato, and a large picture of Rebecca receiving the gifts of Isaac, by Jan Victora. A descent of a few steps on the rt, of the entrance leads to a Collection of wood-carvings, sarcophagi, models, and architectural fragments. Outside in a Court is a model of the Bucentaur (see Venice, Arsenal), with two medallions in Robbia ware of the Savoy and Turin arms, borne by genii, and surrounded with coloured festoons of fruit.

The Museo Storico Nasionale (E. 3), a conspicuous and lofty building, was designed as a Synagogue by Autonelli in 1863, but is now being fitted up as a Museum in commemoration of Italian unity. It forms an oblong block, with a high tower, the principal part of brick, with a Corinthian granite portico, and a corridor of granite columns above. It is built of the plan of Herod's Temple of Jerusalem as laid down in the Talmud. The cupola is of singularly bold construction, and the entire height of the building is 360 ft.

THEATRES.

The Teatro Regio, in the Piazza Castello, will hold 2500 persons (entrance 3 fr.), and is open during the Carnival. It was built from the designs of Count Alfleri, uncle to the poet, and was the building which made his reputation as an architect Born at Rome, he was educated as an advocate; but his love for architecture soon induced him to abandon the bar. Having been employed at Tortona, when Carlo Emanuele II. passed through that town, the monarch was so pleased with his work, that he took him into his service and afterwards appointed him Court Architect.

Teatro Carignano, open for operas and ballets during the autumn, and for comedies in the spring and summer, was also designed by Count Alfleri; and here the earliest tragedy of Vittorio Alfleri was first represented. There are several popular Theatres, and a Hippodrome.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The Ritiro delle Rosine, near the Post Office, was founded by Rosa Govona, a poor girl of Mondovi, who, in 1740, collected a number of other girls of her own class for the purpose of living as a semi-religious community, maintaining themselves by their own labour. She settled in Turin, under the patronage of Carlo Emanuele III., and dying in 1776, was buried in the simple chapel of the This establishment contains about 350 inmates; the income, which arises entirely from the work of the inmates, amounts to 80,000 francs, with which they are comfortably maintained. Over the principal entrance is engraved the appropriate inscription—Tu vivrai del lavoro delle tue There are several houses of the Rosine in other parts of North Italy.

The Reale Albergo di Virtù, an industrial school, was founded in 1587, by Carlo Emanuele I.

The Regio Manicomio, a Lunatic Asylum, has about 500 inmates. The patients are judiciously managed, and many of the improvements in the treatment of these unfortunate persons recently adopted in England and France have been long practised here.

The Casa della Divina Providenza, founded in 1828.

The Grande Ospedale di S. Giovanni (E. 4), founded in the 14th cent., receives annually 6000 patients. Its revenues before the French invasion were very large; and now, partly from estates, and partly from voluntary contributions, they amount to about 300,000 francs per annum. The clinical school and the anatomical theatre attached to the University are here. In front is the Military Hospital.

ENVIRONS OF TURIN.

CEMETERY [in summer, 3 to 8, in winter, 12 to 4; Carriage there and back, 1½ fr. Steam Tramway from the Piazza Em. Filiberto, passing the Regio Parco, and going on to Settimo (p. 25).]—The *Campo Santo is about a mile beyond the bridge over the Dora (D. 1). It consists of a large octagonal space, surrounded by a high wall, and an inner portion by arcades, containing numerous sepulchral monuments, with a row of vaults beneath. Among the monuments of interest are those of Vincenzo Gioberti; Gen. Bava, the hero of Goito; Gen. Provana di Collegno, the geologist, with a touching inscription by his widow, and a good figure of the lady weeping over his sword; Drovetti, to whom Turin owes its Egyptian Museum. The monument of the Marchesa di Monforte by Bruneri, and that of Elizabetta Marchionni, deserve notice, as well as Vela's statues of Hope and an Angel carrying an infant to heaven. In the outer ground is interred Silvio Pellico (1854), with a tasteless pyramid of white marble. The Protestant cemetery is at the extremity of the general burying-ground, but separated from it by a wall.

The Capuchin Convent stands on a hill (F. 4), overhanging the right bank of the Po. Funicular Rly. to the summit, 15 c. The view hence across the river and city to the Alps, including Monte Viso, is very fine, and best seen by morning light. The local Tourist Club has established here an Exhibition (Museo Alpino) of Italian sub-Alpine Industries. (Adm. 25 c.)

La Vigna della Regina (Queen's Vineyard), once a royal residence, but now used as a school for the daughters of military officers, stands a little above the Church of the Gran Madre di Dio. It was built in 1650 by Viettoli for Cardinal Maurice of Savoy, when he had ceased to be a cardinal, in order to marry his niece Lodovica, the daughter of Vittorio Amedeo I.

The Tramway lines are very numerous, and mostly start from the Piazza Castello. Fare, 10 c. a course.

EXCURSIONS FROM TURIN.

(p. 25).]—The *Campo Santo is THE *Superga (officially called about a mile beyond the bridge over Soperga) is reached by steam tramway from the Piazza Castello to (30 min.) Sassi (1080 ft.), and thence by Funicular Rly. in 30 min to the summit (2555 ft.). The latter line is very nearly 2 m in length, passes through two tunnels, and is constructed in bold curves, with an average gradient of 13.3 in 100

The Basilica was begun by Juvara in 1717, and completed in 1731, for Duke Vittorio Amedeo II, in the accomplishment of a vow made previous to the great battle of Turin, gained by the German allies under Prince Engene over the French. On the 7th Sept., 1706, Amedeo advanced with Prince Eugene from Chieri; and taking their station upon the summit of the Collina, they looked down upon his capital blockaded by the army of Louis XIV, Vittorio vowed to erect a church here in honour of the Virgin, "if it should please the Lord of Hosts to grant him and his people deliverance from the hands of the enemy; " and the victory gained over the French was the salvation of the house of Savoy. The name of Superga is said to be derived from its situation, super terga montium.

The interior is circular, with 6 elliptical chapels: 8 pilasters, and an equal number of columns, support the cupola, of good proportions, flanked by elegant quadrangular bell - towers. Through the interpilaster, opposite the principal entrance, is the access to a large octangular chapel, at the extremity of which is the high altar, The exterior flight of steps is continued all round the building. The portico of 8 Corinthian columns is fine. The high altar is decorated with a profusion of statues and reliefs, one representing the siege of Turin-Vittorio Amedeo, Prince Engene, and the Duke of Anhalt pursuing the enemy The subterranean Church is in the form of a Latin cross, and contains the remains of most of the members of the royal house, King Carlo Felice alone having been interred at Haute Combe in Savoy The monument of Vittorio Amedeo II. is decorated with allegorical figures in the taste of the lust cent., and that of Carlo Emanuele

III., with a relief of the battle of Guastalla by Collini In the centre of the cross, the place always occupied by the last-deceased sovereign, stands the temporary monument of Carlo Alberto, whose body was deposited here in 1850, when brought from Oporto. The halls and starrenses are grand, from their proportions and rich marbles, and the solid decorations of the architect. Portraits of the Popes, the majority of course imaginary, are placed in the apartments appropriated to the sovereign, who visited the Superga annually, upon the 8th Sept. (Nativity of the Virgin). On this day is still held an imposing Service of Thanksgiving. A congregation of secular priests, endowed by the State, and selected from among the most meritorious of the parochial clergy, remain in charge of the building.

From hence there is a fine *view of the Alps, extending from Mont Viso at the extremity of the Cottian portion of the chain to the Simplon, including the whole of the Graian and Pennine Alps, with the beautiful hills of Montferrat below, the plains of Lombardy, and the spurs of the Apennines be-

The hill of the Superga consists of miocene strata of green sand and mark, with a conglomerate of pebbles, mostly of serpentine. They are inclined at an angle of more than 70°.

The various Excursions among the neighbouring Alps are described in the following Routes, 2-7.

On leaving the Central Rly. Stat. the line curves round the city to reach the W. Stat. by the Porta Susa (A. 4), crosses the Dora Riparia, and arrives at the Stazione Succursale. It then crosses the Stura, and runs parallel to the l. bank of the Po. The Superga rises finely on the rt.

[Branch line W. from Porta Susa Stat. to Rivoli (5600). Above it towers the great unfinished palace begun by Juvara. Here Vittorio Amedeo II. was confined during the short interval which elapsed between his attempt to re-ascend the throne and his death. He had abdicated (1730) in favour of his son Carlo Emanuele III., and had retired to Chambery, but in a short time he grew weary of private life, and formed a scheme for repossessing himself of the royal authority. Some say that he was instigated by the Countess of Sommariva, for whom he had renounced the crown, and whom he married immediately after his abdication. He was seized, brought to Rivoli, and kept in what was equivalent to solitary confinement. attendants and guards were strictly prohibited from speaking to him; and, if he addressed them, they maintained complete silence, answering only by a very low bow. He was afterwards permitted to have the company of his wife, and remove to another prison; but on the 31st of Oct., 1732, he died. He was a wise and good monarch; and in his person the house of Savoy obtained the island of Sardinia and the regal title. There | followed as one of the mourners.

are many pictures in the Palace—a collection of views in Piedmont by the brothers Cignaroli, landscapes by Vanloo, and a series of historical scenes from the lives of Amedeo VII. and VIII., Counts of Savoy.

The country around Rivoli is very healthy. Hence the town and its vicinity abound in villas.

Chivasso Junct., on the l. bank of the Po (9000), was long considered as the key of Piedmont, and in 1798 it opposed a considerable resistance to Marshal Joubert when executing the decree of the Directory, by which he was ordered to dethrone the House of Savoy. The fortifications were destroyed by the French in 1804, when their possession of Lombardy placed Chivasso in the midst of their territory. Chivasso was the ordinary court residence of the Marquises of Montferrat, who, as sovereigns, held so conspicuous a place in the mediæval history of Italy, though Casale was their capital. Commenced in 1863, the total cost of the construction has been estimated at nearly 5,000,000l. sterling.

The *Church of Sant' Andrea, near the Rly. Stat., was commenced in 1219 by Cardinal Guala de' Bicchieri, who filled the office of papal legate in England in the reigns of John and Henry III., and whose name is connected with some important transactions during that turbulent period of our history. He was born and in 1399.

educated at Vercelli, and was a canon of its cathedral. Over the door on the l. he is represented in the act of dedicating the Church, with St. Andrew; and his merits are recorded in 11 rhyming Leonines, in the first of which, by a poetical figure, called Epenthesis, familiar to students of the Westminster and Eton Latin grammars, one word is inserted in the centre of another, for the sake of the metre:—

Lux cleri patriæque decus Cargualadinalis Quem labor atque artes, quem Sanctio canonicalis, Quem lex dotavit, quem pagina spiritualis.

The Cardinal left all his property to this Church, and among the relicswhich he deposited there was the oblationarium of Thomas & Becket. Cardinal Guala was a most strenuous ally of King John; he excommunicated Stephen Langton and Prince Lewis, when the latter was called in by the barons of Runnymede (1215); and on the accession of Henry III. he was one of the ministry by whose exertions the royal authority was in a great measure supported and restored. The new monarch bestowed upon Guala much preferment, the rich benefice of Chesterton, near Cambridge, among By heavy demands upon the clergy and sequestration of the benefices and preferments of those who were opposed to him, he amassed a fortune of 12,000 marks of silver, with which this Church was raised and endowed.

It is a curious mixture of the Lombard and Pointed styles, and has many Northern features. The pointed arches are supported by detached banded shafts, the foliation of whose capitals is deeply undercut. The Choir ends square. The interior is very beautiful, but injured by injudicious restorations and abominable glass. The windows in the chancel are pointed: those of the nave round-headed. The material of the walls is brick, with stone joints, windows, and doors; the columns and façade of stone, chiefly serpentine and grey limestone. The square detached Campanile, with a low spire, was added in 1399.

All the ancient tombs have been destroyed, with the exception of that in the corner Chapel of the rt transept, of the first abbot, and architect—Tommaso Gallo, a French ecclesiastic (1246), upon which is a curious painting.

The extensive Hospital, on the opposite side of the street, founded by Cardinal Guala, retains its original endowment and destination. It cona monument to the Statesman was placed in 1864.

San Cristoforo contains some good *Freecoes by Gaudentio Ferrari, who was born in 1484, at Varallo; but not being able to find a tencher in his native place, he came to Vercele Giovenone was his first master; and so proud was he of his pupil, that is some of his paintings he signs himself "Geronimo Giovenone, maestro di Passing on the rt. the Albergo Tre Re, we reach the Piazza Cavour, where Gaudenzio." He afterwards studied under Stefano Scotto (Rte. 20). The magistrates of Vercelli conferred on him the muricipal freedom; and the city where Gaudenzio was thus instructed and adopted claims him as her own. This Church was anciently attached to a convent of the Umiliati, and Gaudenzio's paintings were chiefly executed for two brothers of that order, Corradi and Lignone, between the years 1532 and 1534.

The frescoes are all more or less injured. The first damage occurred during the siege in 1638. But they suffered more from the French, who used the Church as a prison for refractory conscripts.

In the N. transept, beginning on the I. with the N. wall, are the Birth of the Virgin, the Anunnciation and Salutation, and the Birth of Christ, Further rt., the Marriage of the Virgin, and below it the Adoration of the Magi. Many portraits are introduced into this composition, particularly a prominent figure with a cap and feathers, holding a falcon; the bearded king kneeling before the Virgin; also portraits of the painter, of his master Giovenoue, and of his pupil Lanini. Groups of pages, esquires, and attendants fill the scene. Between the Nativity and the Adora tion there is a group, representing S. Catherine of Siena and S. Nicholas of Bari presenting to the Virgin and Child two novices of the Lignone family. On the E. wall, the Assumption of the Virgin.

In the rt. transept, on the E. wall, is the Crucifizion, full of expressive figures and faces, wonderfully foreshortened: the converted Centurion and the Magdalene are conspicuous, the former a singular figure, clad nearly in the fashion of the court of Henry VIII. Upon the adjoining wall is the history of the Magnalene, consisting of the following subjects .-Above, Mary the sister of Lazarus, in the Roman Church frequently confounded with the Magdalene, is represented seated, with her sister Martha, listening to the preaching of our Lord. Our Lord at the table of Simon the Pharesce, the Magdalene kissing His feet. A considerable part is destroyed. Below, the Arrival and Preaching at Marseilles. This and the following fresco, which are attributed entirely to Lanini, are very fine, and the best preserved of the whole. The Asnumption of the Magdalene; her death and burial are seen in the background. One-half of the principal figure was destroyed, at the same time as the

during the siege in 1704.

In the great hall of the Casa Mariano, now the property of the Istituto delle Belle Arti, the vaulted roof and lunettes are painted by Lanini—subject, the glories of Music. Here also are some frescoes removed from S. Catarina and other Churches. Upstairs are some good pictures of the School of Giovenone, and a Gonfalone (processional banner), painted on both sides—the Virgin and Child, S. Anna, and Angels, by Lanini.

The large red-brick Church of S. Agnese, in the Piazza di San Francesco, has a Death of the Virgin, on Santa Catarina. Here is a *Marriage of the patron saint, by G. Ferrari, with SS. Francis, Agapetus, and Anthony of Padua.

San Bernardino has a fresco representing our Lord about to be nailed to the Cross.

The Duomo was built by Pellegrino Tibaldi, towards the middle of the 16th cent., in a good though heavy style of Italian architecture; the cupola is more modern. The portico, by Count Alfieri, is handsome, surmounted by colossal statues of the Saviour, the Apostles, and Evangelists. The tomb of St. Amedeus in the transept was decorated with silver, at the expense of King Carlo Felice, in 1823, from the designs of Savesi, an artist of Turin. The wood-work of the choir was restored in 1822, from a design of Ranza, an architect of Vercelli. The view of Monte Rosa from the roof of the Duomo is magnificent.

The Library of the Cathedral contains MSS, of great Antiquity and value, including a copy of the Gospels written by St. Eusebius, the founder of the see, in the 4th cent, and bound in silver, 5 cents, later, by order of Berengarius, King of Italy see Monza). It is a Latin version, and supposed to be the most authentic copy of that called "Itala" by St. Augustine, employed in the earliest ages of the Western Church, until its use was superseded by the Vulgate older than any Greek MS. now extant, it is in one sense the most ancient copy of the Gospels existing. St. Eusebius always carried this volume about with him. Amongst the other MSS, are Anglo-Saxon poems, including one in honour of St. Andrew, possibly brought from England by Cardinal Guala, the Recognitions of St. Clement, a very early MS.; but whether the work be really the production of this Apostolic Father is a question upon which critics are much divided, the Laws of the Lombard Kings, written in the reign of King Liutprand, and therefore not later than the year 744.

In the Piazza Tormo is a colossal bronze Statue of Victor Emanuel, on a column and pedestal of white granite Hannibal fought his first battle with the Romans on Italian soil upon the Raudii Campi, in the neighbourhood of Vercelli, 218 B.c., and here also (in 101 B.c.) the migrating hordes of the Cembre, who had taken 13 years to spread from the Danube to the Euro, and from the Seine to the Po, were overwhelmed and destroyed by the Roman army, 50,000 strong, under Marins and Catulus.

There is no point from which Monte Rosa is seen to greater advantage, especially from the N. extremity of the street leading to the Rly. Stat.

The Duomo, an early Lombard building, dating from the end of the 11th cent., was restored and modernised in 1862. It is damaged on the outside by neglect and weather, and the choir and transepts are masked by stucco, paintings, and gilding. The high altar has some angels by Thorwaldsen.

PAINTINGS.—3rd altar rt, Gawl. Ferrari, Holy Family with SS. Catharine. Gaudentius, and Agabio, on wood Pietà below. 4th rt., Lanini, Crucifixion, with SS. Mary Magd-Benedict, and Gaudentius. In the Passage leading to the Sacristy is an ancient plain Sarcophagus.

In the Sacristy are six fine frescoes by Lanini, injured by damp. Massacre of the Innocents, Marriage of the Virgin, Annunciation, Visitation, Flight into Egypt, and Adoration. Here is also an Adoration of the Magi, by Lanini; and a Last Supper, by Gaud. Ferrari, restored by Cesare do Sesto, after a fire.

Opposite the IW. door opens the octagonal *Baptistery, supported by tion, almost invariably annexed to these buildings, of their having been pagan temples These columns of white marble, of which 4 are fluted, are of the Corinthian orders. In the centre is a circular Roman urn, bearing an inscription to Umbrena Polla, now used as a Font. In the recesses between the columns are representations of the Passion. The figures, in plastic work, are as large as life, and painted in gaudy colours; and in some cases the resemblance to life is increased by the addition of real hair. They have been attributed to Gaudenzio Ferrari, but, if so, they do little honour to him as compositions, although many of the figures are of fair workmanship. The two finest groups are the Garden of Olives, and the Scourging of our Lord, both on the rt.

The Archives of the Duomo contain some curious specimens of the autiquities of the Lower Empire and the middle ages, and some very old documents. There are two fine "ivory diptychs, on the first the consul is represented at full length, under a species of cupola supported by columns, the second bears the bust of a consul and contains a list of the bishops from Gaudentius to William of Cremona, in 1343. The Library of the Seminary, which is open to the public 3 days a-week, contains about 12,000 vols. Behind the Cathedral to the E. is a Cloister fitted up with Inscriptions, and various fragments of Roman buildings, found in the neighbourhood,

The Duomo of Novara is known in Italy as a distinguished school for Church music; and the office of Maestro di Capella has usually been given to eminent composers. In more recent times the place has been held by Generali and Mercadapte

The Church of San Gaudenzio, the patron saint of Novara, and its first bishop, was entirely rebuilt by Pellegrini in 1577; the sepulchral chapel of the patron saint is very magnificent: the high altar, erected in 1725, betrays the bad taste of that time. In the second chapel on the l, is one of the finest of the early works of *Gaudenzio Ferrari (1515), in six compartments, enclosed in a framework richly carved and gilt, also executed by the painter. Above is the Nativity and Annunciation; below, in the centre, the Virgin and Child, S. Ambrogio and S. Gandenzio, S. Agabio, and a canonised portrait of the Painter (on the l.). At the sides, rt. SS. Edeleisio and Paul, l. St. Peter and the Baptist. 1st. rt. Moraszone, Deposition; 2nd, Moncalvo, Circumcision; 4th, a Crucifix modelled by Ferrari. In the Sacristy, St. Jerome, attributed to Ribera. The archives of San Gaudenzio are valuable, but are not shown. A consular diptych of great beauty, on which are sculptured two Roman consuls giving the signal for the public games, and some early MSS., are among the best.

The huge oviform cupola (396;ft,) over the intersection of the nave and transepts is the work of Alex. Antonelli, architect of the Museo Storico at Turin. It is surrounded on the outside by a double circular Corinthian colonnade, and commands a magnificent view.

The Theatre is open for operas and ballets during the carnival and in the autumn.

The Mercate, which also contains the offices of the Tribunal of Commerce, was built from the designs of Professor Orelli of Milan. In the Square opposite is a bronze equestrian Statue of Victor Emanuel. Ospedale Maggiore, with its cortile supported by 88 columns of granite, is also a great ornament to the city,

The red-brick Castello, with its dry moat, is very picturesque, and close to it is a Public Garden. Two or three mediæval towers still stand in the centre of the town, which is further adorned by the Palazzi Bellini (where Charles Albert abdicated in 1849), Cacciapiatti, Leonardi, &c., chiefly designed by Pellegrino Tibuldi (1527 1600).

A colossal marbie Status of Carlo Emanuele III., by Marchesi, has been erected in front of the Theatre, and a monument to King Charles Albert, in crossed, and afterwards the Lura, near their junction,

Turin is described in Rte. 1, and the Rly. as far as

18 m. Chivasso Junct. in Rte. 2.

Here a branch line turns N., through the valley of the Dora Baltea, to 27 m. Caluso (9000). Beyond Caluso is a short tunnel, on emerging from which a view is obtained on the rt. of the little Lake of Candia, while on the E. stretches the horizontal ridge of La Serra.

29 m. Candia (2500), rising on hills above its lake.

31 m. Mercenasco, with a restored château.

33 m. Strambino, with numerous villas. The curious profile of the Serra is still on view on the rt.

39 m. Ivrea (770 ft.), a walled town (11,000), at the entrance of the Val d'Aosta. The approach to it is picturesque, across the deep bed of the Doire, which flows below the Porte de Turin. Here large markets are held, to which cheese and other pastoral produce of the Alps are brought. The town has some cotton-works.

There is an interesting old Castle, degraded into a prison, and disfigured with modern windows, &c. The battlements and machicolations of its brick towers remain.

This city, the seat of a bishop, is the southern gate to the Val d'Aosta. It is of great antiquity, and mentioned by many ancient authors under the name of Eporedia. Strabo says that when the brave people of the Val d'Aosta were subdued, the unfortunate Salassi, made prisoners by Terentius Varro, were here sold as slaves by public auction to the number of 36,000. The Marquis of Ivrea was in the middle ages a powerful potentate.

The hills at the mouth of the valley below the town are the moraines of an extensive glacier. The Dora Baltea (Fr. Doire) is so called to distinguish it from the Dora Riparia, which descends from Mont Cenis to Turin. [Steam Tramway S.E. to (20 m.) Santhià.]

On leaving Ivrea, the Rly. crosses the Dora and passes through a tunnel. Fine view of the town and Monte Bolegno, the ancient moraine. The small isolated hills, often crowned by picturesque towers and walls of feudal castles, are pretty features of a wooded landscape which has the Alps for background.

41 m. Montalto Dora. On a mound to the rt. stands the old Castle of Montalto, well preserved and picturesque in form.

43 m. Borgofranco, where the valley contracts, and the scenery becomes more Alpine.

45 m. Tavagnasco-Settimo Vittone. Ruined castle on the l.

47 m. Quincinetto. Pleasing glimpse of a valley which opens to the N.

49 m. Pent St. Martin (1105 ft.), finely situated at the entrance to the Val de Lys, which runs up to the glaciers of the Lyskamin and Monte Rosa (Handbook for Switzerland).

The lofty arch spanning the Lys (about 20 yards higher than the new bridge) is one of the finest Roman works of its class in the valley; it now serves as a passage to the Val de Lys, the road to Aosta being carried over a modern bridge.

After crossing the Lys, at a short distance from its confluence with the

Doire, the Rly. reaches

51 m. Donnas, where a Roman road pierces the rock, and a milestone measures XXXII MP. A tolerable wine is grown here.

A path leads up from the Church to Dalbard, the village through which Napoleon passed part of his army to avoid Fort Bard

The Rly, now threads a defile on the l, bank of the Dora. Tunnel under the heights of Fort Bard.

53 m. Hône Bard (1150 ft.). Fine view looking back towards the fortress which commands the valley.

*Fort Bard (1530 ft.) is celebrated for the check of 8 days which it gave to the advance of the French army under Bonaparte, in 1800.

At that time the road ran through the village under the fort. It was the key of the valley and garrisoned by only 400 Austrians, yet such was the strength of the position that Bonaparte almost despaired of carrying it, and a few days more must have starved his army into a retreat. But this was averted by placing a gun above the precipices of Dalbard. Thus the French checked the battery which covered the approach to the Fort, and the army passed by night, dragging their cannon through the street land with straw, to prevent the noise slarming the garrison. Another gun was then raised to a belfry which commanded the gate of the fort; and the Autrians, fearing an assault, surrendered. Upon such slight occurrences the fate of Europe turned. As the French army would have devoured all the supply of the Val d Aosta in a few days, it must have retreated; and the battle of Marengo, one of the most brilliant events of French history, would not have occurred. The fort has been greatly strengthened.

[1. opens out the valley of Champorcher, through which a path leads, by the village of Pont Bosel, to the Col de Champorcher, in 6 hrs., and by the Val Soana (p. 34) to Ponte in Val d'Orco (Hundbook for Switzerland).]

Above Bard the main valley is narrow, and offers little variety in ascending by the deep and rapid course of the Doire to 56 m. Verres (1210 ft.), situated at the entrance to the Val Challant

(Handbook for Switzerland).

The large square keep of the old Castle overhangs the Val Chaliant. Fine view. There is a convent of Augustius (St. Gilles) here. 20 min. walk across the Dora is the Château of Issogne, built by Prior G. de Challant in 1480: richly decorated within. It has been restored and is inhabited. To the rt. rises the pyramidal Becca di Vlon (9950 ft.).

Above Verres the valley widens, and the little plain of the Doire, covered with sand and stones, shows the occasional violence of the torrent through which the Doire has found its natural channel. The Rly, ascends high above the river in many places, cut out of the rock, which overhangs the foaming torrent. Above are the ruins of the Castle of St. Germais, placed so as to command the pass.

The very ancient pass of Mont Jovet, traversed by the high road, was probably a Roman work, though a modern tablet denies them the credit It was repaired by the inhabitants of Aosta. The wine in its neighbourhood is celebrated. From the head of the pass the view down the ralless.

is very striking. Towards the W. the finest part of the Val d'Aosta extends to the Cité, as Aosta is called.

63 m. St. Vincent, near which a remarkable broken bridge over a ravine is seen on the rt. It is called the *Pont des Salassiens, and is a Roman work. From its parapet one of the most beautiful scenes in the valley is presented on looking towards Châtillon, including among its objects the Château d'Ussel and other ruins.

Here is a Bath-house, supplied from a mineral spring in the chestnut-forest above, on the path to the Col de Jon, Brussone, and Gressoney.

Two tunnels lead to 65 m. Châtillon (1490 ft.). The town stands 300 ft. higher. The bridge over which the high road passes is a fine single arch, thrown across a deep gulf. From it are seen, further down the torrent, the remains of a Roman bridge, also a single, and still an entire arch; and immediately over it another bridge, now superseded.

In the depth of the gulf, and a little up the stream, are forges, strangely placed there, for the sake of the waterpower in working the tilts; a wild path leads down to them, and the view of the bridges from the bottom of the ravine forms a striking scene.

Here is the opening of the Val Tournanche and the path to the Col de St. Théodule (Handbook for Switzerland). To Val Tournanche, 4½ hrs., mule 10 fr.; to Breuil 7 hrs., mule 15 fr. Guide to Zermatt 20 fr.

Châtillon and the beauties of its valley are best seen from the Church. Above is the fine Castle of Count Christin d'Entréves. On the opposite side of the Doire, the ruin of Château d'Ussel (14th cent.) rises in the foreground.

Above Châtillon the same rich scenery prevails, interrupted here and there by traces of destruction, caused by torrents.

68 m. Chambave, celebrated for its wine, one of the richest in Piedmont.

The vineyards of the Val d'Aosta have a great reputation, and are cultivated up to 3000 ft. above the sea. Hemp, Indian corn, and fruit-trees fill the valley like a garden. A viaduct and two bridges across the Dora lead to 72 m. Nus (Nona Lapis), a poor village, with the ruins of a château. On the l., opposite the entrance of the Val S. Barthélemy, is the picturesque castle of Fénis.

[Three passes lead from the Val S. Barthélemy to the Valpellina. The least difficult is that which crosses the Col de Vessoney to Oyace (Handbook for Switzerland). An easy pass, called the Fenêtre de S. Barthélemy, goes from the village of the same name to Antey in Val Tournanche. The Piedmontese government-map is useless in this district.]

75 m. San Marcel. Near this are copper-mines, and the remarkable Fontaine Bleue, impregnated with copper.

77 m. Quart Villefranche. The Château Quart (2485 ft.) is seen high on the mountain side; a path leads to it from near Villefranche, and down on the other side to Aosta, both affording beautiful views. The château is now a hospital.

82 m. AOSTA (1970 ft.), a city of 7700 inhab., in a most striking situation,—a deep rich valley, surrounded by lofty and snow-capped mountains, which peer down into its squares and streets. It stands at the foot of the Great St. Bernard, on the junction of the Buttier with the Doire. A beautiful feature in the view from it is the snowy Ruitor.

Aosta, the Augusta Prætoria of the Roman itineraries, claims a high antiquity. It was known under the name of Cordèle, as the chief city of the Salassi: but its history earlier than its conquest by Terentius Varro, a general of Augustus, is not to be relied on. The Romans captured it 28 years B.C., and reduced its inhabitants to captivity. Augustus rebuilt the city, gave it his own name, and a garrison of 3000 soldiers. The remains of large public buildings attest its importance at that time, and though much inferior in beauty and extent to those of the S of France, they will be viewed with interest.

In the main street at the E. entrance of the town is a Triumphal Arch, in tolerable preservation, decorated with 10 Corinthian pilasters supporting a frieze of Doric triglyph. It was erected in honour of Augustus, and is one of the finest of the remains.

About 200 yards to the E. of the arch, in a narrow street, is a Roman Bridge, which once spanned the Buttier, though now 100 yards E. of it. It is buried to a considerable depth by soil A conduit of water runs under it, and by its side a path; the arch is a fine piece of masonry.

The plan of Aosta, like that of other Roman cities, was a square, and the chief streets crossed in the centre. The triumphal arch stood outside the town, in front of the chief gateway. This, the ancient Porta Prætoria, now Porte de la Trinité, is still in good preservation, though much of the casing of hewn stone has been removed. It has two façades, with a square space between, each façade composed of three arches-that in the centre being much the larger.

The Roman walls remain entire throughout their extent, though the masonry is partly defaced; they are flanked with towers, some of which are perfect, and are most accessible and in best preservation on the S. side of the town,

The straight wall of a Theatre is visible above the houses in the Market-Place.

There are three curious mediæval towers: la Tour de Bramafam, planted on the S. wall, 11th cent.; la Tour du Lépreux, on the wall, the scene of Xavier le Maistre's wellknown tale, and la Tour des Prisons.

In the N.E. angle of the walls, in the Garden of the Nuns of St. Joseph, are remains of an Amphitheatre, consisting of 8 arches of the outer arcade.

Ville leads to the Cathedral of SS, Gratus and Jucundus, of ancient foundation. The wide apse is flanked by two stately towers, as old as St. Anselm. The interior is very plain The arches rest on the original square piers. On the N. side is an apsidal chapel of the 14th cent., and a late Gothic cloister (1686). In the choir are mosaic pavements, 12th cent.; at the side of the altar the tomb, with mailed effigy, of Thomas II. of Savoy, Count of Flanders 1250; also tombs of several bishops. Beneath the choir is a Romanesque crypt with Roman capitals. The Sacristy or Tresor contains silver shrines of St Gratus and St. Jucundus, surrounded by statuettes; a brooch for a stole, set with an antique camen; a silver bust enclosing a jaw of John Baptist; and an ivory diptych carved with a figure of the Emperor Honorius (408, and aumerous missals. The Gothie Church of St. Ours, in the suburb E, of the town, possesses a detached Romanesque tower and cloister, with the history of Jacob and Esau carved co the capitals: within are some fine stalls of carved oak, and attached to it is the Priory, a picturesque edifice, 15th cent., in Renaissance style, with an octagon tower, and a chamber painted in fresco, well preserved.

The Hôtel de Ville is the headquarters of the Italian Club Alpino, to which members of foreign clubs are welcomed. In front of it is a Statue of Dr. Cerise. Aosta is the seat of bushop and the station of a military district. Near the Stat. 18 a fine bronze Statue of Vittorio Emanuele, attired for the chase (1886).

Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury, was born at Aosta in 1033. An 10scribed stone records the flight of Calvin from Aosta in 1541.

St. Bernard, whose name is immortally associated with the mountain pass between the valleys of the Rhone and Doire, was archdeacon of Aosta; and his personal knowledge of the exposure and suffering incidental to a passage of the Alps, led to his establishment of the celebrated Hospics A street at the side of the H, de | upon a permanent footing.

The inhabitants of the Pays d'Aosta speak a barbarous patois, but most of them can converse in French, more or less. The beautiful valley is afflicted with cretinism and goître, more perhaps than any other in Piedmont. The peasantry appear a squalid and filthy race, generally stunted and diseased. Of the whole population in the neighbourhood of Aosta, 1 in 50 is a cretin; and above half are more or less goîtred. Some of these are horrid objects, with tumours as large as their heads appended to their throats.

The extreme dirt of the houses, villages, and persons of the peasantry would be sufficient to account for any amount of disease; but it is remarkable that in the spots they select, these dreadful maladies seem to be capri-At St. Vincent they prevail; cious. at Châtillon, at Courmayeur, and at La Thuile they are almost unknown; at Ivrogne and Arvier they are most prevalent.

6 hrs. S. of Aosta is Cogne (5000 ft.), an admirable centre for Alpine excursions.

On leaving Aosta the carriage-road crosses the open plain through rich vegetation.

The river is crossed to reach the little town of 8 m. Villeneuve, where the iron ore of Cogne is smelted. Near this the valleys of Savaranche and Rhèmes open from the S. Mule-path to (13 hrs.) Ceresole (see above). Above Villeneuve the valley narrows and becomes much more wooded, the walnut-trees forming in some places almost a forest, especially near 12 m. Arvier. Here the vineyards are celebrated.

A bridge is thrown over the torrent of the Grisanche, which here flows into the Doire from the Val Grisanche on the S. The road enters a narrow gorge to reach Pierre-Tailleé, a picturesque defile, high above the bed of the Doire. From the summit of this gorge, Mont Blanc at the head of the valley closes the scene. The road crosses deep rifts in the mountain side. The pass was once closed by a gate.

The road now descends rapidly to the Doire, which it crosses, and thence continues on the l. bank to 19 m. La Salle, a dirty narrow village, in which, however, is preserved the name of the ancient people of this valley, the Salassi; many traces of its antiquity have been found in and around. On a hill are the ruins of the feudal Castle of Chatelard.

The road crosses the Doire to 21 m. Pré St. Didier (3280 ft.), situated in meadows, and commanding a fine view of Mont Blanc.

[Here the ascent of the Little St. Bernard begins (Handbook for Switzerland).]

Behind the village are some prettily placed Baths, much frequented by Italians during July and August. Beyond the baths a path leads to the mineral springs (92°) up a ravine which will remind the visitor of Pfäffers. Rugged precipices nearly close the cleft in the mountains, down which the stream of the torrent La Thuile from the Ruitor and Little St. Bernard forces its way.

The road makes a wide sweep, to Courmayeur (4100 ft.), 24 m., at the head of the Val d'Aosta, which above St. Didier is called the Val d'Entrèves. The village stands at some height above the Doire, and near the confluence of its two branches, which descend from the Col Ferrex and the Col de la Seigne, along the S. side of Mont Blanc. To the W. is Mont Chétif, to the E. Mont de la Saxe, while the Aiguille du Geant and its glaciers, high above Mont Frety, seem to close the valley. The summit of Mont Blanc is concealed by Mont Chétif, but half-an-hour's walk discloses the chain from the "Monarch" to the Grandes Jorasses, and from Courmayeur the whole course of the route leading to the Col du Géant is to be traced.

Courmayeur is much frequented in summer for the sake of its mineral waters. The spring of La Victoire is 1½ m. S.W.; its waters (54°) are impregnated with carbonic-acid gas, sulphate of magnesia, and a little iron. La Marguerite is 12° higher.

The baths of La Saxe are about 1 m. beyond Courmayeur, and somewhat rough.

The guides and mules were placed in 1860 on the same footing as those at Chamouni, except that, on payment of a small fee, the traveller is able to select whom he pleases. The charges are 6 fr. a day; 3 fr. for ½ a day. Special Tariff:—Cramont, 6 fr.; Mont Chétif, 6; Mont de la Saxe, 6; Gl. de Brenva, 3; Jardin da Miage, 6; Col Chécruit, 5 (by Lac Combal, 6); Col de la Seigne, 6; Orsières, by Col de Ferrex, 12; Col du Géant and back, 12; Chamouni by Cols de la Seigne and Bonhomme, in 2 days 27, in 3 days 30; by Col du Géant, 45; by Col de Miage, 40; by Col du Mont Tondu, 25; by Mont Blanc, 100 each guide.

a. Ascent of the Cramont.—An ex-mayeur should fail to make if the weather be favourable, for no spot in the Alps will afford him so fine a view of Mont Blanc, or a more glorious panorama.

Carriage-road to (3 m.) Pré St. Didier, then ascend by the Little St. Bernard road (Handbook for Switzerland) for about $\frac{1}{2}$ hr. to a path which strikes to the rt. among the larches, and mounts through them past several dusters of chalets for about 2 hrs. Mules cannot go beyond the wood, and from this point there is about ll hr.'s climb to the summit; total, There is a more direct but difficult path for pedestrians.

The highest point (9059 ft.) is the outer edge of a large slab or flat mass of rock, sloping at an angle of 20° towards the S.; the upper end of this mass actually overhangs the rocks below. In these savage cliffs chamois are sometimes seen.

Hence the entire mass of Mont Blanc is open to the observer: from the peaks which bound the Col de la Seigne to those above the Col Ferrex, every aiguille and glacier in this line of nearly 20 m. is seen, within an angle of 150°. The depths of the Allée Blanche are concealed by some low intervening mountains, the W. bases of the Cramont.

Towards the E. the Val d'Aosta forms a beautiful vista, and the Doire appears like a thread of silver. ther E. rise Monte Rosa and the Matterhorn. Looking S.E., directly down the line of ascent to the Cramont, the Camp of Prince Thomas, and the table-land above the precipices of the valley of La Thuile, appear to be immediately beneath. Above and beyond them lies the glacier of the Ruitor, one of the finest objects within the view; this is connected with the glaciers at the head of the valleys of Cogne, Savaranche, de Rhêmes, and Grisanche.

Towards the S. is the pass of the Little St. Bernard, guarded by the Belvedere, the Valézan, and other mountains.

Towards the Great St. Bernard the

the Seréna from Morgex to St. Remy. The hospice is not visible, but Mont Vélan and the Grand Combin are seen beyond it.

The traveller who proposes to make a visit to the Cramont a part of his day's journey to Bourg St. Maurice, should start very early, and direct that the mules be sent across the pasturages to chalets which lie in his way to La Balme. He will thus gain time in ascending the valley, though the descent to the hamlet of Eléva, down a steep and rugged path over loose stones, is fatiguing. La Balme is in the valley, about an hour's walk above the spot at which the track turns up towards the Cramont; and there is no object of interest missed between the two places. The name Cramont is said to be a corruption of Grand Mont.

b. The Col de Chécruit, which affords a splendid and uninterrupted view of the chain of Mt. Blanc and the Allée Blanche, lies due W. of Courmayeur, and may be reached by mule path in 2 hrs. Cross the Doire, pass through the village of Dolina, and along the N. side of the ravine for about ½ hr. from Courmayeur; when the path ascends the side by a series of steep zigzags past a little oratory on a rock (I hr.); up slopes of grass, a narrow stony path, and then pastures, is another hr. to the col (6542 ft.). The best view is obtained from a rocky eminence on the rt. No guide is necessary. [A footpath about ½ hr. below the col, leads in 1½ hr. to Mt. Chétif, or Monte Dolina, and Pain de Sucre (7671 ft.), commanding a fine view, but not equal to that from the Cramont.] Instead of descending at once through the pine forest into the Allée Blanche, it is best to keep along the slope of the mountain above the Lac de Combal (Hand-Fine view of book for Switzerland). Mont Blanc and the Glacier de Miage. Guide advisable. From Lac Combal to Courmayeur, by the Allée Blanche, 2½ hrs.

c. Mont de la Saxe, 21 hrs., N.E. course may be traced of the pass of of Courmayeur, easily accessible, commands a glorious near view of well for the magnificent view which Mont Blane, and a prospect in some respects finer than that from the Cramont, but less panoramic, the Ruitor, Grivola, and other peaks of the Cogne range are well seen. After passing the baths of La Saxe, the track to the rt., leading into the Val Ferrex, is followed for a short distance, and then the ascent begins by an easy path, which gradually reaches the summit: this is a sort of undulating plateau, in which no single point much overlooks the rest. The finest view is from the E. end, called Trossé Blanc (8435 ft).

The Glacier of La Brenva is best approached from the N. side, through the village of Entrèves. From thence visit the cavern at the foot of the ice, and then ascend by a rough goat-track, which leads to a plank thrown over a torrent which is otherwise awkward to pass. Above this there is no difficulty in selecting a spot by which to mount the glacier, here free from crevasses. Immediately opposite rises Peteret, a magnificent buttress of Mont Blane, sustaining its central mass on the S. It is easy to cross the glacier and approach the base of this pinnacle, which rises nearly 7000 ft. above the spectator. The traveller may return by the enormous moraine which the glacier has borne down into the Allée Blanche, or follow the glacier to the point where it bridges over the Doire and abuts against the rocks below the chapel of Notre Dame de la Guérison, there taking the regular path from the Allee Blanche to Courmayeur The chapel itself, 50 min. walk from Courmayeur, is a splendid point of view for Mt. Péteret and the Glacier de Brenva. By the E. branch of the Brenva G1 and La Tour Ronde, a comparatively easy pass was made to the Glacier du Geant in 1867.]

Mont Fréty, 21 hrs. from Courmayeur, at the southern base of the Col du Géant (Handbook for Switzerland). From thence, or even from Courmayeur, a mountaineer will find no difficulty in reaching the summit of the Col, which is interesting, as it commands as for its associations with the history of Alpine adventure since the time of Saussure. On this route in Aug., 1860, three English travellers and one of their guides-Frédéric Tairraz, of Chamouni-were The disaster arose altogether from the fact that the rope to which the tired travellers were attached was not likewise fastened round the body of each guide, but merely held in one hand. In such a position, if one or more of a party slip on difficult ground, the guides have not their arms free to use the axe, and, to save themselves, they let go the rope. From the col there is a boundless view of glaciers and mountain chains to the S., among which the Grand Paradis rises with imposing effect.

Another commanding point for Mt. Blanc lies just E. of Courmayeur, opposite Mt. Cnetif. This is the Cal du Sapin, reached in 24 hrs. by the valley between Mts. Saxe and Carmel. Descent on the E. side of Mt. Saxe to the Val Ferrex By this col the Great St. Bernard has been reached in 83 hrs. from Courmayeur. The route passes on the rt. the Grande Rossère (10,904 ft.), and crosses Col d'Artéréva (4 hrs.), Cot Bellecombe (hr.), and Cot de St. Remy (1 hr. 20 m). For nearly the whole distance the chain of Mt. Blanc is fail in view.

Another fine excursion is by the Allée Blanche to the Glacier de Miage, ascending in some way, for a view of the ice cascades which circle round its head and fall a vertical height of 2000 ft. This glacier has two important tributaries—the Glacier du Mt. Blanc and Glacier du Dôme. Over it lies the pass of the

Col de Miage (11,076 ft.), the second of the two important glacier passes between Courmayeur and Chamouni, the other being the Col du Géant. It is, however, difficult, and only suited to first-rate mountaineers; 16 hrs. are generally allowed from the Cantine de la Vauxal, at the foot of the Glacier de Miage, to Chamouni. The ascent from the glacier is by the crags on the W. side, and along a ridge N.E. to the col, which lies between the Aig. de Bionmassay (13,324 ft.) and Aig. de Miage. From this ridge Mr. Birkbeck in 1861 slipped 1800 ft. on the N. side, escaping by a marvel, and saved from the subsequent effects of the fall only by the skill and care of his companions, Messrs. Leslie Stephen and Hudson. The descent is made by rocks on the rt. or N.E. side of a snow couloir, and at the base over a Bergschrund. The N. Glacier de Miage and its moraine are then traversed either to the Alp below them for Coutamines, or to a point above the Chalets de Miage, from which the ridge to the rt. can be crossed by the Col de Tricot to the foot of the Glacier de Bionassay. Thence by the path of the Col de Voza to Chamouni. In the reverse direction the traveller generally sleeps at the Chalets de Miage, on the N. bank of the glacier.

The Col du Mont Tondu (9204 ft.) is a convenient short-cut on the way to Chamouni by the Cols de la Seigne and Bonhomme, but suited only to those who have some experience of ice. It is called 11 hrs. from Courmayeur to Contamines, but there are nearer quarters at the Pavillon de Trélatête. From the head of the Col de la Seigne the pass is seen to the rt. under Mont Tondu, but to turn the walls which fence in the Alp it is first necessary to mount awhile N.E. towards the Aig. de Glacier (12,011 ft.). The track then bears l. along the mountain side to the small Glacier de Lancettes, which is ascended to the final rocks. These are steep but otherwise easy. In the view from the Col, Mt. Pourri and other Graian peaks rise grandly, and Mt. Blanc is seen in all his majesty. The descent is by a small glacier to the great stream of the Glacier de Trélatête, which is traversed as far as the ice-fall, when the moraine and rocks on the rt. or l. bank are followed to the Pavillon de Trelatête, 1 m. from Contamines.

Mont Blanc has been frequently climbed from the Courmayeur side viâ Col du Géant, and the ascent was facilitated by a hut under the Aig. du Midi, but this is now little better than a ruin. From the spot where it stands, the Corridor can be reached in 4½ hrs., by the Tacul and Mont Maudit. This was the route by which Messrs. Hudson Kennedy attempted, without guides, to scale the mountain. They were defeated by bad weather. Blanc has also been ascended from the Glacier de Brenva by a buttress and its sharp icy arête. By these the steep névé was gained, and a turn to the rt. led to the Corridor. This is a formidable ascent, but in 1872 an easier route was found by Mr. T. S. Kennedy. It lies up the Glacier du Mont Blanc, the most southerly tributary of the Glacier de Miage, and presents no unusual difficulties.

A peak of the Grandes Jorasses, called the Dôme, was ascended in 1865 from Val Ferrex by Mr. Whymper. This wild and precipitous range is said to be the lost home of the bouquetin in the chain of Mt. Blanc.

The fabrication of fustians and cotton stuffs dates from 1422, and upwards of 100,000 pieces were annually made towards the middle of the 15th cent. The manufactories still exist, and also some silk works The Church of S. M. della Scala, erected in 1405, is one of the largest Gothic buildings in Piedmont. The boy was educated at Rome; but it was judged expedient to send him to France, when, chancing to stop at Turin, he determined to become a Dominican friar, and he entered this convent, where he professed under the name of Padre Domenico Ottoman di San Tommaso Some members of the Broglia family, who belonged to the neighbourhood, and among them Francesco Broglio, who served under Louis XIV., ancestor of the family of de Broglie in France, are buried in this church.]

The name of Carmagnola is associated with the horrible orgies of the French Revolution, because a large number of the recruits then enrolled were Savoyards from this neighbourhood, but the inhabitants most sturdily disclaim the diagrace of being the inventors of the too celebrated "Danse de la Carmagnole," the prelude to so many fearful tragedies. Steam Tramway to Turin.

Here was born, in 1389, the celebrated conduttiers Francisco Bussons, the son of a poor herdsman, who became so renowned under the name of Conta di Carmaguola. He began his carear in the service of Filippo Maria Visconti, Duke of Milan, and, rapidly rising in ower, he carved his master most affectuelly, regaining a great part of Lombardy, and of the dominions of Giovanni Galeague, which had escaped from his successor. Suspicions of his loyalty were entertained by the Duke; Carmagnola was banished, his property confiscated, and his wife and children cast into prison. He then entered the service of the republic of Venice, by which he was appointed generaliseimo. He con-quered Brescia for it from the Duke of Milan; and at the battle of Macalo, in 1427, he entirely routed the ducal army. But the aristocracy of Venice, as suspicious as the despot of Milan, also distrusted the soldier bound by no tie of allegiance; and having seduced him to Venice by a vote of thanks and confdence, he was cast into prison, tortured, and behended on the 5th May, 1432, "between the two columns" in the Piazzetta of San Marco, The plot of one of Mansoni's tragedies is drawn from his life.

32 m. Brit Junet. (15,000), in the vale of the Sture. The Church of the Chiera was built in 1742 by Vettone. A fine avenue lends to the Santuario della Madonna de' Piori. According to the legend, a miraculous appearance of the Virgin in the copes hard by, on the 29th of Dec., 1336, was the means of rescuing a persent girl from the daggers of assassins; since which event the sloe-bushes with which the copes abounds are said to flower three times in the year—in spring, autumn, and the depth of winter. Important pilgrimage on the 8th of Sept. The Grotts del Busso is a curious little Chapel, hollowed out of the tufa.

The line continues in the plain of the Sture, crossing that river 3 m. farther to 36 m. Cherasco (10,000). The quadrangular form of this town indicates its position upon the site of a Roman town. At each end of the principal street is a modern arch. Of the five churches, three—San Pietre, San Martine, and San Giorgio—are Gothic; another, the Madonna del Popolo (1693-1702), has a good cupola. In the Palasco del Comune are some paintings by Torrico. There are others in the Palasco Gotti. They are scriptural and historical; in land-scapes Torrico was a successful imitator of G. Poussin.

The fortifications of Cherason, once exceedingly strong, were destroyed by the French in 1801. After the bettle of Mondovi, April 22nd, 1796 (Rts. 10), the Piedmentese troops fell back upon Cherasco, and made a show of resistance. Cherasco was well provisioned, and in an excellent state of defence; but, after very few shells had been thrown into the town, the garrison surrendered, not without suspicious of treachery. The Sardiniana proposed a suspension of arms; and on the 28th of April their communicaters concluded with Napoleon the "armetice of Characo," by which, and the treaty that followed, the King of Sardinia renounced the coalition with Austria; ceded to the French Republic Sevoy, Nice, and the whole possessions of Piedmont to the W. of the highest ridge of the Alps.

63 m. Cava (4500), on the rt, bank of the Tanaro: the capital of the marquisate of Ceva, whose lords were conspicuous in the history of this part of Italy. They traced their origin to Aleramo, the hero of many a traditionary tale; but the first of whom there is any real account is Anselmo, the fourth son of Boniface, Marquis of Savous, about 1142. The place is much decayed, and its feudal towers have gone. The chief feature of the landscape is a rock towering above the town, upon which are the remains of the dismantled citadel. The Pied-montese cheese, called Robiole, is made in this neighbourhood.

16 m. Garessio (2000 ft), once the capital of a small marquisate, which, in 1509, was sold to the Spinols family. (A good road, leading to Albenga, crosses the Col di Bernardo into the valley of the Neva.)

33	Luserna S. Giovanni
35	Torre Pellice

Leaving Turin (Rte. 1), this Rly. runs at first nearly due S., passing Sangone. On the rt. lies Stupinigi (Steam Tramway also to Turin), an unfinished royal huntinglodge, with a bronze stag crowning the roof. It was erected in 1776, by Carlo Emanuele III. from the designs of Juvara, and is connected with the city by a fine avenue. elevation is varied by the masses, semi-castellated in form, of which it is composed. Napoleon lodged here in his way to Milan, when about to receive the Iron Crown, and again in 1811. It contains some tolerable paintings: a good one, representing Diana bathing, by Vanloo, who also painted the roof of the great hall. The views of Monte Viso, from the extensive and stiff gardens round the castle, are very fine. Steam Tramway S. to (3 m.) Vinovo.

Beyond Nichellino the Rly. runs S.W.W. by Airasca (Junct. for Saluzzo) to Pinerolo (16,000), on the Lemina, surrounded by pleasant avenues on the site of its demolished fortifications. The churches of S. Donato and S. Domenico are worth a visit. Steam Tramway to (11 m. N.W.) Perosa; in progress thence to Fenestrelle.

From Bricherasio a branch Rly. runs S. to Barge (Rte. 8). The main line continues W. to Luserna San Giovanni, the first Vaudois village, which is almost a suburb of Torre Pellice (Fr. La Tour de Luserne), a thriving place, and a good centre for excursions among the Waldensian Valleys. (See Handbook for Switzerland.)

This Rly. runs due S. to Moretta, whence a line strikes E. to Cavaller-maggiore (Rte. 9). Continuing along the plain, we reach Saluzzo (16,000), at the foot of the Piedmontese hills. It was formerly the seat of the Marquises, who played a part in the wars of the 15th cent. in Northern Italy, but became extinct in 1548. The Cathedral dates from 1480. In one of the squares a Statue of Silvio Pellico, born here in 1789, was erected in 1863. Rly. E. to Savigliano. Tramway to Turin, Pinerolo, Venasca, Revello, and Cunco. Rough road W. to (8 m.) Paesana, following the Po; from thence a foot-

On leaving Coneo, the Rly. enters the valley of the Vermanagua, which it follows to 63 m. Borgo San Dalmasso (4200), supposed to be the remains of the city of Pedone, destroyed by the Milanese in 1250. Steam Tramway to Cuneo.

Carriage-road to .3 m. S.W.) Valdieri (2495 ft). Thence the road follows the Gesso torrent through a narrow glen, ascending continually for 7 m., to the Baths of Valdieri (4425 ft.), much frequented from the middle of June until the end of August. Hot springs (145° and 95"), similar in their properties to those of Aix in Savoy, are used for the baths, while the slightly saline tepid, Acqua Magnesiaca, is drunk as a purgative cryptogamic plant (Ulva labyrinthiformis) grows in thick gelatinous masses (135° Fahr) over the rock, down which the water flows. This substance, called Muffa, is applied to wounds and inflammations. Valdieri is situated in the finest part of the chain of the Marstime Alps, whose jagged granitic peaks, Monte Matto (10,230 ft.) and Monte della Stella (10,615 ft.), rise on either side. The shooting of chamois, &c., in this district is reserved exclusively for the king, who frequently pitches his tent in the valleys adjoining. Excursions numerous and interesting. Through the Valletta, or valley running S., a. path mounts the rt. bank of the stream, passing in an hour a spot where Senecio balbisianus, a rare composite plant, grows abundantly. 3 hrs. further is the

Col delle Cerese (8410 ft.), reached by a steep and rough track over snow and rocks.

Thence a descent of 3 hrs. leads to San Martino di Lantosca (3210 ft.). Good carriage-road through (11 m.) Bollena, to (40 m.) Nice. From S. Martino a path leads N. in 6 hrs. to Entraque, by the Col delle Finestre (8190 ft.), and regains the carriage-road to the Baths a little above the village of Valdieri. It is also practicable to cross the mountains which separate the valley of the Vesubia from that of the Roja, ascending from Rocca Bighera or Bollena, descending into the Val di Caros, and sleeping at Saorgio, or at the little village of Fontano, on the high-road to Tenda, 2 m. N. of Saorgio. These valleys may equally well be visited from Nice.

There is a road to Embrun, in France, by the Col de l'Argentière (Larche). Leaving San Dalmazzo, it ascends the valley of the Stura by (7 m.) Demonte. Here there formerly existed a fortress, which commanded the entrance to the valley, and was memorable for several sieges in the wars between Sardinia and France. Thence up the vailey to (13 m.) Vinadio, and through the ravines above Plancie, passing numerous cascades, to the (4 m) Baths of Vinadio (4185 ft.), a sequestered but favourite The valley of the establishment. Stura narrows, and the road ascends to the (30 m.) Col de Larche 6700 ft.), the boundary between Italy and France, before reaching which is a small lake, the source of the Stura. The view from the Col is very fine, especially on the side of France descent leads from here to Larchs, the French Douane, and lower down to (45 m) Barcelonnette (2300), following the Ubayette and Ubaye torrents. It was over this Col that Francis I., in 1518, carried his army of 20,000 men into Italy, under Lautrec, Trivulzio, and Pietro Novarra, before the battle of Marignan. At Barcelonnette is a bronze bust of the eloquent Deputy Manuel over the fountain in the main street. The road to Embrun descends along the Ubaye, to (60 m.) Le Lauret: 5 m. lower down is the village of Ubaye, from which two roads lead to (75 m.) Embrun, one along the river to the confluence of the Ubaye and Durance, the other up the mountainsides to the Col de Pontes, which leads to Savenes on the Durance, where it joins the post-road from Gap to Embrun.

(This route is more fully described in the Handbook for Savoy, and Embrun in the Handbook for France.)]

The Rly. continues S.E. to 66 m. Robilante (2700), where it enters the mountains and begins to ascend, and the noble masses of the Maritime Alps, crowned by Monte Viso (12,645), become more clearly visible. The plains below are fertile, and nothing can be more beautiful than the little streams by which they are irrigated and crossed.

The Rly. ends at Vernante, and the old post-road over the Col di Tenda must now be followed as far as Nice.

A well-engineered ascent leads to 6 m. Limone (3640 ft.).

About half-way below the summit a Tunnel 2½ m. long, begun by the Princes of Savoy, but left unfinished for many years, avoids the passage over the crest, a narrow ridge (6158 ft.). commands a very fine view of the Alps, from Monte Viso to Monte Rosa, while on the S. the Mediterranean may be faintly discovered. The Col di Tenda is noted for its high winds, but the road which crosses it is no longer used, except by pedestrians. The descent on the S. side is by a succession of 80 very abrupt zigzags down a steep continuous slope of 3000 ft.

33 m. Tenda (2680 ft.), at the S. foot of the Col; 2600 inhab. An excellent station for sketching and fishing, and a place of much note in the feudal history of Italy. From the family of Facino Cane it became vested in the unfortunate Beatrice di Tenda, wife of Filippo Maria Visconti, by whose commands she was tortured and condemned to death. (See Binasco, Rte. 54.) There are some picturesque remains of the castle.

The road from Tenda is amongst the earliest of the alpine roads. It was made by Carlo Emanuele I. in 1591; and improved in 1780 by Vittore Amedeo III., as commemorated in two inscriptions near its commencement. Fine scenery and good chamoishunting in the mountain range W. of the Col di Tenda.

36 m. S. Dalmazzo di Tenda (2000 ft.), formerly an abbey, now a Pension, much frequented during the summer. Custom House here.

[3 hours' W. are some lead-mines, at the foot of Monbego, one of the highest peaks of the Maritime Alps, which is easily ascended, and from which the view over the Mediterranean and the plains of Piedmont and Lombardy is splendid, embracing Turin, Pavia, Milan, and the snowy Alps beyond.]

Beyond San Dalmazzo the road becomes exceedingly striking, and descends the Roja, a torrent scarcely leaving room for a carriage to pass. Wherever the rocks allow the possibility of raising a wall you see a little village in the cleft, like the nest of a bird. The finest of these savage defiles of the Roja, the gorge of Borghè, is below.

42 m. Saorgio (2600), where a fort perched upon a rocky knoll commands the passage of the gorge. It was taken by the French under Massena in the campaign of 1794. The Roja abounds with trout. The upper portion of this valley remains in the hands of the Italians; but the strong position of Saorgio and the valley of the Roja is occupied by the French. The French Custom House Stat. is at Fontana, on the N. side of the pass of Saorgio.

45 m. Giandola, the first French village (1250 ft.), grandly situated at the foot of high schistose rocks, which look as if they were on the point of crushing the inhabitants. [A road from Giandola to (20 m.) Ventimiglia, along the Roja, strikes S. through a grand gorge, and enables the traveller to reach the Rly. for Genoa, and proceed into Italy without making the détour by Nice or Mentone.] Our road leaves on the 1. Breglio (2700), near which are the ruins of the castle of Trivella; and ascends to the Col de Brouis (2870 ft.), by a very steep incline, the sides of which are covered with wild lavender.

58 m. Sospello (1190 ft.), a town of 4300 inhab., in a very beautiful situation. Through it rushes the impetuous Bevera; and all around rise mountains out of an exceedingly fertile plain. The valley abounds in thick woods of olives and figs. The Revera joins the Roja about 4 m before entering the sea at Ventimigha.

[A cross-road branches off from Sospello to (14 m.) Mentone, by the Col di Castignone (2400 ft.) and the valley of Carei, passing through a very picturesque country.]

Our road ascends to the Col de Braus (3300 ft.). In the autumn lavender-water is made on the sides of this mountain by the peasantry, whose rude apparatus is curious.

72 m Scarena (2000 inhab.). After crossing another hill we descend along the Escarena, one of the tributaries of the Paglione, which is followed to Nice, passing by the villages of Pallarea, Drappo, and La Trinità.

85 m. Nice. (See Rtc. 122 and Handbook for France.)

Descent of 350 ft. to Villafrance, through deep cuttings and by numerous curves. Baldichieri is geologically interesting, being situated in the midst of the tertiary sub-Apennine formation, which abounds in marine shells. The Borbore torrent is crossed near San Damiano, and the Tandro is followed to

36 m. ASTI Junet. (32,000), the Roman Hasta Pompeija, birthplace of Alfiert (1749-1803). Leaving the Stat., in 5 min, we reach the Church of B. Secondo. From the N.W. corner of its Piazza a short street leads to the Corso Vitt. Emanuele, which we follow towards the W., passing the lofty brick tower of S. Bernardo, to the (5 mm.) House of Alfieri, with an inscription. Here is shown the room in which the poet was born on Jan. 17th, together with his Portrait, and an autograph sonnet, addressed to his sister. Further on is seen the picturesque polygonal tower of S. Catarina, Just beyond the House of Alfieri the Via Azeglio lends N to the Cathedral (1348). Good W. front | Promenade, Octagonal cupola and square Tower (1266), near which on the outside wall is a good fresco of the Madonna with Saints and Angels. Lofty nave, aisles, and Choir, with short transepts, all much spoilt by trivial painting. Two old and quaint Holy Water basins, each standing on an inverted Corinthian capital. No clerestory or truferium, PAINTINGS: 2nd left, Virgin and Child, with SS. John Bapt., John Evan., Paul, and another; 3rd left, Marriage of the Virgin, better preserved; both perhaps by Macrino d'Alba (1498). Rt. transept, Family of St. Anne. The colonnade on the E. side passes the Post Office, and conducts to the Public Garden near the Rly, where is a marble Statue of Vitt. Emanuele. Returning to the Corso, in 10 min. we reach the Porta Alessandria, at the E. extremity of the city. Just within the gate, on the rt., is the Church of B. Lorenzo, turning back on the rt., is the Alb. Italia; from the third corner the Via Umberto leads into the large Prazza, where is a brouze Statue of the statesman Urbano Rattazzi (1873). In front rises the handsome Palazzo Ghilino, inhabited occasionally by the king. At the corner near it is the Post Office, from which the Via Parma leads to the uninteresting Cathedral. Important Fairs in April and October. The extensive Citadel, built in 1728, is reached by a covered bridge. It is of enormous strength, but its owes its chief importance to the facilities for inundation afforded by the Tanaro.

Alessandria was founded in 1168, on the site of the small Castle of Robereto, by the cities of the great Lombard League. This alliance, so powerful, so memorable, and yet so ineffectual for the preservation of the national liberties, began in 1164 by the confederacy of Verona, Vicenza, Padua, and Treviso; and included in 1167, besides these, Ferrara, Brescia, Bergamo, Cremona, Lodi, Parma, Piacenza, Modena, Bologna, Novara, Vercelli, Como, Venice, and, lastly, Milan; all bound by solemn oath to defend their rights. The most powerful allies and willing subjects of the Emperor Frederic were the citizens of Pavia and the Marquis of Montferrat; and to keep these in check, the League determined to erect a new city, at once a fortress for their defence and a memorial of their liberties. The ground was carefully selected, with a view to the isolation of the fortress, if necessary, by means of the surrounding water, and the spot appeared well adapted for defence against the German cavalry. The astrologer stood by with his astrolabe, and the first stone was laid at the propitious moment. The blessing of the pontiff was given, and the new city was named in honour of Alexander III., the protector of the Guelphs. Bands of workmen, and large sums of money, were sent by the inhabitants of Milan, Cremons, Piaceuza, and other towns; and so earnestly did they labour, that the city was completed in less than a year. The Emp. Frederic Barbarossa, against whose power the fortress was chiefly strengthened, called it Alessandria della Paglia (a city of straw), because many of its houses were hastily thatched with laths and stubble; but the place rapidly rose to power, and the siege laid against it by the incensed Emperor in 1174 ended in a disgraceful retreat from the newly-erected walls. From Frugarolo a branch line runs S. to Basaluzzo. Novi (11,000), rising above the Rly. on the rt., is noted for its silk culture. Here the Russians and Austrians under Suwarow defeated the French under Joubert in Aug. 1799. The line now ascends, and at Serravalle reaches the foot of the Apennines. Beyond Arquata, with its rained Castle, is a tunnel, on emerging from which the geologist will observe an interesting section of the tertiary marine strata dipping away from the central range. Rly. follows the windings of the Scrivia, crossing it repeatedly, and passing through several tunnels. the Boochetta, or narrowest part of the ravine, the scenery is strikingly grand. Isola del Cantone, placed in an angle formed by the junction of the Scrivia with a tributary stream, is overlooked by a ruined Castle on the rt.

The old line ascends to Busalla, and pierces the Apennines by a tunnel nearly 2 m. long, excavated in the friable calcareous schist, whose precipices enclose the Scrivia near its source. Our Rly. almost immediately enters a longer and safer Tunnel (3½ m.), on emerging from which at Mignanego the old line is seen below to the left. The descent is rapid, but well-engineered, and several fine viaducts and short tunnels carry the Rly. down to the junction of the two lines at Sampierdarena. Here twellers for Nice change carriages, while our line runs E. through the soburb, and pierces the Lantern Hill by a short tunnel before reaching

8 m. Trofarello Junct. in Rte. 6. Thence to 28 m. Cavallermaggiore Junct. (Rte. 9). Here the line turns E. to 36 m. Brà Junct. (Rte. 3).

[3 m. S.E., on the N. bank of the Tanaro, is Pollenzo, a castle and village, replacing the Roman municipium of Pollentia. Here the armies of the Triumvirate frequently assembled. It was celebrated for its manufactures of terra-cotta, praised by Pliny as being scarcely inferior to In the age of the those of Samos. Leaving Brà, the Rly. crosses the low tertiary ridge which separates the valley of the Grana from that of the Tanaro, which it follows as far as 47 m. Alba (Alba Pompeia), a very ancient episcopal town (6500) on the rt. bank of the Tanaro, where the Ouerazzo joins it. The Cathedral, dedicated to San Lorenzo, and founded in 1486, is attributed to Bramante, and contains in its choir a bandsome mausoleum of the founder, Andrea Novelli. In S. Giov Battista is a Virgin and Child with Angels, by Barnaba da Modena (1380). Alba was an Imperial fief, granted successively to the Counts of Saluzzo and the Visconti, and as such it formed a part of the marriage portion given by Gian Galeazzo to his daughter Violante on her marriage with Lionel, Duke of Clarence.

The Rly. continues to follow the Tanaro as far as

55 m. Castagnole Junct. [Rly. N to Asti.]

71 m Nissa Monferrato, so called to distinguish it from Nice or Nizza di Mare It is also called Nizza di Paglia, from having been originally composed of straw huts by the emigrants who had removed thither. Rly. in construction N.W. to Asti, S.E. to Acqui. Nizza is situated on the Belbo, which the Rly. follows to 81 m. Oviglio. 3 m further on the latter river joins the Tanaro. At 84 m. Cantalupe Junct., our line joins that to Acqui.

A very interesting Rly, to the military traveller, as it lies over ground rendered celebrated by Napoleon's first italian campaign in 1796, ascending the valley of the Bormida to the passes of Montenotte and Cadibons.

Bayona

Alessandria is described in Rte. 11. The Rly, runs S. to 5 m. Cantalupo Junct., in the plain; here the route to Nizza di Monfermo, Alba, and Bra branches off (Rte. 5). The line enters the hilly country at 7 m. Borgoratto, following the L bank of the Bormida to 9 m. Gamalero, a small village in a pleasant country, and thence to 10 m. Sezzè, the village at some distance on the l. beyond the Bormids.

14 m Cassine (4000), on a height overlooking the valley of the Bormids.
This small town maintained many sturdy conflict with its powerful neighbour Alessandria.

21 m. ACQUI (11,000), the seat of a hishop, is the Agus Staticles of the Romans. It was the ancient capital of the Statielli, a Ligurian nation, and acquired much celebrity under the Romans from its hot springs. The whole country abounds with them. Within the walls rises the "Bollente," 167° Fahr. The flow is abundant, and never diminishes. The water is used by the inhabitants for the purposes of washing, though, both to taste and smell, disagreeably impregnated with sulphuretted hydrogen. The Bath-houses are on the opposite bank of the river, where several springs (111° to 124°) issue from the ground. They were built in the 16th cent, by the Duke of Mantua, but have been improved. The mud baths (Fanghi) are considered to have most efficacy. Gout, paralysis, and rheumatic affections are the complaints in which they are peculiarly useful. Dr. Cantù, a Piedmontese physician, discovered iodine in the waters, to which he attributes much of their virtues, and also a trace of bromine. There is also a Government Establishment for military patients, and for about 5000 indigent persons, who are lodged, fed, and for the most part cured, gratis.

The few Roman remains which escaped the destruction of the city by the Goths attest its ancient magnificence. Four arches of a massive yet elegant Aqueduct are the most conspicuous. Several reservoirs and other portions of the therms may be traced. One spring retains, by tradition, the name of "the fountain of Pallas." The block or nucleus of a large sepulchral monument is called Carne by the common people, a name having a curious, though perhaps accidental, similarity to the Gaelic and Cymric easirn or Carnedd. Numerous inscriptions relating to the Lollian, Mettian, Rutilian, Petronian, Rubrian, Mennian, and Plantian families, as well as urns, lamps, and idols, have been found near the branch of the Via Emilia which ran by the city. Coins extending from Augustus to Theodosius have also been found.

Acqui was the capital of the Upper Montferrat, and some of the towers erected by the Palsologi yet remain. It suffered much during the revolutionary wars.

The Dueme, beginn in the 12th cent., has a fine and venerable porch, with an ample flight of stone steps, which adds to its effect. The nave has double aisles. San Francesco, a Gothic building scarcely inferior to the Duomo, was ruined by the French.

Mente Stregone (Great Wisard) rises above the city. Here the hot springs have their sources.

On leaving Acqui, the Rly, follows the banks of the Bormida, to 24 m. Terro, on the site of a Roman stat.—ad Tertium—its distance from Acqui.

28 m. Bistagne (2000). The two branches forming the Bormida unite beyond this village—the Bormida di Spigno descending from the Altare or Cadibona Pass, and the Bormida di Millesimo, which rises at the foot of Monte Calvo. The Rly. follows the first nearly due S. to 38 m. Spigno (3000), in a fertile territory, producing much silk and wine.

46 m. Dogo (Degus), in a bend, on the L bank of the Bormida.

Dego (2800), from its attention on one of the high-roads into Lombardy and Piedmont, has suffered severely on several occasions from military operations, but especially in 1794, when it was occupied by Massens, and in 1796, when it was the scene of one of the sanguinary battles that opened to Napoleon the conquest of Italy. The French general, having succeeded by a masterly movement in cutting through the centre of the allied army of the Piedmontese and Austriana at Movetanotte on the 12th of April (see below), proceeded to attack each in three low), proceeded to attack each in three low), proceeded to attack teach in three low).

Montenotte, retreated along the Bormida, and occupied Dego, where their conquered division received reinforcements from the main body of the lmperial army, then about Genoa. After beating the Picdmontese under Colli at Millesimo, and forcing them to retreat on Ceva and Mondov), Napoleon, having under his orders Laharpe and Massena, attacked the Austrians at Dego. After a series of hard-fought actions during two days, the Imperial general was obliged to retreat upon Acqui, leaving 3000 prisoners and 18 cannon in the hands of the French. Two days afterwards, however, a gallant attempt was made by General Wickasowich, at the head of 6000 Austrian grenadiers, to retrieve the past disaster of his countrymen. Dego was retaken, with 600 French in it; but Napoleon, uniting his forces, pounced upon Wickasowich unexpectedly, and soon recovered it, making 1600 Imperialists prisoners. The result of the battle of Dego was that the Imperialists were prevented from forming a junction with, or relieving, their Piedmontese allies, already hard pressed by Napoleon at Ceva, and ultimately defeated at Mondovi (Rte. 10). They were obliged to retreat on Alessandria, to cover Milan from an attack by Napoleon. It was at the battle of Dego that Lannes was first distinguished by General Buonaparte, who for his gallant conduct made him a colonel on the field of battle, 51 m. Cairo Montenotte. Cairo (Cairum) is the principal town in this upper valley of the Bormida (3500), and is supposed to have been a station on the Via Emilia, which from Rimini led to Savona. Iron furnaces in the neighbourhood. The old road to Savona by the Pass of Montenotte, now abandoned, struck off to the l. from this point, passing by the battle field of Montenotte. A mulepath, frequented by the Genoese fishermen, still exists over the pass. new road was commenced in 1800 by Napoleon; and a handsome stone bridge of 7 arches has been thrown over the Bormida at Cairo. Instead of crossing a difficult col, as that of Montenotte was, it penetrates into Maritime Liguria by that between Altare and Cadibons, perhaps the lowest pass ! or depression in the whole chain of the Apennines, which commence hereabouts.

It was at Montenotte that Napoleon, on the 12th of April, 1796, succeeded in piercing the centre of the Allied army by a masterly movement. Encamped at Savons, having the Austrian commander-in chief in front, at Voltri, he had detached a corps of 1200 men, under Co.onel Rampon, to occupy the pass of Montenotte. The latter was vigorously attacked by a vastly superior force of the Imperialists under General Rukawina, who was severely wounded, and the command devolved on Argentean. Forced to shut himself up in the dis-mantled redoubt of Monte Legrno, the French commander defended himself with heroism until night closed in, exacting from his soldiers an oath that they would conquer or die. Napoleon, hearing of Rampon's critical position, immediately broke up from Savona, unobserved, owing to the darkness of the night, with the greater part of his forces. and by daybreak the next morning was able to relieve Rampon. The Austrians were completely Leaten, losing 1000 killed, 2000 prisoners, and 5 pieces of cannon; but what was more serious still, their centre having been forced, their main body was obliged to retreat on Dego.

There are remains of a Roman road about a mile beyond Cairo, and the ruins of a convent, said to have been founded by St. Francis himself, but burned down by the French in 1799.

53 m San Giuseppe Junet.

[Rly W., by Ceva and Cherasco, to Turin (Rte. 6).]

The village of Carcare (1500) lies to the I, where the valley widens, and in a military point of view occupies an important position; for this reason it was selected by Napoleon, after the battle of Montenotte, as his head-quarters, from which he directed his operations against the Austrians in the valley of the Bormida, and against the Piedmontese in that of the Tantro.

3 m. W. is Altero, the last village

n the northern declivity of the Apen-

The great depression of this part of he Ligurian Apennines gave rise to he project of the French government, n 1805, of establishing a communication by a canal between the valley of he Po and the Mediterranean. Altare as to have been the site of an impense reservoir to supply the canal a its descent, through the valley by thich we have travelled, to Alessndria, from whence the Tanaro is avigable to the Po.

There are mines of lignite coal in he environs of Cadibona belonging to he tertiary geological epoch. This oal contains bones of an extinct nadruped, the Anthracotherium, also ound in the tertiary strata of the 'aris basin, of Alsace, the Isle of Night, &c.

The Rly. now descends S.E. to antuario, so called from its celerated Pilgrimage Church, described, ogether with Alessandria is described in Rte. 11. The line crosses the broad Tanaro, and runs through a hilly country, the E. angle of the tertiary range of the Astigiano, between the Po and the Tanaro; a gradual ascent brings us to 5 m. Valmadonna, nearly at the summit-level, from which an equally gradual descent, after passing through a long tunnel, leads to 9 m. Valenza Junct. (4000). Here was a strong fortress taken by the Austrian general Leutrum in 1746. [Rly. N.W. to Casale, N.E. to Pavia.] Beyond Valenza the Po is crossed by a fine bridge of 20 arches.

13 m. Torreberetti Junct. [Rly. N.E. to Pavia.]

16 m. Sartirana, a considerable town in a rich agricultural district.

19 m. Valle. The Rly. now crosses numerous streams and canals, the country being highly irrigated, and laid out in rice-fields, to 23 m. Olevano, near the l. bank of the Agogna, amidst a network of canals.

27 m. Mortara Junct. (7000), chief town of the Lomellina, the district between the rivers Ticino and Sesia; its name is supposed to be derived from Mortis ara (altar of death), the country around being unhealthy, or from the slaughter of the Lombards by Charlemagne, whom he defeated A.D. 774.

Santa Maria, the principal church, has been a good specimen of Italian Gothic; it is now much dilapidated. In this neighbourhood took place a severe action between the Piedmontese and the Austrians on the 21st of March, 1849, when the former, overpowered by numbers, were obliged to fall back on Novara.

[Rly., N.E. to Milan, S.W. to Casale, W. to Vercelli, E. to Pavia. Tramway S. to Ottobiano and Piece del Cairo.]

The line now follows the Arboroso stream to 31 m. Borgo Lavernaro, 3 m. rt. lies Gravellona, in the plain of the Terdoppio.

34 m Vespolate Stat. The Rly now intersects the Battle-field of Novara. It was among the fields reaching to the hamlet of La Bicocca, \(\frac{1}{2} \) m. \(1. \) of the line, that the battle raged most violently on the 23rd of March, 1849. (Rte. 2.)

42 m. Novara Junet.; good Buffet (Rte. 2). [Rly., E. to Rho for Milan, S.W. to Vercelli, and N.W. to Gozzano for the lake of Oria.] 1 m. further the line crosses the Cayour Canal.

53 m. Oleggio Junct., a large village, about 3 m. W. of the Ticino. [Rly. N.N.W. to Arona, passing

5 m. Varallo Pombia. The Rly, ascends continually through low gravel hills, the remains of ancient moraines, left by glaciers when they extended thus far from the mountains. The view of Monte Rosa and the snowy chain of the Pennine Alps is magnificent.

7 m. Borgo Ticino. The line now descends towards the shores of the lake, which it follows to

19 m. Arona. The Rly. Stat. is at the S. extremity of the town, close to the lake and quay. (Rtc. 34.)]

The main line, on leaving Oleggio, runs N. and crosses the Ticino on a fine iron bridge 300 yds. long, with three openings The Simpler carriageroad runs below the Rly.

From Asti (Rtc. 11) the line turns N. across a country of vines and mulberries, with low hills on either side. Most of the towns are perched on heights, at some distance from their stations. Just before reaching Moncalvo is a short tunnel, after which the train descends to 19 m. Serralunga. Carriage-road (8 frs. there and back) to the Sanctuary of Crea (2000 ft) Splended View. Pilgrimage Chapels as at Variale, with terra-cotta figures by Talaccheth. The Sanctuary was founded in 1590. In the Convent Church are some badly lighted frescoes by Macrine d'Alba (1503).

Beyond Ossano the Rly. passed through a long tunnel to 24 m San Giorgio. The village, with its imposing Castello, crowns the hill on the left.

28 m. CASALE Junct. (28,000), an important city, the capital of the ancient marquisate of Montferrat. In after times it was a much-contested position: and the citadel, founded in 1590 by Duke Vincenzo, was one of the strongest places in Italy. Castle near the river was embellished by the Gonzaga dukes. Many Roman remains have been found here, and coins of the earliest ages of the Casale has been greatly republic. strengthened, and, with Alessandria and Verona, it is now one of the great military strongholds of Northern Italy.

The *Cathedral is supposed to have been founded by Liutprand, King of the Lombards, in 742; and the archives of the chapter contain a charter engraved upon a tablet of lead, thought to confirm this opinion. Repairs and decorations have effaced many of the original features of the Lombard buildings.

The W. end is flanked with two slender red-brick towers. A large atrium leads by a descent of four steps into the Nave, which has double aisles, and a short apsidal Choir. There are no transepts, but at the end of the Nave rises an octagonal dome. In 1854-60 the building was thoroughly restored, and strengthened with iron girders, which are hidden In the 1st chapel within the arches. rt. is a Statue by Bernini; and on the wall of the passage leading to the Sacristy is a Mosaic pavement of the 8th cent.

On the rt. is the chapel of St. Evasius, patron of the city; the shrine is of silver. In the Sacristy (though the French removed a large portion of its contents) are still some curious specimens of art. A cross taken from the inhabitants of Alessandria, covered with plates set with gems, stands over the door. Another of rich workmanship, in enamel, was given by Card. Theodore Palæologus. The altar, with reliefs, and various statuettes, were formerly in the chapel of Sant' Among the archives are some valuable MSS. of the 10th cent., and an ancient sacrificial vase in silver | representing the Triumph of Bacchus. Here also is a fine *Baptism of Christ, in oil, by Gaud. Ferrari.

*San Domenico, one of the last monuments of the Palæologi, was begun by them in 1469, and consecrated in 1513. The memory of this family is preserved in the tomb erected by the King of Sardinia in 1835, and containing the remains of several of its princes. The nave and aisles are Gothic, the Choir Renaissance. front has a good doorway in the latter style adorned with Statues and reliefs; above it is a round window encircled with the Signs of the Zodiac. The Church contains paintings by Pompeo Battoni and Moncalvo. the rt. of the entrance is the *recumbent effigy of Benvenuto di San Giorgio (1527) beneath a canopy, surmounted with a figure of St. John Baptist. He wrote a chronicle of Montferrat, of much importance in the general history of Italy; he was a knight of Malta, and is represented upon his tomb in the habit of his order. The style of the whole is interesting, as being the parent of that which prevailed in England in the days of Elizabeth. The Church has a good brick Tower.

Sant' Ilario, near the Castello and the Po, enjoys the reputation of having been once a pagan temple. It is said to have been consecrated by St. Hilary in the 4th cent. Some curious specimens of early paintings still remain.

The old Torre del grand' Orologio, near the central Piazza Carlo Alberto, was built before the year 1000. It was altered in 1510 by William IV., Marquis of Montferrat, whose arms are cast upon the great bell. Near it is a Statue of Luigi Canina. A bronze equestrian Statue of Carlo Alberto adorns the principal Piazza, and near the Stat. is a bronze Statue of Giovanni Lanza. The Palazzo della Città, in the Via Cavour, originally the property of the Bladrate family, is attributed to Bramante. Some frescoes yet ornament the roof and walls. Further on, to the left in walking from the Stat., is the old Palazzo della Città, now the Corte d'Appello. Palazzo Delavalle contains some frescoes attributed to Giulio Romano. In the Palazzo Callori is a portrait of Gonzaga, abbot of S. Andrea at Mantua, by Titian. Rly. and Steam Tramway to Alessandria, Montemagno, and Vercelli.

Rly. W. to Chivasso, passing

Trino (7000). Great herds of swine are reared in the surrounding marshes, and the hams of Trino are celebrated throughout Piedmont. Trino was the birthplace of Bernardino Gioleto, a celebrated printer, who established himself at Venice in 1487, and became the father of a long line of typographers. Trino originally belonged to Vercelli, and was the constant object of contention between it and the marquises of Mont-When Carlo Emanuele I. ferrat claimed the marquisate, he took Trino after a siege; and having been assisted by his two sons Victor Amedens and Francesco Tommaso, the achievement was commemorated by this jingling epigram :-

Trina dies Triman trino sub principe cepit. Quid mirum? numquid Mars ibi trimas erat.

Steam Tramway N.E. to (12 m.)

Ou leaving Casale, the main line, crossing the Sesia, continues N.E. to 38 m. Candia Lomellina.

There are some frescoes in the Church of Sta, Maria by Lanini; and the neighbouring village of Cozzo is said to have been founded by King Cottius. Thence through the rich country of the Lomellina to 47 m Mortara Junct (Rte. 14). The whole district is intersected by rivers, watercourses and canals; and the rice-plantations add to the insalabrity of the marsh-lands around.

Alessandria is described in Rte. 11. Soon after leaving that city the Bormida is crossed, the line to Genoa branching off on the rt.

The village of Marengo is now passed on the l., and the Rly. continues through the plain of the battle-field.

On the evening of the 13th of June, 1800, the whole Austrian army mustered in front of Alessandria, having only the river Bormida between them and the plain of Marengo; and early in the following morning they passed the stream at three several points, and advanced towards the French position in as many The Austrians were full 40,000 strong; while, in the absence of Desaix and the reserve, Napoleon could at most oppose to them 20,000, of whom only 2500 were cavalry. He had, however, no hesitation about accepting the battle. His advance, under Gardanne, occupied the small hamlet of Padre Bona, a little in front of Marengo. At that village, which overlooks a narrow ravine, the channel of a rivulet, Napoleon stationed Victor with the main body of his first line, the extreme right of it resting on Castel Ceriolo, another hamlet almost parallel with Marengo. Kellermann, with a brigade of cavalry, was posted immediately behind Victor for the protection of his flanks. A thousand yards in the rear of Victor was the second line, under Lannes, protected in like fashion by the cavary of Champeaux. At about an equal distance, again, behind Lannea, was the third line, consisting of the division of St. Cyr, and the consular guard under Napoleon in person. The Austrian heavy infantry, on reaching the open field, formed into two lines, the first, under General Haddick, considerably in advance before the other, which Melas himself commanded, with General Zach for his second. These moved steadily towards Marcingo, while the light infantry and cavalry, under General Elsnitz, made a détour round Castel Ceriolo, with the purpose of outflanking the French right.

Such was the posture of the two armies when this great battle began. Gardanne was unable to withstand the shock, and, abandoning Padre Rona, fell back to strengthen Victor. A furious cannonade along the whole front of that position cosued. The tirailleurs of either army posted themselves along the margin of the ravine, and fired incessantly at each other, their pieces almost touching. Cannon and musketry spread devastation everywhere, for the armies were but a few yards apart. For more than two hours Victor withstood singly the vigorous assaults of a far superior force; Marengo had been taken and retaken several times ere Lames received orders to remforce him. The second line at length advanced, but they found the first in retreat, and the two corps took up a second line of defence considerably to the rear of Marengo. Here they were again charged furiously, and again, after obstinate resistance, gave way. General Elsnitz, meantime, baving effected his purpose, and fairly marched round Castel Ceriolo, appeared on the right fank with his splendid cavalry, and began to pour his squadrons upon the retreating columns of Lannes. That gallant chief formed his troops en echelon, and retired in admirable order, but the retreat was now 'general; and, had Meas pursued the advantage with all his reserve, the battle was won. But that aged general (he was 84 years old) doubted not that he had won it already; and at this critical moment, being quite worn out with fatigue, withdrew to the rear, leaving Zach to continue what he considered as now a mere pursuit.

At the moment when the Austrian borse were about to rush on Lannes' retreating corps, the reserve under Desaix appeared on the outskirts of the field. Desaix himself, riding up to the First Consul, said, "I think this a battle lost." "I think it is a battle won," answered Napoleon "Do you push on and I will speedily rally the line behind you." And, in effect, the timely arrival of this reserve turned the fortune of the Napoleon in person drew up the whole of his army in a third line of battle, and rode along the front, saying, "Soldiers, we have retired for enough -let us now advance-you know it is my custom to sleep on the field of battle." The enthusiasm of the troops appeared to be revived, and Desaix prepared to act on the offensive. He led a fresh column of 5000 grenadiers to meet and check the advance of Zach. The brave Desaix fell dead at the first fire, shot through the head. "Alas! it is not permitted to me to weep," said Napoleon: and the fall of that beloved chief redoubled the fury of his followers. The first line of the Austrian infantry charged, however, with equal resolution. At that moment Kellermann's horse came on them in flank, and, being by that unexpected assault broken, they were, after a vain struggle, comparled to surrender. General Zach hunself was here made prisoner. The Austrian columns behind, being flushed with victory, were advancing too carelessly, and proved unable to resist the general assault of the whole French line, which now pressed onwards under the immediate command of Napoleon. Post after post was carried. The noble cavalry of Elanitz, perceiving the infantry broken and retiring, lost heart; and, instead of forming to protect their retreat, turned their horses' heads and galloped over the plain, trampling down everything in their way. When the routed army reached at length the Bormida, the confusion was indescribable. Hundreds were drowned - the river rolled red amidst the corpses of borses and men. Whole corps, being unable to effect the passage, surrendered; and at ten at night the Austrian commander with difficulty rallied the remnant of that magnificent army on the very ground which they had left the same morning in all the confidence of victory.

The portion of the plain on which the battle was fought was purchased by Giovanni Delavo, who in 1847 erected there a Museum, and a monument to the memory of Napoleon.

Tortona is one of the most ancient cities of Northern Italy; it was one of the towns of the Lombard league, and was levelled to the ground by Frederick Barbarossa. It was fortified by Vittorio Amedeo II.; but the French blew up the citadel in 1796, after its surrender, in virtue of the stipulations of the treaty of Cherasco. Pollux, and the fall of Phaëton stand out boldly; while the lamb and the vine more obscurely indicate the faith of the mother who raised the tomb. Here is preserved, in a curious reliquary, a thorn of the crown of our Saviour, presented in 1436 by Archbishop Pietro dei Giorgi, whose tomb is in the middle of the aisle. There is also an ostensoir, weighing 25 lbs., made at Milan about the same period. Leaving Voghera, the Rly. approaches the hilly region.

30 m. Casteggio (2900), the ancient Clastidium, a town of importance in Cisalpine Gaul, celebrated as the place where Claudius Marcellus gained the spolia opima, by defeating and slaying Virdomarus, King of the Gæsatæ. It has been an important military position from the time of the Gallic and Punic wars down to the last great European conflict. It was besieged by Hannibal, and might have defied his power; but 200 pieces of gold paid to Publius Darius, the commander, purchased the fortress; and the provisions and stores found therein were of the greatest utility to the Carthaginian army. Of the Carthaginian general there is yet a remarkable memorial. About 1 m. from the town is a spring of very pure and clear water, called by immemorial tradition "Fontana d'Annibale," and girt by a wall, which he is said to have built. It is close to the track of the Roman army, and about 100 yards from the modern road to Piacenza.

It was near Casteggio that, on the 9th. of June, 1800, the great battle between.

the French and the Austrians was fought. usually called the Lattle of Montebello, from the village on the bill, about 1 m. W. of it, where the French finally routed the corps de reserve of the enemy. The Austrians defended themselves in Casteggio with great valour; and the hills near the town were constantly occupied and re-occupied by the contending parties; but the fortune of the day was decided by Victor, who broke the centre of the enemy; and when Napoleon came up to the assistance of the French vanguard, the victory had been already gained. It was nearly on the same size that the united armies of the French and Predmontese defeated the Austrians in May 1859; the first great success of the allied armies during the Italian war.

A few fragments of walls and towers are the only remaining vestiges of antiquity in this town; but many curious Roman inscriptions, bronzes, and coins have been found here From Casteggio the Rly. follows the base of the hilly region, through cornfields, the hills being covered with vines.

37 m Broni (4500), near the site of the Roman station of Carrullomagus, in a pretty position near the Apennines. The collegiate Church, founded by Azzo, Marquis of Este and Ferrara, in the 13th cent., is a building of various ages and styles; some portions are of the 10th cent. It has been richly fitted up by the inhabitants; and boasts a silver shrine, with the relics of San Contardo, son of the founder. Good wine is made in this neighbourhood.

40 m Stradella Junct. (for Pavia), at the extreme northern point of the hills, which here approach within 2 m. of the Po. Tramway to Voghera (see above). Following the base of the hills, the Rly. gradually approaches the river.

43 m Arena Po. The village is at some distance on the 1. The Bardonezza torrent, formerly the boundary between Piedmont and the duchy of Piacenza, is crossed to

47 m. Castel S. Giovanni, on the l. bank of the Corona. At 50 m Sarmato the line separates from the hills on the rt., and soon crosses the Tidone stream.

56 m. San Niccolò, near the l. bank of the Trebbia, on leaving which the river is crossed on the magnificent *Bridge erected in 1825 by the Empress Maria Louisa, under the direction of the engineer Coccanelli, at an expense of 47,200l sterling. It consists of 23 arches, its length is 500 yards, and the width between the parapets is 26 ft. A column at its extremity recalls the three great battles which took place in the neighbourhood. By an act of useless precaution -for the river was dry at the time -the Austrians blew up some of the arches on the E. side, in their retreat from Piacenza, in May, 1859.

The lower course of the Trebbis is celebrated in the military history of Italy as having witnessed three great battles, each of which decided the fate of Italy for the time; the first, between Hannibal and the Romans under the Consul Sempronius, B.C. 218, which opened Central and Southern Italy to the Cartnaginian invader; the second, in 1746, between the united armies of France and Spain on the one side, and the a.lied Austro-Piedmontese, which led to the momentary expulsion of the Bourbous from Parma and Piacenzs. and the last, in June 1799, when the French army, under Macdonald, after a prolonged struggle of three days, and a loss of 15,000 men, was obliged to retrest before the Russians and Imperialisis, commanded by Suwarrow. The site where Haunibal defeated Sempronus, or where the force of Mago was placed in ambuscade, which so greatly contibuted to that disaster, cannot be ascertained with certainty, but it is probable that, Hannibal being encamped on the l. bank, the Romans attacked him nearly on the same spot where, by a similar manœuvre, Macdona.d, 2000 years afterwards, made a last effort to defeat lus Russian antagonist—about 5 m. S. of the modern bridge. The battle of 1746 took place nearly under the walls o

Piacenza, the great feat of the day being Prince Lichtenstein's charge on Maillebois' columns near to San Lazzaro, The battle-field on the last occasion (June 20, 1799), between the French under Mac-donald, and the Austro-Russians commanded by Suwarrow, was on the l. bank of the river from Grignano upwards to Rivalta, the first being about 8 m. on the right of the village of S. Nicolo, on the post-road, before arriving at Maria. Louisa's bridge. Macdonald, being forced to retire from Tuscany, crossed the Apennines into the upper valley of the Trebbia, hoping to be joined by Moreau, then in the Genoese territory. Suwarrow, however, managed, by his great activity, to prevent this junction, and to place himself between the two Republican armies. Attacked by Macdonald during three days, he opposed to him an energetic resistance, the whole ending by one of the most disastrous defeats that the Republican armies of France had yet experienced.

Soon after crossing the bridge the spires of Piacenza come into view, and the Rly., after running past the half-ruined walls of the city, and the elegant Church of La Madonna di Campagna on the rt., reaches

61 m. Piaceura Junet., situated at the E. extremity of the city, outside the Porta S. Lazzaro. (Rte. 101.)

The remainder of the line up the course of the Sesia is singularly beautiful; the mountains offer richly-wooded slopes, and the masses are relieved by castles, churches, and oratories. The vegetation is most luxuriant.

26 m. Valduggia, the home of Gaudenzio Ferrari's family, lies on the Strona, 1 m. to the rt. Near the Stat. is the junction of the Strona with the Sesia.

Monte Fenera, 3 hrs. E., is a splendid point of view for the lakes and Alps, and has three curious caverus hung with stalactites.

27 m. Borgosesia (4000), the chief town of the valley, has paper mills and cotton factories, and is surrounded by pleasant Promenades. In the Church of SS. Gattinara, celebrated for its wine.

Nearly a mile S. of the Stat. is the Pilgrimage Church of Montrigone, dedicated to St. Anne, with terracotta figures illustrating the History of the Virgin, by Giov. d'Enrico and Giacomo Ferro. The head of a dead Christ, in a cell outside the Church, is attributed by Mr. S. Butler to Tabacchetti (see below). In another cell is a good kneeling figure of St. John the Baptist.

35 m. VARALLO (1515 ft.), a beautifully situated town of 3200 inhab., exclusive of pilgrim visitors to the Bacro Monte, who, especially on the Feasts of the Church, crowd here as devotees. At the Casino di Lettura the Italian Alpine Club has quarters, and politely admits to them the members of foreign Alpine Clubs. Here is also a Museum, with a collection of granite rocks, Herbaruum, &c.

B Gaudenzio has a fine altarpiece on panel, by Gaud. Ferrari; a beautiful Mado..na del Rosario, over an altar in the rt. transept, model.ed by Tabacchetti: and in the Chapel of St. Joseph a Madouna by a native artist, Dedo.nenici da Rossa (1840), of considerable merit. On the outside wall of S. Pietro, beyond the bridge towards Mollia, is a fresco of Sta. Petronilla, by G. Ferrari. The latter was painted by moonlight, and is almost destroyed.

The *Sacro Monte (2000 ft.) rises immediately above the town, and is accessible by a paved path, which winds up the side of the hill, and offers from every tarn the most beautiful scenes.

In the fine Franciscan Church of S. M. delle Grazie, at the foot of the hill, are some admirable works by Gaudenzio Ferrari (born here in 1484, d. at Milan in 1546). Near the Church is a marble statue of the painter, by Vedora. The whole wall dividing the nave from the choir is painted in fresco, in 19 compartments, representing events in our Saviour's history, with the Crucifizion in the centre. They are all most carefully executed, and are among the best works of the master, serving to Illustrate his position in Italian art. Pilate is a portrait of Stefano Scotto, Gaud. Ferrari's master. In the chapel of St. Margaret, to the rt., are the Circumcision and the Dispute with the Doctors. In the cloister is a Pietà; and in the sacristy | Sacro Monte.

a Virgin and Saints, on wood, by Giovenone, much injured.

The hill of the Sacro Monte is covered with a series of 50 chapels, containing groups of figures modelled in terra-cotta, painted and clothed. They chiefly represent some of the principal events in the history of Christ, in the order of their occurrence. These structures are never entered they are merely frames or cases for the subjects grouped within them, seen from peep-holes in front. As works of art the greater number are very indifferent. A few, on the contrary, contain works of the highest merit, and to these the attention of every traveller of taste is specially invited. Externally, these oratories are rich in the architectural display of façades, porticoes, domes, &c. the figures within are the size of Much effect is produced by the appropriate situation of some of the subjects. The access to the place where Christ is laid in the sepulchre as by a vault, where little light is admitted; and as it is difficult on cutering from the open day to distinguish at first any object, the effect is very imposing.

Many of the figures are clothed in real drapery, and some have real hor, which appears grotesque; yet they are full of character and expression. Many of the heads are finely modelled.

† See "Ex Voio," by S. Butler, London, 1889; a valuable descriptive bistory of the Sacro Monte.

The executioners conducting to Calvary, or otherwise employed in inflicting sufferings on Christ, are, to increase the disgust for their characters, modelled with goîtres appended to their throats.

The Sacro Monte originated in the piety of the Blessed Bernardino Caimi, a noble Milanese, who became a Franciscan friar, made a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and in 1486 obtained from Pope Innocent VIII. a faculty to found this Sanctuary. Only 3 or 4 chapels were built in the time of the founder, but after two visits paid to it by S. Carlo Borromeo in 1578 and 1584, the prestige of the spot for sanctity soon so increased, that princes and rich devotees contributed to its adornment.

The subjects are—

- 1. Fall of Man. Adam and Eve are seen amidst animals of all sorts and sizes, from the elephant to the rabbit. Six of the smaller kinds are by Cav. Antonini; the rest, together with Adam and Eve, by Tabacchetti.
- 2. Annunciation. One of the earliest Chapels. New heads were given to the figures by Tabacchetti.
- 3. Visitation.
- 4. Angel announcing to Joseph the Miraculous Conception. The sleeping figure of Joseph is very beautiful; the Virgin, who is sewing a pillow, is pretty and graceful; the Angel remarkably fine (by Tabacchetti).
- 5. Magi and Star of the East. Good rocks by Gaudenzio, high up to
- 6. Nativity, in a dark Grotto.
- 7. Joseph and Mary adoring Christ.
- 8. Circumcision.
- 9. Angel advising Joseph to fly into Egypt. Figures in stucco; fine Angel; good heads of the Virgin and Child.
- 10. Flight.
- 11.*Massacre of the Innocents. Above 60 figures, the size of life, besides the painted groups on the walls, so arranged as to assist in the composition. Chapel built between 1586 and 1590, at the cost of Carlo Emanuele, Duke of Savoy. Figures by an unknown sculptor; perhaps begun by Luigi Paracca of Como, nicknamed Bargnola (1557-87), and finished by M. A. Rossetti.

- 12. Baptism in the Jordan.
- 13. Temptation. The beasts with their young are excellent. Fresco background by Melchior d'Enrico.
- 14. Christ and the Woman of Samaria.
- 15. Christ Curing the Paralytic.
- 16. Christ Raising the Widow's Son.
- 17. Transfiguration. This oratory is on an enormous scale; the group in the foreground contains the demoniac boy; a blind man, and a boy with a bad foot leading him, are both good; on the mountain, an immense modelled mass, all very bad, are the three disciples; above them Christ, with Moses and Elias; over these, painted on the walls and ceiling of the dome, are the host of heaven.
- 18. Raising of Lazarus.
- 19. Entrance into Jerusalem.
- 20. Last Supper. One of the earliest; the figures of wood, and lifeless. The Supper is very profuse, and much later than the figures.
- 21. Christ in the Garden. Also early.
- 22. Christ finds his Disciples Sleeping.
- 23. Christ betrayed by Judas. Figures mostly old, and of wood.
- 24. Christ in the House of Annas (1765).
- 25. Christ in the hands of Caiaphas. Figures by Giovanni d'Enrico and Giacomo Ferro, except *Caiaphas, which is probably by Tabacchetti. Well-preserved frescoes by Cristoforo Martinolo.
- 26. Repentance of St. Peter. Peter by G. d'Enrico.

On the site of the modern Casina, now let out in apartments, stood the Chiera Vecchia, which contained frescoes by Gaudenzio and Lanini (1530). The existing Chiesa Maggiore was begun by d'Enrico in 1614.

The Convent commands beautiful views of Varallo and the Val Sesia below the town. At the entrance to the Oratories, booths or shops are established for the sale of Corons, i.e. beads, crucifixes, Madonnas, &c., which have acquired sanctity by having touched the bed of S. Carlo, or other miracle-working relics.

The Museum, in the town, contains some unimportant works by Gaud. Faruri, frescoes by Lanini, and drawing by Tanzio d'Enrico. The beautiful Caspel of Loreto, 2 m. E. of the town on the road to Novara, has a lunette by Gasd. Ferrari.

Near Varallo are nickel mine worked by an English company.

The population of the Val Sesia is about 35.000: most of the men leave the valley and find employment elsewhere as masons, builders, &c.

In the principal Church, designed by Bramante, is a fine *Assumption in six compartments, by Gaudenzio Ferrari, and some frescoes by Giov. Pietro Crespi, a follower of Luini.

SARONNO Junct. (7250). About $\frac{1}{2}$ m. W. is the Santuario della Vergine, commenced in 1498, from the designs of Vincenzo dell' Orto. The campanile, cupola, high altar, and two side-chapels, were erected by Paolo Porta in the 16th cent. The front, which is overloaded with ornament, was built in 1666, from the design of Carlo Buzzi. Owing to this change of architects, the interior is somewhat irregular. The *Cupola is painted in fresco, by Gaudenzio Ferrari (1535). The subject is the heavenly host playing upon various instruments, with a circle of cherubs above them singing. "Truly a magnificent work, executed in all its parts with the greatest care, and for richness of colour and appropriateness of treatment one of the finest existing examples of this class of decoration."— Kugler. Below is a series of painted statues, in 12 niches, two figures in each, consisting for the most part of Prophets and Sibyls, as Sibylla Delphica and David, &c.; there are also groups representing Calvary, the Last Supper, &c.

Below, in circles in the pendentives, are eight subjects from Genesis,—the Creation of Eve; Eating the Forbidden Fruit; Expulsion from Paradise (much injured); Tilling the Ground after the Fall; Adam and Eve in the Garden, very fine; Abel tending his Flocks; Remorse of Cain; and Adam blessing his posterity; these are also by Ferrari. The lunettes below are by Lanini. All these frescoes may be more easily seen from the gallery which runs round three sides beneath the cupola. In the passage which connects the nave and choir are two large frescoes by Luini — the Marriage of Joseph and Mary, with graceful figures, and Christ disputing with the Doctors. On the wall I. of the high altar is the Presentation in the Temple (1525), with a view of the Church, and opposite the *Adoration of the Magi, all well preserved. the latter, the Virgin and Child are exquisite examples of that union of beauty and tenderness which distinguishes Luini's best works; the heads of the two kneeling kings are admirable, and the transparency of the colours throughout affords an excellent example of fresco-painting. In the Disputation, although the figures of our Saviour and the Virgin are wanting perhaps in dignity, the whole is finely conceived; the heads of the Doctors are admirable. Luini's own portrait, which he has introings have been published by the Arundel Society.

In the Sacristy is a picture by G. C. Procaccini. On the wall of the cloister leading to the priest's house is a Nativity, by Luini. The passage of the Simplon from Brieg (2245 ft.), is described in the Handbook for Switzerland and Piedmont.

The Italian frontier and Custom-house is at 30 m. Iselle (2175 ft.), one of the most beautiful points of the pass. Hereabouts a change comes over the valley, from nakedness or a mantle of shrubs, to the rich green of the chestnut, and the light foliage of the acacia The last gallery is traversed 2 m. before reaching 36 m. Orevola (1100 ft)., where the Doveria is crossed for the last time by a bridge 100 ft. high, previous to its flowing into the Toccia, or Tosa, which here issues out of the Val Formazza. See Handbook for Switzerland.

The Val d'Ossola, which is now entered, is thoroughly Italian. The balmy air, the trellised vines, the rich juicy stalks of the maize, the almost deafening chirp of the grasshoppers or tree-crickets, and, at night, the equally loud croaking of the frogs—the white villages, with their tall, square bell-towers, not only scattered thickly along the valley, but perched on every little jutting platform on the hill-sides—all these proclaim the entrance to Italy.

A long straight road leads from

42 m Domo d'Ossola (1000 ft.), a rising town, of 3700 uchab. The fine Palazzo Silva, restored in 1882, contains Antiquities and objects of Art. In the Convent of S. Francesco has been arranged the Galletti Museum of Natural History; and at the Municipio is a Library of 8000 vols and a Collection of 3000 Coms and Medals.

There is a Calvary } hr S of the town, worth a visit, and commanding a fine view.

The Val d'Ossola and its side valleys are of great interest to mineralogists. For Excursions, &c., see Handbook to Switzerland.

Rly. onward. The Stat. is about }

m. E. of the town.

On leaving Domo, the Rly. descends the valley of the Tosa, passing

4 m. Villadossola, with its very old Church and tall campanile, at the mouth of Val Antrona and the Pass leading into the Saas Thal. From 7 m. Piedimulera a road branches off on the rt. along the Anzasca (Handbook for Switzerland) to Macugnaga at the foot of Monte Rosa.

9 m. Vogogna (740 ft.), a cheerful town with an old Castle on the height. Here the Tosa becomes navigable to Lago Maggiore. At (14 m) Cuzzago, a road branches off l. to Pallanca, passing along the beautiful Lake of Mergozzo.

The Rly, crosses the Tosa by a bridge nearly | m. long to 16 m. Ornavasso, near which are the quarries of white marble which furnished the material for the Cathedral of Milan. The marble here forms a mass in the crystalline gness rock, and affords a good example of what geologists call metamorphism. Along the carriage-road granite obelisks do duty as telegraph-posts.

20 m. Gravellona, where the Strona from the Lake of Orta falls into the Tosa. On the l. rises the hill of Montorfano, celebrated for its quarries of pink granite, used in the rebuilding of the Basilica of St. Paul's at Rome.

[Carriage-road to (8 m.) Pallama, re-crossing the Tosa.

Omn. to (5 m.) Baveno (Rte 4"), reaching the Lake at (3 m.) Feriolo. Hence it follows the water's edge, passing several large quarries of granite, extensively used in the public edifices of Milan, Turin, &c.]

On quitting Gravellona, the Rly ascends the pretty valley of the Strona, with its numerous mills of cotton, paper, nail-heads, &c., and

22 m. Crusinallo crosses the river near its confluence with the Nigoglia, which issues from the Lake of Orta. The Rly, then describes a curve before reaching

24 m. Omegna, an industrial town with a handsome Town Hall, old Church and Campanile, and important Market on Thursday. It stands on both banks of the Nigoglia, at the N. end of the beautiful Lago d'Orta. (Steamer to Orta, twice a day; boat with one rower, 3 fr.)

4 hrs. E. rises Monte Motterone, best ascended from the other side

(Rte. 45).

The Val Strona here turns W., and becomes a narrow glen, whose steep sides are clothed with fine forest-trees and a beautiful and varied vegetation. A good path, in some parts rather steep, ascends the l. bank to (3½ hrs.) Forno, and thence over rough ground to (1½ hrs.)

Campello, a very picturesque village. Here the path turns l., leaving the source of the Strona and a track to the Val Anzasca rt., and ascends first over rocks and then by slopes of grass to the (1 hr.)

Col di Campello (6400 ft.), on the ridge which separates Val Strona from Val Mastallone. Fine distant view of Monte Rosa, whose five peaks rise like turrets from the prodigious inaccessible wall which forms its E. face. A steep descent of 1½ hr. leads to the village of Rimella in Val Mastallone; 2 hrs. further is Fobello. The carriage-road from thence to Varallo is given in Rte. 46.

[From Rimella there is a mulepath by the Col della Dorchetta to Ponte Grande, in about 6 hrs. At the last hamlet of the valley it crosses the torrent, and, turning l., ascends by a lateral stream to a group of high chalets, where milk can be obtained. Thence up steep and bare ground to the col, which is a grassy hollow marked by a cross, 2½ hrs. from Ri-Ponte Grande is seen far down in the Val Anzasca, but the Pizzo del Moro and Cima d'Egua conceal the Monte Rosa peaks. descent is long and steep, over rolling stones to the Alpi della Dorchetta, then by meadows to the Baranca path, 1 hr. above Ponte Grande, which is reached in $3\frac{1}{2}$ hrs. from the col.

Another way from Omegna to (8 hrs.) Varallo, rather longer and more laborious than the ordinary route by the Col di Colma, but much shorter than that by the Val Strona, is by the village of Quarna, and from thence over Monte Mazzucone to Comasco. This mountain is a somewhat enlarged edition of the Motterone, which lies a few miles farther E. It is situated nearer Monte Rosa, but is not so centrally placed in regard to the lakes.]

The Rly. is carried high above the shore of the Lake, affording a series of splendid views, and crosses a viaduct to

28 m. Pettinasco. The village is on the rt. below. To the l., the torrent of the Pescone descends from Motterone. Another fine viaduct and a bold curve lead to

30 m. Orta (Rte. 45). The Stat. lies about a mile E. of the town, equidistant from Miasino. Thence, passing the watch tower of Buccione and the episcopal Palace and Seminary of Bolzano, to 34 m. Gozzano Junct. Omn. to (10 m.) Borgosesia. Rly. N.N.W. to Alzo, whence an omn. runs to Borgosesia Stat. for Varallo (Rte. 20).

38 m. Borgomanero. 8 m. N.E. lies Arona (Rte. 34). At 55 m. Vignale Junct. the Varallo line falls in on the rt., and the Rly. continues S.E. to 57 m. Novara Junct. (Rte. 2).

This important Railway (1872-81) was designed to open a direct com-munication between W. Germany and the Italian cities of Milan, Genoa, and Venice. The St. Gotthard was always one of the most frequented passes of the Alps; and the piercing of the Tunnel through the main chain now renders it passable for goods and passengers throughout the year. The carriages are entered from either extremity with a passage through the centre, well arranged for seeing the views, but rather draughty.

Most travellers will prefer the Steamer as far as (27 m.) Flüelen. Boats run 5 or 6 times a day in 21 to

On quitting Lucerne the Rly, crosses the Reuss, and runs E. to 11 m. Rothkreuz Junct., where the line to Zürich turns off to the 1. Thence to 16 m. Immensee, on the W. shore of the lake of Zug. The Riy. now skirts the N. base of the Rigi. To the l. rises the Rossberg. A tunnel leads to

Ten tunnels are traversed between Brunnen and Flüelen, the longest of which (1½ m.), is near 32 m. Sinikon. On the opposite shore, under the wooded heights of Seelisberg, is the green meadow of Rütli, the scene of the oath of the three patriot Schwyzers, which let to the emancipation of the Fores Cantons, Nov. 7, 1307. The meadow with its Three Springs is the property of the Swiss Government.

[4 m. higher up, on the carriage-road, is Andermatt, approached by the wild gorge of Schöllenen and the tunnel of the Urner Joch. The old Devil's Bridge fell in 1888. On the heights above Andermatt the Swiss are erecting an extensive series of Forts.] The Rly. now enters the St. Gotthard Tunnel.

This stupendous opening, bored through the main chain of the Alps for a distance of $9\frac{1}{4}$ m. $(1\frac{1}{2}$ m. longer than the Mont Cenis), runs N. and S. at an elevation of 3786 ft. above the sea, and about 6000 ft. below the topmost ridge of the mountain. passes almost directly under the Devil's Bridge. It was begun in Nov. 1872; the borings from the two ends met with wonderful exactness on 29th Feb. 1880, and it was opened for traffic in 1882 at a cost 2,375,000l. The enterprising tractor was M. Louis Favre of Geneva, who died suddenly in the tunnel seven months before its completion. boring was effected by 26 drills moved by compressed air, piercing holes 4 ft. deep, which were filled with charges of dynamite. Each explosion brought down 2½ cubic metres of stone. rock traversed was chiefly hard granite or gneiss, also schist and other Near the centre a stratum of wet shifting rock-rubbish, semi-fluid, was met with, which exercised great pressure, always descending, and was vanquished only by masonry supports, buttresses, and arches of enormous strength. The tunnel (28 ft. wide and 21 ft. high) is lined throughout with masonry, and has double rails. Duration of transit, 20 to 30 min. There are 15 lanterns, one at the end of each kilom

The tunnel ends near

70 m Airolo (3756 ft.), on the river Ticino, whose course the Riy, henceforth follows down the Val Leventina. Below

77 m. Fiesso (3100 ft.) the Rly. threads the ravine of Dazio Grande, beyond which are the 4th and 5th spiral tunnels of Freggio (1 m.) and Prato (1712 yds.).

82 m. Faido (2365 ft). The train now descends the left bank of the Ticino, passing through numerous tunnels Below

86 m. Lavorgo the final and steepest descept is effected by several tunnels, including the two spiral ones of Piano-Tondo and Travi; the Rly. passes through superb scenery of rocks and forests, crossing the river to 90 m. Giornico (1480 ft.). The Village (1295 ft.) has an old massive Lombard Tower, and a very early Romanesque Church, San Nicco, è da Mira.

By a lattice-girder bridge of two spans, each 150 ft., the Rly, re-crosses the Ticino, and continues on its E. side the rest of the way.

97 m Biasca (1112 ft.) is situated opposite a fine waterfall at the mouth of the Val Blegno, opening from the pass of the Lukmanier into the Ticino valley (Swiss Handbook).

The Rly., now in the level valley, is terraced along the base of the mountains, through a country of exuberant fertility and dense vegetation, passing the villages of Osogna and Claro. Beyond 107 m. Castione, the Val Mesocco opens out, and the road from the San Bernardino Pass falls in on the l. (Swiss Handbook).

a picturesque town (2600), still surrounded by old walls and crowned by Dolomite; and farther on, where three Castles, was long regarded as the key to the entrance of Italy from Switzerland. It stands on the I. bank of the Ticino, over which there is a bridge of 10 arches. The Castello Grande to the W. was built, as well as the two other fortresses, in 1445, by Italian engineers for Filippo Mana Visconti. They afterwards became the residences of the bailiffs of the canton. Ascent of Monte Camoghi (7300 ft.) in 7 hrs. (Rte. 40).

Rly. S.S.W. to Luino, turning of from our line at

Ill m. Giubiasco (Rte. 39). The Rly. now leaves the valley of the Ticino, and commences the ascent along the side of the valley towards Monte Cenere. After traversing the slopes of the mountains for about four miles, crossing ravines on lattices bridges and penetrating rocks in tunnels, the mouth of the Monte Cenere Tunnel, 1 m. in length and 1440 ft. above the sea, is reached; on emerging from it the train enters the valley of the Agno, a stream flowing into the Lake of Lugano.

119 m Rivera Bironico (1420 ft.). Henceforth the Rly. follows closely the line of the old carriage-road to 124 m. Taverne. 1 hr. E. lies Sala (Rte. 40). 4 hrs. N.W. rises Monta Tamaro (6430 ft.). Grand *view. Then follows the Mussagno Tunns (1020 yds.), on emerging from which a fine view is gained of 128 m. Lugano (1100 ft.), below the

Stat. on the I. (Rte. 40).

The Rly. now passes over a lofty viaduct, and through a tunnel is malleng, under the slopes of Monte Salvatore, where the rocks exhibit a phenomenon highly interesting to the geologist. About is m, beyond the promontory and runed chapel of Nas Martino a compact smoke-grey limestone appears by the roadside, in beds about a foot thick. As we advance, we find the limestone traversed by small veins, lined with rhombs of Dolomite; and farther on, where mountain is perpendicular, its face is formed entirely of Dolomite, or white marble. Towards Melide it is succeeded by a dark augite porphyry. Von Buch considered that the gas from this igneous rock penetrated the limestone.

133 m. Melide. Here a promontory projects into the lake, from the point of which a stone causeway ½ m. long has been thrown across, connected with either shore by stone bridges. It cost more than a million francs.

136 m. Maroggia. [Carriage-road l. to (7 m.) Lanzo d'Intelvi (3120 ft.), a favourite resort from May 15 to Oct. 15, commanding magnificent views of the lake and surrounding mountains, and M. Rosa in the distance. The road descends on the other side to (9 m.) Argegno (Rte. 43). There is a mule track from Lanzo to M. Generoso.]

The lake is quitted at 139 m. Capolago, whence a cog-wheel Rly. ascends in 1½ hr. (Return Ticket, 10 fr.) to

*Monte Generoso (5390 ft.), the Rigi of the Italian lakes, but with a far finer mountain view. Passengers for the Hotel Monte Generoso (4000 ft.) alight at the Bella Vista Stat., 1½ hr. below the summit. The panorama embraces the lake scenery and the Alpine chain, from Monte Viso to the Adamello group, the great plain of Lombardy and its cities, Milan with its Duomo, the courses of the Po and Ticino. A path from the hotel leads in 5 hrs. to Argegno on the Lake of Como (Rte. 43).

The Rly. continues to 141 m. Mendrisio (1190 ft.), with manufactories of paper, silk, and hats, and 2300 inhab. The wine of the country is stored in mountain caves, which form capital cellars. 2 m. S.W. are the sulphureous Baths of Stabbio.

The Italian frontier and customhouse is reached at 146 m. Chiasso (765 ft.), Buffet, where carriages are changed. A long tunnel under Monte Olimpino leads to

152 m. Camerlata Junct. is a short tunnel. Here the Rly. to Lecco diverges on the left (Rte. 38).

157 m. Cantù. The bell-tower was formerly used as a beacon, corresponding with that upon the Baradello. The fires blazing on the summit have often announced the advance of the Milanese against the Comaschi during their frequent wars; and the Baradello, equally by its fires, gave notice of the approach of any enemy on the side of the lake.

Galliano, ½ m. E. of Cantù, has a curious Lombard Church, now a barn, with Christian inscriptions of the 4th cent. Some ancient frescoes, executed in the 11th, were painted by order of Arimbert, Archbishop of Milan. They contain portraits of the emperor Henry and his wife Cunegunda. The Baptistery is remarkable.

161 m. Camnago Junct., whence a short line runs S. to Seveso San Pietro. In the Church of Camnago is the tomb of Volta. Further on we cross the Rly. from Seveso to Erba (Rte. 37).

[2 m. rt. lies Barlassina, with a suppressed Convent of Dominicans, now an Ecclesiastical Seminary. It marks the site of the wood where Peter Martyr was slain by two hired assassins in 1252. About 2 m. farther on the road to Milan is the extensive romeo family.]

165 m Seregno Junet, (7700). Rly. E. to Bergamo (Rte. 52); W. to Saronno (Rte. 21). 2 m. l. is the village of Carate, on rising ground above the Lambro.

167 m. Desio. Here the Torriani were entirely routed by the Visconti in 1277. The Villa Tracersa, with a fine garden, contains some Roman inscriptions. A tunnel leads to 171 m Monza Junct., for which, and for the remainder of the Rly. journey to 179 m. Milan, see Rte. 51.

Near this place Frederic Barbarossa was utterly defeated by the Milanese in 1176, a defeat followed 7 years later by the Peace of Constance, which terminated, according to Sismondi, " in the establishment of a legal liberty, the first and most noble struggle which the nations of modern Europe have ever maintained against despotism." On leaving Gallarate (Rte. 33), the Rly, runs a little N, of W to

5 m. Somma Lombardo. The town is situated 500 ft. above Lago Maggiore, at the top of a ridge parallel to the course of the Ticino, consisting of sand and gravel, with huge boulders. In many parts it forms a waste, covered with heath, and known as the Brughiera of Somma and Gallarate. Efforts have been made at different times to bring it into cultivation, but to little purpose. There is a mediæval Castle bearing the arms of the Visconti at Somma; but the object most interesting is an enormous cypress-tree, said to date from the time of Julius Cæsar. It is an angle formed by the bend of the carriage-road, which Napoleon is said to have caused to be diverted from its straight course in order to prevent the destruction of the tree. In this neighbourhood took place the battle between Scipio and Hannibal (B.C. 218), wherein the latter was victorious. A military camp has been established close by, where large bodies of troops are exercised during the summer months.

The Rly. now crosses the Strona, and runs nearly N. across a moorland

8 m. Vergiate, which lies on the rt. Here the line turns due W., passes through a tunnel, and proceeds to 11 m. Sesto Calende Junct., on the Rly. between Novara and Luino (Rte. 14). The Ticino is now crossed by a fine *Bridge (1882), with iron lattice girders resting on stone piers and abutments. Each of the three spans measures 80 to 100 yds., and below the Rly. runs the carriage-road.

The shore of the lake is now followed at some little distance to 16 m. Arona (740 ft.), an ancient town (3750), and the principal port at the S. end of Lago Maggiore. The Church of Santa Maria contains a fine oil-painting on wood by *Gaudenzio Ferrari (1511)—a Holy Family, with SS. Catharine, John Evan., a bishop, and Peter Martyr, who introduces Countess Borromeo, the donor; God the Father with Angels and four Saints in the lunette. It is signed Vinci, N. Italy.

the name of the painter's mother. This Church is the burying-place of the Borromeo family, though San Carlo and the celebrated Card. Federigo both rest in the Cathedral at Milan. San Carlo was born in 1538 in the old family Castle above the town, which the French destroyed in 1797. He died in 1584, and was canonized by Paul V. in 1610.

canonized by Paul V. in 1610. On a hill, $\frac{1}{2}$ hr. N. of the Stat., stands the Colossal Statue of San Carlo Borromeo, 70 ft. high, on a pedestal of 40 ft. The head, hands, and feet alone are cast in bronze; the rest of the figure is formed of sheets of beaten copper, arranged round a pillar of rough masonry which forms the support of it. The saint is represented in Cardinal's robes, extending his hand towards the lake, and bestowing his benediction. There is grace in the attitude, in spite of the gigantic proportions of the figure, and altogether the effect is good and impressive. It was erected in 1697, principally by subscriptions from the Borromean family. It is possible to enter the statue and to mount up into the head, but the ascent is tiresome, and the heat oppressive. Between the folds of the upper and lower drapery the adventurous climber squeezes himself through, and then clambers up the stone pillar placing his feet upon iron bars or cramps, till he reaches the head, which is capable of holding three persons. Here he may sit down in the recess of the nose, which serves as an arm-chair. In the neighbouring Church several relics of San Carlo are preserved.

From la Rocca, on a hill above Arona, there is a fine view. The geologist will find near the quarries of limestone (Dolomite) an interesting contact of the magnesian limestone and red porphyry.

This Rly is managed by the Nord Milano Co., whose carriages are arranged on the American system, with a central passage, and afford very little room. The country traversed is extremely beautiful.

Laveno, the principal town on the E. side of Lago Maggiore, on the Rly. from Bellinzona to Novara and Genoa (Rte. 14,, is prettily situated at the foot of a lofty well-wooded mountain on the shores of a small, well-protected bay. Its manufactories of porcelain are worth visiting. The Austrians fortified it by the erection of two strong redoubts, now abandoned, and visible to the rt. and I of the port. Laveno is supposed to occupy the site of the Roman station of Labrenum. Leaving the town, the Bly, skirts the base of the Basso di Ferro (3490 ft. .. which forms so fine an object in the landscape from Lago Maggiore.

8 m. Gavirate, a large village on rising ground near the W. extremity of the Lake of Varese, over which the view is very beautiful. A great deal of silk is produced hereabouts, and in the neighbourhood are quarries of the variety of marble caned marmo majolica by the Milanese, extensively used for ornamental purposes: it is a variety of compact limestone of the age of our lower English chalk-beds. A pathway leads S.E. to (1 m) Voltorre, an old monastery, with interesting cloisters, having brick arches, tall shafts of uneven lengths, and curiously carved capitals. I m. N.E. is the Stat, of 10 m. Barasso. The Rly. now ascends, commanding a magnificent prospect over the lakes of Comabbio, Monate, and Varese On the descent to Varese the Madonna del Monte (see below) is passed at some distance to the I.

15 m. Varese Junet. (14,000), Rly, S. to Gallarate (Rte. 33), The principal Church contains frescoes, and a Magdalene, by Morazzone The adjoining Baptistery, original octagonal, is in the Lombard style. Close to it is an elegant Campanile (246 ft.), whose walls retain marks of the Austrian bombardment in May 1859. In the Palazzo Quaglia, Via Dandolo, is a Collection of remains found among the Lake dwellings of Lago Varese and the neighbouring peatbeds. Opposite the Alb. Italia is the Palace of Francesco III. Duke of Modena, now the Municipio, with s small Cabinet of Natural History. Adjacent are pleasant Public Gardens, commanding a fine view of the Monte Rosa range. Round Varese (1300 ft.) are numerous villas of the wealthy Milanese, who reside here during the autumn. The Races in October are much frequerted. Here are several factories for the winding of silk from the cocoons.

8 m. N.W. is the *Madonna del | Monte (2890 ft.), founded in 397 by St. Ambrose, to commemorate a great victory—not in argument, but in arms —gained by him on this spot over the Arians. The slaughter is said to have been so great that the heterodox party were exterminated. It was dedicated to the Virgin, and her statue, which was consecrated by St. Ambrose, is still preserved. Agaggiari, a Capuchin, built out of funds raised by his exertions the 14 chapels which lead to the summit. The entrance to the Sanctuary road is through a species of triumphal arch, the first of three which separate the series of chapels.

The 14 chapels represent the mysteries of the Rosary: the first five the mysteries of joy, the second five those of grief, the remainder of glory. They contain coloured statues in stucco, like those at Varallo and Orta (Rtes. 20 and 45), and frescoes, by Morazzone, Bianchi, Nuvolone, Legnani, and others of the 16th cent. Over the fountain near the last chapel is a fine colossal statue of Moses, by Gaetano Monti. The ascent to the Santuario affords magnificent views of the rich plain of Lombardy as far as the Apennines, of the higher and lower chains of the Alps, and the lakes of Varese, Comabbio, Biandrone, Monate, Maggiore, and Como. 1 hr. N.W. is the summit of the Tre Croci (3965 ft.), commanding a still fluer view.

On leaving Varese the Rly. passes through the suburb of Biumo, which contains several handsome villas of the Milanese aristocracy, and descends by a mass of compact alluvial conglomerate, crossing the Olona by a long and lofty viaduct, to of the escarpment which bounds the valley towards the E., thence to 19 m. Vedano. 1 m. S.S.W. is the village of Castiglione di Olona, interesting for its mediæval remains, but chiefly for its *frescoes by Masolino da Panicale (1426-37); they were executed for Cardinal Branda Castiglione, and represent incidents in the life of the Virgin and St. Stephen in the Church, and the history of St. John Bapt., in the small square-vaulted Baptistery. In one of the paintings is the portrait of the Cardinal, and the painter's name—Masolinus de Florentia, pinxit. The two principal subjects in the latter are Salome preferring her request to Herod, and Herodias receiving from her daughter the head of the Baptist. The Baptism of Christ, and the Evangelists, are finely painted. In the Church is the monument of the Cardinal, by Leonardo Griffo (1443). 1½ m. E. lies the Stat. of 20 m. Venegono Castiglione. Hence the line runs S. to

COMO (705 ft.) was anciently a town of considerable importance. A Greek colony having been settled in this district by Pompeius Strabo and Cornelius Scipio, and subsequently by J. Cresar, Comum was made the chief seat of this colony, from which time it rose to prosperity under the name of Comum Novum. It appears from the letters of the younger Pliny, who was born at Comum, that his native city was, in his time, in a flourishing state, and in the enjoyment of all the privileges which belonged to a Roman There are traces of municipium. this Greek colony in the names of Nesso, Pigra, Lenno, Dorio, and other places on the lake. Como does not figure in history after the fall of the Empire till the year 1107, about which time it became an independent city, and engaged in wars with Milan, which ended in its total destruction in 1127. It was rebuilt by Frederic Barbarossa in 1155, and 4 years afterwards was fortified. It remained a republic for two centuries, until it fell under the dominion of the Visconti. Since that time Como has followed the fortunes of M.lan.

Como (26,000) is now a place of Gothie letters. Many of these reliefs considerable trade and industry, having are types: e.g. a fountain, a vine, is manufactures of silks, woollens, cothie larger reliefs, the Adoration of its port on the lake chiefly with the Magi in the arch of the door Switzerland. It exports rice, corn, should be noticed; but the most remaind other agricultural produce for markable ornaments of this front are the mountain districts, and large the statues of the two Plunys, flanking quantities of raw silk in transit, the doorway, erected by the Committee.

through Switzerland, for Germany and England, by the Splügen and St Gotthard.

Since 1850, Como has stolen from the lake its old shallow harbour, turned it into an open Piazza, and thrown out commodious piers to form a new port, in which several steamers can lie at one time. A handsome street lined with colonnades leads from this to the Duomo and Broletto, and other objects of interest.

The *Cathedral is a fine building, the beauty of the architecture being heightened by the richness and solidity of the marble used in its construction. A long series of architects, of whom Lorenzo de' Spazi was the first, from 1396 to the last cent. have been engaged upon it, and hence much variety in the style of its different parts. The W front was begun by Lucchino da Milano, in 1460, and completed between 1487 and 1526, by Tommaso Rodari, of Maroggis. This architect was also an excellent sculptor. Many of the statues were executed by him. The front is Gothic, with the exception of "the three entrance-doors, which are roundheaded and of the richest Lomburd style: it is divided by slips, or pilasters, with statues all the way up, enclosing a magnificent wheel-window, and studded with rich tribunes and canopies, elegant trefoil corbels or culate round the cornice and pinnscles, the centre of which chiefly presents a circular temple of small columns on brackets, rising from tall pedestal and supporting a diadem of lesser pinnacles, and is unique"-Hope. The lower portions are covered with curious emblems, some masonic, some religious, interspersed with texts and inscriptions in beautiful Gothic letters. Many of these reliefs arc types: e g. a fountain, a vine, 1 Lly, a church upon a hill Amongst the larger reliefs, the Adoration of the Magi in the arch of the door should be noticed; but the most remarkable ornaments of this front are in the 16th cent. to their "fellow-citizens." They are placed under ornamental Renzissance canopies by Rodario. The younger Pliny, who was born here, was much attached to Como, and he resigned a considerable legacy in its favour, founded a school, built a temple, and fully deserves commemoration as a benefactor.

The other sides of the exterior are | lions, support the basins for holy between them surmounted by elegant pinnacles. The cupola, built about 1732 by Juvara, is in the complicated and overloaded style of the French architecture of the time.

The nave and aisles are Italian Gothic, with finely-groined vaults; the transepts and choir are Renaissance. Two animals, intended for lions, support the basins for holy in the style of the Renaissance. The lateral doorways, particularly that on the *N. side, with angels and fanciful columns, are elegant. Both were executed by Rodari in 1509. The arabesques are interspersed with birds, animals, serpents, and children. The windows are splendidly ornamented with arabesques and portraits, in relief, of illustrious men, in the best singuscento style, and the buttresses water. These, without doubt, are remains of the porch of the original cathedral, and supported its columns. The choir is circular, with five windows in two tiers, each separated by Corinthian pilasters; around are placed statues of the patron saints of Como.

Objects of interest on the S. side:— Six figures in two rows, with a predella of Six Saints, by Tommo

Rodari (1482). -- Statue of Card. | Tolomeo Gallio (1861).—Six Passion reliefs in white marble (14th cent.), flanked by paintings of SS. Christo-pher and Sebastian, copied from Luini. Fine Renaissance doorway (see above) - Recumbent effigy of Bp. Rodigadinus (1350), *Flight into Egypt, by Gaudenzio Ferrari. *Altar of S. Abbendie, third Bishop of Come, in gilt and coloured wood; his statue in the centre; his miracles in compartments around,- Adoration of the Magi, by Luini, with a giraffe, and other animals. - * Virgin and Child, with four Saints, by Luini.

N. Side White marble relief of the Virgin and Child with two Saints, by Rodari, between two modern busts of Bp. Rovelli and Innocent XI.-Beautifully sculptured doorway .-Sarcophagus of Benedetto Giovio (1544), the historian of Como, brother of the more celebrated Paolo Giovio. He was one of the first exact archæologists who appeared during the revival of letters.-*Marriage of the Virgin, by Gaud Ferrari.-A modern altar-piece, by Marchesi-St. Joseph and our Lord as a Child; one of his best works.-*Nativity, by Laini.Entombment, School of Rodari; between busts of Pius IX, and Zanino Cigalino (1562).

In the N. Sacristy, a Holy Family (glazed); School of Luini. Good Statues in the transepts of SS. Sebastian, Agnes, and others (1525). Apostles in the Choir, by Pompeo

There are two organs: one built in 1596, the other in 1650, by Father

Hermann, a German Jesuit.

The circular Baptistery, on the 1 of the entrance, is attributed to Bramante; it has eight Corinthian columns of Brecoia marble, with the fort in the centre, on which are reliefs of the life of the Baptist.

The Bishop of Como has an extensive diocese, extending over a portion of Italian Switzerland. The Duomo was wholly built by voluntary contributions, the Comaschi taking great pride in this chief ornament of their town and diocese; and the man- | smaller and the arches lower than of ner in which the edifice was begun by the people is recorded in the inscriptions upon it.

By the side of the Duomo stands the Broletto, or Town-hall (1215), built in alternate courses of black and white marble, with a few red patches. It is interesting as a memorial of the ancient days of the independence of the Italian republies, when such a building existed in every Lombard city lower storey is a Loggia upon pointed arches. Above is a floor with large windows, where the chiefs of the municipality assembled; and from the middle window projects the Ringhiera, from which they harangued the crowd of citizens convened in parliament below; for, in the constitutional language of ancient Italy, the parlamento was the primary assembly of the democracy, from whence the powers of government originated, and to which the ultimate appeal was to be made.

The *Church of San Fedele, formerly the Cathedral, is considered to be of the era of the Lombard kings, and the back part of the exterior is nearly unaltered. It has a polygonal apse with external gallery, and a straight-sided doorway at the N E. corner, currously carved with a conflict between a dragon and a serpent. The interior has been modernised, and contains nothing but a few old columns, and two Holy Water basins supported by monsters. There is a 15th-cent. fresco of the Virgin, SS. Roch and Sebastian in the 1st chapel, rt.

S. Abbondio. This fine Church, originally named after S. Carpofore, first Bishop of Como, has a round apse and square tower. It was dedicated, after the death of St. Abondous, third Bisliop, in 469, to that holy prelate, buried within its precincts, and was the cathedral of the old city. "It presents single round-headed windows, with small pillars and arches, again enclosed in broad flat borders of the richest arabesque and basket-work. Though small, it has double nisles, and the pillars of the outermost range are the innermost."—Hope. "It is a small but graceful creation of the 11th cent. Few who have ever seen it will forget the singular and picturesque effect of the exterior, by the contrast between the slender columns of the aisles and the massive pillars of the nave, or the exquisite arabesque work lavished on arch and buttress without."—Saturday Review. The pillars of the nave are in small courses of stone; those of the aisles in granite. In the apse are The Church contains the frescoes. tombs of several bishops of Como, and now serves as the Chapel of the Ecclesiastical Seminary.

The Liceo Plinio, built in 1811, has a front adorned with busts of the great men whom Como has produced. It contains reading-rooms, a bust of the singer Madame Pasta, a collection of natural history, a laboratory, and a Library.

The Piazza Volta is so called from the statue of that inventor by Marchesi, which stands in the centre of it, opposite the house in which he lived (1745-1819). Volta was intended for the law; but his first work, published in 1769, and which treated upon electricity, sufficiently announced the direction which his mind had permanently received.

Palazzo Giovio, still belonging to that family, contains a number of Roman inscriptions and other antiquities—a collection begun by Paolo Giovio. Later times have added several interesting relics from suppressed churches and convents. The library contains several of the unedited works and papers of Paolo Giovio and of Benedetto the historian.

The Gates of the city are good specimens of the military architecture of the middle ages, and add much to its picturesque appearance. Beside them stand the massive towers of Vittoria, S. Vitale, and S. Pietro. The country abounds with pleasant walks and hand-some villas. The Raimondi or Odescal-ti, Visconti, and Rezzonico are amongst the most splendid; and farther on, the Villa d'Este. Near it is the Gallia, supposed to be upon the site of one of Pliny's villas.

The inhabitants of Como and its vicinity have been celebrated as workers in stone ever since the days of the Lombards. In the laws of Rothar, one of the earliest of the Lombard kings, mention is made of the "Magistri Comacini," who travelled the country as masons, which they continue to do at the present day.

A drive through the district of La Brianza (Rte. 37) makes a very interesting and pleasant excursion from Como, about 8 hrs. there and back. 2-horse carriage, 25 fr., with 3 fr. to the driver. The cross-country roads are excellent, and after Montorfano, reached in 1 hr., the country opens. Orsenigo is passed on the 1., and Alzati, reached in less than $\frac{1}{2}$ hr., with Villa Turati, called Il Soldo. In front rise Monte Grigna, Monte Campione, the Corno di Canzo and Resegone di Lecco. 10 min. further is Anzano; thence through Lurago to Inverigo is $1\frac{1}{2}$ hr., where there is a good Inn. Back by Anzano (fine view of Monte Rosa), Villa Adelaide, or Tasséra, having fine gardens and commanding views over Lakes Alserio and Pusiano. Then N. by Paravicino to Erba, whence Como, 8 m. W., is reached by another road.

A good carriage-road, overlooking the lake, leads to (5 m.) Torno, from which the Villa Pliniana (Rte. 43) may be reached by footpath or rowing-boat in ½ hr. From the Porta Vittoria a road strikes E. to (1 hr.) Brunate (2405 ft.), commanding an extensive view. 1 hr. W. of Como is San Fermo, where Garibaldi beat the Austrians on May 27, 1859. Fine view, and pleasant descent to Chiasso.

The Nord Milano Rly. Stat. is close to the lake. The train skirts the town, and ascends to 3 m. Camerlata, above which, on the E. shore, upon a sandstone rock, stands the lofty tower of Baradello. This building, whose castellated walls run down the abrupt sides of the steep, is probably of the age of Barbarossa. It is interesting as the monument that witnessed the fall of the first of the dynastics which successively tyrannised over Milan. This city, one of the first which asserted its independence, was the first amongst the Italian republics to lose it. Her freedom dates from the peace of Constance in 1183; her thrakkom from 1246, when Pagano della Torre, the chief of that once powerful family, was mangurated as the protector of the republic. In the hands of the Torriani the power continued until the accession of Napole ne della Torre, who, created Anziano Perpetuo by the people, and Vicar of the Empire by Rodolph of Hapsburg, governed with absolute authority. The nobles whom he had exiled, guided by Ottone Visconti, were in possession of the city of Como, and on the 21st of Jan. 1277, Napoleone and his troops fell into the power of their enemy. The victors spared the lives of Napoleone and of all the members of his family whom they captured; but the prisoners were put into separate from cages in the Baradello. What ultimately became of the others is not known; but Napoleone, after lingering several years, devoured by vermin, and suffering the most extreme misery, probably maddened by it, ended his captivity by dashing his head against the bars of his prison. Upon the fall of the Torriani arose the power of the Visconti Under the hill near the Castle is a Church with a round apse of five lancets and a square tower.

The view N. to the mountains is very fine.

A mile distant is the Certosa of Garignano, founded in 1349 by Archbp. Oddone Visconti, Lord of Milan. The Church contains frescoes by Crespi of the life of St. Bruno, much injured by damp] Beyond

6 m. Cormanno the Rly. crosses the Seveso, which bounds the fertile dis trict of the Brianza on the W. Soon after passing

It was built in 1813. Beyond

26 m. Merone, where the line is crossed from Como to Lecco (Rte. 38), the Rly. passes two little lakes—on the l. the Lago d'Alserio, on the rt. the Lago di Pusiano. A gradual descent brings us to 28 m. Erba (1020 ft.), one of the largest towns of the district, which gives its name to the Pian d'Erba, renowned as the most fertile in the hilly region of Lombardy. There are several handsome villas here, especially the Villa Amalia ($\frac{1}{2}$ m. N.W.), celebrated by Parini, from the grounds of which the view over the Brianza is incomparable.

Interesting excursions, especially to the geologist, may be made to the (3 m.) Buco del Piombo, a cavern excavated in colitic limestone; and to the Pian di S. Primo, celebrated for its huge erratic blocks (Rte. 43).

Agno, a village of 600 inhab., at the mouth of the Agno.

One of the prettiest scenes is that presented by the village and small lake of Muzzano, which lies l. of the

The Steamer then steers N., touching at Morcote and Melide, between which on the rt. rises Monte S. Giorgio (3590 ft.), separating the two Southern arms of the lake. At Melide we pass under the causeway which carries the St. Gotthard railroad. On the l. opposite Campione, rises Monte Salvatore (see below). In 1½ hr. from Ponte Tresa (Exp. 1 hr.) we reach LUGANO (930 ft.), the largest and most thriving town of the canton Tessin (It. Ticino) with 7200 inhab., charmingly situated on the margin of the lake. It is a regular Italian town, with arcaded streets stretching up the steep hill-side to the Rly. Stat., which reached by funicular tramway. The hills and mountains abound in all the productions of the luxuriant vegetation of Italy; and numerous villas are scattered along their slopes, embowered among vineyards and gardens, but, in penetrating its E. bay to Porlezza, the mountains assume a wild and precipitous outline, and the darker tints of the rock and oak furnish the predominating copse colour.

The Church of San Lorenzo, on an eminence near the Rly. Stat., commands a fine view. The fabric is ancient, and traces of the original building are to be seen. The Renaissance front, richly adorned with sculpture, is attributed to Tommaso Rodari.

Close to the H. du Parc is the Church of S. M. degli Angeli, founded in 1499, containing remarkable paintings in fresco by *Bernardino Luini; particularly a Crucifixion of large size covering the wall which divides the choir from the nave. It is one of the finest works of the Lombard school. Below are striking figures of S. Sebastian and S. Roch, and above, on a smaller scale, are various Passion The Virgin and Children, in fresco, in a Chapel on the rt., is a work of great beauty and refinement. On the l. wall is the Last Supper, in three compartments. These paintings were almost the last works of Luini, who died in 1530.

The Palazzo Civico, opposite the steamboat pier, has a fine court with arcades.

The Giardino Gabrini, on the margin of the lake, contains an overpraised statue of a mourning woman, La Desolazione, by Vincenzo Vela, who modelled the Statue of William Tell on the Fountain before the H. du Parc. The Belvedere of the Villa Enderlin, on the summit of the hill, commands a beautiful view. 1 m. S. is the pleasant suburb of Paradiso, and 1 m. farther the Capo San Martino.

There are considerable factories for throwing silk grown in canton Tessin; and Lugano further derives activity and prosperity from being the entrepôt of goods shipped across the lake from Italy, to be transported over the Alps, and vice versâ. A large fair is held here on the 9th of October.

Monte Caprino, the mountain opposite Lugano, is penetrated by grottoes, which have been converted into cellars, called Cantine. Numerous small houses for the sale of the wine are built over them, which at a distance have the appearance of a village.

2. A drive round Monte Salvatore (2-horse carriage, 11 fr), takes about 3 hrs. The road passes by Pambio, where, in front of the Church is a statue by Vela in memory of poung rifle-volunteer, Francesco Carloni, who fell at Somma Campagna, July 24, 1848. On the hill to the rt. is the village of Gentilino and monastery of S. Abbondio. The road then leads down a rich valley to the Agno arm of the lake at Figuro, and skirts the shore to Morrote at the point of the promontory. The Church and appendant buildings form a striking group high above the town, and are reached by 300 steps, with a statue to their builder, a local benefactor, in L niche at the bottom. The Church has Lombardic remains and a stately carepanile, and the view from it of the windings of the lake is of uncommon beauty. Six houses of Morcote sank into the lake Sept. 10, 1862. Thence N.N.E. to Melide, which is 4 m. S. of Lugano.

3. Another charming drive is under the N. and W slopes of S. Salvatore by Carabbia and Ciona to (4 m.) Carona. The views are of singular richness and beauty, especially when the Monte Rosa range is visible. In S.W. of Carona, through park-like scenery and chestnut woods, is the Church of Madonna dell' Ongaro, commanding a glorious view 2 hr. further is Torello, a suppressed monasters with Romanesque church Figino and the high-road lie on the lake, 4 hr. W.

Thence to (6 m) Lugano.

4 Monte Brè and Monte Boglia.
1 m E. of Lugano, on the shore, is Castagnola, with conspicuous white tower, and above it Monte Brè (3050 ft.), easily ascended from that point in 2 hrs. The pathway passes the village of Brè. The descent can be made N. by Pazzolino, or the excursion can be prolonged to (2 hrs.) Monte Boglia (5000 ft.). A path leads thence to Oria, on the lake, where the steamer may be taken.

5 By boat to Gandria, a little beyond Castagnola, walking back in an hour by the cliff-path. The castus, Aloe (Agave Americana), Sweet-scented Bay, and other plants of a warm climate, give the vegetation at thoroughly southern character. The Pteris Cretica is found growing in the crevices of the vocks.

6. Beyond Gandria uz Orio (

above). Thence walk, or take a boat to (½ hr.) S. Mamette, and walk up the ravine to (½ hr.) Drano, where there is a fine waterfall, and to (½ hr.) Puria; descend and cross the ravine to (½ hr.) Castello, perched on a summit, and return to (½ hr.) Oria. From Castello, Monte Boglia may be ascended in 3 hrs.

7. On the S. shore of the lake is Osteno, '50 min. by steamer from Lugano. Here a singular ravine or Orrido (the local word for a gorge), accessible only by boat, well deserves a visit. Through the ravine is reached the *Grotto (ticket 75 c., to be had on board the steamer). 20 min. E. (by boat) are the Tufa Caverns of Rescia. Argegno, on the Lake of Como, may be reached in 5 hrs. by S. Fedele and Castiglione, through the Val d'Intelvi, a summer resort. 6 m. S.W. of Osteno is the village of Lanzo d'Intelvi (3115 ft.), and 1 hr. higher up, the *Hotel Belvedere.

8. Carriage-road N. up the valley of the Cassarate to (9 m.) Sala; thence on foot in 20 min. to the interesting Capuchin convent of Bigorio (2300 ft.), which commands fine views. Return on foot along the heights by the chapel of S. Bernardo (2300 ft.), and the villages of Comano and Porza; or by carriage above the Lake of Origlio, and through Cureglia, Vezia, and Massagno; or by train from Taverne Stat., 1 hr. W. of Bigorio (Rte. 32).

Carriage-road N. through the Val Colla to (12 m.) Scareglia (3205 ft.), at the foot of Monte Camoghè (7300 ft.), which may be ascended in 4½ hrs. Descent N. in 5 hrs. to Bellinzona.

STEAMER in 1½ hr. to Porlezza, which is within the Italian frontier. Train thence in 1 hr. to Menaggio on the Lake of Como. Carriages may also be obtained at Porlezza for 10 or 12 fr. The road (6 m.) is good but steep, especially on the Como side. At Porlezza is the Custom House Stat. The entire distance is well worth walking, the descent by the old mulepath upon Menaggio being particularly fine.

The train at first intersects a broad valley, and then ascends, passing on the rt. the Lago di Piano, to Grandola (1260 ft.), on the highest point of the line. Thence a bold descent in curves, the line being admirably engineered, affording fine views over the Lake, to 6 m. Menaggio (700 ft.), see Rte. 43.

2-horse carriage to Thusis, 30 fr.; to Splügen, 65; to Chiavenna, 135.

Dil. twice daily in summer from Coire to (13 hrs.) Chiavenna, reaching Splügen in 8 hrs. Carriage in 7 hrs. from Coire to Splügen, about 4½ hrs. from Splügen to Coire. Through tickets are issued to Milan and other towns in N. Italy.

Coire (1935 ft.) and the road as far as (34 m.) Splügen (4760 ft.) are described in the Handbook for Switzerland.

This village (It. Spluga, Rom. Speleuga), chief place of the Rheinwald. is situated at the point of departure of the two Alpine passes of the Splügen and Bernardino. It suffered severely from the flood of 1834, which swept away more than a dozen houses. The covered bridge over the Rhine has since been replaced by an iron girder bridge.

Splügen anciently belonged to the lords of Sax, on the S. slope of the Bernardino, but it afterwards joined the Grey League.

Above the village, in the bed of the stream from the Löchliberg, is an ancient hermitage, and in the church-yard are curious monuments to the Roman road.

Lächliberg Pass, down the Savien Thal to Corre; Valserberg Pass, down

St. Peters Thal to Ilánz.

The *Pass of the Splügen is very ancient, having been known to the Romans, but until modern improvements it was one of the most difficult and dangerous of the frequented passes. The road was constructed by the Austrian Government in 1819-1823, to compete with the newer Swiss road over the Bernardino. The engineer was Cav. Donegani.

The Splügen road crosses the Rhine, and ascending some zigzags enters through a short tunnel (25 min.) the valley of the Oberhausen-bach, a small torrent which joins the Rhine at Splügen. This it follows by a gentle ascent, and an entirely new line, the old one having been demolished by the tempest of 1834, when road and bridges were carried away, and piles of broken rocks spread over the valley. In 50 min. from the tunnel we low windows like the embraaures of and low windows like the embraaures of a low windows like the low windo reach the main series of zigzags leading up the final steep. A Refuge stands near the top, and at one point the peak of the Tambohorn is seen it. 25 min, above the zigzags is a covered Gallery, 93 yds, long, and beyond it (10 min) the 41 m. Summit of the Pass (6945 ft.), between the Tambohorn and Suretta-horn. Along this narrow ridge ross the boundary line of Switzerland and Italy Immediately after surmounting it the road begins to descend, passing the first cantomera, or house of refuge; lower down, a series of tourniquets leads to the 42 m. Italian Custom - house—a melancholy group of buildings in a desolate and barren spot, where luggage is searched. N.E. rises the Eurettahorn. Further on, at a point where the road crosses the stream, the old bridle path descended on the rt. direct to Isola, through the defile of the Cardinello, a very perilous valley, from its constant exposure to avalanches.

The French army of Marshal Macdonald, who crossed the Splugen between the 27th Nov and 4th Dec., 1800, long before the new road was begun, in the face of snow and storm, lost nearly 100 men, and as many horses, chiefly in the passage of the Cardinello. His columns were literally cut through by the falling avalanches, and man and beast swept away to destruction. The carriage - road avoids this gorge altogether, proceed ing at a high level along the mountainside From the Cantonièra della Stuetta (35 min) there is a grand view to the rt. the finest on the pass -of the great glacter of Curciusa, and the peaks Pizzo Terre (10,165 ft), Cima di Balnisio, and others. Three Galleries are now passed-of 245, 220, and 565 yds respectively—the longest on any Alpine road They are constructed of the most solid masonry, arched, with roofs sloping outwards, to turn aside the avalanches of snow. battery. From the entrance of the second gallery there is a most striking view down upon the roofs of Isola, and the long line of zigzags, which led to that village, abandoned since 1838. At 48 m. Pianazzo (4750 ft.) this old road is left for the new one, which is shorter by 3 m., and was rendered necessary by the injury done by the storm of 1834, and also by the danger to which the route between Isola and the cascade of the Madesimo was exposed from avalanches, which fall regularly into the glen of the Liro, below Pianazzo.

The road now crosses the little stream of the Madesimo, within a few yards of the verge of the precipice, over which it throws itself in a beautiful *Waterfall (650 ft.). The view, looking down from a little terrace, is very fine. [From near the bridge, a track ascends the stream to the Passo di Madesimo, leading N.N.E. in 4 hrs. to Canicul in the Averser Thal.] 30 min. from the Cascade, reached by a good road, is a Hydropathic Establishment and Pension, much frequented The road now passes in the summer. through a tunnel of 120 yds., and then descends by numerous zigzags down the face of the precipitous mountainside—a most extraordinary piece of engineering.

51 m. Campo Dolcino (3455 ft.), in spite of its sweet-sounding Italian name, is but a poor village, on a small grassy plain at the junction of the Rabbiosa torrent with the Liro.

The road now threads the gorge of San Giacomo; an inscription com-memorates its completion by Carlo Donegani, in the reign of the Em-The vale of the peror Francis II. Liro is strewn with fallen rocks, composed of a species of white gneiss, exceedingly brittle, which, after exposure to the weather, assumes a red colour. It must have been a difficult task to carry a road through such a wilderness; and it is accordingly in many places narrow, the turnings sharp, and the terraces too short. The | theuce \frac{1}{2} hr. to the Fall.

desolation of the scene is relieved by forests of chestnut-trees. The tall white campanile of the Madonna di Gallivaggio, with these woods and precipices, forms an agreeable picture. Near it, at the village San Giacomo, the Liro is spanned by a bold bridge.

A mile or two farther, the valley opens, and Chiavenna appears in view, a picturesque town, under an Italian 59 m. Chiavenna (Germ. Clefen, Clavena of the ancients), with 4200 inhab., is charmingly situated (1090 ft.) below steep wooded mountains of singular beauty, at the junction of the valley of S. Giacomo with that of the Mera, which flows from Val Bregaglia. It is celebrated for its beer, the best in N. Italy, and maintains several spinning mills for silk and cotton. An ingenious manufacturer named Vanossi at one time wove here a fire-proof cloth of asbestos,—a mineral which abounds in the neighbouring moun-Opposite the Conradi inp, at the foot of a curiously coloured rock, is a large ruined Palazzo begun by the Grisons family of De Salis, but never completed: fine view from the Paradiso (50 c.). The Church of S. Lorenzo has a tall campanile standing within a square enclosure, surrounded by a cloister. On one side are two bonehouses, filled with skulls arranged in patterns, and, adjoining them, in the octagonal Baptistery, an ancient stone font, with rude reliefs. The citizens keep their Valteline wine in grottoes, which form excellent cool cellars, and are called Ventorali.

Chiavenna belonged to the Dukes of Milan down to the 16th century, when the Swiss became possessed of it, and it formed, with the Valteline and Bormio, a state subject to the Napoleon added it to Italy, Grisons. as lying on the S. side of the Alps; and the Congress of Vienna, by the same rule, transferred it to Austria.

Near Gordona, 3 m. S.W. of Chiavenna, is a waterfall worth notice. Cross the river to the rt. at Prata, \(\) hr. from the town on the Colico road;

The road up the beautiful Val Bregaglia, and over the pass of the Maloja, into the Engadme, is described in the Handbook for Switzerland Visitors should drive a short way to get an idea of the valley, which, with its dark purple rocks and chestnut woods, is finer than that on the Splügen. About 3 m up the Valley, near Piuro, memorable for the fate of its inhabitants, who were buried by the fall of a mountain, is a peculiar manufacture of a coarse ware for culinary purposes, made out of potstone (Lapis ollaris). This stone is easily cut, or turied in a lathe, and endures heat. Pluy calls it Lapis Comensis, from its being exported from the Lake of Como. 1 hr further is the Swiss boundary at Castasegna, and # hr beyond is Promontogno, in a splendid situation A good road ascends in zigzags on the N. side of the valley from Promontogno to (1 hr.) crossed by wooden bridges, under which the water is turned by artificial canals, flanked by wedge-shaped dykes. After traversing this desolate space the road emerges upon the delta of the Adda, and crosses the river by a fine Bridge, partly on the foundations of that built by Azzo Visconti On a rock to the rt., once probably an island in the lake, stands the Spanish Fort Fuentes, built in 1603, as the key of the Valteline The Rly. from Sondrio (Rte 42) falls in on the land the margin of the lake of Como is reached at 17 m Colico (720 ft.), at the foot of Monte Legnone (8565 ft.). Though less unwholesome than formerly, owing to the drainage of a large portion of the marsh land, Coheo is not a good halting-place, and most persons push on by train or steamer. For the journey to Bellagio, &c., see Rte. 43

Most travellers, however, will prefer the train to Como (Rte. 32), and the Steamboat journey thence to Colico (Rte. 43). Dil from Sondrio to Borioso in 10 hrs., Bormio to Eyers over the summit, in 12 hrs., from June to Sept.

The great feature of this route is the Pass of the Stelvio (9175 ft.), the highbeing 2300 ft. above the Simplon, and 1000 ft. above the Great St. Bernard. It was constructed by the Austrian government, planned by the chief engineer, Donegani, and executed under the inspection of the engineer Domenici, by the contractor Talachini (1828), at an expense of nearly 3 millions of florins, or about 290,100l. Whether we consider the boldness of the design, the difficulties of its execution from the great height and exposure to storms and avalanches, or the grandeur of the scenery through which it passes, the Stelvio road is the most remarkable in Europe. The galleries cut through the solid rock, along the margin of the Lake of Como-those higher up built of massive masonry, to resist the fall of avalanches—the long causeways carried over the morasses of the Valteline—the bridges thrown across torrents—the long succession of zigzag terraces, winding with gradual slope to surmount one of the highest ridges in the Alps—these features, though common to all Alpine thoroughfares, are here seen on the most magnificent scale.

This road is sometimes impassable for wheel traffic during the winter months, but may always be crossed in sledges. Every spring, when the snow disappears, the ravages of the winter's storm and avalanche are disclosed to view—injuries to be repaired only at great expense.

The most interesting scenes on the route are the shores of the Lake, and its excavated galleries; the gorge of Spondalunga; the splendid view of the Ortler-Spitze, with its snowy glaciers, seen from the summit of the pass; and the glaciers on the Tyrolese side skirted, apparently within the distance of a stone's throw, by the carriage-road.

Milan is described in Rte. 51, together with the Rly. as far as 32 m. Lecco (8000), a rapidly increasing town, with manufactures of iron and cotton-twist.

Lecco (700 ft.) is chiefly remarkable for its beautiful situation (well de-N. Italy.

scribed in the 'Promessi Sposi'), near the outlet of the Adda from the Lago di Lecco, or E. branch of the Lake of Como. The town is surrounded by mountains of a very bold and striking outline. The serrated ridge on the E. is well-named Resegone (great saw), and is worth a visit. Mte. Campione (7160 ft.) and Mte. Grigna (7910 ft.), both to the N., are best reached from the N. side (see below). The market on Saturday is a busy scene, and in the Villegiatura season Lecco is much frequented by rich Milanese families from their villas in the neighbouring Brianza and Pian d'Erba. The branch of the Lake of Como at the extremity of which Lecco is situated, is much wilder than the W. arm. [A road leads N. between Resegone and Campione to the village of Ballabio, and thence descends to (12 m.) Introbbio, charming centre for excursions at the head of Val Sassina (see below).]

The excellent carriage-road onward which skirts the lake was formed partly by cutting a shelf out of the rock, partly by building up a terrace of masonry, and, in places where the rocks project very far into the lake, by boring galleries or tunnels through Three galleries, through which the road passes beyond the little village of Olcio, measure upwards of 1000 yds. The views over the lake are of enchanting beauty, especially towards the upper end. The clear sunny sky of Italy, the placid lake, the olive and odorous citron-groves, and the trellised vinebowers along its shore, contrast strikingly with the bleak region of bare rock and everlasting snow which the traveller encounters further on.

7 m. Mandello, at the mouth of the Neria, which flows from the N.E. down the slopes of Monte Grigna. Nearly opposite Bellagio, which is conspicuous on the l., about 5 m. further, the pretty cascade of the Fiume Latte descends from the rocks to the rt. of our road. It issues out of a cavern in the face of the precipice; and, though abundant in spring, is dry generally in autumn.

14 m. Varenna (Rte. 43), a pretty village at the mouth of the Vai d'Esino. ½ hr. above it stands the picturesque Castle of Perledo. 2 hrs. higher up S.E. 18 Esino, whence Monte Grigna (7910 ft.) may be ascended in 5 hrs. "Superb view. 2 hrs. below the summit is a Hut of the It. Alpine Club (6150 ft.). The descent may be made S W. to Mandello. This N. summit of Monte Grigna is officially called Moncodine; the S summit (7160 ft.) is known as Monte Campione.

About ½ m. N. of Varenna are more excavated galleries, nearly ½ m. long. At Regoledo, on a high terrace, is a good hydropathic establishment.

17 m. Bellano, a village at the mouth of the Proverna, which issues from a narrow ravine and forms the Cascade of the Orrido di Nesso (200 ft.). A rough road runs S.E up the Val Sassina to (10 m) Introbbio. This valley was the cradle of the Counts Thurn and Taxis, the first postmasters in Germany (1852)

The Rly, traverses on a raised causeway the flat alluvial tract formed by the deposit of the Adda in the course of ages, and still partly in the state of a morass—the whole evidently an encroachment on the lake: and, turning E from the Chiavenna line, enters the Valteline (Val Tellina; Germ. Veltha) or valley of the Adda. It passes on the 1 the rained hill-fort Fuentes, built by the Spaniards, while lords of the Milanese in 1603, to intimidate the Canton of the Grisons This fort was the headquarters of the Jesuits and missionaries sent forth to convert the Protestants of the Valteline; whose efforts, not confined to persuasion, led to the persecution, expatriation, and massacre of so many of its unfortunate inhabitants. The Roman Catholics of the valley, by whom this iniquity was perpetrated, June 20, 1620, though Swiss subjects, were protected by the Spaniards, and thus escaped punishment The Valteline was the scene of a mountain campaign between the French, under the Duc de Rohan, and who fought at Morbegno in 1635. From 1512 to 1797, with some interruption, the Valteline, with the territory of Bormio and Chiavenna, belonged to the Swiss republic of the Grisons; it was then added to the kingdom of Italy; and at the Congress of Vienna was united to Lombardy until 1859, when the revolution transferred it to Sardinia. It was always regarded as an important possession by Austria, affording direct communication between their hereditary states and Lombardy.

10 m Morbegno (4500), a well-built town. The snow mountains of the Bermina chain, especially Monte della Disgrazia, form a grand background to the view. Excellent silk is produced in the neighbourhood.

the finest) lead over into Val Bregaglia, and so to Chiavenna. On the road between Ardenno and Masino is a boulder of very remarkable dimensions, said to be the largest in Europe. It lies about halfway between Cattaeggio and S. Martino.

The frequently varying course of the Adda, due to inundations, deprives this part of the valley of much of its beauty. The successive openings S. lead to steep passes communicating with the valleys of Bergamo. The hill of Sassella, famous for its vineyards, rises on the l. before reaching 26 m. Sondrio (1140 ft.), a cheerfui town, the capital of the Vaiteline, and residence of a prefect (7000). It stands at the mouth of the picturesque Val Malenco, from which issues the Malero, a stream frequently very destructive to Sondrio, and guarded by massive embankments.

There is a fine view from the ancient castle of Masegra.

pedestrian. (See Rte. 71)

About 1 hr. before reaching the Aprica Pass, a road S. to Bergumo turns off rt., and enters the Valle Belviso, following it until nearly the end, the last part of the road being through a fine beech wood, with good views of Monte Venerocolo and Monte Gleno. Here the path mounts to the large Alpe di Pila, and then by the Passo Barbellino (8000 ft.), between Monte Torena and Gleno, commanding a fine but narrow view. down by the Lago di Barbellino with fine views, and to the Alp Barbellino, where the Valle Seriana cannot be followed on account of the river, but crossing another bill, the top of the Scala is reached, at the W. extremity of which the Serio rushes down, forming a fine cascade of some 800 ft. The road down the Scala is steep and difficult; thence to (11 hrs.) Bondione, where a carriage may be had for 8 frs. to (13 m.) Clusone. The road hence to Bergamo is very fine, and is traversed by steam Trainway as far as Ponte della Selva (Rte. 58).]

17 m. Madonna di Tirano, a small village, named from a Pilgrimage Church of the Virgin, containing much fine wood-carving, at the mouth of the valley of Poschiavo. A carriage-road leads up it to the foot of the pass of the Bernina, and into the Engadine, passing the beautiful lake of Poschiavo. At (6 m.) Le Prese, on its banks, are comfortable quarters in a delightful situation. The Swiss frontier is 1 m. from Madonna di Tirano. (See Handbook for Switzerland.)

18 m. Tirano (1505 ft.), a small town of 2700 inhab., containing deserted palaces of the Visconti, Pallavicini, Salis, and other noble families.

It has been devastated at various times by the number at the Adda, from which it is in perpetual danger of being swept away.

1. 20 m. Sernio. Near this place in 1807, a landslip, from Monte Massucceso, on the rt. bank of the Adda, fell into the bed of the river, so as completely to dam up the stream. The waters rose to a great height, overflowed the surrounding villages and fields, forming a lake many acres in extent, which lasted 11 days, and then burst, carrying desolation down the valley, and upon the unfortunate town of Tirano. The lake thus formed extended up the valley as far as Tovo. At Lovero the water stood 18 ft. deep, and injured the walls and foundations of the houses so much, that to this day many of them require to be supported. Near this, 11 spires may be counted at one time, so numerous are the villages and churches in this part of the valley.

23 m. Grossotto, a large village at the mouth of the Val Grosina. The plot of the massacre of Protestants in 1620 was laid in a house near the inn. The valley, adorned by noble chestnuttrees, here becomes very picturesque.

28 m. Bolladors (2840 ft.), 5 m. higher up, the narrow and picturesque defile of La Serra divides the Valteline from the territory of Bormio. It was closed in ancient times by a strong wall and gate over the road, which was shut at night.

31 m. Leprese (3000 ft.), at the mouth of the Val di Rezzo, through which a useful path leads N.E. in 6 hrs. by Fontals to S. Catarina (Northern Germany, Rte 385).

41 m. Bormio (4010 ft.). The Barns or Boamio, 1½ m. higher up, afford better quarters (see below). They are shut after October.

Bormio (1000), burned by the French in 1799, and again by accident in 1855, formerly enjoyed consider ble prosperity from the transit of merchandise between Venice and the Grisons, which accounts for its old houses and rained towers. Very pure and delicious honey may be procured here packed in boxes.

Through the whole of the Valteline, the language and people are quite Italian, as is the appearance of the country. As far as Bolladore it is extremely rich. Mulberry and chestnuttrees and luxuriant vineyards clothe the hills, which are scattered over with villages and churches; but at Bolladore the scenery becomes decidedly alpine, with no variety but rocks, pines, and snow. The district is appropriately termed "Il freddo paese." Bormio is surrounded by snowy mountains, and the winter usually begins early in October.

- 1. The Val Furva leads S.E. from the town along a char-road to (9 m.) Sta. Catarina, an Establishment with chalybeate waters in a splendid situation, shut on 15 Sept.; fine centre for mountain excursions. Ascent of M. Confinale, with superb view of the Ortler, Bernina, and Adamello groups (8 hrs.). Ascent of M. Tresero (9 hrs.). Guides necessary. From S. Catarina a path conducts in 8 hrs. over the Corno dei Tre Signori to Pejo (Handbook S. Germany), whence the Val di Sole is easily reached, and then Trent or Botzen.
- 2. Val Dentro, W. of the Baths. Following this valley for 2 hrs., and then turning 1. into Val Viola, and crossing a Col (7900 ft.) into Val Campo, we reach the road from Tirano to Pontresina at Pisciadella. Or leaving Val Viola to the 1., and crossing the pass of Foscagno (6330 ft.), the short lateral valley of Trepalis descends into the sequestered Val Livigno, 6 hrs. from Bormio. Thence there are several ways into the Engadine, about 6 hrs. further. Scenery all very wild; a good guide required.
 - 3. Val Francis, N.W., often consis dered to hold the main stream of the Adda; by this a mule-path leads in 12 hrs. to S. Maria in the Münster Thal, and reaches the Valley of the Adige at Glurns (Handbook for S. Germany).]

The ascent of the Stelvio begins immediately behind Bormio. The road is excellent, and well engineered every advantage is taken of the ground, and the ascent is surmounted by numerous sigzage. There are many Galleries, partly cut in the rock, but mostly arched with very strong masonry to resist avalanches and landslips.

I m. above the town are the New Beths of Bormio (4395 ft.), with hot saline sulphureous springs (90-100° Fahr.). The Baths are much frequented in July and August, and are supplied through wooden pipes from the springs rising near the old Bathhouse, which stands \(\frac{1}{2} \) m. higher up. Several of the Baths are large enough for swimming.

Nearly abreast of the Old Baths the road crosses a bridge over a deep chasm, and traverses the Galleria dei Bagni: an obelisk of rock 40 ft, high is left standing beside it, and a slab records the construction of the road between 1820 and 1825. This bridge was blown up by the Austrians July 1859, to check the march of Garibaldi's riflemen. The Pass was again disputed in 1866. An Inscription on the rocks commemorates the success of the Italians. The view looking back towards the Corno di S. Co-lombano is grand and wild. The road now runs along the edge of tremendous precipice. On the 1, is the opening of the Val Fraele, which was nearly stripped of its forests to furnish timber for the construction of the road. A sin-10 or 12 hrs. to Sta. Maria. A singular cascade is now seen bursting from a cavern in the face of the opposite precipice, and descending in one shoot 50 ft. This is the Braulio, which passes for the Source of the Adda. The road here makes a sudden turn to the rt., entering the deep and savage gorge of the Wormser-Loch. Its sides are rocky precipices, nearly vertical, and that along which the road is carried is in places worn smooth by the wintry avalanches which slide down it from the heights above. Wherever an avalanche is known to fall, the road is skilfully protected from injury by tunnels cut through the rock, or by galleries of solid masonry built over it, with sloping roofs, so as to turn off the falling masses of snow or rock, which roll harrylessly over the travelier's head into the abyse below.

There are 7 of these galleries on this side of the pass, measuring together 750 yds. 🤚

Near the lower end of this gorge is the 1st House of Bernze, or Cantoniera di Piatta Martina (5385 ft.), B building of solid masonry, with certhouse and stables below, and hed-rooms and kitchen above. There are five of these refuges in different parts of the road, forming inns of a very humble class, but not unwelcome places of shelter in stormy weather, Three smaller houses (Case dei Rotteri) are built at intervals by the roadside, to serve as dwellings for workmen, whose duty it is to clear away the snow, to repair all damage caused by it, and to render assistance to travellers.

At the upper end of the Wormser-Loch, the road ascends in a series of zigzag terraces the sloping side of the hill, and emerges on the plain of the Braulio. This slope is called the Spondalunga (long wall); near it is the 2nd House of Refuge (6500 ft.). Immediately afterwards the Ponte Alto crosses the torrent of the Val Vitelli. [A glacier descends this valley from the snowy masses of Monte Cristallo, a portion of the great Ortler group, ascended from this point by Mr. Tuckett in 1864.]

Looking back from the Spondalunga, the Galleries under which the road is carried resemble a long battery with embrasures pierced for cannon.

The road crosses the Braulio torrent by a bridge, and reaches the Brd Cantoniera (7590 ft.), and the wild open basin below the summit. Further on is 50 m. Sta. Maria (8315 ft.), the 4th Cantoniera and Italian Customhouse, close to the Swiss frontier.

The ancient pass of the Wormser-Joch leads from these buildings in 8 hrs, through interesting scenery. down to the Swiss village of Santa Maria in the Münsterthal, whence the Adige can be gained at Glarns in 4 hrs. (see Handbook for S. Germany) A good view from the ridge of the Wormser, easily reached: many rare Alpine plants. The Austrian Government wished to purchase the Pass of Santa Maria, in order to carry their road through it, but the Legislative Assembly of the Grisons refused to accede to the proposal, and the Austrian engineers were in consequence compelled to conduct their road over the heights of the Stelvio.]

For some distance the road looks down into the Münsterthal on the l. All verdure now ceases; a few scanty mosses alone tinge the bare and shattered slate-rocks. The remainder of the ascent is never altogether free from snow, which sometimes remains in the month of July heaped up to a height of 6 or 8 ft. on each side of the road. On the 52 m. Stelvio Pass, or Stilfser Joch (9175 ft.), 1500 ft. higher than any other carriage-road in Europe, is the solitary workman's house of Ferdinandshöhe. The frontier-line, separating Lombardy from the Austrian Tyrol, is marked by an obelisk. The Swiss boundary-line rans only me to the W. From the house a footpath leads over the slate shingle, in 20 min., to a projecting rock which commands a *wonderful panorama; or, in 1 hr., Moute Plessura (9941 ft.) N.N.E. can be ascended, whence the view extends from the Bernina on the one side, to the mounties of the Oetzthal on the other-

The Ortler-Spitze (12,811 ft.), seem from top to bottom surrounded by subordinate peaks clad in snow, and with glaciers streaming from its sides, is inconceivably grand. [This, the loftiest and most interesting of the Tyrolean mountains, and recognised from great distances along the range of the Alps westward, forms a northern spur from a vast mass of snowy summits, generally termed the Ortler Pass on the W, to the Gavia Pass, leading to Val Camonies, on the S. of which Mte. Cristallo (11,370 ft.) the Thurnoleser Sp. (11,962 ft.), and the Madatsch Sp. on the Stelvio side; the Königsspitze (12,646 ft.), Monte Zebru (12,255 ft.,, till lately confounded with it, and Zufall Sp. (12,344 ft.), more truly called Monte Cevedale, near the centre of the curve; and the Fornaccia (11 950 ft.), Viozzi Sp. (11,920 ft.), Pizzo del Mare (11,920 ft.), and Monte Tresero (11,800 ft.), overhanging the Gavia Pass, are the most noticeable members. Of these the Königsspitze ranks next to the Ortler in importance, not only with respect to the group, but the whole of the Austrian Alps; and from the N. especially, forms an almost equally grand object. From the central mass several minor ranges, or sputs, are projected, one, to the N.E., has for its highest summit the Mittlere Peder Spitze (11,849 ft.); the other, stretching E, is of greater length, and includes the Venezia Spitze, Zufrid Sp. and Eggen Sp. (11,214 ft.). Between these two ranges lies the Martell Thal, S.W., is a well-marked spor, ending in Monte Confinale (11,076 ft.). On either side of this latter ridge are the Valle del Zebru and Val Forno. They are magnificent in their scenery, to which the Baths of Sta. Catarina, at the junction of the latter valley with Val Furva, afford ready access. For Sta. Catarina, ascent of Monte Confinale, and further details of the Ortler group, see Handbook for S. Germany.]

The Tyrolese side of the pass is far steeper than the Italian, and nearly 50 signags (giravolte) are constructed between the summit and Trafoi, in order to preserve a gradual descent. By this means the slope never exceeds 1 in 10.

About half-way down the range of zigzag terraces, on a sheltered platform, stands a road-mender's Hut.

58 m. Franzenshöhe—2nd Cantoniera (7200 ft.). Here the traveller looks down upon the vast and picturesque Madatsch glacier, descending from the side of the Ortler into a gulf many thousand feet beneath him. The road descends nearly to a level with it at the 6th Cantoniera, called Del Bosco, from the fir-trees which first appear in the vicinity. The glacier is but a short walk from this house; by the side of the ice stands a little pilgrimage Chapel. The Madatsch-Spitze is a singular pointed mass of black rock, rising out of a sea of solid The highest peak of the Ortler, and the full grandeur of its snowy range, is now gradually lost, but the Weiss Kugel, one of the Oetzthal snow-peaks, comes into view.

Near this a marble tablet records the atrocious murder of Madame de Tourville, an English lady, by her husband, in 1876.

The three Holy Springs are now seen in the beautiful valley far below—best overlooked from the *Weisse Knott, a pavilion with an obelisk to the memory of Josef Pichler, who first ascended the Ortler in 1804.

63 m. The three streams are made to issue from the breast of the sacred figures. The spot was probably a sanctuary in pagan times, and the grandeur of the surrounding scenery is indescribable. A little above the house of the priest is a level track, called the Bear's Playground (Bärenboden), from the frequent appearance of these animals, who breed in the forests, and often commit depredations on the herds. Three great glaciers descend towards the head of the glen. The scenery the whole way from the summit to Prad is not surpassed in any part of the Alpine chain.

[The *Ortlerspitze may be ascended from the Trafoi side by three routes, two of which start from the Heilige drei Brunnen. The old route climbed up a steep tangled wooded slope for about 1000 ft. to the foot of the Pleis, an ice couloir constituting the principal difficulty of the ascent; thence a Plateau of névé was gained, and only time and labour were required to reach the summit. Mr. Tuckett, in 1864, successfully varied this route by avoiding the Pleis and striking up the Tabaretta Thal, filled with glaciers in its upper portion, and exposed to falling rocks, but from which the great slope of snow and ice leading to the summit was more easily reached. A third route has since been taken, which reaches the head of the Tabarettathal, up the next hollow to the N., and by a more distant course from This and one from the Sul-Trafoi. denthal appear to be the best routes, and the ascent may be considered tolerably easy and safe for those accustomed to snow, and to require not more than between 6 and 7 hrs. The *view is magnificent towards every point of the compass, except the E., which is filled by a group of Dolomite crags.]

65 m. Gomagoi (4265 ft.). Here is a strong Austrian Fort, commanding the Pass.

[The Sulden That opens here rt., and the Glacier at its head appears in view. This may be reached in 4 or 5 hrs. The secluded valley offers "features of the highest order of grandeur," and there is a superb view of the Ortlerspitze from the summit of the glacier, by which also is a pass into the Martell Thal (Handbook for S. Germany), or the Königssputze can be ascended by practised mountaineers. From the Suldenthal also is an interesting route to the head of Val Forno, and so to Sta. Catarina. It leads by the Sulden Glacier over the Janiger Scharte, or Eissee Joch, to the upper portion of the Langereferner at the head of the Martelithal, and thence nearly at a level over the Cevedale Pass.

From St. Gertrud, 21 hrs. up the Valley, there are two ways to the summit of the Ortler Spitze; the first reaches in 4 hrs. a notch in the ridge, 2 m. N. of Tabaretta Sp., and visible from the village. Hence the "Tuckett route" is joined in 2 hrs., and the summit reached in 3 more. The second course makes for the ridge S. of the Tabaretta Sp., but success beyond much depends on the state of the snow]

Below Gomagoi the road crosses the stream, and the insignificant village of Stilfs (It. Stelvio) is seen upon a height on the 1., whence this pass takes its name. Its houses look like swallows' nests attached to the face of the rock.

70 m. Prad (2040 ft.), with a very ancient Church on a hillock. We now emerge into the valley of the Upper Adige or Vintschgau, crossing it on a causeway by a long straight road which terminates in a ridge over the Etsch (It. Adige) at

73 m. Spondinig (2915 ft.). Here our route falls into the road leading E. to Meran and N. to Landeck. The dil. goes on E. to

75 m. Eyrs, whence dil, in 11 hrs. to (52 m) Landeck Stat. for (48 m.) Innsbruck; or in 5 hrs. to (28 m) Meran Stat. for (30 m.) Betzen and (80 m.) Innsbruck. See Handbook for Southern Germany. Extra Post with

The Lake of Como (700 ft.), called by the ancients Lacus Larius (te, Late maxime!— Virg), shut in by steep and lofty mountains, is about 31 miles long, by either arm, from 1 to 21 miles broad, and in some places 1900

up. Its S. extremity is divided into benches by the premontory of eliagio, at the end of the W. arm of the extremity of the fer, on the E. Lecon. The principal fish are the trout, pike, perch, and agons, the last a species of clupes peculiar to the lakes of Lombardy. The agons migrate periodically, from one end of the lake to the other.

Steamers, between Come and Colice in 4 to 5 hours, start 8 times a day from either end of the lake, touching at the principal places on either shore—marked thus †. Many of them have deck saloons, where refreshments and sometimes table-d'hôte dinners can be had, while the upper deck makes an excellent promenade.

Leaving Como, the steamer coasts along the W. part of the town, from which there is a good view of the different villas, with the hill and tower of Baradello in the background. The shores are speckled with villages and white villas, the summer resort of the Milanese during the season of the Villeggistura.

It now belongs to the adjacent Hotel. Cernobbio is 3 m. by carriage-road from Como. Monte Bisbino (4515 ft.) may be ascended in 31 hrs., through the village of Rosenna, which rises N. of the hotel. t(E.) Torno, a picturesque village on a projecting point. E. of it, at the end of the bay, is a large Villa of the Trotti family, known as the V Pliniana, not because Pliny (the younger) lived here (his country residence having been more probably at Lenno), but on account of a neighbouring intermittent spring described in his writings.

†(W) Moltrasio, with the large Villa Passalacqua. There is a pretty waterfall, and quarries of a black calcareous slate for roofing, which may interest the geologist.

Further on is a monument 60 ft. high, erected to the memory of Prof. Frank of Pavia (1851), at a cost of 800l., bequeathed by himself.

The house, which is not open to the public, contains a Venus, by Pompeo Marchesi, copies by Canova of ancient busts; a bust of Lectitia, Napoleon's mother; a portrait of Napoleon I. as President of the Italian Republic; a Bacchante; and a bust of Michel Angelo, all by Canova. Further on is the Villa Balcaretti, with a mausoleum of the Gonzaga family, and a beautiful garden. At #. Giovanni, 1 m. beyond, is the Villa Trotti, with a fine garden. In the Church is a painting attributed to Gaud, Ferrari.

A good carriage-road ascends the hills behind Bellagio to Erba and Lecco, through the midst of the Brianza, commanding lovely views over both branches of the lake (Rte.

*Monte 8. Primo (5585 ft.), with a fine panoramic view, may be ascended easily in 4 hrs. In May, the slopes are covered with gentian and narcistus. A rough descent leads in 2 hrs. to Nesso (see above), where the steamer may be taken for Bellagio.

The voyage as far as Bellagio is described in Rte. 43. Here there is change of Steamers, and sometimes a long balt. Rounding the promontors the lake is then crossed S.E. to Lient opposite to which, on the W. bank is Limonta. The scenery is very and and wild, and the villages for Vassena, at the foot of precipitors heights, stands on the W. bank. ROUTE 45.

MATERIA TO VARALLO, BY MONTE MOTTERONE AND ORTA.—MULE-PATH AND BOAT.

Monte Motterone may be ascended by an equally good path from Stress in 4 hrs. (Rte. 47). The routes unite at (\frac{1}{2} hr.) Someraro (1500 ft.), equidistant from both places, and reached through chestnut woods. The pathway is then carried over a neck of the mountain, finally emerging on a grassy slope. At the base of this are several dairy-farms or chalets, where excellent cream, milk, cheese, &c., may be obtained.

thr. below the summit is a good Hotel, in a splendid position. Here is a Station of the Italian Meteorological Society, well provided with instruments of recent construction, including Denza's Anemograph. The temperature is very equable, averaging 55° Fahr. during July, Aug., and Sept. 700 species of wild flowers are found in the vicinity, and the views are superb. Passing the Hotel, we reach the summit of traversing the dark ground of the plain; the distant Apennines of Parma and Modena close this unrivalled panorama to the S., whilst the plain of Lombardy stretches afar to the E. until lost in the horizon.

3 hrs. Monte Motterone (4893 ft.). commanding one of the *finest panoramas on the S. declivity of the Alps, Mont Blanc and the Matterhorn are aidden by the nearer hills of the Val Sesia and by Monte Rosa. To the rt of the latter are seen the Cima di Jazi, Fletschhorn, Mischabel group, Monte Leone, Finsteraarhorn, and Bortelhorn. Farther E. rise the peaks and glaciers of the Bernardino and Splügen passes, and in the distance the Bernina Alps and the Almost at his feet the traveller sees seven lakes—Maggiore, Orta, Mergozzo, Monate, Comabbio, Biandrone, and Varese; and still farther to the rt. the great plain of Lombardy and Piedmont, with Milan in the centre, of which the Duomo is The two great distinctly visible. tributaries of the Po, the Sesia and the Ticino, appear like silver ribbons

If the weather be unfavourable for the view, the traveller may reach Orta without passing over the summit, bearing to the l., and gaining a full hour.

From the summit a rough path descends steeply in 2 hrs. to Omegna. The mule-path to Orta leads by Cheggino (2120 ft.) in 2 hrs. to Armeno (1720 ft.), where we reach the high road for (2 m.) Miasino, and passing the Rly. Stat. (Rte. 31), arrive at (2 m.) Orta. The Sacro Monte may be visited on the way by persons pressed for time, but is worth a separate excursion.

Orta (1220 ft.) is delightfully placed on the borders of the lake, but at the foot of a steep declivity, so that the walks are always hilly. The charming Villa Natta has beautiful gardens projecting into the lake. A path leads through them (small fee), or from the Piazza, in 10 min., to the Sacro Monte, a sanctuary dedicated to St. Francis of Assisi, beautifully situated on a wooded promontory, approached by 20 chapels or oratories. Some are elegant in their architecture; and they contain, as at Varallo, groups in terra-cotta, of which at least seven are good works of art. The hill is laid out like a garden, a character which peculiarly belongs to the mountain slopes which surround this lake, and whence probably its name is derived. The magnolia and cactus are seen growing in the open air. The views are of singular beauty, comprising the lake, the wooded mountains, villages which speckle the shores and sides of the hills, and the distant Alps. Important tete on Aug. 2,-the day of S. M. degli Angeli, and two following days.

The *Isola di San Giulia, opposité

Orta, is an object of singular beauty. (Boat with one rower there and back, 1½ fr., waiting an hour.) The church and village surmount a rock which rises out of the deep lake; and the bright buildings contrast beautifully with the blue waters.

The Church, chiefly modernised, but retaining ten columns of architectural interest, was built on a spot rendered sacred by the retreat of San Giulio in the 4th cent.; his ashes are preserved in a vault. In the Sacristy are the vertebræ of a monstrous serpent (in reality hones of a whale), said to have been destroyed by the saint. Here also is a beautiful *Holy Family, by Gaud. Ferrari. The church contains several damaged but admirable frescoes, a chapel rudely painted by an unknown master in 1456; a *fresco by Gand, Ferrari, the Virgin and Child enthroned with four Saints, singularly graceful, but injured; above, the Martyrdom of St. Stephen . on the vaulted roof the four Doctors of the Church, with the Evangelistic symbols—interesting examples of the pure Lombard style; and a curious sculptured *pulpit with four black columns.

The sepulchral urn of the traitor Longobard dake Mimulfo, with rehefs of San Ginho driving out snakes from the island, has been converted into an alms box, and placed near the door. On the pillars of the nave are some interesting frescoes, bearing the dates 1421 and 1481. Guilla, the wife of Berenger II., king of Lombardy, took refage on the island in 962, and defended it resolutely against Otho I., emperor of Germany, who had invaded Italy and deposed her husband. Otho restored the island to the bishops of Novara, who had long held it before it was seized by Berenger.

From Orta-Masino Stat. to Armeno, 11 hr. by carriage-road; char-road thence to Monte Motterone in 4 hrs.

Pleasant walk to (1 hr. E.) Monte Meema, by Missino (two-horse carriage, 15 fr.), a Franciscan Convent, commanding a fine sunset view of Monte Rosa; to (1 hr. S.E.) Ameno (carriage, 12 fr), where Baron Solaroli has a good collection of Indian arms; and to (\(\frac{x}{2}\) hr. S.S.E.) Vacciage, just beyond which is the Madonna della Bocciola (Thorn), affording a grand view over the lake (1565 ft.). The 16th-cent. Church (key kept by the Sacristan at Vacciago) has some good paintings by Agostino Canerio.

3 m. S. of Orta, the extreme end of the Lake, is the picturesque old Torre di Buccione (1500 ft.), reached by steamer, boat, or carriage (Rte. 31).

Steamer or row-boat from Orta to Pella [Donkey to (44 hrs.) Varallo, 7 fr.].

14 hr. S. of Pella rises the Madonso del Sasso (2245 ft.), overlooking the Orrido di Boletto, a precipice nearly 1700 ft. in vertical height.

From Pella a steep path leads up the mountain-sides to (hr.) Arch (2020 ft.), amidst the richest vegetation, with delightful views over the lake. Forest-trees offer their shade, and the road in some places passes amidst precipices of granite in a state of decomposition. Here many of the specimens sold at Baveno are obtained The path continues through park-like scenery, passing a pretty waterfall of the Pellino, and in 24 hrs. from Pella reaches the Col della Colms 3090 ft.). From an eminence on the l. is a fine *view of the lakes of Orta and Varese, the plains of Lombardy, and Monte Rosa.

The descent on the other side is not less beautiful. The Val Sesia is seen in the deep distance, richly wooded and studded with churches and villages; the path leads down by sumy glades and slopes; then changes almost suddenly to the gloom of a ravine, where there are quarries, formerly worked for the buildings of Varallo, buried in a forest of enormous walnut and chestnut trees.

After passing Campolongo the path improves, and at (I hr.) Civiaso (2350 ft.), we join the carriage-road hr. further is passed the Chapel of Loreto, with freecoes by Gaud. Ferroriand another hr. suffices to reach Varallo (Rte. 20). A shorter path mounts directly S.W. from Pella through woods to the isolated Church of Centonaro (fine view), then passes through Artò, and descends into the Valley of the Pellino, whence it remounts to Arola, and soon afterwards joins the mule-path.

VARALLO TO MACUGNAGA, BY THE VAL MASTALLONE.

There is a good carriage-road from Varallo to Fobello. From thence Ponte Grande is reached in 6½ hrs.' walking. Mules can be taken over the pass, but the descent on either side is steep for riding.

On leaving Varallo (1515 ft.) the valley gradually contracts till the road reaches a remarkable gorge where the river, hemmed-in by vertical rocks 150 ft. high, is spanned by the (3 m.) Ponte della Gula, too narrow for wheel-vehicles. Another bridge bears the carriage-road. The scenery for the entire distance is of the most exquisite character, the vegetation being even richer than in the Val Sesia. Beyond (8 m.) Ferrea the valley divides, the rt. branch leading due N. to Rimella, and over the Col della Dorchetta, into the Val Strona (Rte. 31); while that on the l. grows narrower and steeper, and then suddenly opening discloses a rich scene of wooded mountain and meadow, and the little village of 11 m. Fobello. This valley is the cradle of cooks, who migrate hence all over Europe. Beyond Fobello the upper end of the Val Mastallone is open and bare of foliage, and a steep ascent leads to the (3 hrs.) Col di Baranca (5760 ft.), with a Chapel. On the l., the track from the Col d'Egua falls in. On the rt. rises the Pizzo del Moro, a beautiful point of view, easily ascended from Fobello. From the tempting hill on the l. the rospect is not improved. The descent towards the Val Olloccia is abrupt, and the view over the Val Anzasca magnificent. The Val Olloccia is richly wooded, but for some years the axe has been at work, and much fine timber has been felled. The path passes through

Bannio (2235 ft.), on a height above the Anza, and 20 m. further reaches

3 hrs. Ponte Grande (2180 ft.), 4 hrs. below Macugnaga (5115 ft.). (See Handbook for Switzerland.)

Macugnaga may also be reached by the equally beautiful Val Sermenza, a continuation of the Val Sesia, which runs E. from Varallo, passing (2 m.) Valmaggia, and (7 m.) Balmuccia. Beyond this village the valley is very narrow and tortuous, particularly near the entrance, where the Torre di Boccioleto towers up to a height of 328 ft.: a char-road runs as far as

3 hrs. Rimasco, chief village of the valley. Here the road divides; l., through grand scenery to the German village of Rima; rt., to the Val Anzasca by Carcoforo.

[From Rima two passes lead to Alagna, and there is another track mounting steeply to the westward, by which the Turlo pass is gained close to the summit of the ridge. (See Handbook for Switzerland.)]

Above Rimasco the rt. valley becomes more wild and open, and in 1½ hr. the track reaches the last village, Carcoforo. From hence the traveller has the choice of two routes to the Val Anzasca, but even if bound for the head of that valley he will do better to take the Col d'Egua, leading to Ponte Grande, so as to enjoy the glorious walk from that village to Macugnaga.

The Col d'Equa (7060 ft.) is reached in 2 hrs. from Carcoforo by a rather steep and continuous ascent. The summit, when clear, commands a very grand view. From the top there is rapid descent over rough ground to the undulating ridge which forms the summit of the Baranca Pass. The track, which is ill-marked, joins that from Fobello close to the small oratory. The descent to Bannio and Ponte Grande has been already described. Time from Carcoforo to Ponte Grande.

Travellers pressed for time, and wishing to reach Macugnaga in one long day from Varallo, may take a pass, which diverges from that last described, at the village of Carcoforo, about the same height, but more interesting than that of the Turlo (see Handbook for Switzerland). The ascent from Carcoforo is very steep; and it takes more than 3 hrs. to reach the summit of the Bocchetta di Carcoforo. This commands a magnificent view of Monte Rosa and the Saas Grat. On the other side there is a faintly-marked track along a steep slope until an abandoned gold mine is reached. Below this the path descends into the short

Val Quarazzola, a recess in the Val Quarazza, down which runs the path from the Turlo. The guides usually descend to Borca, but this is unnecessary, as there is a shorter track to Macuguaga by the S. side of the Anza. Time from Balmuccia, 10 hrs.' steady walking, exclusive of halts.

The trout-fishing is reported to be very good in the Val Sermenza and Val Mastallone In both the beauty is greatly increased by the brilliant green of the water and the abundant woods.

The Lago Maggiore (645 ft.)., Lacus Verbanus of the Romans, is 37 m. long, and 3 m. wide at its greatest breadth, between Baveno and Laveno. Only a small portion at its N extremity belongs to Switzerland. About 7 m. S. of Locarno, the Italian frontier commences. The navigation of the lake is free to both states. The chief rivers by which it is fed are the Treing, flowing from the St Gottliard and Bernardino; the Maggia, running through the beautiful valley of the same name; the Tresa, which drains the Lake of Lugano, and the Tosa, descending from Domo d'Ossola. The scenery of its upper end is bold and mountainous, and the W. bank from Pallanza to Stresa is charming; but, towards the S. and E., the hills are low and devoid of character. There is a large variety of fish: the fishery is for the most part the property of the Borromeo family.

Greatest depth, 2800 ft.

The sides are so precipitous in some parts of the N branch that there is scarcely a path along them. Villages and churches are, however, perched on the heights; and wherever a deposit has been formed in the lake by a torrent, a village will be found.

Steamers 3 times a day between Arona and Locarno in about 6 hrs. Restaurant on board.

Leaving Arona, the boat crosses to (W.) tAngera, a flef of the Borromeo family, on a Dolomitic peak, at the foot of which is the village.

Angera occupies the site of the Roman station of Angetona. It appears to have been a place of some importance, and to have stood on the site of a temple of Jupiter. Its mediæval Castle, although scarcely inhabited, is kept in repair. The rooms are large and lofty, the walls ornamented with family portraits, and the windows command lovely views.

In one corner of the garden is a curious passage descending to the well, which supplied water to the inhabitants from the lake,

The castle dates from the time of Giovanni Visconti: the frescoes in some of the apartments represent events in the life of his father, Ottone Visconti, the warlike bishop who lived in the end of the 18th cent.

2 m. W. lies Taino Stat. (Rte. 14).

In crossing the lake to (W.) † Meina, the Statue of S. Carlo is a conspicuous object on the heights near Arona.

- (W.) †Less, for many years the residence of Manzoni, author of the Promessi Sposi.

handsome villas of the Duchess of Genoa (at the entrance of the town), Princess Pallavicini, and others. 875 ft. above Stresa is a large Rosminian convent, now a school. In the Church is a good monument to Antonio Rosmini, the founder (1855), by Vela. Boats for the Borromean Islands: printed tariff. Monte Motferone may be ascended in 4 hrs., passing through chestnut woods and over pastures (Rte. 45). A road leads also S.W. to (6 m.) Gignese (2565 ft.), whence Monte Motterone may be reached in 2 hrs.

The drive from Stresa to (10 m.) Arona is beautiful, passing close to the lake, often on raised terraces.

The Borromean Islands consist of the Isola Bella, Isola Madre, Isola San Giovanni, near Pallanza, all belonging to the Borromeo family, and the Isola Superiore, or dei Pescatori, inhabited chiefly by fishermen, or by families originally of the island, who, having emigrated and become rich, have built here retreats for their latter days.

Passengers are conveyed free of charge to and from the steamers here, as at all the other stations on the lake.

The *Isola Bella, until 1671 a mass of barren slate-rock, was converted by Count Vitalio Borromeo (1690) into a beautiful garden, teeming with the vegetation of the tropics (50 c. each visitor). It consists of terraces, the lowest founded on piers thrown into the lake, rising in a pyramidal form one above another, and lined with statues, vases, obelisks, and cypresses. Upon these, not merely the orange, citron, myrtle, and pomegranate, but aloes, cactuses, the camphor-tree, several species of metrosideros and other Australian plants -flourish in the open air.

The opinions of travellers are not unanimous in their admiration of this lovely spot. Matthews extols it as "the magic creation of labour and taste... a fairy-land, which might serve as a model for the gardens of Calypso;" Saussure calls it "un mag-nifique caprice, une pensée grandiose, une espèce de création;" Gibbon, "an enchanted palace, a work of the fairies, in a lake accompanied with mountains." To taste it may have little pretension; but, for a traveller fresh from the rigid climate of the north, this singular creation of art, with its aromatic groves, its aloes and cactuses starting out of the rocks—and, above all, its glorious situation, bathed by the dark-blue waters of the lake, reflecting the sparkling white villages on its banks and the distant snows of the Alps—cannot fail to afford pleasure.

Every handful of mould on the island was originally brought from a distance. The walls of the terraces on which the lemon and orange trees grow, are boarded over during winter to protect them. The panorama from the upper platform over the lake, and up the valley towards the Simplon, is beautiful.

The Villa (50 c.) contains a Gallery of Pictures, amongst which are a Head of St. John Bapt., by Procacoini; a small Virgin and Child with SS. John B. and Giustina, bearing the forged signature of Bernardino Buttinone, probably by Gregorio Schravoni; a Madonna by Gaud. Ferrari; and two portraits by that rare Milanese painter, Boltraffio. Elsewhere are 50 landscapes by Tempesta, who found a shelter here when obliged to conceal himself for his misdeeds, and several paintings by Zuccarelli, views of the different possessions of the family. In the Chapel are three *monuments of the Borromeo family, removed from S. Pietro in Gessate at Milan at the time of the Cisalpine republic. One, over the altar, was intended to contain the relics of St. Giustina, an ancestress of the family; another, that of Giovanni Borromeo, is admirable for effect, and the infinite details are marvellously worked out: both are probably by Omodeo (Perkins), and executed about 1490. A third, with rehefs of the Agony, Flageliation, and a war-Fior marching in triumph, is by Bambaja (1512). The unfinished building which separates the wings of the palace was intended for a great central hall and staircase, but has never been covered in. On the ground-floor is a series of grotto chambers, ornamented with statues, a model of the palace, &c.

The Isola Madre (1 fr.), lying N.N E. towards Pallanza, being less shaded by monutains from the sun, enjoys a milder climate in winter. The consequence is that it abounds in rare conifers, and other trees of & countries. The plants of New Holland grow luxuriantly out of doors; the two species of tea are generally in flower in October. The Chilian and Brazilian araucarias and our Himalaya pines attain a great size, as well as the Japanese wax-plant. On the island are many pheasants, here allowed to run wild, from their innbility by flight to gain the opposite shores. Near the large abandoned Villa is a sepulchral chapel, erected to contain the remains of the Borromeo family. It has some relics of St. Charles.

†Baveno (W.) occupies a lovely situation opposite the Borromean Islands, about 2 m. N.W. of the Isola Bella. The Villa Collegno, Villa Durazzo, and *Villa Clara, are handsome residences. The latter belongs to Mr. Henfrey, and was inhabited in the spring of 1879 by Queen Victoria. The grounds command some of the finest views over the lake and islands, and within them is an elegant octagonal English Church, built in the Lombard style by the late Mr. Pullan, and richly decorated with marbles. Open to travellers on Sunday; resident Chaplain.

20 mm. Fixed tariff.

For the ascent of *Monte Motterone, highly recommended, see Rte. 45. Omn. to (4 m) Gravellona, for the Simplen (Rte. 31).

+ Denotes landing-places of the steamers.

The Steamer now steers across the lake, sometimes avoiding Suna, to †Pallanza (W.), residence of the subprefect (4000); a very sunny spot, and therefore pleasant in winter, but the situation and views are not so good as at Baveno. It contains a large model prison for male convicts.

There is a nursery-garden of local celebrity near the town, and a Roman monument embedded in the church wall. Close to the promontory is the Isola San Giovanni, the smallest of the Borromean Islands.

From Pallanza to (8 m.) Gravellona, Omn. several times a day, passing near the pretty lake of Mergozzo and the granite quarries of Montorfano, both worthy of a visit. It was from these quarries that the magnificent columns in San Paolo fuori le mura, at Rome, were derived. From Pallanza to Intra is a pretty walk over the peninsula (1 hr.). Thence N.W. to (½ hr.) Trobaso (on the l. rises Monte Rosso), and W. across the S. Bernardino torrent to (1/2 hr.) Santino, where there is an old Roman bridge. Back S.E. through Suna on the Lake to (1 hr.) Pallanza.

The steamer now rounds the point, behind which is †Intra (W.), a thriving town (6000), at the mouth of the Val Intragna. Here are manufactories of iron, cotton, and glass, and large works for winding silk from the cocoons, the motive power being supplied by the torrent of San Giovanni. Beautiful gardens surround the V. Franzosini and V. Ada, both to the N. 3 m. along the shore, towards Locarno, is Ghiffa. 4 m. N. of Intra is Bee (1935 ft.), and 3 m. further Premeno (2215 ft.), in a fine situation. From Intra the Steamer crosses the lake S.E. to †Laveno (E.) a Rly. Stat. between Luino and Novara (Rte. 14).

Close to the landing-place is another Stat. of the line to Varese and Saronno (Rte. 35). E. rises the Sasso di Ferro (3490 ft.), on whose slopes is the penotes landing-places of the steamers.

(2 hrs.) Church of Santa Catarina, a favourite excursion. Magnificent *view.

The lake is now re-crossed to Ghiffa, nearly opposite to Porto, near which are extensive lime works. Thence to †Oggebbio (W.), beyond which is a villa built by the late Massimo Azeglio. Near the Shore, beyond †Cannero (W.), are seen two little islands, fiefs of the Borromeo family; upon one of them is a ruined stronghold, which in the 15th cent. was held by the robber brothers Mazzarda, locally celebrated for their marauding expeditions.

†Luino (E.), an international Rly. Stat. on the line to Novara (Rte. 14), and to Bellinzona (Rte. 39). A Rly. also runs E. to Ponte Tresa for Lugano (Rte. 40). On the same side of the Lake is †Maccagno (Rly. Stat.); 2 hrs. N. is the Lago Delio (2950 ft.); fine *view.

†Cannobbio (W.), at the entrance of the Val Cannobbino, has a domed Church, said to be from the designs of Bramante, with a fine *Bearing of the Cross, by Gaud. Ferrari. ½ hr. up the Valley is the hydropathic establishment of La Salute; and 20 min. further is the Orrido, a rocky chasm.

†Brissago (W.), a pretty spot in the Swiss portion of the lake. Some old cypresses surround its Church on the side of the hill.

Ascona (W.), an ancient town, with an old Town Hall, a Seminary, and the remains of two mediæval castles. In the Church of the Seminary is a Virgin with Saints and donors, by Giov. Ant. di Lagaia (1519). Some of the Steamers now cross to Magadino (E.), a poor place in the Delta of the Ticino, where it empties itself into the lake, and hence unhealthy in summer and autumn. Rly. to Bellinzona (Rte. 39). Others describe a wide semicircle round the delta of the Maggia to reach attributed to B. Luini, and a Flight into Egypt, by Bramantino. 10 min. higher up is the Monte della Trinità, from which the view is more extensive. The Church of S. Antonio, in the town, was in 1863 the scene of a frightful calamity, by the falling-in of the roof from the weight of the snow upon it during divine service, when 47 persons perished.

Lecco is described in Rte. 42.

The Rly. runs generally close to the Strada militare, a continuation of the great military road made by the Austrian Government across the Stelvio, and descends the l. bank of the Adda, which expands into the narrow Lakes of Garlate and Olginate. At 4 m. Calolsio Junct. the Rly. to Bergamo (Rte. 58) continues S.E., while our line turns S., crossing the Adda on an iron bridge. A tunnel leads to 11 m. Olgiate Molgora, whence the hills are skirted to 13 m. Cernusco Merate. 1½ hr. N.W. stands the Church of Montevecchia, commanding a fine view. 1 hr. W. of it lies Missaglia, whence a carriage-road of 5 m. leads back to the Stat. 2 m. W. is Monticello.

17 m. Usmate Junct. for Bergamo (Rte. 52). Omn. to (4 m.) Monticello, a favourite summer resort on high ground, affording beautiful views.

20 m. Arcore, with a fine villa belonging to the d'Adda family. The chapel near the park gate is an elegant modern building in the cinquecento style: in it is a handsome monument to a young Countess d'Adda, by Vela, and a fine Madonna over the alter by the same.

24 m. Monga Junet., where the St. Gotthard line falls in (Rte. 32).

[From Lecco to Milan by road through the Brianza is a pleasant drive of about 5 hrs. Monticello is a good halfway-house. The lake is crossed to Santa, where the road strikes south, passing through Sala and Rossa by the Lago d'Annone, then by a long ascent to Oggiono, with fine views N. of lake and mountain, through Barzano, and in the midst of lovely scenery to Monticello. Not far from Monticello the scenery falls off, and by the time Monza is reached, is uninteresting]

Broletta, or Town-hall, attributed to Frederick Barbarossa. It is of Italian Gothic, with a Ringhiera between two handsome windows on the S. side.
Annexed to it is a fine and lofty Campanile, with forked battlements.

The *Cathedral stands on the spot where Theodolinda erected, in 595, a temple in honour of St. John the Baptist. At the close of the 13th cent, Matteo Magno Visconti, Lord of Milan, employed Matteo da Campione to reconstruct the Church upon a larger scale, but the front was not commenced till 1396, the year of the architect's death. "It is a curious specimen of the cabinet style prevalent in Italy at that period; a style which attempts to please the eye rather by a subdivision of parts, and a variety of patterns, in marble of different shapes and colours, than by the form of the building itself."-G.

Knight. The wheel window, set in a square framework of panels, is very beautiful. Over the central door is a curious relief of Theodolinda offering her gifts; below it, the Baptism of Christ.

The Nave has double aisles, the outer ones being entirely modernized. The main columns have currously carved capitals, and belonged to an earlier building.

The Paliotto, or altar front, of silver-gilt (10th cent.), is entirely covered with Scripture histories, inlaid with enamel and coarse gema. The Cantoria, or gallery for the singers, on the N. side of the nave, is of rich Gothic work. Deserving of notice also is the woodwork of the choir. In a Courtyard to the N, formerly a cemetery, is buried Ettore Visconti (a natural son of Bernalio), who became for a short time one of the leaders of Milau Expelled by Duke Filippo Maria, he seized the castle of Monza, where a shot from a springall broke his leg, an injury of which he died (1413).

Theodolinda, whose memory, like Bertha's in Switzerland and Elizabeth's in England, was cherished by the people beyond that of any male sovereign, Charlemagne himself scarcely excepted, and whose beauty, wisdom, and piety were all equally transcendent, was the daughter of Garibold, King of the Bavarians, and became the wife of Autharis, King of the Lombards (589). Upon the death of Authoris, which happened six years after their marriage, the Lombards offered the crown to Theodolinda, with the intimation that whomsoever she would select for her husband they would acknowledge as their sovereign. She chose Agelulphus (sometimes called Astolf), Duke of Turin. Valiant and ambitious, he contemplated becoming master of Rome, but Theodolinda diverted him from this enterprise. She thus earned the gratitude and the friendship of Pope Gregory the Great. who dedicated his Dialogues to her.

The *TREASCEY (Fee, 5 fr., including the Iron Crown), is one of the most curious of mediseval museums. has been much plandered, especially during the republican rule at the end of the last century. The following are some of the more remarkable objects which it still contains :- Theodolinda's Fan, or flabellum, of painted leather, with a massive metallic enameiled handle. Her Comb, ornamented with gold filigree and emeralds. Crown, a plain diadem set with coarse gems. Theodolinda's Hen and Chickens, a tray of silver gilt, upon which are figures of the Chioccia, or Chucky, and her seven chickens The hen's eyes are of rubies. It is said by antiquaries to typify either the arch-priest and chapter of the church of Monza, or the seven provinces of the Lombard kingdom. The list of relice sent by Pope Gregory the Great to Theodolimia, written in Greek upon papyrus some say it is his autograph. The antiquary Maffei calls this the "king of papyri." One of these relics consists of drops of oil taken from the lamps burning before the tombs of the martyrs in the catacombs. Apb. Aribert's Ecangelistarium or Gospel book. The binding is of gold and silver gilt, rudely set with rough stones, glass placed over coloured foil, and fine ancient cameos, characteristic of the age of transition from the Roman to mediaval times. A Cross, given to the Queen by the Pope at the baptism of her eldest child, and worn by the arch-priest on great occasions. The front is of rock crystal; the back is worked in gold filigree. Theodolinda's cup, said to be hollowed out of a solid sapphire. It is about 3 in. in diameter. The colour of the material (probably very fine glass, like the catino of Genoa) is exceedingly rich. The Gothic setting bears the date of 1490,

The Cross, or pectoral, employed in the coronation of the kings of Italy, to hang round the neck of the sovereign, is massive, and richly decorated—not merely with uncut stones, but with ancient engraved gems; an amethyst, representing Diana, is of excellent workmanship

The Sacramentary of Berengarius. The coverings of this book are of pierced every, plates of gold placed beneath shining between the interstices. On one side are scrolls interlaced, springing from birds; on the other are Runic knots, elaborately interlaced, springing from a central ornament composed of four grotesque animals, from whose mouths the root of each knot is seen to issue. These singular carvings are probably Tentonic; for, excepting a greater delicacy in the workmanship, they are exactly such as are found upon Scandinavian monuments. The services which the book contains stand as they were composed by Pope Gregory; and in it may be found the Collects of our own Liturgy.

Another very carious volume is the Evangelistarium of Aribert or Heribert, Abp. of Milan (1018-1045).

Three wory diptychs, of much better workmanship than is usually the case with sculptures of this description. The first and most curious represents, on one leaf, a poet or a philosopher in his study; on the other a muse striking the lyre with the plectrum. The whole is finely carved. Claudian and Ausonius are both candidates for the portrait. Autiquaries give it to Boethius, upon conjecture. The second represents two figures in consular robes, with the Roman eagle and other insignia. The original names have been effaced, and those of Pope Gregory and David substituted. third is remarkable for the boldness of the relief. The principal figures are an emperor with the paludamentum, and a female in rich attire.

Here also is preserved the celebrated
*Iron Crown, carried off to Mantua by the Austrians on their expulsion from Lombardy, in May, 1859, but afterwards returned. The thin ribbon or fillet of iron which lined the diadem, and from which the crown derived its name, is said to have been hammered from one of the nails employed at the Crucifixion; and hence the crown is also called Il sacro Chiodo. The Church of Milan opposed the tradition; but their objections were overcome by the congregation "of the Rites" at Rome, by whom it was pronounced authentic. The traditions of Monza relate that this crown was given by Gregory the Great; to Queen Theodolinaa; yet nothing is really known respecting its origin, nor was it regularly used in the coronation of the kings of Italy. It was first worn by Henry VII. (or Henry of Luxemburg) in 1311. The crown was carried for that purpose to Milan, in spite of the remonstrances of the inhabitants of Monza. Charles V. was the last of the later emperors crowned with it; and the crown remained quietly as a relic in the Tesoro, until Napoleon, anxious to connect his dignity with the recollections of the past, placed it with his own hands upon his head, disdaining to receive it from the Bishop, with the words, Dieu me l'a donné, gare à qui la touche. It has been since used at the Coronation of the two last Emperors of Austria.

A cornous relief in the S transept represents the coronation of an Emperor, probably Rudolph of Hapsburg, in 1296. The seventh Elector, the King of Bohemia, is absent, and this shows that the relief is earlier than 1290, when he was admitted into the Electoral College. It will be noticed that the crown which the Arch-priest of Monza is here represented to place on the head of the Emperor is not the Iron Crown, but one decorated with fleurons. This relief seems, from its inscription, to have been put up by the people of Monza as a memorial of their right to have the coronation performed here, in preference to Milan. The chapel at the end of the N. aisle contains the plain altar-tomb of Queen Theodolinda, and some curious frescoes, representing events in her life, by Trees of Monan (1444).

The Royal Palace is an extensive edifice, surrounded by a large Park, which abounds in game. Near the house is the Giardino Ingless, well laid-out, with lawns, shrubberies, and water. The Gardens are rich in exotic plants. Monza was in former times the country residence of the Vicercy, and is now a favourite autumn retreat of the royal family.

Besides the Rly., there is a Steam Tramway between Monza and the Corso Venezia at Milan several times a day in 14 hr.

The Rly. proceeds to 28 m. Sesto, in a very fertile plain, with many country seats around.

MILAN (390 ft.), the capital of Lombardy (Pop., including suburbs, 400,000), was founded by the Insubrian Gauls. It was taken by the Romans B.C. 222 and became, in point of splendour, the second city of Italy, filled with temples, baths, theatres, statues, and all the structures required for the dignity and luxury of a great capital Ausonius, who flourished under the Emperor Gratian, towards the end of the 4th cent., assigns to it the rank of the sixth city in the empire.

Procopius, a century later, speaks of Mediolanum as inferior only to Rome in population and extent. Its ancient edifices and monuments have all disappeared, save one portico (San Lorenzo), a column (Sant' Ambrogio); a piece of massive wall, forming part of the Monasterio Maggiore; and a few fragments of sculpture, including two rather dubious heads called Quintus and Rufus, on a wall near the Porta Nuova.

The paucity of Roman remains at Milan must be attributed to the calamities which the city has sustained, having been 46 times besieged. It was sacked by Attila, A.p. 452. But the great destruction was effected after the surrender of Milan to the Emperor Frederick Barbarossa in 1162, when he razed it to the ground. On Palm Sunday, in that fatal year when the Emperor departed in triumph for Pavia, the site of the great city was marked only by a few churches left standing in the midst of ruins. The inhabitants being dispersed in four adjoining villages, the name of Milau was effaced from the Lombard community.

But this event was followed by the great Lombard league, the confederacy against the imperial authority; and in the parliament, held at Pontida in 1167, the deputies of the combined cities determined to bring back the Milanese to their ancient seat, which was effected on the 27th April, 1167, and the city speedily rose again.

About eighty years after the rebuilding of the city commenced the rule of the family of Della Torre, by the election of Pagano, lord of Val Assina, as protector; and then followed that of the Visconti and Sforza. During the latter part of this period Milan attained a state of great prosperity, and when Lodorico il Moro made himself ruler in 1476, Bramante and Leonardo da Vinci were attracted to his service, and it also became celebrated for its manufactures of armour,

Milan then set the fashions to the rest of Europe; hence the word milliner. After the extinction of the family of Sforza, Milan fell, in 1535, under the power of the Emperor Charles V., who, in 1549, fixed the succession to the duchy of Milan in his son Philip II. It remained under the government of the Spaniards until the death of the last king of Spain of the Austrian line, when it became an object of contention between France and Austria, and was finally given to the latter by the treaty of Utrecht in 1713. In the hands of Austria it remained, until May, 1859, with a few interruptions, the principal of which were the occupation of Milan by the French; in 1733, 1745, 1796 and 1800, and the establishment down to 1815, of the kingdom of Italy, of which Milan was made the capital.

The extent of Milan, when it was rebuilt after its destruction by Frederick Barbarossa, is marked by the canal, which, entering on the N. side, runs nearly round the central part of the modern city. Some of the gates of this first line of fortifications are preserved—the Ports Nuova see Porta Ticinese. The Bastioni, which now encircle Milan, except on that side which was protected by the Castle, were built by the Spaniards in 1555. A portion of the ground between this wall and the canal is occupied by gardens. All round, just outside this wall, runs the Strada di Circonvallazione. The circuit of the modern city is about 8 m.

The small river Olona on which it is situated is made available for commerce by being connected with three canals, the Naviglio Grande, drawn from the Ticmo, the Naviglio di Pavia, extending to the Po, and the Naviglio della Martesana, which is derived from the Adda and was constructed in 1481 under Francesco Sforza.

The city has none of the picturesque beauty of other Lombard towns. The summer heat is intense, and the cold in winter often severe.

CITY GATES.

Milan has 14 gates. On the N. side is the Porta Garibaldi, erected in 1826-28 by the merchants. A short distance N.W., outside the Porta Volta, is the "Campo Santo, or Cimitero monumentale (C. 1).

Further E. is the Porta Nuova (E. 3), built by Zanoia in 1810. The ancient Porta Nuova of the mediaval city (1171), near the entrance to the Public Gardens, has been restored; it consists of two arches, some Roman reliefs and inscriptions belonging to the gate erected by the Romans near this spot are let into its walls.

The Ports Principe Umberto (F. 3) was opened in 1865, cutting through the city rampart in order to form a more direct communication with the Rly. Stat. The public drive or boulevard is carried over it on an iron viaduct.

The Porta Venezia (G. 4) was rebuilt in 1828 from a design of Vantini, architect of the Campo Santo at Bresoia. The 8 reliefs and statues were placed here in 1833. Concord and Justice are by Marchesi.

The Porta Romana (F. 8) was built by the Milanese, from a design of Bassi, in 1598, to welcome the arrival of Margaret of Austria, wife of Philip III. of Spain. Just within the gate is the ancient emporium for merchandise coming from Cremona and Piacenza. Half-way up the Corso at the bridge near San Nazaro stood, until 1810, the old Porta Romana, erected in 1171 to commemorate the return of the Milanese to the city after its destruction by Frederick Barbarossa. The reliefs which decorated the gate and illustrated one of the most memorable passages in the chronicles of mediaval Italy, have been let into the walls of houses (near the bridge) erected on the site of the gate. The Milanese around, on foot and on horseback, are seen proceeding to the re-erected city, with an inscription pointing out that there they are to make their stay. "Fata vetant ultra procedere, stabi-mus ergo." The cities of Cremona, Brixia, and Bergamum are represented by turreted gateways, out of which come forth their allies. - "Fra Giacoba," thus written, bears the banner of Milan. In another part is a figure in a magisterial robe, surmounting a strange monster with a huge grinning face and bat's wings, supposed to represent Frederick Barbarossa.

The Porta Vigentina (F 8) takes its name from the village of Vigentino, which lies on this road.

In the centre of the S. Bastione is the Ports Ludovica (D. 8), so called in honour of Ludovico il Moro.

The Porta Ticinese (C. 8), leading to Pavia, by which Bonaparte entered after the battle of Marengo, has an Ionic portico built in 1815, from a design of the Marquis Cagnola. The mediaval Porta Ticinese, on the borders of the canal, but nearer the centre of the city, was rebuilt in 1861.

on the original plan. The central arch in marble is ancient. On the side looking to the canal is a mediæval relief of the Virgin seated between the protecting saints of the city. The suburb of the Porta Ticinese was first surrounded with a wall by the Visconti, and called Cittadella, a name which remains.

The Porta Genova (C. 7), a modern Gate, leads to the Suburban Stat. for Mortara and Alessandria (Rte. 18).

The Porta Magenta (A. 5) was built in great haste, with materials from the Castello, after a design of Canonica, to receive Napoleon when he came to assume the Iron Crown.

The Porta Sempione (B. 3, 4) is a Triumphal Arch, forming the entrance of the great road of the Simplon.

The Porta Tenaglia (C. 3), leading also to the Simplon road, received its name from a Fort which once stood near it.

Between the Porta Tenaglia and the Porta Magenta there is no rampart, the city having been protected on this side by the CASTELLO ancient ducal castle, built by Galeazzo Visconti II. in 1358, to keep the Milanese in subjection, was demolished after his death, but rebuilt with increased strength by Gian Galeazzo. On the death of Duke Filippo Maria, the Milanese rose (Aug. 30, 1447), and, having proclaimed the Aurea respublica Ambrosiana, destroyed the castle. It was rebuilt in 1452 by Francesco Sforza, for the ornament (he said) of the city and its safety against enemies, and was completed in 1476. In the interior is a keep, where the dukes often resided. Philip II. added extensive modern fortifications, and cut down all the bell-towers which overlooked them. The Castle was taken by the French in 1796, and again in 1800, when Napoleon ordered the fortifications to be rased. It has since been converted into barracks. Of the round towers at the angles, those towards the N. have been replaced by modern brick ones, while the two towards the city, formed of massive granite blocks, remain. During the viceroyalty of Eugene Beauharnia, a Doric gateway of granite, with a portice, or line of arches, now closed, on each side, and in the same style, was erected on the N.W. side; between each arch is a medallion containing the portrait of some illustrious Italian military commander. Only traces remain of the frescoes which originally adorned the building. The modern brick building against the E.

wall, with towers and pointed wixdows, is a Riding-School.

The space on which it was intended to erect a forum has been converted into a Piazza d'Armi, on the NW. side of which, outside the Simplon gate, is the

ARCO DELLA PACE. A triumphal arch having been erected with wood and canvas, in 1806, at the Porta Orientale, now Venezia, from a design of the Marquis Cagnola, upon the marriage of the Viceroy Beauharnais with Princess Amalia of Bavaria, it was so much admired, that the municipal council resolved that it should be executed in white marble, the expense to be defrayed out of the 200,000 francs assigned by Napoleon for adorning the city. It was begun in 1807, but on the fall of the Lingdom of Italy in 1814, had not risen above the impost of the smaller arches. The works were resumed in 1816 and completed in 1838, in which year the Arch was inaugurated at the time of the coronation of the Emperor Ferdinand I. Originally intended to commemorate in its sculptures the victories of Napoleon, it was in the end converted to the glories of the Allied Sovereigns and the Emperor of Austria, and the peace secured for Europe in 1815. The statues, frience, and reliefs are by Pacetti. Monti, Marchesi, and Putti. An inscription records the entry into Milan of Napoleon III, and Victor Emanuel after the battle of Magenta in 1859.

The total cost, including the lodger on each side and the iron railing 142,8391.; the bronze car and figures | on the opposite (N.) side the entrance on the top 40,000l alone. A staircase leads to the summit (50 c.).

The ARENA, at the corner of the Piazza d'Armı (C. 3), was designed by Camonica, and opened in 1806, but the portico, gateway, and Carceres have been added later (entrance 2 fr.). It is an ellipse of 260 yds, by 130 yds., and is capable of containing 30,000 spectators. It is surrounded by 10 rows of seats, arranged in the manner of an ancient amphitheatre, and intended to be of stone, but for economy made of turf. At one end of the greater diameter are the Carceres, flanked by towers; at the other a gramte triumphal Doric gateway, of good design. At one side of the lesser diameter is a portico of 8 Corinthian columns of polished granite. The area can be flooded for aquatic exhibitions. In Dec. 1807, there was a regatta in the presence of Napoleon. Races, balloon ascents, rope-dancing, and fireworks, take place here frequently.

In the court-yard of the old Palazzo del Senato (F. 5), which contains the rich and interesting Archives of the State, is a fine *Equestrian Statue in bronze of the Emp. Napoleon III., by Barzaghi, massed by public subacription at a cost of 4000%.

STREETS, SQUARES, PUBLIC GARDENS.

Many of the wider streets radiating from the centre of the town are called Corsi, of which the Corso Vittorio Emanuele, containing several of the best shops, runs N.E. from the back of the Cathedral, and is continued by the Curso Venezia to the Porta Venezia.

The *Piazza del Duomo is not surpassed for splendour and attractiveness in any capital of Europe. It has been enlarged and enclosed by a stately colonnade, and, as the central point of the city, always presents a busy scene, The Outhedral stands in the middle; none side is the Royal Palace, and to the magnificent

*Galleria Vittorio Emanuele, occupied by some of the smartest shops and cafés in Milan. This lofty Arcade, a favourite evening promenade, was built by British capitalists in 1867 at a cost of $20,000l., from the designs of Gruseppe Mengoni, who was killed by a fall from the portal in 1877, The plan is a cross, with an octagon, crowned by a cupola 180 ft. high. It is roofed with glass, is decorated with statues of Italian worthies, and ornamented with frescoes. At night it is brilliantly illuminated with electric light. The chief passage, 214 yds. long, leads to the Piazza della Scala, where stands the theatre of that name. In the middle of this square is the colossal marble Statue of Leonardo da Vinci (1452-1519), erected in 1872 by P. Magni. The granite pedestal bears marble reliefs of Leonardo's varied artistic accomplishments as painter, sculptor, architect, and engineer. At the base are Statues of his greatest pupils— Beltraffio, Marco da Oggionno, Cesare da Sesto, and A. Salaino. In this square is the Casa Brambilla, decorated with terra-cotta and moulded brickwork. Close by is the small

Piazza S. Fedele, with its Church, opposite which stands the PALAZZO MARINO, designed by Galeazzo Alessi for Tommaso Marino (1555), and now the Municipio (see p. 137). In front of it is a Statue of Manzoni.

From the N.W. corner of the Piazza del Duomo, mediæval Milan is entered by the Piazza de' Mercanti (D. 6) In the middle is the Palazzo degli Archivi, on the S. side the Loggia degli Osii (1315), and on the opposite side the Palazzo della Città, now occupied by the Exchange and Telegraph Office.

To the E. of the Piazza del Duomo is the Piazza Fontana, with a granite fountain, erected in 1870. On one side of it stands the Archbishop's palace. Close by to the N.E. is the small Piases Becoaria, with a Statue by Grandi, erected in 1871, of the jurist Beccaria (1738-1794). Near at hand are the Law Courts.

The Piazza Borromeo (C. D. 6) has a bronze Statue of San Carlo, by Bussola, formerly in the Cordusio; it stands in front of the small Church of S. M. Podone, belonging to the Borromei, whose Palace forms two sides of the square. In the Piazza Ban Sepoloro, in front of the library he founded, is a Statue of Cardinal Federigo Borromeo, by Costi (1865). In the Piazza Cavour (F. 4) a graceless monument to Cavour was erected in 1865, the bronze Statue of the great minister is by Tabucchi, a Milanese sculptor; that of Clio, the Muse of History, is by Tantardini.

In the Piazza Mentana (C 6) is a monument to the Soldiers who fell in the Battle of 3 Nov. 1867, near Monte Rotondo (Central Italy, Rte. 21).

There were formerly many Crosses and similar monuments in the streets and crossways, but most of them have been removed. Of those that remain, the Leone di Porta Orientale, a small column at the end of the Corso Vittorio Emanuele, is the principal. It is said to commemorate some victory gained by the Milanese over the Venetians, but the lion is not that of St. Mark. In the Corso is the Galleria di Cristoforis, with shops, designed by Pizzala, in 1832.

The GIARDINI PUBBLICI (F. 4) are agreeably diversified with rivulets, grass-plots, flowers, and clumps of trees, among which some fine standard magnolias are worthy of notice; early in July they are in bloom. The large Pal. Giuliuni on the W. side contains the Museo Civico of Natural History. In a building which faces the Porta Venezia have been placed the Collections of the Museo Artistico Municipale.

The favourite promenade of the Milanese on winter afternoons, and towards sunset in summer, is the Avenue on the site of the Bastioni, between Porta Venezia and Porta P. Umberto.

CHUBCHES.

DUOMO.—The present building is the second, perhaps the third, re-edification of the original structure, which St. Ambrose, in his letter to his sister Marcellina, calls the great new Basslica. The primitive cathedral was destroyed by Attıla.

The first stone of the present Cathedral was laid by Gian Galeazzo Visconti, in 1387. For an architect, it is commonly said that he had recourse to the free masons of Germany, and that he obtained the services of Heinrich von Gmünden However. Mr. Perkins, after examining the evidence upon this point, is of opinion that the first architect was an Italian, Marco da Campione (1390). He may have studied north of the Alps, or procured the help of Germans. By such an hypothesis, the difference in style between this and other Italian churches of the time might be accounted for. Italians were afterwards called in; amongst others, the celebrated Brunelleschi of Florence. But Germany still continued to be considered as the school of the architects of the cathedral; and as late as 1486 Gian Galeazzo Sforza addressed letters to the magistrates of Strassburg, requesting them to send him the mastermason of their Domkirche, Hammerer, for the purpose of advising upon some difficulties in the construction.

The building has been often interrupted, and the edifice is yet unfinished in some of its details said to have cost 5 millions sterling. The octagon cupola was vaulted by the Omodei, father and son (1490-1522); the three W. bays of the nave were not completed till 1685. The beautiful central Tower and Spire, which crowns it, were completed in 1772, from the designs of Croce; and the gable and upper range of windows of the front, as well as very many of the buttresses and pinnacles, between 1806 (when the works were resumed by order of Napoleou) and the present time. In this long succession of years many of the first artists of Italy, amongst whom may be named Bramants, Leonardo da Vinci, and Giulio Romano, gave their advice and assistance.

It seems that the original designs for the W. front had been long lost, and the portion of the name, as erected, wanted three of its arches. A front of black and white marble, built considerably within the line of the present structure, curtailed the nave by one-third of its just length; and, as far as this has been raised, it was unfinished, and inelegant. Pellegrini was employed in 1560 by S. Carlo Borromeo to complete the front, and he furnished an Italian design upon a magnificent scale. S. Carlo died; Pellegrini was summoned to Spain by Philip II to paint the Escurial; and the work was carried on very lessurely by Castelli and Francesco Ricchino, who altered the designs and gave to the Roman doors and windows that exuberance of ornament which they now exhibit. Some of the architects of Lombardy strongly protested against the admixture of Roman architecture begun by Pellegrini, and advocated the reconstruction of the W. front in the Pointed style. About 1790 it was determined to carry out this plan, preserving. however, the doors and windows of Pellegrini and Ricchini, on account of their elaborate elegance; and in order to apologise for the discrepancy of the styles, an inscription statung this reason was engraved on the corner buttress of the front.

To these works Napoleon gave great impulse, and their continuation was entrusted to a commission, under whom the façade was brought to its present form, chiefly by the insertion of three Gothic windows; and the greater number of the pinnacles and flying buttresses of the rest of the building were completed. The cost of these undertakings during the French government amounted to about 34 millions of francs. 11 million of this sum was derived from the sale of the lands belonging to the Doomo, the remainder from the property of the suppressed monastic institutions. After the revolution of 1848, the supplies were for a time cut off; still a good deal has been done during the Austrian occupation.

When Amati unserted the Gothic windows, he supported them by bearing-arches of granite; so that, if it should hereafter be thought expedient to remove the Romanised doors and windows, the operation can be performed without injury to the superstructure A project for the carrying out of some such alteration has recently been entertained by a special Commission of Architects from England, France, and Germany. In 1888 the projected work was thrown open to competition, and the designs of Gius. Brentano for a new W. front were accepted.

When Gian Galeazzo endowed the Duomo, he included in his donations the marble-quarries of La Gandoglia, in the valley of the Tosa, on the Simplon road, and of that material the building is entirely constructed. Time gives to this marble a fine warm yellow tint.

In the tracery there is an unusual approximation to the flambogant style. This was probably owing to the mfluence of the French Gothic, as it is most apparent in the great E. window, which was built by Campania from the designs of Nicolas Bonaventure of Paris (1591).

The excellent sculptures of the central door are by Bono, Castelli, and Vismara (about 1635). The tympanum contains a relief of Eve. arabesques in the pilasters are allusive to the Days of the Creation, chiefly sculptured by artists from Como.

The Roof should by all means be ascended (25 c.), A staircase of nearly 200 steps leads from the corner of the S. transept to the roof itself, beyond which there is an ascent of 300 steps to the summit. The cathedral is open in summer at 5 A.M., but the best time to enjoy the *magnificent panoramic view is the evening, the plains being generally covered with mist at an earlier hour.

Steps upon the flying buttresses afford an ascent to the different levels. Two staircases, winding in turrets of open tracery, lead to the platform of the octagon, and a similar staircase in the spire conducts to the gallery, at the foot of the pyramid which crowns it. These turrets were executed by Antonio Omodei (1490-94). The open tracery was executed by Amics of Cremona. The whole is of exquisite fluish

Amongst the statues on the S. side are David and Abigail, St. Helena embracing the Cross, St Lucia and Judith, St. Athanasius, St. Peter, and the Emp. Constantine. On the N. side some caryatides supporting an aqueduct, and the Magdalen, held up by four angels

The view embraces the plain of Lombardy, studded with cities and villages and church-towers; the whole walled in, on the N. and E., by the snowy Alps. To the E., in a line with the cupola of S. M. della Passione, is the plain watered by the Lambro, called the Martesana, and beyond are the mountains of Brescia, which towards the N. are connected with those of the Seriana and Brembana valleys, and with the Resegone, which rises above Lecco, and is distinguished by its serrated form. The lower ridges to the W. of this forms the hilly country of the Brianza, beyond which, and in a line with the Porta Nuova, rises the mountain of San Primo, which stands between the two S. arms of the Lake of Como. To the l. rise the mountains which encircle the Lakes of Como, Varese, and Lugano, with the snowy peaks about the St. Gotthard beyond. Still farther W., the Simplon is distinguished, and then Monte Rosa. Exactly W., Mont Cenis may be seen, and still farther to the 1. the sharp snow-capped pyramid of Monte Viso. Due S. are the Apennines, among which the most remarkable point is the Penice (4825 ft.). Towards the S.E., beyond an insulated group of hills, stretches the vast plain of the Po, with the cities of Lodi, Cremona, and Crema. By ascending to the gallery just before sunrise, the visitor may sometimes enjoy the striking spectacle of the rays of the sna catching successively the snow-clad peaks of the Alps long before the orbitself has appeared on the horizon.

INTERIOR.—Mr. Street records his feeling of "delight that anything so magnificent and so perfect should ever have been reared on the southern slopes of the Alps, to exhibit to the eyes, as it were, of enemies the full majesty and power of the pointed architecture of the North. lutely and without doubt the grandest interior in the world is this noble work. Its grandeur amazes one at first, and delights all the more afterwards, as one becomes on more intimate terms with it, and can look at it with less emotion than at first." The ground-plan is a Latin cross, terminated by a pentagonal apse. nave and double aisles are divided by 4 ranges of colossal clustered pillars, with 9 intercolumniations. The tran-septs have single sisles. There is no triforium, and the vaultings of the roof spring at once from the pillars: hence arises an appearance of great loftiness. 52 piers, each formed by a cluster of 8 shafts, support the pointed arches on which the roof rests. The total beight of each pillar is 80 ft., the diameter 12 ft., that of the four which support the octagonal cupola is one-fifth greater. The beautiful capitals of the nave and choir were designed by Filippino da Modena, in 1500; the lower part is formed by a wreath of foliage, mixed with figures of children and animals, the upper part of each is a canopied niche. The roof is painted to represent an elaborate flamboyant fretwork. The execution is modern, but the design, as well as this mode of ornamentation, is ancient. Its effect is very trivial. The 5 doorways on the inside were designed by Fabio Magnoni in 1548. Flanking the great doorway are two monoliths of pink Baxene granite, given by San Carlo. (Height 35 ft., diameter 3 ft. 10\frac{1}{2} in.; total | cost 1948l.).

The pavement is crossed near the W. door by a brass meridian line, laid down by the astronomers of the Brera in 1786. The hole through which the sun shines at noon to measure the length of the line may be seen high up in the vaulting of the 1st chapel rt. Originally all the windows were filled with painted glass. Pellegrini designed those in the nave: much glass remains, of extraordinary brilliancy, but a great deal is lost. The restoration of the painted windows of the apse has been completed by Milanese The lower ranges contain artists. subjects from the Apocalypse. of the glass, too, in the S. transept, and the W. window, are modern and poor in design.

Behind the altar are three gigantic windows, each 76 ft. high, and 30 ft. wide, best seen with the morning sun behind them. The effect of the brilliant background is much heightened by the dark bronze of the pulpits.

Suspended from the vaulting of the octagon over the altar is a reliquary, said to contain one of the nails of the Cross, which annually, on the feast of the Invention of the Holy Cross (3rd May), is exposed upon the altar.

Remarkable Objects, beginning from the W. end, on the rt. Granite sarcophagus of Abp. Aribert (1045).—Gilded Crucifix (11th cent.).—Recumbent effigies, in red Verona marble, of Otto Visconti, Abp. and Signore of Milan (1295); earlier than the foundation of the present building. He left his N. Italy.

goods and chattels to the Knights of St. John, who erected this monument. The same tomb, by a singular economy, serves as that of Abp. Giovanni Visconti (1354), who also united in his person the temporal and spiritual supremacy of Milan.—Gothic altartomb (1394) of Marco Carelli, a benefactor of the Duomo, by Filippino of Modena, with small figures in niches.—Small monument of Giovanni Andrea Vimercati, a canon of the cathedral, with two heads in low relief by Bambaja (1537–1548). Then follow three altars erected in the time of the Archbishops Borromeo.

According to the strict Ambrosian rule, there ought, as in the Greek Church, to be only one altar in the cathedral, and the Duomo was planned accordingly. Other altars have been introduced, but there are fewer than usual; and the chapels are much less prominent than in similar buildings.

In the S. Transept is the monument, erected by their brother, Pope Paul IV., to Giacomo (1556) and Gabriele (1531) de' Medici, the former being the pirate Marquis of Marignano, uncle of San Carlo, executed in bronze by Leone Leoni. In the splendid window S.E. of this tomb, the armorial bearings of the deceased are introduced. This Medici, often called il Medichino, was not of the family of the ducal house of Florence, though the armorial bearings are the same.

The principal altar in the S. transept has the pilasters of its arch and its archivolt covered with elaborate reliefs by Simonetta, San Pietro, Zarabatta, Brunetti, Bussola, and others. Further on is the entrance to an underground passage leading to the Archbishop's Palace. Next is the altar of the Presentation of the Virgin, by Bambaja (1510), who has attempted a difficult representation of perspective in sculpture. The statue, by Agrate, of St. Bartholomew flayed, has the inscription, Non me Praxiteles, sed Marcus finxit Agrates, adopted from an epigram in the Greek Anthology.

The large alto-relieve of the Martyrdom of Santa Apollonia is by Ercole Procaccini. The statues of St. Saturus by Cacciators, and St. Ambrose by Gaetano Monti, were placed here in 1842.

Entering the Choir-aisle the elaborate Gothic doorway, composed of foliage intermixed with imagery, on the rt., leads to the southern Sacristy. High up is a sitting statue of Pope Martin V. by Jacopino da Tradate, erected by Filippo Maria Visconti, to commemorate the consecration of the high alter by that pontiff in 1421

The black marble tomb of Cardinal Caracciolo, governor of Milan during the Spanish domination (1538), with figures by Bambaja, is striking in its general effect.

On the wall beneath the first of the great E. windows is a marble tablet with a monogram of high antiquity, called the Chrismon Sancti Ambrosiu, which contains the A and A, besides other symbols. Some suppose it to be a Gnostic monument. Under the central window, engraved on two black marble tablets, on each side of a dedicatory inscription to S. Carlo, is a long list of relics of saints preserved in the cathedral.

Near this is the sitting statue of Pope Pius IV. (1559-1565), by Angelo de Manis, a Scalian (1560). The elegant semi-Gothic bracket which supports it is by Brambilla.

The circuit wall of the choir, towards the aisles, is covered with reliefs, representing the history of the Virgin. The subjects are divided into compartments by angels, whose attitudes are finely varied.

The chapel of the Holy Sacrament, in the N. transept, contains some fine reliefs, and a Statue of the Madonna, by Huzzi. In front are the slab tombs of Cardinal Federigo Borromeo, nephew of S. Carlo, of Card. Caccia, and of two archbishops of the Visconti family. The very curious *Candelabrum was presented to the cathedral by the arch-priest Trivulzio, in 1562; but it is probably of much earlier date. The 4 feet are composed of grotesque dragons, with tails turned back on the central stem. Foliage unites the bodies of the dragons, and little angels are seen contending with demons and wild creatures; below are representations of men in torment. 7 ft. from the ground the stem is encircled with foliage, scrolls; and figures of the Virgin, Child, and the procession of the three kings. Two *windows in this transept, filled with numerous small subjects, are among the most beautiful in Italy.

beautiful in Italy.

In the N. aisle of the nave, the first altar has a picture of St. Ambrose absolving Theodosius, by F. Baroccio; beyond which is an altar with the Crucifix which was carried about the city, before St. Carlo, during the plague. The two modern statues at the sides are St. Martha, by Cocciatore, and the Magdalen, by Monti. The next space contains an altartomb, erected in 1480, and restored in 1832; it has a good relief by Marchesi. Then follow eight red marble statues of saints, with a mediaval relief of the Virgin and Child, St. Catherine, and St. Paul. The Baptistery a small square temple supported by four marble columns—is by Pellegrini. It contains an ancient labrum, from a bath of the lower Empire, used as a font-the Ambrosian ritual requiring baptism by immersion.

Two of the great pillars supporting the octagonal cupola, on each side of the choir, are encircled by Pulpita, partly of bronze, began by direction of San Carlo, and completed by his nephew, Cardinal Federigo Borromeo. These are covered with reliefs by Andrea Pellizone, and rest on colossal caryatides, representing (N.) the symbols of the Evangelists, and (S.) the four Doctors of the Church, SS. Gregory, Jerome, Ambrose, and Augustine, bending and spreading forwards to support the superstructure, modelled by Brambilla, and cast

cathedral by the arch-priest Trivulzio, in 1562; but it is probably of much earlier date. The 4 feet are composed of grotesque dragons, with Ambrose. The organ-cases are two with gilded carvings and paintings by !
Figini, Camillo Procaccini, and Giuseppe Meda.

On the high altar is a magnificent tabernacle of gilt bronze, with figures of the Saviour and the Apostles, by the Salari, the gift of Pius IV.

A handsome Gothic candelabrum hangs from the roof of the choir. Beneath the choir is the subterranean church, used as a Winter Choir, from the designs of Pellegrini. W. of it is the *Chapel of San Carlo, rebuilt in 1817, from the designs of Pestagalli, in the form of a lengthened octagon (open daily before 10 A.M.; at other times I fr., and for showing the relics 5 fr.). It is lighted by an opening in the pavement above, but not sufficiently to allow of the objects in it being seen without the aid of tapers. The walls are covered with eight oval reliefs in silver-gilt, representing the principal events of the life of the saint, viz .- The Birth of San Carlo; his presiding at the Provincial Coun-cil of Milan (1565), in which canons were enacted virtually protesting against some of the worst abuses of the Roman Church; San Carlo's distribution to the poor of 40,000 crowns, the proceeds of the sale of his lifeinterest in the principality of Oria .--San Carlo's administration of the Sacrament during the great plague.-The attempt made to assassinate him. (San Carlo had laboured to introduce salutary reforms into the order of Umiliati, whose scandalous mode of living had given great offence. Some members of the order conspired to murder him. A priest named Farina was hired to execute the deed. He gained access to his private chapel, and, as San Carlo was kneeling at the altar, fired at him. The bullet struck San Carlo on the back, but dropped harmless on the ground; and the failure of the attempt was considered as an interposition of Providence. San Carlo continued in prayer, while all around him were in consternation. The assassin escaped for a time, but was ultimately executed, though San Oarlo endeavoured to save him.)-. The great translation of relics effected by him.—The Death of San Carlo on 4th Nov., 1584, aged 46 years.—His reception into Paradise. These tablets are surrounded by fanniful ornaments. Thus round a tablet given by the money-changers are coroncopias pouring out money, the coins being real golden florins, pistoles, ducata, &c. Jawels, crosses, rings, and other votive gifts are hung around.

The body of the saint is deposited in a gorgeous shrine of silver, the gift of Philip IV, of Spain. The corpse, dressed in full pontificals, is seen through panes of rock-crystal, for the working of which the Milanese artists were celebrated. The skill of embalmers has not been able to preserve the body from decay. The brown and shrivelled flesh of the mouldering countenance scarcely covers the bone: the head is all but a skull, and the face, alone uncovered, offers a touching aspect amidst the splendid robes and ornaments in which the figure is shrouded. Upon the sarcophagus, and worked upon the rich tapestry, is repeated in golden letters San Carlo's favourite motto, Humilitas, which long, however, before his time had been borne by the Borromeo family. "Amid the changes and revolutions of Italy no one has dered to violate the sanctity of his chapel or take away a jewel from among the offerings of his votaries. What the good saint, whose motto was Humilitas, would have thought of the gold, silver, gems, and crystal lavished upon him, we can all imagine."-Mrs. Jameson

On the anniversary of his death large pictures are suspended between the pillars of the transcepts and nave, representing the life and miracles of the Saint. His body may be seen on the eve and festival, and during the octave, when the crypt is open and much resorted to by devotees.

The S. *Bacristy contains some objects of interests (adm. 1 fr.), the remains of a much larger collection. An Evangelistarium, the cover richly worked in enamel, a MS. copy of the Gospels, from which the archbishop reads portions on certain great festivals. It was given to the Duomo by Archbishop Aribert in 1018, but is probably of much older date than his time, the workmanship of the enamel appearing to be of the Carlovingian era. A small ressel of avery, ornamented with whole-length figures, the Virgin and Child, and the Evangelists, placed beneath Lombard arches. It was given by Abp Godfrey, by whom it was used at the coronation of the Emp. Otho H., A.D 978. Two diptychs of the Lower Empire, of good workmanship, representing events in the history of our Lord; Greek inscriptions, not all correct in their spelling, and one almost mexplicable. Full-length Statues of St. Ambross and San Carlo in silver. The first was given by the city in 1698, and was the work of Scarpoletti and twenty other goldsmiths. There are small statues of gold in the pastoral staff, and events in the history of the saint are delineated on his chasuble. The statue of San Carlo was given by the goldsmiths in 1610. Several busts of the same material and character. A mitre, said to have been worn by San Carlo during the pestilence It is embroidered with the brightest feathers, and was probably brought from some of the Spanish American convents. The statue in marble of the Saviour is by C. Solari.

There are also some splendid specimens of goldsmiths' work, reliquaries, ostensories, crosses, rings, &c., particularly a Pax, by Caradosso, the gift of Pius IV. It contains many figures; the principal group represents a Deposition from the Cross; the figures are worked with the utmost delicacy. Ambrogio Foppa, nicknamed Caradosso, was a Milanese, the contemporary of Cellini, and earned the praise of the jealous Tuscan. He was also a die-sinker, in which art he excelled, and an architect. Foppa was not handsome; and a Spanish grandee having in contempt called him "Cara d'Osso," or Bear's Face, he very innocently adopted the name, without understanding it, perhaps thinking it a compliment.

The Ambrosian rite is almost the only national liturgy in the West which has been spared by the Roman Church, and it is probably much older than the Roman Liturgy. The Rito, or Culto Ambrosiano, is in use throughout the whole of the ancient archbishopric of Milan. Several attempts have been made to introduce the Roman Service in its place, but they have been foiled by the attachment of the clergy and the people to their ancient rite; and even in the present age " noi Ambrosiani" is an expression employed with a certain warmth of national feeling. The service is longer than the Roman. The Scriptures are not read from the Vulgate, but from the ancient version called the Italica, which preceded that made by St. Jerome. No musical instrument is permitted except the organ; the melodies of modern music are rarely introduced, and the monotonous chant maintains its supremacy. There are many minor differences in the ceremonies, which are auxiously retained, extending even to the shape of the censers or turiboli.

A species of tunnel connects the Duomo with the Archiepiscopal Palace. Annexed to it is a workshop belonging to the fabric, in which is the model of one of the plans for completing the front of the Duomo. It is so large that a man can stand up in it; but it is sadly broken and neglected. According to this plan the front would have had a noble portal of Gothic archer. Opposite the E. end is the Fabbriceria del Duomo, the residence of the dignitaries and officials connected with the Cathedral.

8. Alessandro (D. 6) belonged to the Barnabites, by whom it was rebuilt in 1602. It was restored in 1834. There is a large cupola over the nave, and a smaller one at the transept. The interior is rich with decorations and paintings, some of these being by C. Procaccini and D. Crespi. The pulpit and high altar are rich in marbles and precious stones. The wooden door and confessionals deserve notice. The Barnabites, in 1723, established here.

in emulation of the Jesuits, a College | for noble families.

*SANT' AMBROGIO (B, C. 6) was founded by St. Ambrose, when Bo. of Milan, and dedicated by him June 19th, 387, to SS. Gervasius and Protasius, martyrs during the Neronian persecution, A.D 67 He removed their remains to this basilica after their position had been, according to the tradition, revealed to him in a vision. Posterity has transferred the dedication to the founder As it now stands, it was built by Abp. Aspertus (about 868-81), and is the most ancient ecclesiastical structure in Milan, When restored in 1631 by the architect Richini, by order of Cardinal Federigo Borromeo, all its features were preserved with little alteration.

The oblong 9th-cent. atrium, beyond which the catechumens were not allowed to pass, is surrounded by arcades, supported by pilasters with half-columns—the sculpture on the capitals of which, animals and runic knots, are good specimens of early Christian art.

The five arches of the Lombard front are very characteristic-those above enclosing a gallery which stands over the peristyle. Fragments of frescoes still remain on the walls of the atrium, round which are arranged alab tombs, urns, altars, votive and sepulchral inscriptions, found in 1813, when the pavement of the basilica was taken up and repaired.

Two small panels,—one at the top of each of the folding-doors, hidden behind iron-work, and best seen at poon, are said to be part of the gates of the Basilica Portiana, now the Church of San Vittore al Corpo, which St. Ambrose closed against the Emperor Theodosius after his merciless alaughter of the inhabitants of Thessalonica in 389. These relics are of sypress-wood, and, though not decayed, bear the marks of extreme age. The doors, of wood, are ornamented with foliage and Scripture histories. The general costume and treatment of many of the figures is that of the 15th the two bronze masks of the knockers were added. Over the side doors are rude reliefs (l.) of a martyr between two lions, (rt.) marine monsters.

The architecture of the interior was, like the atrium, Lombard. In the 13th cent. Gothic arches were built up under the circular ones which support the roof, in order to strengthen them; but these have been removed during a complete restoration of the church (1870-74), and new round arches of brick have been supplied.

The Nave was originally divided on the plan into square portions, each division having two semicircular arched openings on each side below, and two above in the gallery. with a vaulting of semicircular grouned arches, groinings being added on the roof. The fourth square is covered by the octagonal lantern, which is pro-bably an addition of the 18th cent. The parallel walls of the building continue a little beyond the lantern, and terminate in an ancient apse. On entering, immediately to the rt., is an ancient half-length figure in relief, with shaven head and chin, pallium, and pontifical garments, the right hand raised in the act of giving benediction, the left holding an open book on which is written "Sanctus Ambrosina." Beneath it is the sarcophagus of Bp. Aspertus. Close by is an affected Statue of Pius IX. in white marble. In the 1st recess on the rt... forming a side entrance, are frescoes of the Deposition by Gaudentio Ferrars, and opposite, under glass, the the Cross, by B. Luini; the 2nd has over the altar a good kneeling statue of S. Marcellina, by Marchesi; in the 4th, St. George destroying the Dragon, and the Martyrdom of that Saint, by Lanini,-the vault and arches beautifully decorated with flowers, arabesques, and children. On the wall, under glass, at the end of the rt. eisle, is a triptych (retouched), by an old Lombard painter—the Virgin and Child, with SS. Ambrose and Jerome, est, they were restored in 1750, when and a Virgin and Child, with 88

Church, restored, has a central octagonal dome, triple apse, old carved capitals, and a modern mosaic of S. Babylas blessing three youthful Saints.

San Bernardino dei Morti (E. 6) is an octagonal church, with a copola. E. of it is a Chapel, entirely walled with skulls and bones symmetrically disposed. Some say that they are the remains of the Catholics slain by the Arians in the time of St. Ambrose. The oblations for masses are said to amount annually to about 5001.

San Carlo Borromeo (F. 5) was built from the designs of Amati, by contributions raised after the first invasion of the cholera, and commenced in 1838. It is a circular edifice, surmounted by a dome, only second in size to that of the Pantheon at Rome, its diameter being 105 ft., its height 120 ft., and with the lantern, 150. In front is a Corinthian peristyle, opening on a square, surrounded by a portico of granite columns of the same order. The interior has still an unfinished. bare look, notwithstanding its 24 magnificent columns of pink Bayeno granite. In a Chapel on the rt. is a Pietà by Marchesi; opposite, San Carlo administering the Sacrament to a young man, by the same sculptor.

San Celso (D. 8). St. Ambrose, in 396, discovered in a field called "ad Tres Moros," the bodies of the martyrs Nazarus and Celsus, beheaded at Milan under Nero, A.D. 69. That of S. Nazarus was deposited in the Church of SS. Apostoli; but over that of S. Celsus, which was allowed to remain in its original resting-place, he built a small Church, afterwards enlarged, and restored in 1651. There only now remains the choir, an ancient painting in a lunette, and a door with symbolical ornaments of the 10th cent. The square brick campanile is of the 13th or 14th cent. Some fragments of early Christian sculptureincluding a sarcophagus of the 4th cent.-which were dug up in the neighbourhood, have been placed on the walls, and the front has been painted to represent the atrium, which is supposed to have stood in front of the building. Adjoining this is the fine Church of S. Maria (see below).

- 5. Enfemia (D. 7) has been entirely rebuilt, except the Chancel and the first two bays of the Nave. In the 1st chapel 1. is a freeco of the Virgin and Child with St. Catharine, a donor, and two Angels (Milanese School).
- *8. EUSTORGIO (C. 8), one of the oldest Churches in Milan, was dedicated (A.D. 320) by Abp. Eustorgias, who is said to have deposited in it the bodies of the Three Magi, presented to him by the Emp. Constantine. It is one of the few remains of ancient Milan which escaped destruction from The Dominican order Barbarossa. established themselves and the tribunal of the Inquisition here in 1218, and under them it was reduced to its present form by Tosano Lombardino (1227). In 1865 the Church underwent a thorough restoration. Several curious reliefs of the 12th cent. adorn the capitals of the piers. Campanile was built between 1297 and 1809. The interesting Tombs were much mutilated during the first occupation of the French, and of the Cisalpine Republic. Their armorial bearings have been so completely defaced that it is very difficult to discover to whom several of them belong.

Ist chapel rt.: monument of Stefano Brivio (1485), of very delicate cinquecento work, said to be from a design of Bramante. The Virgin and Child with two saints over the altar are by Borgognone, 2nd; monument to Pietro (1416), a son of Guido Torelli, Lord of Guastalia. 4th: tomb of Stefano Visconti (1327), son of Matteo Magno; the sarcophagus with its Gothic canopy supported by spiral columns resting on marble lions. 6th: fine tomb of Gasparo Visconti (1434), some traces of the usignia of the Order of the Garter may yet be discerned. Gasparo obtained this distinction.

consequence of his having been repeatedly despatched to the court of Edward III., upon the negotiations for the matrimonial alliances effected or proposed between our royal family and the Visconti. On the sarcophagus are reliefs of the Adoration of the Magi. Opposite is the Tomb of his wife Agues, with relief of the Coronation.

In the chapel on the rt, of the high altar is an enormous sarcophagus, which once held the relics of the Three Kings, destitute of sculptures or inscriptions, except a modern one in large gult letters, — "Sepulchrum Trium Magorum." At the approach of Frederick Barbarossa the citizens removed the relics from this Church. which then stood without the walls; but upon the fall of the city they became the trophies of the victor, and Archbp. Rinaldus, of Cologne, carried them off to his own city. Adjacent is a relief in three compartments, representing the Procession and Adoration of the Kings (1347). It is supposed to have been executed by some of the scholars of Balduccio da Pisa. Over the high altar, which has been restored, are reliefs of the Passion and Crucifixion, given by Gian Galeazzo.

On the same level, behind the raised choir, is the well-proportioned Cappella Portinari, erected by Michelozzo for a Florentine, Pigello dei Portmari, the treasurer of Lodovico il Moro, in 1460, and adorned with frescoes by Foppa. The friese of Angels is by Michelozzo. Here stands the magnificent "SHRING OF S. PETER MARTYR, by Balduccio of Pisa (1339), an exceedingly beautiful specimen of Tuscan art. The body of the saint was brought here in 1252, after his murder. The large white marble sarcophagus, carved with representations of his miracles, is supported by 8 pillars of red Veronese marble, in front of which stand 8 female figures. Statues of the Doctors of the Church, St. Thomas and St. Eustorgius, stand on either side the urn. The allegorical repremutations of the Virtues are characsistic of the Pisan school: -Charity, —Faith,—Fortitude,—Prudence, with three faces, contemplating past, present, and future, Hope, looking upwards and grasping a nosegay of budding flowers,—Obedience, holding a Bible, —Temperance, pouring water from a vase. Above is a temple, with the Virgin and Child, St. Dominic, and St. Peter Martyr. "In one of the reliefs the grouping of the figures is most fancifully complicated by the undercut cordage of the vessel." — Ruskin. A likeness of Pigello, the founder, is preserved in a painting above the Sacristy door.

In the spee and on several of the piers are some freely-restored figures of Saints in freeco (14th cent.).

At the N. corner of the modernised W. front is a pulpit, from which it is said that Peter Martyr preached to the multitude against the Cathari and other heresies which then abounded in Milan. Fra Pietro did not, however, content himself with preaching, but worked out in practice what has been approvingly styled "the theory of persecution." He exercised without mercy the office of Inquisitor, and fell a victim quite as much to the fears as to the revenge of those who slew him (see Rtc. 32). He was canonised only 13 years after his death, and pictures of him by the first masters abound throughout N. Italy. In the same square is his Statue on a grapite column.

- Church of Milan, built for the Jesuits by S. Carlo Borromeo, from the designs of Pellegrini in 1560. The reliefs of the front, not finished until 1834, are by Gaetano Monti and his pupils, and have considerable merit. The woodwork of the Confessionals and Sacristy is worthy of notice. In front of it is the large Palazzo Marino, now the Mumcipio, and on another side of the square is the Manzoni Theatre.
- 8. Giorgio in Palazzo (D. 6) was founded in 750, by St. Natalia, but has been much modernised. The frescoes on the ceiling of the choir are by 8 Montalto. In the 1st chapel on the rt. is St. Jerome, by Gaudensio Ferrari The frescoes of the *Ecce Homo and other Passion Scenes, in the 3rd chapel rt., are by Luini.

San Giovanni in Conca (D 6), now converted into a Protestant Yaudous Chape! The brick 13th-cent front is a simple gable end. The central entrance and the rose-window are good. Over it is the figure of St. John the Evangelist in a Conca or oil-caldron.

Ban Gottardo (open from 11 to 3) stands within the precincts of the Royal Palace. It was built on the site of the ancient Broletto, by Francesco Pecorari, of Cremona, for Azzone Visconti, Signor of Milan in 1336. Its conspicuous brick tower, an interesting specimen of mediæval architecture, has little shafts of stone at its angles and around the bell-loft. The spire, cut to indicate scales or shingles, terminates in a globe, and a little winged figure which supports a weathercock. A portion of the original terra-cotta apse behind the choir still remains. It was when proceeding to this Church that Giovanni Maria Visconti was slain, 16th May, 1412 The diabolical ferocity of this tyrant had continued unchecked for 10 years. That his unbridled cruelty at last terminated in perfect insanity cannot be doubted. He is buried in the chapel near the altar, but his tomb was destroyed by the French, and the interior of the chapel is now entirely modernised. The exterior retains its ancient aspect.

*S. Lorenzo (C. 7), close to the Colonne di San Lorenzo, the most considerable vestige of Roman Milan. These 16 white marble Corinthian columns are of the 3rd cent. Mouldering, fire-scathed, shattered by violence, these relies contrast strangely with the bustle and vivacity of the street in which they stand. Modern antiquaries consider them as portions of the peristyle of the baths of Hercules; and the constructions which can yet be traced in the adjoining Church seem to confirm this conclusion. The increased intercolumnation of the 8 columns on the L is an irregularity found in the nearly contemporary palace at Spalato.

The ancient Church of San Lorenzo fell down in 1573. The interior was rebuilt in some degree upon the plan of San Vitale at Ravenna, and has 8 sides, 4 being filled by lofty arches enclosing recesses or galleries. The arches which fill the intervals are smaller-the lower Doric, the higher Ionic. A Doric cornice serves as the impost to the cupola, a regular octagon, having a window in each compartment. In a chapel behind the high altar is the white marble recluing effigy erected by Gaspare Visconti to Gio. Conti in 1538. On the opposite wall is an ancient alab-tomb. At the first altar on the rt. the pictures are by Aurelio Luini. On the rt. the basilica communicates with the octagonal Chapel of St. Aquilinus, founded by Ataulphus, King of the Goths and successor of Alarie, who aspired to the glory of being the restorer, not the destroyer, of Rome. In this chapel, which, excepting the cupols, is ancient, although entirely moderuused on the surface, is the remarkable *Tomb of Ataulphus (116), who married Galla Placidia, daughter of Theodosius the Great. It bears considerable resemblance to that of his wife at Ravenna, and, like hers, is without an inscription, and of very plain workmanship. The monogram of Christ (with the descending dove over a cross), and a species of Runso knot, with two lambs, are the only ornaments. In the chapel are Christian *mosaics, of the 6th cent. On the rt., Our Lord in the midst of the Apostles—a fountain gushes from His feet as an emblem of the living waters; on the l., Shepherds and their Plocks, and the Sacrifice of Isnac. It is thought that this part of the building was one of the chambers of the ancient baths. The shrine of St. Aquilians is a rich specimen of pietra-dura work. The entrance-dura the chapel is of the lower empire, and covered with sculpture.

S. Marco (D. E. 4) was built in 1254. The 14th-cent. Gothic facade (restored in 1876) has a good marble round-arch entrance, above which, in brick niches, are statues—the central one of St. Mark. Over the two pointed windows are some carious low-reliefs in brickwork. The intehor was modernised in 1690. It contains some paintings by Lomazzo; the best is the Madonna and Infant, with mints, in the 3rd chapel rt. Over the high altar is a rich circular tabernacle in the form of a Corinthian temple. In the vestibule opening out of the rt. transept are seven medizeval monuments in marble; one of Lanfranco Septala, first general of the Augustinian Order (1243), is attribated to Balduccio of Pisa. He is represented seated teaching amidst his pupils, his recumbent statue on the urn above. Another, with good colptures, to one of the Aliprandi family (1344, on which the heads of the principal personages have been painted and gilt; and a third with a Crucifixion, and a professor teaching. The adjoining conventual buildings belonged to the Order of St. Augus-

Sta. Maria del Carmine (D. 4, 5), originally Gothic (1446), was altered into Roman in 1660, and restored in 1835. It contains two ancient Lombard pictures, and a Madonna with 188. Roch and Sebastian in fresco, by B. Luini, 2nd chapel 1. The Chapel at the end of the rt. aisle, incrusted with marbles and gilt stucco, contains on the wall a picture by Camillo Protaccini.

Sta. Maria presso San Celso (D. 8).
According to tradition, St. Ambrose, on the spot on which he found the remains of SS. Nazarus and Celsus, placed a picture of the Madonna, who, on the 30th Dec., 1483, appeared there. The miracle drew so many process to the small Church built in by Filippo Maria, that it was resolved to enlarge it, and this was commenced in 1491 from the plans of Bramants, or his pupil Giacomo Dolcebono. In front is a handsome square court with five arches on each side, having Corinthian capitals in bronze. The front was carried on and altered in 1572 by Martino Bassi, and completed by Galeazzo Alessi, to whom the present design is principally Its sculptures are remark-The statues of Adam and able. Eve, and the reliefs of the Salutation. Adoration of the Magi, and Flight into Egypt, are by Stoldo Lorenzi. a. Florentine; the rest are by Annibale Fontana, a Milanese. The capitals of the pilasters in the nave are of bronze. The rich organ over the entrance has statues of prophets on each side, by Fontana, and is supported by caryatides. Statues of the Apostles stand round the 12-sided cupola, Below, on the pilasters which support the dome, is a statue of St. John the Baptist, by Fontana, and two others, by Lorenzi. The 4th space is occupied by the altar of the Virgin, on which the miraculous painting is preserved. The altar is rich in silver and gold, the sculptures by Fontana. The high altar is adorned with precious marbles. The woodwork of the stalls is by Taurini. Beyond the 1st altar rt. is the Martyrdom of SS. Nazarus and Celsus, by G. C. Procaccini. The mother of San Nazaro was Perpetua, who had received the faith from St Peter. The roof of the nave is richly decorated with sunken and gilt circular and octagonal panels. In the rt. transept is a fine *St. Jerome kneeling before the Infant Saviour, and a predella with some small pictures, by Paris Bordone. Behind the choir are the Baptism of Christ (4th chapel), by Gaud. Ferrari; St. Jerome, in the 6th, by Calisto du Lodi; and the Conversion of St. Paul, in the 7th, by Moretto. In the l. transept, the altar is an ancient surcophagus, which contains the relies of S. Celsus. in the 1st chapel 1. a good Madonna with SS, Roch and John Bapt, adoring the Child by Borgognone, and below it a Madonna by Sassoferroto.

Close to this is the ancient Church of San Celso. (See above.)

8. M. delle Grazie (B 5), with its Dominican Convent (1464-93), was founded by Count Gasparo Vimercati, commander-in-chief of the ducal army. Lodovico il Moro and his wife Beatrice were liberal contributors to the building.

The front is a good specimen of Lombard style of brick, with ornaments of terra-cotta. The wide Gothic nave of seven bays with pointed arches, surmounted by a grouned vault, is still grand. The cupola, attributed to Bramante, is covered with miserable modern chiaroscuro. In the 2nd chapel on the rt. is St. John the Baptist, attributed to Francesco d' Adda. In the 4th are some noble *frescoes by Gaudenzio Ferrari, unfortunately much injured. Three compartments, dated 1542, contain the principal events of the Passion. The vaulting of of the Passion. the chapel retains its paintings in their original full and vigorous tone. The Angels bearing the instruments of the Passion are very fine. denzio exerted his utmost skill in these paintings, expecting to have an order for the altar-piece, but Titian was preferred, his celebrated Saviour crowned with Thorns, now in the Lonvre, having stood here. In the 5th chapel rt., a Crucifixion over the altar, and Angels on the vaulting, by Carlo di Oroma; the roof of the last chapel on the rt., and the vaults of the choir, are by the school of Leonardo da Vinci. The Choir has some good intarsia work in the stalls, The high alter is a fine specimen of richly inlaid marble work. A highly decorated chapel in the l. aisle contains a good but injured fresco, probably by Zenale, with numerons portraits of the family for whom it was painted.

In the Sacristy, entered through the smaller cloisters out of the L. transept, are a series of presses (Lo Scaffale), painted by B. Luini or from his designs, with arabesques in imitation of iniaid wood (1500-1523). Graner has published beautiful illustrations of this painted work in chromo-little graphy. Two descrited Cioisters, and the walls of the sacristy, are covered with portraits of celebrated Dominicans, and the 3rd with scenes of event in which the Order played a part and the Glorification of St. Thomas Aquinas.

In the Befectory (9 to 3, 1 fr.; Sur. and Thurs. 12 to 3, free), entered by a gate to the W. of the Church. is the celebrated *Cenacolo, or Last Supper, of LEONARDO DA VINCI. Perhaps no one work of art has had more written about it, and none has obtained higher praise. "This picture of the Last Supper has not only been grievously injured by time, but parts are said to have been painted over again. These niceties may be left to connoisseurs-I speak of it as I felt. The copy exhibited in London some years ago, and the engraving by Morghen, are both admirable; but in the original is a power which neither of those works has attained, or even approached."-Wordsworth.

It was begun in 1493, being among the first works which Leonardo executed under the patronage of Lodovice il More. According to Vasari, Leonardo told the Duke he must leave the head of the Saviour imperfect, because he could not realise his conception of the celestial beauty it ought to possess: but this head is one of the finest portions of the whole. Leonardo employed 16 years upon the work; but he used a new process, which proved its rum. The ground is plaster, impregnated with mastic or pitch, melted in by means of a hot iron. This ground he covered with a species of priming, composed of a mixture of white-lead and some earthy colours, which took a fine polish, but from which the oil-colour flaked off.

The materials with which the wall was built was of a very bad quality, rendering it susceptible of injury from damp. As early as 1500 the Refectory seems to have been flooded, owing to its low situation. The vicinity of the kitchen smoked the painting, which whibited early symptoms of decay. | Armenini, who saw it about 50 years fifter it was painted, said it was then half spoiled; and Scanelli, who saw it to 1642, speaking hyperbolically, observed that it was then difficult to discover the subject. In 1652 the Piars, wishing to enlarge the door, out away Christ's feet and those of nome of the Apostles, and, by shaking the wall in cutting it away, brought pf parts of the surface. In 1726, Belotti, an indifferent artist of much pretension, who painted the fresco over the door of the Church, permaded the friars that he was posessed of a secret method which would entirely restore the faded painting. He concealed himself behind planks, and painted it all over. In 1770, Mazza, wretched dauber, was employed to go over the whole of it again The three heads, however, to the extreme Tt. of the spectator escaped, in conbequence of the outcry which the proceeding raised.

When Napoleon was at Milan in 1796 he visited the Refectory, and ordered that the spot should be exsmpted from being occupied by the military. This order was disobeyed, and the room was employed as a gavalry stable, and afterwards as a hay magazine. The door was then pr some time built up, in order effectasily to exclude the military. In 1800, owing to the drain being blocked the rain falling for 15 days, the Refectory was flooded to a considerble depth. In 1801, Bossi, secretary the Academy, had it reopened; mused it to be repaired and drained, and everything done which might in my way tend to preserve the remains of the painting.

The late Professor Phillips, R.A., in 1825 "examined its condition with careful and minute attention, and could with difficulty find a portion of its original surface.

"Till this time all paintings on walls had been wrought in fresco; but will paintings, which had become known and practised in smaller works, better wited Da Vinci's mode of proceeding, as it admits of retouching or repainting: and, unfortunately, he adopted it here. At the present time, little or nothing, it may be said, remains of Leonardo, save the composition, and the forms generally.

"Of the heads, there is not one untouched, and many are totally ruined. Fortunately, that of the Saviour is the most pure, being but faintly retouched; and it presents even yet a most perfect image of that divine character."

-Phillips' Lectures.

"That part which is to the right-hand of the large dish, under the figure of our Saviour, including an orange, a glass of wine, a portion of two loaves, and a large piece of the tablecloth just about and under these objects, are, in my opinion, the only part of this great work which have been untouched. These parts have all the beauty of finish to be found in Da Vinci's oil pictures."—J. C. H.

"The figure of Christ forms the centre; He sits in a tranquil attitude, a little apart from the others; the disciples are ranged three and three together, and they form two separate groups on each side of the Saviour. These four groups in their general treatment indicate a certain correspondence of emotion and a harmony in movement, united, however, with the greatest variety in gesture and in the expression of the heads."—Kugler

The figures of the Apostles are thus placed :- The standing figure to the extreme left of the spectator is St. Bartholomew; then St. James the Less, St. Andrew, Judas, St. Peter, St. John. To the rt., St. Thomas (with the forefinger raised), St. James the Greater, St. Philip, St. Matthew, St. Thaddeus, St. Simon. "The wellknown words of Christ, 'One of you shall betray me,' have caused the liveliest emotion, The two groups to the left of Christ are full of impassioned excitement, the figures in the first turning to the Saviour, those in the second speaking to each other; horror, astonishment, suspicion, doubt, alternate in the various expressions. On the other hand, stillness, low whispers, indirect observation, are the prevailing expressions in the groups on the right. In the middle of the first group sits the betrayer, a cunning sharp profile: he looks up hastily to Christ, as if speaking the words, 'Master, is it 1?' while, true to the scriptural account, his left hand and Christ's right hand approach, as if unconsciously, the dish that stands between them."—Kugler.

At the opposite end of the Refectory is a very large and well preserved fresco of the Crucifixion by Montorfano (1495). It contains a great number of figures grouped without any confusion.

8. M. della Passione (G. 6) was built in 1485. The fine cupola (160 ft. high) was raised in 1530, from the design of Solari. The front (1692) is heavy and overloaded: upon it are fine high-reliefs of the Scourging, Crowning with Thorns, and Entombment. The nave has eight chapels in each aisle. In the 6th chapel rt. is a picture attributed to Luini - Christ among the Doctors. Opposite is a Flagellation, by Com. In the rt. transept is a Procaccini. Crucifixion, by G. Campi, the roof above it is painted in fresco, by his brother Antonio: near this is the *tomb of two of the Biraghi family, founders of the Church - Daniel, Bishop of Mytilene, on the urn above. In the I transcpt is a *Last Supper by Gaudenzio Ferrari, and Christ in the Garden, by Salmeggia. The Flagellation, Resurrection, and the long pictures on the pilasters of the high altar are also by him. Much expense has been bestowed upon the high altar; the ciborium is of pietra dura; and behind it is a Deposition, almost a miniature, upon marble, by Camillo Procaccini. In the apse is a *Pietà, by B. Luini. The doors of the organ \ Virgin, with numerous figures, round are painted in chiaroscuro by Creek and Carlo Urbino. By Crespi also are the small pictures of the Four Doctor of the Church, and the Passion scenes on the great pillars. The fine Sacride has ceiling paintings of saints and prelates of the Order by Borgoguous,

The adjoining Convent of Passionists has, since 1808, been occupied by the Conservatorio di Musica, the most celebrated training-school in Italy for theatrical music.

*San Maurizio, or the Monastero Maggiore (C. 5, 6), so called on nocount of its rich endowments as well as the numerous privileges bestowed upon it by King Desiderius and the Emperor Otho, is said to stand upon the site of a temple of Jupiter, and to have been one of the three buildings exempted by Barbarossa from the general destruction of Milan. Of the building of that early period, however, few traces remain, except in the two towers, the one round, the other square (used as prisons for some of the Lombard martyrs), which are embellished with some coarse paintings and niches. A fragment of Roman wall was discovered in the monastery. The present construction is chiefly the work of Dolcebuone (1497-1506, a pupil of Bramante; the front is by Perovono (1565). The interior is divided into two parts by a screen reaching to the height of the upper cornice. The half which serves for public worship is arranged in the same manner as the inner church, which belonged exclusively to the Great elegance of promonastery. portion is displayed in a series of galleries, forming a kind of triforium above a row of small chapels. The partition screen is painted in fresco by Luini. In the two lower compartments on each side of the high altar are female saints, with angels bearing torches between; above in lunettes are kneeling portraits of the founders with their patron saints, and, still higher up, the martyrdom of St. Maurice and St. Sigismand. Between the latter the Assumption of the Luini; the Almighty with the Evangelists, and Angels singing, are by Borgognone, as also the beautiful half-figures in the gallery that runs round the church. The lunettes on the upper part of the screen have the Last Supper, Baptism in the Jordan, and Resurrection, all seen with difficulty. The gallery is covered with beautiful arabesques and paintings.

San Nazaro (E. 7), a basilica founded by St. Ambrose (A.D. 382), and dedicated to the Apostles, was burnt in 1075, rebuilt, and afterwards enlarged by San Carlo, and furnished with its two principal chapels in 1653.

The vestibule is the sepulchral CHAPEL OF THE TRIVULZI, by Girolamo della Porta, and contains eight sarcophagi with figures as large as life, in the armour and costume of the times.—Antonio (1454), the father of the great Trivulzio, who, upon the death of the last Sforza, turned the dubious scale in favour of the Visconti. — The great Gian Giacomo (1518), Marquis of Vigevano, his laurelcrowned head pillowed upon his corslet, with the inscription "Johannes Jacobus Magnus Trivultius, Antonii filius, qui nunquam quievit quiescit, tace." This was the Trivulzio who, banished from Milan, returned at the head of the French army, and was the main cause of the ruin of his country. Those who had profited by his treason respected him not: the old warrior died broken-hearted, at the age of 80, and was buried in France. He was the founder of the chapel, as appears from an inscription yet remaining.— The two wives of the Marquis, Margherita Colleoni (1488), and Beatrice d'Avalos, sister of the Marquis of Pescara.—Gian Niccolò (1512), the son of the Marquis; as zealous as his father in the interests of France.— Paola Gonzaga, his wife; Ippolita, Luigi, and Margherita—maiden, boy and infant, his children, all lying side by side; and, lastly, Gian Francesco (1573), his son, who served both Francis L and Charles V., changing sides as was most convenient.

The Church, in the form of a Greek cross, is said to have been designed by The first chapel on the Bramante. rt. has a small but beautiful stained glass window, said to have been designed by Lucas van Leyden. rt. transept there is a Presentation by an unknown painter, with some lovely A very remarkable *fresco in faces. six compartments, representing scenes in the life of St. Catharine, in an oratory, opening out of the N. transept. was executed by Bernardino Lanini in 1546. In the principal compartment the rt. he has introduced his portrait between those of Gaudenzio Ferrari and Della Cerva. In the same Chapel is a curious gilded wooden group of the Adoration of the Magi, and opposite the door a good window.

8. Paolo (D. 7) has a row of Corinthian pilasters above Doric half columns, projecting from the wall, designed by Alessi. The front has a relief over the door of the Conversion of St. Paul, and two long perpendicular compartments with emblems, beautifully executed. The interior is divided transversely by a screen, as at S. Maurizio, rising as high as the cornice, the further part having been occupied by Augustinian nuns called the Angeliche.

San Pletro in Gessate (F. 6) is so called from the Gessate family, who here founded a convent for the order of the Umiliati. The interior has five pointed arches supported by monolith columns of grey granite. The groined roof preserves its Gothic style unaltered. The Choir dates from 1640. In the 3rd chapel on the rt, is a Madonna from Luini's school. In the 4th D. Crespi painted the S. Mauro, to whom persons afflicted with sciatica perform pilgrimages. The actions of the saint on the side walls are by Moncalvo. The 15th-cent. frescoes in the 2nd chapel on the l., representing the Marriage and Death of the Virgin, are attributed to B Zenals and B da Treviglio. In this chapel is an Adoration of the Magi, signed "Caravag. pinx. 1609," the year of the painter's death. Two of the Kings seem to be portraits. At the altar of the 3rd chapel on L. a Madonna, in the centre of an Ancona, is by Bramantino or Some 15th-cent. It is now used as an Orphan Asylum.

Ban Satiro (D. 6), nearly surrounded by houses, a very graceful building by Bramantino, was originally built by Archbishop Anspertus in the 9th cent. to the memory of St. Satyrus, brother to St. Ambrose. All that remains of this date is the chapel in the l. transept, with four larger and several smaller | The Milanese, when they defeated columns of different materials and dimensions, taken from earlier buildings. The present Church was built in 1477 1523. The front was restored in 1871. It was intended to be in the form of a Latin cross; but, from the space being occupied by the adjoining street, the choir is wanting, and its place is supplied by an illusive perspective painted on the wall. This painting is as old as the Church, but has been retouched. At the altar two angels in white marble support the corners, and above are two figures in terra-cotta, glazed white. Over the altar of the l. transept is a Pieta (curtained) in coloured terra-cotta, by Caradosso. Opening out of the Sacristy, on the rt., is an elegant octagonal Baptistery, by Bramante, restored in 1857. It has an arcaded gallery, and eight circular lights in the cupola. The beautiful reliefs, arabesques, and sculptures, in bronzed stucco, are by Caradosso.

San Sepolero (D. 6) retains its ancient towers of the 11th cent.; the rest is modern Over the door is a Pietà in fresco by Bramantino, but it is so shut up in glass and grating that it is difficult to examine it. In the rt. transept are some figures larger than life in coloured terra-cotta, representing Pilate and the Crowning with Thorns, and in the l. transept the Washing of Feet. At the altar are saints and angels, in white and glazed earthenware In the sacristy is a picture by Gian Pedrini. This Church belonged to the Oblati, a body of priests founded by San Carlo, in order that they might, by stricter lives and more exemplary performance of their duties, check the Protestant Reformation. Near the door is the statue of Card. Federage Borromeo, by Corti, a good modern work. It represents the founder of the museum and library, one of the great benefactors of Milan.

8. Simpliciano (D. 4). St. Ambrose erected a chapel here, and & Simplicanus deposited in it the bodies of Sisinius, Martirius, and Alexander.

Barbarossa at Legnano, believed that they were assisted by these martyrs, and that three doves, flying from their altar, perched upon the mast of the Caraccio. In consequence of this a fine Lombard Church was built. which, having been modernised in 1582, was restored in 1871. vault of the choir is a Coronation of the Virgin in fresco, by Borgognone, a remarkable work for the simplicity and grace of the figures, but much injured. The rest of the interior has been completely modernised. Over the high altar is a good tabernacle, with a statue of the patron saint.

S. Stefano in Broglio (E. F. 6), a very ancient basilica, rebuilt by Abp. Visconti, the successor of San Carlo, completed by Card. Federigo Borromeo, and judiciously restored in 1829. Near the entrance, on the pavement of the Nave, is a small oblong grating bearing the Scourge and pastoral staff of St. Ambrose, and a circle, supposed to indicate the spot where Galeazzo Maria Sforza was slain on Dec. 26, 1476, by three young Milanese noblemen, Visconti, Lampugnani, and Olgiati.

San Vittore al Corpo (B. 6). cording to the tradition, an early convert, the Senator Oldanus, had two sons, Portius and Faustus; the latter built the basilica which was incorporated afterwards in the Ambrosian Cathedral. The former built this Church. from him called Basilica Porziana. It was the scene of the Emperor Theodosius' repulse by St. Ambrose, and of the introduction of the canto alterno of the Ambrosian rite. It was rebuilt in 1560 by the Olivetans, from the designs of Alessi. The interior is The vaulting is divided splendid. into compartments of raised work, foliage and figures, within which are paintings of saints, martyrs, and angels. St. John and St. Luke, in the cupola, were painted by D. Crespi; the other Evangelists and the Sibyls are by Moncalvo. on horseback, the horse leaping forward with much effect. On the site of this Church St. Victor suffered martyrdom. He was a soldier in the army of the Emperor Maximinian, by whose command he was tortured and beheaded, A.D. 303. Another painting by Salmeggia represents Sta. Francesca Romana with her angel. In the 6th Chapel on the rt., with black marble columns, are sepulchres of the Arese family. The walnut-wood stalls of the choir carvings represent events in the life of St. Benedict (17th cent.). The Sacristy is a fine room, with good wood carvings and several pictures, of which the best is the Martyrdom of St. Victor, by Camillo Procaccini.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

THE ROYAL PALACE (Palazzo della Reale Corte) is entered from the street of the same name, which runs due S. from the rt. transept of the Cathedral. (Visible from 10 to 4.) It stands on the site of a great building erected by Azzo Visconti about 1330, which in its time was one of the finest palaces in Italy. Giotto decorated it with paintings. After several partial demolitions it was entirely removed towards the close of the last cent, except the Church of San Gottardo, which stood within it. The present building, erected in 1771, was the residence of the viceroys under the Austrian rule, and of Eugene Beauharnais under Napoleon I. It contains many modern frescoes. show parts of the palace worthy of mention are the following:—Saloon: Night and Morning, by Martin Knoller, a Tyrolese. Salle-à-manger: ceiling, the Four Seasons, by Traballesi. Small Dining Room: a very elegant cabinet, with medallions in chiaroscuro. Sala di Presentazione: ceiling by Appiani and Hayez—Jupiter and Mercury. Sala di Udienza: ceiling by Appiani—History inscribing the deeds of Napoleon upon the shield of Minerva; in the angles the quarters of the globe. Royal Throne Room: by Appiani—the Apotheosis of Napoleon, he being represented as Jupiter upon an eagle. Present Throne Room; Marriage of Napoleon and Maria Louisa, by Hayez. Ball Room; the Coronation of the Emp. Ferdinand as King of the Lombardo-Venetian kingdom, also by Hayes The Great Ball Room is a splendid old-fashioned apartment. Its principal feature is a gallery supported by caryatides, executed by Calant, an artist from Parma. They are cleverly varied. Small Ball Room, a hall supported by ranges of columns, is lighted by 3000 candles, and contains one of Canova's busts of the first Napoleon.

The Villa Reals (F. 4), facing the Giardini Pubblict, was built by Leopold Poliak in 1793 for General Belgiojoso. It afterwards came into the hands of the Government, and is now a Royal residence. It contains, amongst other works of art, frescoes of Luini transferred to panel, and brought from the Casale della Pelucca, near Monza.

The Arcivesoovade, or Archbishop's Palace, at the S.E. corner of the Cathedral, was re-erected under Carlo Borromeo in 1570 by Pellegrini. It can be visited between 11 and 3, and contains a collection of paintings bequeathed to the see by Card nal Monti, and increased by his successors, some of which have been transferred to the Brera Gallery. Entrance from the E. side. Cross the Court, ascend two flights of stairs, and ring at a door on the left. The best pictures are :- Bordone, Virgin and Child, with SS. Joseph, Ambrose, and the donor.—Campi, Descent from the Cross.— Guereino, small Beheading of St. John, and Judith, both on slate. Gian Pedrini, small Virgin and Child .- Procaccini, Raising of Lazarus, in grisaille.- Titian (attributed), Sketch of a man's head, and small portrait of Julius II.

The Palazzo del Broletto (D. 5), an extensive building with two Courts and colonnades, was built for the celebrated Count Carmagnola in 1415, and now contains Public Offices.

The Palauzo degli Archivi is the large square building on arches which stands in the Piasza de Mercants (D. 6). The upper portion serves as a depository for the Notarial archives of the city, while the arched space below, restored and enclosed in glass (1854), serves as the general rendesyour of the mercantile community. This building was the Palazzo della Ragione, where in earlier times, the magistrates of the commonwealth of Milan assembled, and where the ducal courts of justice sat in after times. It was begun in 1228 by the Podesta Aliprandi, and completed in 1233 by his successor, Oldrado Grosso di Tresseno, who is represented on the & side in full armour, mounted on his steed. The inscription recounts his good and doughty deeds in extirpating heresy:-

Qui sollum struxlt, Catharos at debuit uxit.

The Cathari here mentioned were Manichman sectaries, whose name, corrupted into Gazzari, was transformed by the Germans into Ketzer. The last word should be useft; but the author of the inscription took the poetical licence of altering it into uzit, in order to rhyme. On the archivolt of the second arch on the N side is a mysterious figure, which belonged to a much older structure, and was thus preserved in the 13th cent., out of respect for its then remote antiquity. It is that of the half-flueced or halffleecy sow, by whose augury Mediolanum was founded, and from which the city is supposed to derive its name (In medio lanze . Belovesus the Gaul was guided to place his settlement, just as the sow and thirty young pigs settled the site of Alba.

The Loggia degli Osii, on the S. side of the square, is so called from the family who defrayed much of the expense of the structure, which was begun in 1316. From the balcony, or ringhiers in front, the assent of the citizens was asked by the Podesta to the acts of Government, and the sentences passed upon criminals were proclaimed; the shields on it are defined.

the Visconti Sforza. A row of armorial bearings on either side decorate the façade, being those of the quarters of the city. The architecture is Italian Gothic, in black and white marble. The adjoining Renaissance building is the ancient Scuola Palatina, now converted into an office for mortgage deeds; in front of it are statues of Ausonius and of St. Augustine; it formerly belonged to the doctors of civil law. On the opposite side of the Piazza is the old Palazzo della Città, or, Town Hall, built by Pius IV. about 1564. interior has some tolerable paintings of the 17th cent. The statue of St. Ambrose, standing before it, occupies the place of that of Philip II. of Spain, which was converted into Brutus in 1797, and destroyed during the riots of 1813. The lower part of one of the wings has been fitted up as the Borsa or Exchange. It contains a monument to Cavour, with a good bust, raised by the merchants of Milan. In the other wing is the Central Telegraph Office. The clock tower was erected by Napoleone della Torre in 1272, and restored in 1873.

Palazzo del Municipio, or Pal. Marino (E. 5), in front of the Scala Theatre, built towards 1560 for the Genoese Marino, by Galeazzo Alessi. The front towards the Church of S. Fedele, and the Court, are remarkable. The Council Chamber was restored by Colla in 1872.

At the corner of the Piazza della Scala is the Banca Nazionale, and further N., in the Via Monte di Pietà, the Cassa di Risparmio or Savings Bank, a handsome building, by Balzaretti (1871). The Palazzo Bagatti-Valsecchi, a very interesting reproduction of an ancient building, is in the Via Meravigli (D. 5).

PICTURE GALLERIES, -MUSEUMS.

Brera (D. 4). The Palazzo delle Scienze e delle Arti was built in the 12th cent. on the "Brera," or meadow land outside the city, for the order of the Umiliati, some of the principal members of which having conspired against the life of San Carlo Borromev, it was suppressed in 1571, and served as a College of Jesuits until 1772. The present very extensive buildings, erected in 1651, contain a Chapel, the apartments occupied by the "Reale Accademia," the Schools of various branches of the fine arts, apartments for the "Reale Istituto delle Scienze," a Gallery of Paintings, or Pinacoteca, the Library, a rich Collection of medals and coins, Chinese MSS., &c. On the ground-floor is a Gallery of Sculptures and Antiquities, and adjacent a small Botanic Garden.

In the great court have been erected Statues of Verri, the political economist, by Fraccaroli; of Cavallieri, the mathematician, by Labus; of the Marquis Cagnola, the architect, by Cacciatori; of Grossi, the historical novelist, by Vela; and of Count Castiglione, an eminent orientalist, by A bronze Statue of the first Napoleon, cast in 1810, from the designs of Canova, and intended for the Arco della Pace, stands in the centre of the court. In the Piazzetta to the S. is a large Statue of $Francesco\ Hayez\ (1890)$. On the stairs leading to the Library are busts of Oriani the astronomer and others, and statues of the jurist Beccaria (1794), by Marchesi, and of the rhetorician Parini, by G. Monti; and in the corridor on the upper floor, which runs round three sides of the building, busts of Monti, Manzoni, and other Milanese celebrities. Out of the S.E. corner of the upper corridor opens

The Pinacoteca (open daily, 9 to 3 in winter, and until 4 in summer; admission, 1 fr.; Sundays and holidays 12 to 3, gratis; catalogue 1 fr. 50 c.). It contains nearly 600 paintings, and occupies 24 rooms.

The following alphabetical list is intended as a selection of the best works for the assistance of travellers whose time is limited. The Art student, who proposes to devote some days to an examination of the paintings, will doubtless provide bimself with a Catalogue.

The stranger's attention is particularly invited to the works of the North Italian School, especially Luini. The most celebrated picture here is the "Sposalizio" of Raffael. The very important Frescoes by early Lombard masters are in the Corridor near the entrance Some of them have been sawn from their places, and others transferred to canvas. The following are most worthy of notice:-

B Luini, The Madonna and Children The Virgin and St. Joseph-St, Anna and the Presentation of the Virgin - Angels - Man's profile -*Madonna enthroned, with S. Antonio Abate, St. Barbara, and a little angel (1521, *S. Catarina borne to the tomb by angels-Meeting of St. Anna of the Virgin, painted for the Church of S. Francesco, at Città di Castello. It is in the artist's early style, and is little more than a copy of a picture by his master Perugino, now in the Museum of Caen; but in it "Raphael goes far beyond the composition of his school, the most perfect symmetry is picturesquely relieved by the most beautiful contrasts."—Cio. Signed, RAPHAEL URBINAS, MDIIII., on the frieze of the circular temple in the background. Behind Mary is a group of the virgins of the Temple; near Joseph are the suitors, all portraits, one of whom breaks his barren wand -that which Joseph holds in his hand has blossomed into a flower, which, according to the legend, was the sign that he was the chosen one. lovely painting has been much improved by removing the old varnish; many fine details, both of design and colouring, concealed by years of neglect, have been brought out, some of which escaped Longbi in his celebrated engraving of it, especially the delicate landscape in the background, which may also have been a little over-restored.

162. Virgin and Child, with six Saints, and an Abbot praying.

Viti (Timoteo):

10. *Virgin and Child between SS. Crescentius and Vitalis, in tempera, damaged, but most interesting; long ascribed to Raffael, who was, however, only twelve years old when this picture was painted (1495).

Zenale (Bernardo):

87. Virgin and Child, with the four Doctors of the Church. Duke Lodovico il Moro, his wife Beatrice, and their children are introduced into this interesting old picture. [By Bernardino dei Conti, "a grand and imposing work."—K.]

The pretty Statue of the Leggitrice, or Reading Girl, by Magni, is a replica of that so much admired at the London Exhibition in 1862. In the same room is a good Ishmael.

A series of halls surround the outer portico, and contain casts of ancient and modern statues, the prize groups, and paintings, crowned by the Academy of Fine Arts; some cartoons by Guido, Ag. Caracci, Donato Creti; and some modern portraits, including Marino Faliero, Cavour, Rossini, and Manzoni, by Hayez, and a landscape by the late Massimo d'Azeglio. A monument to Longhi, the engraver, and another to Appiani, with his bust.

At the end of the 20th room is Canova's bust of a Vestal; beside it the Three Graces in relief, by Thorwaldsen. 21st room, Bertini's statue of a Writing Girl, with some modern

In the 24th room is Marchesi's bust of Leonardo da Vinci. Also a collection of studies of animals and groups of peasants, by Francesco Londonio, (18th cent.), presented to the gallery by his grand-nephew.

The Galleria Oggioni, opening from the vestibule, contains a collection of second-rate pictures, bequeathed by a person of that name. The best are a Coronation of the Virgin, with Six Saints, and a Dead Christ in the lunette above, by C. Crivelli (1493); a good fresco of the Virgin and Child, with St. Elizabeth, and a small Virgin and Child, by B. Luini; and a small Madonna, by Garofalo.

The MUSEO ARCHEOLOGICO, a collection of Milanese antiquities, on the ground-floor, is open daily from 12 to 3, 50 c.; Sundays free. The most remarkable objects are—(A) the tomb of Bernabd Visconti, surmounted by his equestrian statue, brought from the Church of S. Giovanni in Conca, where it was erected by himself during his lifetime, in 1370. He is in full armour, and the figure is evidently a portrait of this prince, whose cruelty was such as to convey the idea that He inflicted tortures he was insane. and horrible deaths upon his subjects, and kept upwards of 5000 hounds, which were quartered upon the richest citizens, who were bound to board and lodge them, on penalty of imprisonment, or confiscation of pro-Bernabò was dethroned by his nephew Gian Galeazzo, in 1385. On the sides of the urn, which is that of his wife, Regina della Scala, are rude reliefs of the Crucifixion, Pietà with Saints, the Coronation of | the Virgin, and Evangelists; at the corners, the four Doctors of the Church -all attributed to Bonino da Campione. Many fragments of sculpture and architecture from ruined churches and monasteries; Roman remains, including an altar with paintings upon it, said to have been found near San Lorenzo. The recumbent *Statue of Gaston de Foix, Governor of Milan, killed at the battle of Ravenna in 1512. This fragment of his maguificent monument, the masterpiece of Bambaja, was erected by Louis XII. and François I., when in possession of Milan in the 16th cent. It stood in the Church of Sta. Marta, attached to an Augustinian monastery. monument was considerably advanced in 1522, when, Francesco Sforza regaining his dominions, the work was suspended; and the church being afterwards pulled down, it was broken up and the portions dispersed. Other fragments are to be met with in different collections, some in that of the Marchese Trivulza, at the Biblioteca Ambrosiana, in the Villa of Marchese Busca at Castelazza, and, with the drawing of it attributed to Leonardo da Vinci, in the South Kensington Museum. Another fine monument by Bambaja is that of Lancino Curzio, the poet (1513). The fine medizeval doorway of a house in the Via dei Bossi, by Michelozzi, currous for its sculptures, the Sforza arms, and the portraits of Francesco and his wife Bona Visconti. In a corner is the richly-decorated tomb of Bagaroto, Bishop of Piacenza, by Andrea Fusina (1517). Latin inscriptions of various kinds. Several Egyptian and Byzantine sculptures The bell of the Commune of Milan, taken from the tower of the Piazza dei Mercanti, with the date 1352. Collection of antique terra-cotta, mediæval frescoes, specimens of Urbino majolica, ivories, &c., and a colossal bust of the first Napoleon, wearing the Iron Crown.

The Library, open to the public, between 9 and 4, with above 300,000 yols, is better adapted for general study than the Ambrosian, as far as printed books are concerned. The collection of MSS, is not large, but curious. It contains a great number of chronicles and other materials for Venetian history, which were brought here during the French occupation, and which have not been sent back to Venice. Amongst them is a copy of the celebrated 'Libro d'Oro,' which the republicans burnt in honour of liberty. Amongst the show volumes are the magnificently illuminated choir-books of the Certosa at Pavia There is also here a valuable collection of coins and medals, consisting of more than 50,000 specimens.

The Observatory, or Specola di Brera, was founded in 1762, under the direction of the Jesuit astronomer Boscovich. There is a Meteorological Section, and observations made are published daily in the Perseverance newspaper. In a room opening out of the great court, on the ground-floor, are preserved several philosophical instruments—amongst them those for voltaic electricity—which belonged to Volta; also his library, and several of his MSS.

The Botanical Garden is indifferent; not at all worthy of the institution to which it is annexed.

BIBLIOTEGA AMBROSIANA (D. 6).-(Open daily, 10 to 3, except on Sundays and festivals; fee, 1 fr. The pictures can be seen free on Wed, 10 to S, from May to Sept.; at other times, 1 fr.) This celebrated collection was founded by Cardinal Federigo Borromeo (1609), Abp. of Milan. The Library is under the direction of a congregation of ecclesisatics, presided over by a clerical member, or, if there be none, by the head of the Borromco family. The chief acting officer is the Prefetto. The librarium are very civil and attentive, but the catalogues, according to the desire of the founder, although good, are not communicated to the public. To this circumstance may be attributed the escape of the library from the depredations of the French in 1797. The Ambrosian was, in fact, the earliest library in Europe open to all students or to the public, for whom writing materials were provided.

The Library, on the ground-floor, contains about 160,000 volumes of printed books, and 15,000 MSS. From the great court on the rt., a door leads into a small vestibule, in which are busts of celebrated Italians, also a fine one of Lord Byron, by Thorwaldsen. On the floor is a coarse Roman mosaic, found on the site of a Temple of Isis at Milan; and on the walls reliefs by Thorwaldsen, and fragments of sculpture by Bambaja, which formed part of the monument of Gaston de Foix. In the two small halls opening out of the vestibule on the are arranged the MSS, and printed books of the 15th cent. A Virgil annotated by Petrarch, with one miniature by Simone Martini, representing Virgil, and allegorical figures of his works and commentators, is of great beauty. Prefixed is the note in which Petrarch is supposed to describe the death of Laura. The MS., which afterwards belonged to Galeazzo Visconti, may be authentic, but the note is suspicious. The autograph correspondence between Cardinal Bembo and Lucretia Borgia, bears her signature, "Lucretia Esten da Borgia." lock of her hair is attached to one of the letters.—"The prettiest and fairest imaginable. I never saw finer. If I can obtain some of it by fair means, I shall try. The letters are short, simple, sweet, and to the purpose."— Byron.

Rufinus, who died in 410, upon papyrus, probably of the 5th cent. MSS. upon this material are of the greatest rarity. It is one of the first books bound in the modern form, and is supposed to have belonged to Attila. Homer: fragments of a MS., perhaps of the 4th cent. with 58 illuminated miniatures, highly interesting both for the art and the costume which they exhibit. This MS. disputes with the Virgil of the Vatican and the Book of Genesis at Vienna the right of being considered the most ancient volume extant containing illuminations. Lucano da Parma's treatise, 'De Regimine Principum,' presented by Galeazzo Sforza to G. Antonio Borella, with a curious and characteristic portrait of the donor. 12 volumes of heads of sermons, by San Carlo Borromeo; and his correspondence, filling upwards of 100 vols., all in his own handwriting; also that of Card. F. Borromeo.

A large volume filled with drawings by Leonardo da Vinci: a singular miscellany—machines, ordnance diagrams, caricatures, fancies; the descriptions are written by himself from right to left, so that they can only be read with facility by being placed before a looking-glass. There were originally 13 such volumes, 12 of which were presented to the library in 1637 by Galeazzo Arconati, after having refused 3000 doubloons offered for one volume of the collection by the King of England; but the other 12 have been retained in the library of the Institute at Paris, to which they were removed during the first French occupation of Lombardy.

Some finely illustrated books of Hours, of the 14th, 15th, and 16th cents., amongst which that of Bianca Sforza is particularly beautiful.

A small volume, executed at Rome, with architectural designs by Bramante, and manuscript descriptions, dedicated to Francis I.

Vite degli Arcivescovi di Milano, with 5 miniatures of the Luini school. Livy, translated into Italian by Boccaccio.

The Collection of MSS. is of high importance. Many were purchased by the founder: amongst others those brought from the Benedictine monastery of Bobbio, 24 m. S.W. of Piacenza on the Trebbia, by S. Columbanus and Irish missionaries in the 7th cent. From this ancient Coenobium have proceeded several MSS. of extreme value to the Celtic scholar, inasmuch as they contain some of the earliest specimens of the Gaelic language in existence. They consist principally of interlinear translations and commentaries of portions of Scripture, in general beautifully written. Of these, one of the most remarkable is a Psalter of the 8th cent., with the commentary of St. Jerome. This is filled with Gaelic glosses, besides a page at the heginning, probably containing a preface or dedicatory epistle. The whole is in the ancient Irish character, and very legible. A MS. of the Gospels, with Gaelic notes, of high antiquity.

A class of MSS, which has rendered this institution celebrated are the Palimpsests, ancient MSS, upon vellum, from which the characters of a previous MS, have been rubbed off, or partially effaced. The existence of this practice was long known; but Cardinal Mai, when prefetto of the library, was the first who endeavoured to recover the classics below from the superincumbent stratum of legends or homilies, The original writing is generally in bold, uncial characters, imperfectly erased, and the scribes of the second period usually crossed the older writing, though sometimes they took the intervals between the lines. The principal difficulty lay in the transposition of the leaves, and it is in connecting the separated leaves that Mai showed his skill. The letters of Fronto and Marcus Aurelius, and various fragments of Orations, and of the Treatise de Republica of Cicero, were published from palimpsests in this library. Of the other MS, treasures may be cited fragments of a version of the Bible, made A.D. 360-80, by Ulfilas, Bishop of the Mœso-goths. The Gospels are at Upsala; a portion of the Epistles was found at Wolfenbuttel.

The series of printed books of the 15th cent. is one of the most complete in Europe, amongst which is the celebrated Boccaccio, printed at Venice in 1471 (for a duplicate of which, now at Althorp, Lord Spencer paid 2000l.); the Ambrosian Missal and Breviary, and the Statuto di Milano, printed here in 1470 to 1480.

Beyond the hall of the museum is the winter Reading-room for students, opening out of which are two large halls containing printed books: in one is a monument to the Marquis Fagnani, who bequeathed his library of 23,000 vols, and 4000 engravings to the Ambrosiana.

Returning to the small vestibule, a door leads to the Great Hall of the Library, surrounded by portraits of illustrious men, chiefly ecclesiastical digostaries, formed by Paolo Gioria, and employed to illustrate his 'Vita Illustrium Virorum,' Out of this is another room of printed books, the Sala Borromeo, so called from a good monument, by Cacciatori, to the late Count Giuberto Borromeo, raised by his son. Out of this opens the Sala della Santa Corona. This hall, which was formerly the place of meeting of the suppressed charitable corporation of the Holy Cross or La Santa Corona, whose object was to relieve the sick poor at their homes, was given to the Ambrosiana, and now contains printed books. A fresco of B. Luini covers the wall of one of its sides, and represents the Saviour crowned with thorns, between two executioners; on each side are groups of six members of the confraternity for whom it was painted, all evidently portraits. In a group above, on the rt., between a man in armour and a personage in a civil costume, is an old bearded personage, the painter himself. The fresco is in admirable preservation, as well as the roof of the sala, which is of the period of the painting, as stated on it, Oct. 1521 to March 1522, "The grandest form in which this subject was ever represented is in this fresco," says Lady Eastlake, who calls it "a magdevotional picture. nificent central figure placed on a regal height is indescribably fine " On the walls, amongst other curiosities, the gloves worn by Napoleon at Waterloo, and the tailor's models for his clothes.

Annexed to the library is a small Numismotic Collection, rich in coins from the time of Valentinian w Charlemagne, of the Lombard dukes and sovereigns down to the period of the Sforza family (1450).

On the first floor are the Works of Art (no catalogue). The position of the paintings is often changed, and the most important works are therefore given below in alphabetical order. Before reaching the Gallery is the Gabinetto dei Bronzi, from modern manufactories. In this room will also be found Thorwaldsen's bust, by himself; Canova's, by a pupil; a copy of Canova's Head of Medusa, and a Leopard with cubs in giallo tigrato marble. A few steps higher up is the Gallery.

Besides numerous Engravings by Lucas Oranach, Antonio Raimondi, Salvator Rosa, Calcot, &c., the various Rooms contain several miniatures, and a Collection of ivories, pottery, bronze, and glass.

The most interesting feature of the entire Collection is, however, the very important series of original drawings by B. Luini, Gaudenzio Ferrari, A. Mantegna, Alb. Dürer, and others. In the smaller Room is a small head in profile, copied from Leonardo by his pupil Francesco Melzi (1510), and another of an unknown female ascribed to *Leonardo da Vinci. In the centre. a large model-design in gilded bronze for a proposed Triumphal Arch at the Porta Venezia. In the larger Room is the *Cartoon by Raphael for his School of Athens at the Vatican: it is executed with black chalk on grey paper, and contains the figures without the architecture. "It is one of the most interesting examples of the nature and extent of the alterations introduced in a composition prepared for fresco. The changes are mostly addi-The figure of Epictetus, represented in the fresco sitting in the foreground on the left, leaning his head on his hand, is wanting in the cartoon. Attached to the Ambrosian Library is a Printing-office, for works in the Oriental languages, founded by Card. Borromeo.

On the stairs and in the court are some Roman and Christian inscriptions from the Catacombs; and in a small courtyard grows the tin palm-tree, or alos, which Lalande, in his description of Italy, has mentioned as a proof of the mildness of the climate of Milan.

Museo Civico di Storia Naturale (F. 4), facing the Giardini Pubblici (II to 3 daily, ½ fr.; Sun. and Thurs, free), contains a good and well-arranged collection of Zoology, Mineralogy, Geology, and Palæontology: the latter is particularly rich in fossils from the tertiary Subapennine formations of the duchies of Parma and Piacenza, and the specimens of Reptiles, arranged by Jan 1866), are among the most complete in Europe. The fossil remains of gigantic animals found S. of Parma and Piacenza, and purchased by the Viceroy E. Beannarpais, and the fossil tertiary shells described by Brocchi in his classical Conchologia Fossile Subapennina, may here be seen. The Great Hall, converted into a lecture-room, has its walls covered with frescoes by Tiepolo, There is also an Ethnographical collection, and one of Comparative Anatomy. The pre-historic remains of the lake-deposits of the Lombard plains, near Varese and Arona, are remarkable, as well as the series of Egyptian and Peruvian crania. Here is a collection of extinct gigantic quadrupeds from the plains and valley of Rio de la Plata, and of all the species described by Professor Owen. There is one of the finest and most complete skeletons in existence of the Megatherium. This series, collected by a Milanese gentleman at Buence Ayres, was purchased by subscription and presented to the Museum. At the entrance are busts of Jan and Cristoforis, after whom is named the Galleria in the Corso.

HOSPITALS.

Milan contains as many as 85 hospitals and Institutions of Charity. possessing property to the amount of 200 millions of francs—8 millions sterling.

*Ospedale Maggiore (E. 6, 7). This splendid establishment was founded by Francesco Sforza and his duchess Bianca Maria, in 1456. They gave for its site an ancient palace which had belonged to Bernabo Visconti. The building was begun on the 4th of April, 1457, the first stone being laid by the duke and duchess.

The Museums of anatomical and pathological preparations and of specimens of natural history are remarkably good. It also contains a Library of 50,000 vols., and a numismatic collection.

There are five courts, against the walls of two of which are monuments of early professors, some of them placed here when the churches where they had been originally erected were suppressed. One of these is of the celebrated jurist Alciatus (1550). Most of the older monuments are on the same model - representing the professor seated in the midst of his pupils, who are listening to his lec-tures. Though often venerable-looking, long-bearded men, the pupils, to denote their inferiority, are made about half the size of their masters. Their countenances and attitudes generally denote intense attention. Some eminent men of more recent times have monuments here—Spallanzani, Fontana, Scopoli. Volta, Scarpa, Mascheroni, Frank, and Ugo Foscolo, all of whom were professors in this University. The marble statue to the rt, of the first court is that of the mathematician Gordoni (1864).

Behind the University three high and gloomy towers, resembling those at Bologna, add much to the character of the city by their singular appearance. They are uniform in aspect, square, with small apertures all the way up, and from 200 to 250 ft. high; the highest stands opposite the Hospital.

Of the many colleges formerly annexed to the University, two only have remained: the Collegio Ghislieri (C. 4), in front of which is a bronze statue of its founder (1569), Pope Pius V., and the Collegio Borromeo (D. 4), founded by St. Charles (1563), It has a magnificent quadrangle of two stories, on the upper one of which is a large hall, with frescoes relative to the life of the founder, by Zuccarelli. The 30 pupils are gratuitously instructed, lodged, and fed, during their attendance at the University.

The Museo Malaspina (C. 2), entered from the Piazza Petrarca, contains several collections brought together by Marchese Luigi Malaspina (1838), and made over by him to the municipality. At the other entrance, in a Court at the end of the Via Malaspina, are busts of Petrarch, who spent some time here with his son-in-law, and of Boethius, who was imprisoned (A.D. 524) in a tower by order of Theodoric, and during his confinement wrote his well-known work ' De Consolatione Philosophiæ.' There is a valuable collection of more than 5000 engravings, some block-books, and miscellaneous curiosities. The best paintings are the following:-

A. Salaino, The Magdalen; Buttinone da Treviglio, Holy Family; Girolamo da Treviglio, Virgin and Child; Raffaello del Colle, St. Sebastian; Gaud. Ferrari, Four Latin Doctors : *Antonello da Messina. Man's portrait, small and damaged; Ambrogio da Fossano, Virgin and Child, with two saints, from the Certosa of Pavia; Carotto, Virgin and Child; Unknown, Virgin adoring the Infant held by an angel, three angels above-a very graceful miniature painting, Venetian School, Portrait of Card. Bembo; B. Luini, Woman's head, a fresco transferred to wood, much repainted; Giuseppe Moretto, Man's portrait, and St. Francis at Prayer; Angelo Bronzino, Man's portrait. There are also some rehels, paintings on enamel, engravings, and small bronzes.

Palamo Pozzi, to the l. of S. Fedele (E. 5), was built by Leone Leoni, of Arezzo, a sculptor, die-sinker, and architect, much patronised by Charles V., by whom he was knighted. Hence he is often called "Il Cavaliere Aretino." Colossal statues support the front, to which the Milanese have given the name of Omenoni (big men).

Palamo Sormani, near the Porta Vittoria (G. 6), with a large garden. In the picture gallery is a pleasing Mantegna, The Virgin and Child between St. John and St. Mary Magdalene; and Midas, probably by the same artist. Also two fine works by Antonio Canale, representing the arrival at Venice and departure of a Count Sormani, who was Spanish Ambassador.

Palasso Trivulsi (D. 7) was built by the Marquis Alessandro Trivulzi (permission required to enter). Here is a valuable library of printed books and manuscripts, and a choice collection of coins, and of Greek, Roman, and mediæval antiquities, including the monument of Azzo Visconti, formerly in San Gottardo; also a large altar-piece, by Mantegna; a portrait, said to be his own, by Antonello da Massina; and an Ecce Homo, by A. Dürer.

In the Via dei Filodrammatici (D.5), forming the entrance to a small theatre, is a good pointed Gateway in marble, having over it a relief bust of Francesco Sforza, with those of Alexander the Great and Julius Cæsar. The arabesques are fine, especially on the jambs, where the triple feather of the Medici may be seen.

Palasso Ciani, opposite the Pal. Senato (F. 5), is a modern building, rather too profusely decorated with excellent specimens of Boni's work interra-cotta. The Palazzo Brambilla, in the Piazza della Scala, has a front by Boni, and is admirably good.

THEATRES.—Milan is of all the cities in Italy the most celebrated for its theatres and theatrical amusements. The principal house is La Scala, so called from its having been erected upon the site of the Church of S. M. della Scala. It was built from the designs of Piermarini in 1779, and is only open in autumn and during the carnival. It contends with S. Carlo at Naples for being the largest theatre in Italy, and has always been admired for the excellence of its internal arrangements. It may be seen during the day (Ticket, 50 c.). The house is capable of containing 3500 spectators. The number of boxes in each row is 41; each has a small room attached to it; the greater number are private property. The form of the house is a semicircle, with the ends produced and made to approach each other; the greatest width is 72 ft., the length, from the front of the centre box to the curtain, is 95½ ft. The width of the openings between the columns of the proscenium is 54 ft., and the depth of the stage behind the curtain 150 ft.

Teatro dal Verme, Foro Bonaparte, originally built for a circus, is now an important house where opera and ballet are very well performed.

Teatro Carcano, Corso Porta Romana, was built in 1803 on the site of a monastery. Every part of the interior is of wood. The house can hold 1800 spectators. Operas are performed here. It is one of the best houses for sound in Europe.

Teatro Alessandro Manzoni, Piazzi San Fedele, for comedies.

Testro della Canobbiana is connected by a viaduct with the Palace, and open only during the carnival. It was founded by Paolo Canobbio and built from the designs of Piermarini in 1780. The pit contains 450 seats, and the house will hold 2200 spectators.

Teatro Filodrammatico, close to the Scala was built from the designs of Polack and Canonica. The pit contains 245, the open boxes 630 persons.

Testro Fiando, otherwise Girolamo.

—This theatre, in the Prazza Beccaria (E. 6), is so called from the comic character, who appears as one of the principal personages in every drama represented here. The actors are puppets. Girolamo is a Piedmontese from the Duchy of Montferrat, always frightened and hungry, but jesting and babbling. The performances are exceedingly droll and sinusing, consisting usually of a play, which is apt to be very pathetic, and a ballet Clubs.—The Casino over the Cafe Cova is an aristocratic club on the English plan. Strangers presented by members are admitted for a week. The Casino della Società del Giardino, occupying the Pal. Spinola (E. 5, 6), in the Via S. Paolo (strangers can obtain admission for a month through a member), gives balls in Carnival, the Società Patriotica e degli Artisti is in the Via San Giuseppe, to the rt. of the Scala.

ENVIRONS OF MILAN.

The *Cimitero Monumentale (C. 1), laid out by Macciachini, was opened in 1866 (1 fr.). The architecture in the Lombard style. There are some good sepulchral monuments here; all the interments at Milan now take place in it, intramural burying being no longer permitted in Italy. Cremation is here largely practised, in a Temple specially designed for that purpose in 1876 (50 c.). Attached to the Cemetery are separate ones for Protestants, Jews, Mohammedans, &c.

"It is a single-storied building, constructed of white marble, and situated at the extreme cud of the Campo Santo. The funeral service takes place in the entrance-hall, the body usually lying on a bier; a closed coffin is only required when death occurred from a contagious disease. After the rites of the church are finished, the compae is removed to the mortuary, where the attendants place it on an iron shell, which is supported by a carriage with rubber-covered wheels running on iron rails. The apparatus is thus noiselessly brought in front of one of these previously-heated chambers, the shell on its carriage is quickly run into the cremator, where it is left supported when the carriage is withdrawn. An air-tight door is now closed, the gas fully turned on, and in from forty to fifty minutes, the ashes are all that remain of the corpse, and these are collected in the iron shell, which is rethoved in a similar manner. mourners can either witness the operation through a sight-hole, or may wait in an adjoining room. The cremater generally employed is heated by gas specially made in a Siemens producer fixed below. The old plan was to heat with wood, in which case two hours were required to reduce the body to ashes; after considerable trial with both systems, the gas plan is always adopted, and is said to be far preferable. The ashes are placed in a terra-cotta box constructed to fit a sepulchral niche, which is closed with a marble tablet, bearing a name or inscription.

The fee for cremation is only 50 francs, and the charge for the niche 40 francs in perpetuity. The poor are cremated free of charge, their askes being placed in plain boxes in the vaults beneath the wings of the building.

Cremation takes place on an average four days a week, but on some days several funerals occur. An inscription in front of the building states that it is dedicated to Paolo Gorni, who was the first to introduce cremation into Italy, and whose remains were thus disposed of in 1863."

The Public Slaughter-house (Maccello) is in the Via Olona (A. 6, 7), adjoining the cattle-market.

Over the entrance door the Multiplication of the Loaves, by Fr. Bocoaccino. In front of the Church is a theatrical Statue of Garibaldi, in white marble.

The *CATHEDRAL was begun in 1107, but not consecrated till 1190, by which time the nave and the aisles were completed. In 1342 the transepts were commenced, but the choir was not finished till 1479. The W. front was begun in 1274 and terminated in 1606. The dates sufficiently account for the different styles of its architecture. In the front, which is of red and white marble, in stripes, the Lombard predominates. There is a noble doorway; the pillars of the porch. rest upon lions, of which one grasps a serpent, the other an animal which holds a bird between its paws. The zodiac is over the door. The wheel window, surrounded by a rich and delicately carved vine-leaf moulding, was built by Giacinto Porta of Como in 1274. Other parts of the exterior are of moulded brick, and worked with much beauty. The general effect of the W. front with the campanile and baptistery is strikingly picturesque. The transepts are very lofty. The front of the N. one, which is entered.

Then Boccaccino, *Christ disputing with the Doctors (1518), above which is a 14th-cent, Madonna.

In the N. transept is a good Altar of 1495, sculptured with figures of SS. Nicholas, imerico, and Omobono; and on a pillar in the same aisle, facing E., a fresco of the Virgin and Child under glass.

On the vault of the choir, Boccaeeino, *Christ and the four patron saints of Oremona, SS. Marcellino, Imerico, Omobono, and Peter Martyr (1506).

The four modern frescoes are by Diotti (1834). At the high altar is a celebrated picture by Bern. Gatti, the *Assumption, his last work. It was unfinished at the time of his death, and completed by Sammachini of Bologna. Fine intersia stalls (1490).

On the rt. wall of the nave, at the E. end, is the Last Supper, with four Passion Scenes, by Melone; the following, Christ bound and before Pilate, are by Romanino; the last three with the Crucifixion, are by *Pordenone. The "coarse and ugly" Crucifixion over the chief door is also by him, and the Dead Christ on one side. On the other side is the Resurrection, by Bern. Gatti (1529). The Prophets in the angles of the arches are by Pordenone.

They are more curious than beautiful, but interesting and wellpreserved. The pulpit is decorated with very beautiful *reliefs representing the Massacre of the Innocents, by 3rd chapel rt., Crucifixion Amedeo with SS. Fermo, Jerome, and Rustico, by Luca Cattapani. The Sacristy and Camerone di San Giuseppe contain some valuable ornaments, among which is a large silver crucifix made at Milan in 1475 (50 c.). In the 8. transept is a fine Annunciation, and in the N. transept a Crucifixion, both of uncertain attribution. Beneath the high altar is a fine though not very ancient Crypt, the roof supported by 28 marble columns, with the tombs of the patron saints of the city. The exquisite *reliefs on the altar are celebrated works by Pedoni (1538), but the heads of the figures were nearly all out off by French soldiers.

The octagonal Battisters is a plain and simple Lombard building of the 12th cent., scantily lighted. It has a fine projecting porch, supported by itons. Within are two ranges of galieries with Lombard arches, and fragments of frescoes are seen in the gloom. In the centre is a noble forth hewn out of an octagonal block of red

By the side of the Duomo, connected by a line of loggie, rises the Torrazzo (396 ft.), the highest in Italy. It was built in 1261-68. 498 steps lead to its summit, which commands an extensive view over the plains intersected by the Po, with the Alps to the N. and the Apennines to the S.W. In 1518 the bells were cast and the octagonal cupols was added. In the 3rd story is an enormous clock, put up in 1594. The castade lives in it.

On the S. side of the Cathedral is the so-called Campe Santo, now used as a Sacristy and repository for the archives. It contains a vault reached by a descent by 14 steps; in it is a curious mosaic pavement, with a Centaur fighting against Cruelty, Faith overcoming Discord, and Piety conquered by Impiety. The place was evidently an ancient Christian cemetery, as appears not only from its name, but from the bones and the inscriptions found in it.

The Church of S. Abbondio has a good tower and spire. Malosso and Sammachini painted the frescoes of the chief cupola from the designs of Giulio Campi, who also designed the Assumption in the cupola of the choir, which was painted by Malosso in 1594. The *Virgin and Child with numerous Angels, in the large chapel to the rt. of the entrance, is by Altobello Melone; the *Madonna with SS. Nazaro and Celso, behind the high altar, is by Giulio Campi. In the adjoining Canonica, or residence of the Priest, is a fine Renaissance ceiling.

*8. Agostino, a fine Gothic Church with a modernised interior. In the W. front are two beautifully modelled terra-cotta wheel windows which have lost their tracery. In the 1st chapel on the rt., a Deposition, by Campi (1601). The 2nd chapel has figures in stucco—Scourging, Crowning with Thorns, and Crucifixion, by Barberini da Como. 5th, Virgin and Child, by Zupelli (1500). 6th, Perugino (1494), the *Virgin with SS. James and Augustine, "one of his most faultless works."—Cic. It was taken to Paris. 7th, *Adoration of the Magi (1557), by Fran. Sabionetta of Cremona. whose works are very rare. At the high altar Christ showing His Wounds to the four Latin Fathers, by Mainardi. Beside the 4th altar l. are fresco portraits of Francesco Sforza and his wife Bianca Maria Visconti, by Bonifazio Bembo. 2nd l., St. Francis, by Malosso. 1st l., Annunciation, by Over the Antonio Campi (1571). great door St. Augustine giving the l rules of his order to his followers, many of which are portraits, by Angelo Massarotti (1690).

- S. Angelo contains on the l. a Madonna, with SS. Cosma and Damiano, by Francesco Bembo (1524). Here also are some fine frescoes by Boccaccino.
- S. Facio, popularly known as Il Foppone, contains a fine Entombment behind the high altar, by Vincenzo Campi (1569).
- S. Margherita, annexed to the Episcopal seminary, is decorated with numerous frescoes by Giulio Campi, but they are "cold and awkward," Cic.

San Michele exhibits the peculiarity of early Romanesque capitals, from which spring the latest Gothic arches. At the sides of the chief entrance are two works in tempera by Altobello Melone, and a masterpiece of Giulio Campi, the Martyrdom of St. Agatha. Pleasant walk hence to the Stat., shaded in the afternoon, along an Avenue of horse-chestnuts planted on the site of the old Ramparts.

*S. Pietro is a handsome building, finished about 1570, with a good brick campanile. By Antonio Campi are the two transept arches (1579), the Madonna and Saints at the high altar (1575), the Ascension of Elijah, on the ceiling of the Sacristy, and the Holy Family with SS. James, Agata, and Mary Magdalene, at the 3rd altar 1. (1567). The fresco of the Circumcision in this chapel is by Giulio Campi. The frescoes on the ceiling of the presbytery were the work of Bernardino Gatti (il Sojaro), who also executed the fine Adoration of the Shepherds, at the 2nd altar 1., where St. Peter presents the Abbot Colombino Ripari; the main idea is taken from Correggio's La Notte, retaining nearly the whole composition, but illuminated by the light of This picture was conveyed to day. Malosso painted S. Maria Paris.

Egiziaca at the 6th altar rt. (1601), and the Paradise in the lunette. The four Doctors of the Church, at the 3rd rt., are by Mainardi (1602). In the N. transept is the Murder of St. Thomas à Becket at Canterbury.

In a room opening out of the cloister is a large painting of the Multiplication of the Loaves, with the artist pointing on the rt., by B. Gatti (1552).

The Palazzo Pubblico, opposite the Cathedral, a relic of ancient Cremona, was begun in 1206, and is supported by lofty arches. Two towers are annexed to the building. It encloses a small quadrangle, which is areaded on three sides. The exterior, though altered, is still very interesting and highly characteristic. Specially worthy of notice is the little Balcony of the central pier, which served in the middle ages as a place for the Proclamation of the Laws. The interior, now used for the Town Hall, contains a painting by Grazio Gossaglio, the Descent of the Manna (1527). In the room next the great hall is a chimneypiece of alabaster, brought from the Palazzo Raimondi, sculptured by Pedoni (1502), in which the artist has introduced a portrait of Marshal Trivulzio.

Near this is the *Palamo dei Gonfalonieri, a good example of Italian-Gothic applied to civil purposes, in which the Gonfalonieri of the different quarters used to hold their sittings. It is built of finely-moulded brick, and dates from 1292.

Als Ponzone includes a small but choice Collection of Ivories (Byzantine diptych), Enamels, illuminated Service Books, and Medals, together with various local antiquities, and objects of Natural History. On the Staircase are some remarkable architectural fragments; a frieze and capital in terra-cotta; and a sculptured marble lunette of the 12th cent. from the ancient Church of S. Vito. Among the paintings are:—A. Campi, Visitation; B. Campi, the Saviour with the Apostles, and the Martyrdom of St. Laurence; Malosso, the Patron Saints of the city. Imerio and Omobono; G. C. Procaccini, *Death of the Virgin.

In the Ospedale Ugolani is a very remarkable staircase; and at No. 12 and 20 in the Via Palestro, close by, are some beautiful decorations in terracotta. The Monte di Pietà, in the Via Valverde, has a very elegant Court with tasteful sculptures. About 2 m. E. (Steam Tramway in 17 min) is the noble *Church of 842 Bigismondo. In a small Church on this site Francesco Sforza married Beatrice, only child of Filippo Maria Visconti (Oct. 25, 1441); and thus, after the death of his father-in-law, became the founder of the new dynasty. Cremona was the dowry of the bride. and Francesco, as a token of affection both to her and to the city, rebuilt the Church as it now stands (architect, Bartol. Gadio, 1441-67). It consists of a single nave with 12 chapels, and is "literally covered with the works of the brothers Campi (1566-77). These frescoes are all vigorous and brilliant. Among other colours, a green of an emerald kind, and a most vivid blue, I have never before seen equally well preserved; they are especially brilliant here in an Ascension, by Bernardino Gatti, a popul of Correggio"-S. Jerome and Anthony in the 6th,- Over the high altar is the *Virgin and Child, by Giulio Campi (1540), with Francesco Sforza and Rianca Maria Visconti presented by SS. Sigismund and Chrysanthus. This work, which is a model in perspective and the optical illusion of effect, was finished in 1537, The two side pictures, also by Comillo, represent the Resurrection of Laurens, and the Women taken in Adultery; both are surrounded by an elegant frience in which the angels sporting with a growler and other secred embloms are admirable for their life and rees. One side of the second quadrangle is formed by a magnificent Hall, now med as a Pieture Gallery, and in the third is a testeful little Theatre. M. dalle Granie, built by Francesco Gonunga, Lord of Mantna, in 1406, as the sanotnary of a supposed miraculous painting of the Medonne, which had previously been venerated by bostmen in a Chapel close to the adjoining marshy lake. But in 1399 Gonzaga addressed his vows to the image, praying that the Virgin would intercede for the deliverance of Mantua from the postiionce which then desolated Italy, and built here a Church and Monastery as an ex-vote. A long dark cloister, much dilapidated, leads to the church, which is still an object of pilgrimage. The architecture is good Italian-Gothic; a strange array of votive image are arranged on each side of the nave above the arches, upon columns richly gilt and carved. They are of life-size in every kind of costume, representing the individuals whose gratitude is commemorated in the verses beneath. Here may be seen the Emperor Charles V., Federigo Gonzaga, Pope Pius II., the Connétable de Bourbon, and a host of other celebrities. Others represent the trials and parils from which the votaries have been delivered, torture, anguish, death. All testify their gratitude to the Virgin for the help they have obtained through her intercession. The supposed miraculous picture of the Virgin is an Italian painting, apparently not older than the 15th cent.

The Choir is painted by Lattensio Gambers, of Breecis, and there are several paintings in the chapels besides some interesting sepalchral mountments. One of the most remarkable in that of Baldageers Castiglians (1998).

The ancient city of Mantus, from its situation on the flat and sedgy banks of the Mincio, is anything but healthy; intermittent and low fevers are frequent in the autumn, and it has no claims to natural beauty. It is surrounded by lakes and marshes; but the latter were partially drained by the French. The three lagunes, Lago di Mezzo (N), Lago Inferiore (E.), and Lago Superiore (NW.), formed by the swelling out of the Mincio, are maintained by artificial dams and embankments, and crossed by six bridges. The city has water communication with the Adriatic, and there is a dock for small vessels.

Mantua is a great centre for the trade in silkworms and their produce. On a market-day during summer the country women may be seen flocking into town laden with baskets of white and yellow cocoons, or displaying them.

Mantua stands on the "smoothsliding Mincius,"

So sang Virgil in his Georgies, and the classical scholar will not have forgotten that this was the country of the poet, and that Augustus gave back to him the land of which he had been deprived when the district was divided amongst the Roman soldiers. According to Donatus, Virgil was born at Andes; a local and very ancient tradition has identified this place with Pretole, 3 m. S.E. of Mantua, at the extremity of the Lago Inferiore, surrounded by woods and groves, in which the willow predominates. Here is $ monument to the Poet, erected in 1848, and a country house of the Gonzaga family, which bears the name of Villa Virgiliana.

in 1443; and created by Charles V. Dukes of Mantua, in 1589—were men of great talent and energy, especially Giovanni Francesco II. (1484-1519), and Federigo II. (1514-1540), who were munificent patrons and promoters of the arts and of literature. Their successors continued to govern with much wisdom; and Mantua became one of the most opulent and flourishing cities of Lombardy, when the death of Vincenzo II. (1627) was followed by every kind of calamity. It seemed thenceforward as if the house had become fated. Francesco IV. having died without male issue after a reign of ten months, the duchy devolved upon Cardinal Ferdinando, his brother. It was more than doubtful whether he had any right to the duchy, for Mantua had not been declared a male fief; and it was considered that Maria, his niece, was the lawful heir. Ferdinand, having by papal licence resigned his cardinal's hat, By his first and secret married twice. marriage with Camilla Reticina he had one son; but Ferdinand procured the marriage to be dissolved; Giacinto Gonzaga was declared illegitimate, and his father married Catharine of Medicis; but he had no children by her; and, on his death in 1627, the duchy was claimed by the branch of the family settled in France, then represented by Charles. Duke of Nevers. The right was contested; and the Emperor Ferdinand II. claiming to dispose of the duchy of Mantua as an imperial fief, the country was invaded by Altringer Colalto, and Gallas, names written in blood in the history of the Thirty Years' War. Duke Charles was neglected and almost betrayed by the Venetians, and feebly supported by the French. On the 8th April, 1630, the imperialists laid siege to the town: famine and pestilence raged within; but the duke defended himself bravely; and the inhabitants, knowing what would be their fate, aided with the utmost valour and desperation. On the 18th July, when the garrison was reduced to 1000 fighting men, the city was taken by storm, and during three days was given up to plunder. The Germans on this occasion executed their work of devastation with great system and regularity; they got exceedingly drunk; they neither killed a man, nor insulted a woman, nor burnt a house; but they stripped the town of everything which it contained, plunder was valued at 8,000,000 ducats. Previous to the siege the duke had sold large portions of the Gonzaga collections. The plunder of the city dispersed the remainder, with the exception of such of the marbles as remain in the Museum. The best portions were taken to Prague. They were afterwards purchased by Christina, Queen of Sweden, who carried them to Rome, where they remained until they were obtained by the Regent Duke of Orleans, and became the foundation of the Orleans gallery.

Carlo Gonzaga I. regained his duchy by submission to the emperor; but Mantua never recovered from the blow.

The Dukes were in the last century deprived of their possessions by the jurisprudence of the feudal ages. IV. having unfortunately joined the French in the war of the succession, the Emperor Joseph I. placed him under the ban of the empire, and seized his The duke fled, and died at dominions. Padua in 1707, not without suspicion of poison; and the Emperor Joseph, declaring the fief to be forfeited, united it to his own dominions. The last of the family, still a resident here, was a pensioner of the Austrian Government until its fall. The Austrians added to the fortifications, and Mantua became the strongest fortress of the Quadrilateral, with endless walls, bastions, and bridges.

After the fall of Milan in 1796, Napoleon hastened to lay siege to the city (14th June); but the forces of Serrurier were only sufficient to keep the garrison in check, and could not prevent the occupation of the city by Wurmser, after his defeat at Bassano. Four unavailing attempts were made by the Austrians to relieve the garrison. After the failure of the last, Mantua could no longer hold out. One half of its numerous garrison were in the hospitals; and they had eaten all their In this extremity Wurmser proposed to Serrurier to capitulate; the terms were immediately agreed on; Napoleon set out himself to Florence, to conduct the expedition against Rome; and Serrurier had the honour of seeing the marshal, with all his staff, defile before him. On taking the city, the French committed many excesses. was retaken after a bombardment of four days by the Austrians in 1799.

It was in a street of Mantua that the Admirable Crichton was assessinated by six braves hired by the duke's son, to whom he was tutor, and it is believed that the pupil was present at the committal of the crime, if he did not himself deal the death-stroke,

In the centre of the city there is a long covered areade, and hereabouts the place shows most symptoms of life; but the grass grows in the outskirts, and the marks of ruin, too visible upon many of the buildings, attest the misfortunes which Mantua has sustained. Yet interesting memorials remain, to remind us of its ancient splendour. There are no large squares, but great masses of buildings, huge piles casting deep shadows, feudal towers crowned with their forked battlements, castles and Lombard arches, forming a scene of pecuhar and novel character. 3000 of the entire population are Jews, by whom much of the trade of Mantua is carried On.

DUCAL PALACE. - The ancient Castello di Corte, the palace and fortress of the Dukes, was begun about 1302, and enlarged by Ber-tolino da Novara for Francesco Gonzaga IV., Capitano of Mantua between 1393 and 1406. (Entrance in a semicircular recess at the end of the Piazza.) It is flanked by deeply machiculated and noble towers, but battered and decayed. The archives contain documents reaching as far back as the early part of the 11th cent., and all those relative to the Gonzaga family are deposited here. The interior was richly decorated with frescoes, which were perfect till the conquest of Lombardy by the French; now only a few vestiges can be traced in some of the rooms, occupied by the public offices. The most interesting are those by Andrea Mantegna, in the CAMERA DEGLI Sposi on the first floor: on the wall I. of the entrance, a man and boy holding a herse and dogs; a fine picture of Lodovico Gonzaga, his wife Barbara of Brandenburg, and three children; and, over the door, a beautiful group of three Angels holding an inscription. In the coves of the ceiling are heads in chiaroscuro of the Cæsars, also by Mantegna. Another room has a border representing, in small but animated groups, chases of wild animals and fabulous creatures.

Adjoining the Castello di Corte is the immense edifice, begun in 1303 by Guido Buonaccolsi, surnamed Botticella, third sovereign lord of Mantus, now comprising the so-called Palazzo Imperiale, Palazzo Vecchi, and Corte Imperiale, and containing 500 rooms. Of the older building, however, little besides the front, with its Gothic arches and windows, surmounted by machicolated battlements and the arms of the Buonaccols: in the capitals of some columns, is now in Several artists had emexistence. ployed their talents upon it before Giulio Romano was called upon to transform it entirely, and exhibit new proofs of his genius. Since his time many other artists have contributed in various ways to its embellishme In fact, for the grandeur of its mass for propriety, invention, and decor == tions of every kind, for the solution of the most perplexing problems architectural and pictorial arrang ment, for the skilful adaptation designs to the most uninviting and embarrassing spaces, we know some edifice of this kind either in or of Italy which approaches this interperial residence, or which displays such varied resources to the student of decorative art. This Palace was the favourite residence of the later members of the ducal house. The Emperor Joseph bestowed much care upon it; parts of it retain something of their former splendour, but a great proportion have been converted into storehouses and barracks. The front of the Cavallerizza, and the Giardine Pensile, on a terrace, so as to be on a level with the upper floor, and surrounded with righly-painted Loggie, deserve attention. A suite of rooms is kept well-furnished, but the greater part are empty and desolate; and in the back part of the building deserted

The Camere degli Arazzi, four in number, once contained a set of tapestries from the cartoons of Raphael, removed by the Austrians and now at Vienna.

The stucco ornaments of the doors and wood-carvings are from designs by Primaticcio.

On the opposite side of the courtyard is the Galleria degli Speechi, or Ball-room, painted by Giulio Romano's pupils, and having some fine Venetian glass. The great audiencechamber, whose ceiling is upborne by consoles, is interesting. The Galleria de' Quadri contains busts of some princesses of the Gonzaga family, and wretched copies of celebrated masters.

The *Sala di Troja was painted entirely by Giulio Romano, with illustrations of passages from the history of the Trojan war. "Ajax, transfixed with a fiery arrow by Minerva, is strongly and vividly expressed. Minerva retiring, looks back with scorn upon the impotent rival of her favourite Ulysses. When Paris conducts Helen to the ship, the natural feeling of the characters is admirably portrayed all is bustle and activity. The frescoes of Laccoon and his sons, and of the completion of the Trojan Horse, are weak, and yet again, in that of Achilles dragging Hector at the back of his chariot, the very spirit of vengeance seems to inspire him."— Prof. Phillips, R.A.

Adjoining these chambers is the Sala de' Marmi (so called from a number of masterpieces of the Grecian chisel which once adorned it), very richly decorated. It is of the time of

The ceilings of most of the apartments are of wood, richly ornamented with carvings and stucco-work, by Primaticcio and others. They are very curiously varied: in one room the ceiling represents a labyrinth, with the inscription Forse che si, forse che no, repeated in each meander. The Sala de' Mori is the richest; it is blue and gold

Opposite to the palace, with its beautiful Gothic windows, stands the house of B. Castiglione, author of the Cortegiano, the friend of princes and painters; it has a fine gateway with sculptured arabesques; on one side is the bishop's palace, and on the other that of the Guerrieri family. Close to the latter is an ancient tower annexed to the palace which formerly belonged to the Buonaccolai; it was built in 1302 by Botticella, About halfway up projects an Iron Cage, where criminals were exposed, whence this building derives its name of Torre della Gabbia. On the capture of the city by the French, the cage was taken down, but replaced afterwards by the direction of Napoleon The tower itself commands a fine propect over the town and lake.

CHURCHES.

The Duomo, dedicated to St. Peter (1, D. 4), has been much altered. The S.E. wall, exhibiting a series of Gothic gables, separated by pinnacles of moulded brick, and all richly our mented, shows the original style. The massive Lombard campanile is missished. The poor front dates from 1761. The interior was rebuilt from the designs of Giulio Romano in 1546. The arches of the aisles resupon Corinthian pillars; the roof of the pave is flat, with richly some mented compartments. The large Chapel of the Madonna Incoronata has at its 1st altar rt. a 15th-cent. fresco of the Virgin and Child with St. Leonard. To the 1. of the entrance is a large early Christian sarcophagus, with figures of the Apostles.

The Vescovado (12, D. 4), though much modernised, has some good old windows in its upper stage.

Palamo della Ragione (13, D. 4) in the Piazza d'Erbe (1198-1250), a fine specimen of the civil architecture of the time. A large archway of brick and stone forms a prominent feature in this building. Inserted in the wall is a Gothic throne and canopy in terra-cotta, supported by twisted columns. Beneath this canopy in a niche is a mutilated sitting Statue of Virgil, wearing the cap of Rector of the people, and holding an open book (early 13th cent.). The lofty Campanile has a curious astronomical clock, put up in 1478. It has a number of complicated movements, but is now out of order.

At the corner of this Piazza near the Church may be seen a small house-front in beautifully decorated terracotta, resting on a portico supported by Corinthian columns. Near this is the Piazza Dante, containing a Statue of the Poet, erected in 1870.

*Sant' Andrea has an interior in the Italian or revived Roman style, designed by Leon Battista Alberti in The cupola, by Juvara, was begun in 1732, but not completed till The great portal is deeply recessed. The Sarcophagus of the Saint is in the same Chapel; opposite, that of S. Gregory Nazianzen. In the rt. transept is the *tomb of Bishop Giorgio Andreassi, resting upon a bronze swan and marble sphinxes, sculptured by Prospero Clementi in 1551. In the 1. transept is the fine monument of Pietro Strozzi, by Giulio Romano (1529). The brick Gothic campanile (1413), with some beautiful pointed windows, belonged to the original basilica.

The tomb of Giulio Romano has unaccountably disappeared. In the Crypt is a small wooden Statue of the Virgin and Child.

Sta. Barbara, within the Ducal Palace, was built by Bertani, a scholar of Giulio Romano. Over the high altar is the Martyrdom of the patron saint, by Brusasorci. This Church is exempted from the jurisdiction of the bishop, and is immediately under the papal see; and the liturgy has some peculiarities of its own. The archives are extensive and curious. The Sacristy contains the large Ark, or Shrine, of St. Barbara in rock crystal, with relics of the Saint. Fine red-brick Renaissance campanile.

Sant' Egidio (F. 3, 4) contains the sepulchral slab of Bernardo Tasso.

San Maurisio (E. 2). In the 3rd chapel rt. is the Martyrdom of St. Margaret, by Lodovico Caracci. Near this is San Francesco, a fine building of the 14th or 15th cent., but now desecrated.

In a small triangular Piazza (E. 3), under which the river flows, is a Statue of Garibaldi; and, on the Bridge, one of Popa Sylvester.

Ban Sebastiano (G. 2), erected by L. B. Alberts in 1460, has some dilapidated frescoes by Mantegna. Opposite to it is the House of Mantegna, the ground on which it stands having been presented to him by Duke Lodovico Gonzaga, with an honorary inscription. The house is now used as an agricultural school, and close by is the Porta Pasterla, leading to the celebrated

PALAZZO DEL TÈ.

The only account which seems to deserve credit as to the origin of the name is that which ascribes it to the form of the roads and avenues leading to it, which were so arranged as to produce the letter T. All the old authors, beginning with Vasari, write it DEL T. The Palazzo consisted it DEL T. The Palazzo consisted originally of stables, and Federigo Gonzaga intended to make this building an unpretending country house; but Giulio, in acquitting himself of his commission, showed so much taste, that the Marquis decided upon transforming the new house into a splendid palace, and thus gave the artist an opportunity of applying, in harmonious combination, his powers as Architect, Painter, and Sculptor. Giulio executed this great work, with the assistance of his pupils Primaticcio, G. B. Pagni, and Rinaldo Montovano, in the short space of five years. The principal building, with the large court in the centre, forms a square, each front being about 180 ft, outside, and about 120 ft, in the court. The order of architecture is throughout Done tastefully exhibiting all the variety of which this style is susceptible. The hall opposite the principal entrance leads over a bridge into an extensive parterre, which ends with a semi-circular wall, portioned out into 15 niches, probably for statues. At its extremity is a grotto and a loggio, in a tolerable state of preservation.

The Ante-room, on the rt. of the entrance, has plaster reliefs by Primaticcio and his scholars.

Camera det Cavalli.—Pictures of Gonzaga's horses. This is the oldest part of the building, and that which gave such delight to G. Romano's patron. The ceiling, which is of wood, is finely carved into compartments. The horses, truthfully executed, six in number, and of the natural size, two bays, three white, and an iron grey, are by pupils of Giulio Romano.

*Camera di Paiche.--Rich in frescoes, oil-paintings, and stuccoes, illustrating the story of Psyche from Apuleins. "The pictorial is wanting to render them agreeable, though it is in this room that Giulio Romano has evidently put forth his strength in force and depth of colours, and in effects of light and shade, particularly in Psyche offering her fruits and flowers to Venus, in her receiving the grapes, in the discovery of Cupid by Psyche, and in some of the beautifully composed figures of the lunettes. These pictures are in oil but are far too black. The large pictures below are in fresco, and are rich indeed in the important qualities of imagery, invention, and design, but woefully wanting in barmony."-Prof. Phillips, Camera dei Cesari.—Frences in the lunettes, by Giulio Romano: Alexander discovering the writings of Homer, and Scipio restoring the wife of Mardonius.

Phaëton in oil, on the vault. The distribution of this small room is as tasteful as its execution is exquisite.

Camera dello Zodiaco.—On the ceiling, in stucco, are the winds, and the Signs of the Zodiac: the occupations of the seasons are painted in 16 medallions.

Atrio, or Loggia forming the principal entrance. — Passages from the life of David, executed by Giulio's scholars. The medallions in black stucco are by Primaticcio. A cannon-ball fell through the vaulting during the siege of 1796, injuring one of the frescoes in the vault.

Sala degli Stucchi, in which is a double frieze executed by Primaticcio, from designs of Giulio Romano, representing the triumphal entrance into Mantua of the Emperor Sigismund in 1433, who the year before had created Gian Francesco Gonzaga Marquis of Mantua. The arched ceiling is equally rich in stuccoes.

*Sala dei Giganti.—This was chiefly executed by Rinaldo Montovano; a small portion only was the work of Giulio Romano, who furnished the designs. Jupiter, amidst the heathen gods, hurls his thunders upon the Titans, who, in different actions—terror, danger, and impending death cover the four walls, down to the very The giants in the foreground are 12 or 14 ft. high. Most contradictory judgments have been passed on these paintings. Vasari, Borghini, and all the earlier writers upon art, praise them exceedingly. Others have thought them wanting in taste. "Colossal figures in a small room, even where the idea of a supernatural size is intended to be conveyed, are unsatisfactory, as the spectator is quite near enough to perceive details, and finds none, except those belonging to the execution of the work, which ought not to be visible."—Eastlake.

"The taste of the work is displeasing, and unfit for the adornment of a palace; but the power of imagination exhibited in it is of the most extraordinary kind. Most of the figures are of superior order in action and in form, though some are coarse and offensive. The grouping is often exceedingly beautiful, particularly so in that of Cybele, Ceres, Hercules, Mercury, &c., but the only head that has any pretension to beauty is that of Juno. The Hours staying the progress of the horses of Apollo, are perhaps in the most perfect style of painting, as to colours and effect, of the whole."—Prof. Phillips, R.A.

The Ponte San Giorgio, which commences under the walls of the Ducal Palace and crosses the entire lake, is upwards of 2500 ft. in length. It was built in 1401, and was anciently covered, like a Swiss bridge. The view from hence is striking.

The Argine del Mulino (A. B. 2), a bridge, or rather dam, constructed in 1188 by Alberto Pitentino, is a curious specimen of ancient engineering. stands between two of the pieces of water which surround Mantua, one of which, being of a higher level than the other, serves as a great milldam, and turns the wheels of the twelve mills which flank the bridge, and are severally dedicated to the Twelve Over the door leading Apostles. into each Mill is a small Statue of its Apostle, a figure of Christ dividing the row of Statues into two series. The bridge itself is covered, and is entered by a fortified tower or gateway, in which is a pointed window of two lights. The saw-mill, which is, perhaps, the earliest example of such machinery, was built by Girolamo Arcari in 1400. The mills extend only halfway along the Bridge, and beyond them is a smaller set of machines for sifting rice, &c.

The Beccheria and Pescheria (shambles and fish-market) stand upon the Mincio, so that they are always clean. They were built by Giulio Romano, and possess considerable architectural beauty tural beauty.

In the Garden opposite the Palamo

Cavriani, No. 6, Via Giardino (C. 3), is a Statue of Virgil; and on the railings 13 busts of celebrated characters, chiefly associated with the family of Gonzaga.

The same street leads S.E. to the Anfiteatro Virgiliano, built in 1820 for games and shows, at one end of the Piazza Virgiliana, which was formed out of a swamp and planted by the French.

The Palazzo di Giustizia (F. 2) was built by Bertans, from the designs of Giulio Romano. The front is supported by enormous caryatides of bold sculpture. Within is a profusion of frescoes by the scholars of Giulio Romano, including many curious portraits of sovereigns and princes, Francis L, Charles VIII., Giovanni de' Medici; Niccold III., Marquis of Ferrara; and Francesco IV., Marquis of Mantua.

Nearly opposite is Giulio Romano's House. Over the door is a statue of Mercury, or rather a fragment restored by Giulio Romano and Primagods are introduced in various parts of the building. In the Church of B. Barnaba (4, F. 2) are two good paintings by Lor. Costa and Maganza.

The Teatro Sociale (15, E. 3), built by Canonica, is a handsome modern construction facing the Corso di Porta Pradella.

The Accademia delle Belle Arti (D. E. 4), is now merely a Drawingschool with Casts and a few unimportant Frescoes. Close to it is the Liceo (10, E. 4), formed out of the Jesuits' College, and including the Library and Museum. The Library (Biblioteca Comunale), comprising the Accordi, Acerbi, and D'Arco Collections, contains 97,000 printed books, and a few curious MSS., some beautiful missals, and one with pen-and-ink drawings by Andrea Mantegna. Here is a fine Rubens, formerly in the church, representing the Trinity with Angels, I so early a period as the year 945 to and four members of the Gonzage family in the net of adoration. The picture was cut in two by the French, and is now placed at opposite ends of the Library. In an inner Room is a large lunette by Feli-the Multiplication of the Loaves.

The *Museo is a long narrow gallery, filled with Roman and some few Greek statues and fragments, of which the greater portion, it is said, were part of the plunder collected by Lodovico Gonzaga at the sack of Rome. Left of the entrance, a Bust of Euripides, on an old altar; rt. bust of Virgil, erroneously so called. -Continuing to the rt., Minerva. Sarcophagus with relief of Medea --Faustina Maggiore, presented to Isbella d'Este by Mantegua. - Torso of a Greek Youth. - Relief of the Labours of Hercules.-Relief of a Funeral Supper and Sacrifice, from a Greek tomb,-Torso of a Woman. Greek Satyr and Nymph.—Matilda Augusta. -Greek altar,-Relief of the Destruction of Troy, from a sercophagus. -Giulia.-Three fine reliefs, representing the submission of a province, a sacrifice, and the marriage of an emperor, supposed to be Lucius Verus. -Several imperial busts, among them a fine Caligula,-*Torso of Venus, on an altar in the middle of the room.—In a room on the rt, the Chair of Virgil, that is to say, a very ancient hisbop's throne of marble. Two good fluted columns of porphyry at the door .-Returning to the long Hall, Greek tomb relief (Farewell). Relief of two figures.—Bacchanalian reliefs. — Torso of a Greek Gladiator,-Alcibiades,-Marcus Aurelius as a youth.—Torso of Venus,-Faun playing the flute. -In the middle of the room, Apollo, with reliefs of Cupid below .- Young Hermes, -- Colossal head of Aphrodite -Venus and Adonis, relief .- Melpomene as a Caryatid.

Opposite the Liceo is the Muse Comunals, in which is preserved a Collection of Coins struck at Mantus or connected with her history. At city had a mist of her own, and the Secche de Montous continued to be struck down to 1780, when the Austrians suppressed the privilege. However, during the siege of 1796 the Mantsans coined some pieces, of which specimens can be seen here. On the ground-floor is a Pre-historic Collection.

115 m. Legnage Junet. (14,250), one of the famous fortresses of the Quadrilateral, which, together with Verona, Peschiera, and Mantua, defended the passage of the Adige under Austrian rule. Here our line strikes R.E. to

191 m. Bevilacque, where it resames its E. direction, passing

194 m. Montagnana (10,000), an interesting town, formerly of strategic importance, and strongly fortified. Among its numerous picturesque buildings are a Gothic Cathedral with sinquecento additions, and a Town Hall by Sommicheld.

134 m. ERTH (10,000), beautifully situated at the foot of Monte Cero, which forms the S. extremity of the Buganean group of hills. The Rocca, or Castle of Este, is a fine and almost unaltered building, erected in 1343 by Ubertino Carrara, and repaired by the Scaligers during their temporary possession of it; a noble dungeon tower, with frowning embrasures and battlements, and standing upon the site of the original fortress, the seat of the family of Este, so celebrated in history.

Alberto Asso (996) was the more immediate frunder of the house here on the death of the Emperor Henry III. His ancestry may be traced to Bonifasio, Duke or Marquis of Tuscany, in 811.

Guelph, Duke of Bavaria (1071), from whom all the branches of the House of Brunswick are descended, was his son by his first wife, Cunegunds, a princess of the Suabian line,

Fulco I., Marquis of Italy and Lord of Este, son of Alberto Asso by his second wife, Garisenda, daughter of Herbert, Count of Maine, was the founder of the Italian branch from which the Dukes of Ferrara and Modena descended; the male line of which became extinct at the end of the last cent. The last Duke of Modena, who was of the House of Hapeburg-Lorraine, reprecents that of Este in the female line,his grandmother, Maria Beatrix, having been the last descendant of the Italian branch. Este continued in the possession of the descendants of Alberto until 1294, when it fell an easy conquest to the lords of Carrara. Successively a dependency of Padua and of the Verona Scaligers, it passed to Venice in 1405, retaining its local government and municipal institutions.

Close to the Cartle is the Villa Künkler, bired by Lord Byron in 1817

from Mr. Hoppner.

Rete has a Lombard aspect; most of the houses are supported by picturesque arches. The Church of San Martine has a Romanesque exterior, modernised within; the Campasile, in the same style, inclines as much as the leaning tower of Pisa. In S. M. della Consolations, a Church of the Zoccoli, is a *Madonna, by Clima da Consolationo. A fine belfry tower, with forked battlements, and a Dondé clock (see Padua) of the largest size, add to the antique adornments of this mediawal town.

The Museum of Antiquities contains a very interesting and important *Collection of prehistoric remains found in the Euganean hills.

Excavations made in the gardens of the Villa Bonocouti have led to the discovery of an interesting prehistoric Comstery.

It is square, having a massive tower or keep at one of its angles, and is sarrounded by a moat, one of the drawbridges over which still remains. Around the castle are the dwellings of the chief's retainers and dependants. The walls of the great court and the principal apartments are covered with frescoes, characterised by rich colour and felicity of exe-cution; they represent the principal events in the life of the great Condottiere. In this town were born three painters called "Da Caravaggio," viz., Ferino Stella, scholar of Gaudenzio Ferrari, Polidoro Caldara (b. 1495), scholar of Raphael, and Michel Angelo Amerighi (b. 1569). Schilpario (3850 ft.), whence the high road may be regained in 6 hrs. by Dezzo and the striking Vio.

52 m. Breno, chief place in the lower Val Camonica, a highly pieturesque and curious old town in a cleft on a rock that blocks up the valley, and leaves scarcely more than space for the river. The Church of S. Antonio has a Virgin and Child with Saints, and that of S. Gregorio, a similar painting, both by Calisto de Lodi. Monte Ferrone (8676 ft.), a bold granitic peak, rises to the E., and several narrow valleys penetrate in that direction towards Mte. Castello, the most southern of the snowy ranges.

[An interesting path leads S.E. by (1 hr.) Presture to the (3 hrs.) Cross Domini Pass (6500 ft.), by which the upper valley of the Caffaro may be gained. At (4 hrs.) Bagolino it becomes extremely beautiful. Road thence to (14 m.) Lodrone, near Lago d'Idro (Rte. 382, Handbook for S. Germany).]

The road crosses the Oglio, and bends round to 54 m. Cividate, very picturesque on all sides. Thence, following the rt. bank, it enters an alluvial flat, bounded by limestone cliffs, to which two hoge masses of dark-coloured porphyry in the centre of the valley are singularly opposed.

[7 m. below Breno a road branches l., crossing the stream to Darfo, and runs thence to Pisogne, on the E. bank of the Lake. In the Church are some frescoes by Romanino. The road hence to Iseo (Omn. twice daily, is a fine construction blasted out of rock or carried on terraces over the take. It passes through Marone, to town, and the principal port of the Steamers on the lake. It stands on the site of the Roman Sebum, and has extensive silkworks. In the neighbourhood may be observed the ancient moraines of the Oglio.

15 m, Isso, an industrious little

On the opposite side of the lake is Predore, with plantations of olive and lemon, and vineyards producing a strong but excellent wine. The old Tower is said to have been split from top to bottom by two brothers, the one Guelph, the other Ghibelline, who could devise no other method of sharing their heritage.

THE LAKE OF ISEO.

Lacus Sebinus of the Romans (620) ft.), a very beautiful sub-alpine sheet of water, 15 m. long and about 1 m. in breadth. The Montisola rises boldly from its centre. vegetation of the shores is rich, and the olive-tree flourishes in the more sunny exposures. Many towers, castles, and villas are dotted round its shores. The Villa Fenaroli, at Tavernola, on the W. shore, opposite the Island, commands a fine prospect of the lake and of the small town of Iseo.

The Lake of Iseo has the same elongated form as those of Como and Garda, and, like them, fills the bottom of a great trough or transverse valley. It abounds with fish, which from the clearness of the water are visible at a great depth. Its principal feeders are the rivers Borlezza and Oglio, that descend from the Alps through the Val Camonica, and its only exit is by the Oglio at Sarnico; it is 900 ft. deep in the centre. Its island (Montisola) is the largest of any in the Italian lakes, about 1½ m. long, with several villages, Siviano and Erza on the N.E. side, and Peschiera on the S.E. The Church of San Giovanni, crowning a rocky peninsula W. of Lovere, is a conspicuous and picturesque object.

68 m. LOVERE, a busy little town, with an animated Quay on the Lake. It has a large Church, with pictures by Ferramola and Moroni, and in the Tadini Chapel is a monument by Canova, one of the repetitions of that of Volpato, erected by Count Tadini to his daughter, who was crushed by the fall of an arch. In the Palazzo Tadini is an extensive collection of paintings, comprising a Virgin and Child, by Jacopo Bellini, Madonna with Saints, by Paris Bordone, and a Baptism of Christ, by Civerchio (1539). The view from the palace over the Lake is very fine. Near Castro, about 2 m. S. of Lovere, on the shore of the Lake, is the Orrido di Tinazzo, a chasm into which the torrent precipitates itself with a roaring noise. The road from Lovere to Bergamo is carried along it for several yards on arches; the water below is out of sight.

[There is a road N.W. from Lovere to (10 m.) Clusone, and thence S. to Ponte della Selva, whence a branch Rly. threads the Val Seriana to Bergamo (Rte. 58). S.W. a good carriage-road runs through the Val Cavallina to (18 m.) Gorlago Stat. (Rte. 58).]

From Lovere the traveller may cross the Lake to Pisogne, and walk over the opposite Col to Bovegno (S. Germany, Rte. 393); or follow the E. shore of the Lake by road or steamer to Iseo, as indicated above, and thence to Brescia by train. Or he may take the steamer to Sarnico, a pretty little town at the S.W. extremity of the Lago d'Iseo, connected by a bridge with Paratico Stat., on the opposite bank of the Oglio, which here issues from the Lake. From Descrizano an Excursion may be made to the island or promontory of Bermione. The distance by water is 5 m., and by land between 6 and 7 m. In fine weather the row across will occupy 1 hr.

The Peninsula of Sermione, now this is a subterranean arched passage virtually an island since the cutting and farther on a second larger on of the ditch across the long sandy spit at the extremity of which the village is situated, is well worth a visit; it consists of a ridge of limestone, having at its S, extremity the village and the picturesque Castle, which forms so fine an object of the landscape of the Lake of Garda, and at the N. point some extensive Roman rains, which tradition has attributed to the Villa of Catallus. According to recent research, they would appear to be the remains of Baths. The village is entered by a drawbridge and a medimval gate on the S. On the opposite side is a fortified wall, through which opens the only gate in that direction. The old Castle, in the form of a quadrangle, with a high square tower, was entered on the N. by a drawbridge. entrance is still well preserved, as well as its small port or Darsena, surrounded by crenellated battlements, but the principal entrance is now on the side of the village, by a gate over which are shields bearing the arms of the Scaligers, and the letters A A., showing that the edifice dates from Alboino or Alberto della Scala, and was erected in the 14th cent. The Castle belongs to the Government. There is a curious fragment of an early Christian relief in the wall of a house adjoining the Church. The town of Sermione is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. The whole of the island is one extensive olive-garden, the tree here flourishing luxuriantly and attaining a great size. As the tourist proceeds into the interior of the island he will see under the gate a mutilated Roman altar dedicated to Jupiter, and a fragment of another inscription. About the centre of the island is the old Church of San Pietro, which contains some curious frescoes of the 14th or 15th cent., representing the Crucifixion, the Virgin and Child, St. George, &c. Farther on we come upon an oblong building, the walls of which are of Roman construction, called by the local cicerone the Baths of Catullus, A short way beyond this is a subterranean arched passage, classical writers, is fed he river Sarca descending talian Tyrol. Although s water than Lago Magno, it is much more exten, more so than any of the s. Its greatest depth is supper portion is surhigh mountains, and expoint where the Mincio sides for two-thirds of its old and precipitous—so for a considerable distance no road is possible along the shore. On the E. side rises Monte Baldo (7210 ft.), renowned amongst botanists for its varied flora, and presenting an inexhaustible field to the geologist. It separates the lake from the valley of the Adige. A long series of phenomena, some of quite recent occurrence, proves Monte Baldo to be peculiarly liable to volcanic disturbances. The lower portion of the lake widens out amongst the lower elevations of the subalpine region, and its shores are fertile and dotted with villages. The climate is milder in winter than upon the other Lombard lakes, while the heat in summer is tempered by a refreshing breeze. The olive is much cultivated, and on the W. shore extensive plantations of lemon-trees present a singular appearance. The Lake of Garda is more subject to violent storms than those of Como or Maggiore; and, from the larger expanse of water, the waves rise to such a height as to give it the appearance of an agitated sea.

It abounds in fish, the principal of which are the trout, pike, tench, eel, two or three species of the carp genus, with the Sardella and Agone, probably different ages of the delicious freshwater herring that exists in the other Lombard lakes. The perch is entirely wanting here, although so abundant in the more western lakes.

There remains evidence that wealthy Roman families were in the habit of sojourning not only at Sermione, but at villas which they had built for themselves all along the W. coast, as far N. as Toscolano.

The only outlet is the Mincio at Peschiera, which is not navigable, being intercepted by weirs, where great numbers of trout are caught. The introduction of trawling on the Lake of Garda, as on Lago Maggiore, is likely to exterminate this fish, now rapidly decreasing in consequence.

noon, and Riva et 5 A.m. Fare, 44 and 24 fr. Restaurant on board. The departures are in correspondence with the trains from Milan and Venice (see Time-tables). On reaching Riva travellers may proceed at once by tramway or carriage to Mori, and catch a train over the Brenner to Innebruck.

After leaving Desenzano, the Steamer skirts the bold and singular headland of the Rocca di Manerba, once crowned by a Temple of Minerva, and in the middle ages by an important fortress. Next come the islets of San Biagio and Leohi, surrounded by olives and orange-trees. The latter was occupied by Garibaldi in 1859.

salò (4500), situated at the extremity of a small bay, is perhaps the most beautiful spot on the lake. In the Gothic Cathedral is a painting of SS. Sebastian, Anthony, and Roch, by Torbido. Over the W. door is a carved wooden tabernacle of ten niches, and in the Sacristy a small Virgin and Child. Fine *view from Monte San Bartolommeo.

Tramway in 24 hrs. to Brescia (Rte. 53), by Tormini (Junct, for Vestone).

Sald is the chief place on the Western Riviera of the Lake of Garda, a district comprising Gardone and all the villages as far as Gargnano. Not much is heard of Salo before 1121, when its castle was built by the advice of Count Albert Martinengo, to make head against the inroads of the Imperialists. In subsequent history, whenever the balodiani had their own way, they detached themselves from the government of Brescia and declared allegiance to the Republic of Venice. Their fidelity to the latter endured to the end, and cost them dear. In 1797 the whole Riviera united in a gallant attempt to resustate the Venetian governor, who had been dispossessed and imprisoned by the revolutionary authorities, and for a short time the movement was successful; but the arrival of a French battalion changed the aspect of affairs, and Salò was given over to the mercies of a ruthless soldiery. Of the once magnificent Palazzo Martinengo, only the walls were left. The Austrians, on succeeding the French, preserved; and Salo was degraded to the rank of a village till 1859, when it regained its former position through the liberation of the country. The decline of the lemon trade since the disease of 1855 has been severely felt at Salo, but the manufacture of a liqueur made from the limes, acqua di tutto cedro, is now carried on with profit.

Gardone Riviera, in a charming situation, well adapted for a long stay.

EXCURSIONS.

- a. By boat to the Isola Lechi.
- b. To the Church of Gardone de Sopra; a short but charming walk up paths flanked by ancient bay trees.
- c. To S. Michele, commanding a splendid view. From S. Michele, it is possible to proceed to S. Bartolommeo, from which not only the whole southern basin of the lake is visible, with all its towns, villages, peninsulas and islets, but also the Mincio, the fortifications of Verona, and the valley of the Chiese.
- d. Monte Pizzocolo (6000 ft.). Fine excursion, but fatiguing. In spring all these hills are covered with flowers, many of which are rare.
- e. The following four days' trip is recommended:—1. Leave Gardone by morning steamer for Desenzano; the afternoon may be devoted to a visit to Sermione or to the battle-field of Solferino. 2. Drive to Peschiera, thence steamer for Riva by the E. shore. 3. Drive from Riva by the Lago di Ledro to Storo or Bagolino. 4. Drive to Vestone, and take the Steam Tramway thence by Tormini (Junet. for Brescia) to Salo.

over to the mercies of a ruthless soldiery.
Of the once magnificent Palazzo Martine black, red, and white, with Byzantine neugo, only the walls were left. The Austrians, on succeeding the French, took away what few privileges had been capitals, and the ornamentation doors and windows, are Byzantine. A more ancient building seems to have been used in the construction of the actual church. In the 16th cent., S. Carlo Borromeo ordered the removal of certain marbles bearing pagan emblems; others, however, escaped his vigilance. The walls were covered with frescoes, but these are effaced by a great coat of mortar. The pedestrian may explore the lovely Val Cartiere (paper-mills). At Toscolano there are several paper-mills, at the foot of Monte Fraine. At Bogliaco, the palace of Conte Bettoni contains fine pictures.

Gargnano (4200), one of the most considerable places on the lake. Large lemon-gardens. In the Church is a damaged painting by Torbido. The Cloisters of S. Francesco are worth notice. Here ends the high road from Brescia. Dil. to (13 m.) Tormini.

Tremosine, high up on the rocks, and scarcely visible from the Lake, is reached by a wonderful staircase Path. The Church has some well-carved Stalls, and commands a splendid *view.

Limone, about 2 m. from the Tyrolese frontier. Large lemon plantations: first grown here in Europe; hence the name of the fruit. Here the French embarked Hofer a prisoner, on his way to Mantua to be shot. In the Church is a Crucifix carved in box-wood, and a Virgin and Child, with SS. Joseph, Anthony of Padua, and Francis, by Torbido. Good carved presses in the Sacristy.

The first Austrian village is Pregasina. A mile further, among the bold rocks on the W. shore, the Ponale torrent precipitates its waters into the Lake, near which, at the mouth of the gorge, are ruins of a Custom-house. It may be visited from Riva.

PESCHIERA TO RIVA.

The Steamer skirts the E, shore of the Lake to Lazise (2600), surrounded by picturesque mediæval walls. Its Castle, consisting of towers and a dungeon, was erected by Mastino della Scala in the 13th cent. 2 m. S., but a little inland, is Cola (Colle Alto), with a large villa of Count Menescalchi, well known for his researches in oriental literature.

Bardolino, a village with battlements, walls, and towers, is surrounded by pretty villas, and celebrated for its wine.

Garda, a walled village, which gives its name to the Lake, is at the bottom of a deep bay. In the neighbourhood is the palace of Count Albertini of A little way S. stands a villa of Count Borri, on the site of a Camaldolese sanctuary, where Count Algarotti resided. The plateau of Rivoli, the scene of one of Napoleon's decisive victories over the Austrians, in 1797, is an hour's ride from Garda. After passing the pretty promontory of San Vigilio, on which is the Villa Brenzoni, designed by Sammicheli, the steamer runs under Monte Baldo, and touches at Torri, whose castle was built by a Scala in 1383—delightful gardens, and quarries of red and yellow marble, with which many of the buildings of Verona have been decorated.

[Road to (8 m. E.) Caprino (855 ft.). Rly. thence to Verona (Rte. 73). 2 hrs. beyond Caprino is the curious Sanctuary of S. M. della Corona (2550 ft.), well worth a visit. The descent may be made on the other side in 2 hrs. by a steep staircase path, to Peri on the Brenner Rly. (S. Germany, Rte. 284).] Casteletto and Assenza are islets with ruined castles.

Malcesine (2000) has a picturesque castle, restored, and a Church, in which is a *Descent from the Cross, by Giolfino. The Colma, or Monte Maggiore (7210 ft.), the highest peak of Monte Baldo, rises above Malcesine. Steep ascent in 6 hrs.

Riva (6500) occupies a charming situation at the head of the lake, Laggage is examined on landing at |

the Austrian Custom-house,

On the W, side of the town the Castel Vecchio stands on a rock. The scenery around is beautiful, and the climate most agreeable, but the chief interest of the town itself centres in its busy little Harbour. It lies at the extreme N.W. point of the lake, hemmed in by precipices on the E. and W., while to the N. are groves of orange and citron, olives, myrtles, vines, and pomegranates.

Excursions :--

2 m. S., the road made by the Austrians in the direction of Brescia, forms a gradually rising terrace above the W. shore of the lake. It is shady in the afternoon, and commands fine views, but the walk is especially recommended by moonlight. From the point where the Cornice Road turns into the Val Ledro (Rte. 74), a path descends in 10 min. to the *FALLS OF THE PONALE, which are, however, best visited by Boat (2 fl. there and back),

Monte Brione (1185 ft.), an hour E., commands fine views, and from Monte Baldo, ascended in 5 hrs. from Nago, a grand panorama will be enjoyed,

4 m. N. is the Castle of Tenno, formerly the residence of the Bp. of Treat

Nearly halfway is Varrone, with a pretty gorge and waterfall (20 kr.).

It is a charming drive of 28 m. to Trent, by (4 m.) Arco, and the grand gorge of the Surca. (See Rte. 383, Handbook for S Germany.)

Steam Tramway to (11 m.) Mori (on the Rly. to Verona, Rte. 78), through a richly cultivated country, passing Torbole, Nago, and the little Lake of Loppia.

At Torbole, on the E. shore opposite Riva, an interesting experiment in pisciculture is being tried under the direction of the Rev. Don Francesco Canevari, and a society formed for the purpose. Large numbers of trout are beneath which the road passes, and artificially bred with a view to asporting the eggs, and to re-stocking the river Sarca and the Lake of Garda, where trawling, and the barbarous method of taking fish by the use of dynamite, lime and poisonous drugs, have threatened to depopulate the water. In 1881, two years after the society was founded, 200,000 young trout were placed in the lake and in the Sarca. It is proposed to establish a similar society at Garda.

115 m. TRENT (685 ft.). Germ. Trient — Ital. Trento. The mostimportant and prosperous city in the Italian Tyrol (15,000), beautifully situated on the l. bank of the Adige. Its numerous towers surmounted by the stately Duomo, its marble palaces and its ruined castles, all included within a circle of embattled walls, have from a distance a very imposing aspect. Entered by five gates, it has all the character of an Italian city, nearly unaltered; many of its houses are painted in fresco on the outside. It was the Tridentum of the Romans, and the capital of Rhætia; afterwards from 1027 to 1803 a prince-bishopric. It rose to high importance and prosperity from the time that the Emp. Conrad the Salic bestowed upon the prince-bishops and their successors the temporal rule over the valley of the Adige and the surrounding district. It is still the see of a Bishop, and the chief place of a circle (Kreisstadt). The City Walls are very perfect; they are attributed to Theodoric, King of the Ostrogoths. The Adige flowed round the town in a curve until 1856, when a straight channel was made for it.

The name of the city is derived from the 30 Towers (Trenta Torri) which it formerly contained. "Montes argentum mihi dant, nomenque Tridentum," is inscribed upon the Torre Vanga, or Tower of Bp. Wengo (1208-12), once used as a retreat by the bishops, now a Prison.

The Romanesque *Duomo of St. Vigilius, entirely of marble, begun in 1212 by Adamo d'Arogno, of the Como district, has a remarkable porch, and is surmounted with a dome. The high altar stands beneath an entablature of marble, which is supported by spirally twisted columns. The objects worth notice are—Adam and Eve white marble; monuments of various prelates; porphyry tomb of the Venetian General Sanseverino, who was slain by the Trentines at Calliano (see below); the Crucifix used at the sittings of the Council of Trent; and the flights of steps succept: ing to the Campanile,

The Piazza contains some fine houses and a marble fountain, with Neptune and Tritons. N.E. of it rises the Torre di Piazza, or City Tower, containing the Rengo, a Bell which was tolled when the podesta or bishop wanted to collect the citizens.

Santa Maria Maggiore, of red marble, was rebuilt 1520) by Bp. Bernard of Cles, on the site of an older Church, of which the S, porch and tower remain. In it were held several sessions, including the last, of the celebrated Council of Trent, which met at intervals from 1545 to 1563. A curious but bad painting of the assembly, containing portraits of the members - 7 cardinals, 3 patriarchs, 33 archbishops, 235 bishops, 7 abbots, 7 generals of orders, 146 professors of theology-is shown in it. The Cantoria or Organ Gallery, carved with Scripture subjects, Sibyls, foliage, and ornaments in white marble, is a fine work of Vincenzo Vicentini (1534).

8. Pietro had its façade restored in 1850, in honour of the child-martyr S. Simone da Trento, murdered by Jews in 1475; his skeleton is shown in a glass case, with a gold crown given by the Queen of Spain.

The Castello del Buon Consiglio, E. of the town, close to the Piazza d'Armi, an episcopal stronghold during the middle ages, is an edifice of enormous extent, surrounded by deep ditches. It now serves as Barracks, and is shamefully dismantied. The massive, round Torre di Augusto, with walls 9 ft. thick, said to be Roman, adjoins an interesting court with arcade in four stories. Many of the walls and rooms are painted in fresco, in a bold, good style; some of them are probably those mentioned by Vasari as the work of Girolamo da Treviso; others may be by Romanino, who was invited to Trent in 1540, by Cardinal Madruzzo, to paint the castle; others may be by Fogolino. There is another episcopal Castle, in roins, outside the town.

Fine view from the Capuchin Church, which rises behind the Castle. Many interesting though dilapidated house deserve notice :- Pal. Zambelli, builth a Fugger of Augsburg; Casa Tabarellin the Contrada del Teatro. In the Municipio, near the Cathedral, is a Museum, containing bronzes, various curiosities, and local antiquities, Among these are the *Clesian Tables, with inscriptions of the time of Claudius, found at Cles in the Val di Sole, geographical and of considerable geographical interest. The Archeological Collection formed by Count Giovanelli includes inscriptions, a Situla in bronze with Etruscan characters, and numerous pre-historic remains. There are also minerals, shells, fossils, and a fine bust by Alessandro Vittoria, a native of the town.

Dos Trento (950 ft.), rising beyond the bridge on the rt. bank of the Adige, was fortified by the Romans under Augustus, who called it "The Wart," Verruca. Admittance is not readily granted. Its rocky sides and bushes, moreover, swarm with vipers. At the foot of the rock is the Church of St. Apollinaris, with Roman remains, said to have been a temple of Satura.

The chief produce of the district is wine and silk. The rearing of the silkworm furnishes occupation to a large part of the population, and the lower part of the valley is covered with mulberry-trees. The festival of St. Vigilius, the patron saint (26th of June), collects an immense number of people from the surrounding county.

The Pergine road leads E. into Val Sugana, affording a direct and delightful route by Bassano and Treviso to Venice (Rte. 87).

W. strikes off a beautiful road by (8 m.) Vezzano, passing the strong fortress of Buco di Vela, and (13 m.) Le Sarche, to (24 m.) Aroo, a frequented health-resort in winter. Thence to (28 m.) Riva, on the Lago di Garda, from whose little port Steamers ply down the lake to Peschiera or Deserzano (Ric. 72).

The Rly. continues to descend the L bank of the Adigs, whose lower valler is termed Val Lagarina, to to the Val Folgaria. Here the valley contracts to a narrow pass, where the Venetians under Sanseverino, who was slain, were defeated by the Trentines in 1487. On a height to the E. rises the Castle of Beseno, commanding a fine *view. The Rly. now twice crosses the river. To the rt. are seen the Ruins of Castelbarco, at one time belonging to the most powerful family of the Val Lagarina, afterwards a strong frontier fortress of the Venetians. With a bend to the S. the Rly. reaches 130 m. Roveredo (680 ft.), a flourishing town of 10,000 inhab., on the l. bank of the Adige, which belonged to the Venetians down to 1509, when it was taken by the Emp. Maximilian. It is the centre of the silk-trade of Tyrol, and has numerous paper mills. There are 27 Filande (mills where the silk is unwound from the cocoon) in the town and neighbourhood, giving employment to 2300 persons, the principal being the Fllanda Bettini. There are also 36 spinning-mills (Filatorie), moved by the stream of Leno, manufacturing yearly the 173,000 lbs. of silk thread, and giving employment to 343 men and 820 women.

The Castle, in the Piazza del Podestà, once the residence of the Venetian Governor, is now the Town Council Office. Its tower has the appearance of a lighthouse more than a fortification.

E. a good road runs through the Valle de' Signori to Schio (Rte. 76).

2 m. S. is the castle of Lissana, the hilly site of which alone exists, marked by a modern house, on the l. of the Rly. Here Dante, when exiled from Florence (1302), and living at the court of the Scaligers, was some time entertained as a guest by the lord of Castelbarco, its owner. It must have been during his residence here that he observed that singular scene of desolation called Slavini di San Marco, which is traversed by the Rly. just beyond Mori. It is, as its name implies, an avalanche of stone, occasioned by the fall of a vast mass of the oolite and clay strata of the mountain, which has strewn the valley as far as Serravalle with huge fragments of rock. This ruin is thus alluded to by Dante, in his description of the vestibule of hell:—

Qual' è quella ruina, che nel fianco Di quà da Trento, l' Adice percosse, O per tremuoto, o per sostegno manco: Che da cima del monte, onde si mosse Al piano, è si la roccia discoscesa, Ch' alcuna via darebbe a chi sù fosse. Inferno, xii. 4, 10.

133 m. Mori, famed for asparagus. Steam Tramway for Riva on the Lago di Garda (Rte. 72), crossing the Adige.

142 m. Ala (415 ft.), the frontier Stat. (Buffet), where carriages are changed (Custom House and examination of luggage); a town of 3700 inhab., once famed for a flourishing manufacture of velvet and silk.

[An interesting path strikes S.E., up Val Ronchi, and crosses the Colle della Lora or Rivolto into the romantic basin of Recoaro (Rte. 80). This is one of the most picturesque approaches to that charming spot.]

145 m. Avio, on the rt. bank of the river, is the last Stat. in Austria. Here is a Castle of the Castelbarco family. The long mountain ridge on the rt., separating the valley of the Adige from the Lago di Garda, culminates in Monte Baldo (7210 ft.), rich in botanical treasures.

149 m. Peri is the first Stat. in Venetia.

3 m. beyond it, high up on the rt., is seen the singular sanctuary of Madonna della Corona (2550 ft.), built in a cave among the precipices of Monte Baldo, and reached by a flight of 676 steps (p. 217).

The Rly. penetrates the famous defile of the Chiusa (Berner Klause), 3 m. long, through which the Adige rushes, flanked by precipices of limestone on either side. The Emp. Frederick Barbarossa, returning from Rome to Germany with his army in 1155, here found his passage stopped.

by a body of Veronese, who had occupied the heights. He was saved from a degrading submission by Otho of Wittelsbach, who climbed the heights in the night with 200 chosen men and drove the Veronese over the precipice.

156 m. Ceraino, at the N. extremity of the defile. Above the river are some forts, one of which stands E. on the site of the old Venetian castle, another W. on a rock, commanding not only the road and ravine of the Adige, but the plateau of Rivoli opposite. At Rivoli Napoleon gained one of his earliest and most decisive victories over the Austrians (1797). The French set up a monument on the field, which was afterwards destroyed. Our line is crossed by the local Rly. between Verona and Caprino before reaching 160 m. Domegliara. 12 m. S. is Custozza, where the Austrians defeated the Piedmontese in 1848, and the Italians in 1866. Still further S.W. beyond the Mincio, but out of sight, lies Solferino (June 24, 1859).

168 m. Parona the Rly. crosses the Adige, and at S. Lucia enters the line from Milan to Venice. The remarkably wide circuit by which the city is approached was doubtless a precaution of military engineering.

173 m. Verons Porta Nuova Junct. (see Rte. 53). Rly. S. to Mantua (Rte. 103). The main line goes on to the Central Stat. at 175 m. Verona Porta Vescovo. Tramway between the two stations, traversing the town, every } hr. from 7 till 7; fare 10 c.

ing, and pleasant city, nobly (160 ft.), contains 62,000 inhab., garrison of 6000 men. It was ably founded by the Euganei, and becoming a Roman colony grew One of the most flourishing cities N. Italy. From its vicinity to the ps, the climate is somewhat sharp, t healthy.

The river Adige flows rapidly trough the city, dividing it into two chequal portions, and turning numer-One floating water-mills moored across the stream. It is crossed by five bridges, of which the Ponte della Pletra is a Roman work, with two of the ancient arches still remaining, the rest restored in 1520. The floods of the Adige are tremendous. One, which took place in the 18th cent., is commemorated in the ancient frescoes of San Zenoue. By such a flood in 1757 the Ponts delle Navi was entirely carried away, and in 1882 it was again seriously damaged. On the 31st of August, 1845, after three days' hard rain, the greater part of the town could only be traversed in boats. The same thing took place in Sept. 1882, when the Ponts Nuovo was completely swept away by the affairs of Spain, was held in the Palasso Castellani, where Prince Metternich resided for the time.

The treaty of Luneville in 1801 gave the smaller portion of the city, on the L bank, to Austria, the remainder to the Citalpine republic.

In 1822, the Congress of Verona

The city was surrendered by Austria along with the rest of Venetia, and now belongs to the kingdom of

The neighbourhood is fertile, and yields grain, wine, and fruit; but the main branches of industry are connected with silk and rice.

BOMAN BEMAINS.

The Amphitheatre or Arena is entered from arch No. 5, on the W. side (fee 1 fr.). It is supposed to have been built between A.D. 81 and 117, the date of the Coliseum. The interior is nearly perfect, owing to the continuous care bestowed upon it. Most of the other Roman amphitheatres have suffered exceedingly from having been converted into fortresses, as at Arles and Nismes, or into quarries, as the Coliseum. The outer circuit was greatly damaged by an earth-quake in 1184. The ruined portions appear to have been carried away, but the mass itself was diligently preserved. By a statute passed in 1998 convened chiefly with reference to the | it was enacted that every Poderia, on taking office, should spend 500 lire upon the repairs of the Arena. Other decrees in its favour have been since made; yet, notwithstanding all this care, four arches only are preserved of the outer circuit, which consisted originally of 72, being 8 less than in the Coliseum. A great number of the seats have been restored, yet, the operation having been performed gradually, the restorations are not apparent. There are 44 steps, 16 in. high, 28 in. wide, the ancient ones slope 2 in. from back to front to throw off the rain-water. 22,000 spectators could have been seated. The greater diameter of the Amphitheatre is 170 yds. (arena 88 yds.); lesser diameter, 135 arena, 49 yds.). The circumference is 477 yds., and the height 100 ft. It is built of white and red Verona marble, the substructions and vaultings beneath the seats being of good Roman brickwork. There were 64 vomitoria, two of which (5 and 12) were for gladiators, and four (1, 8, 9, 16) for the entrance of wild beasts. There are chambers which seem to have been prisons, and others which were probably dens. Some portions of the underground arrangements which have been cleared out, lead to the idea that the waters of the Adige could be introduced into the arena for aquatic performances. The numbers sculptured on the arches of the outer circuit, to guide the spectators where to present their tickets, remain quite distinct-LXIIII. LXV. LXVI. LXVII. The interior is frequently used for exhibitions of horsemanship, acrobats, fireworks, &c., affording an opportunity, scarcely to be found elsewhere, of seeing a Roman amphitheatre full of people. In the 13th cent. it was used for judicial combats; and it is recorded of some of the Visconti, that they received 25 Venetian lire for every duel fought there,

The Roman Theatre (B. 7), between the Castel S. Pietro and the river (small fee), was built upon and against the sandy limestone rock. Its destruction began at a very early period.

A decree of King Berengarius, dated

895, describes it as dilapidated, and permits all persons to demolish the rained portions; yet much of it was standing as late as the 16th cent., and Carotto, the painter, delighted himself with drawing and studying its remains. There is now little above ground, but numerous fragments of sculpture have been dug up about it. A portion of the lowest tiers of seats can be seen and the passage over which they were built.

The *Porta dei Bornari (C. 4, 5). like the Roman gates of Trèves and Autun, is double. From traces of inscriptions in the friezes, it appears to have been built under the Emperor Gallienus, together with the walls of the city in which it was inserted, about the year 265. The style of the architecture is very remarkable; pillars with spiral flutings, small arches or windows between columns and surrounded by pediments, and numerous other anomalies, rendering it a connecting link between the style of the Antonines and that of the darkest portion of the middle ages. The inscriptions were composed of bronze letters in relief fastened to the stones, as in the frieze of the Maison Carrée at Nismes, and the words have been deciphered by the marks which they have left behind. But many antiquaries are of opinion that Gallienus merely caused the gateway to be fronted and ornamented, and that the mass of the building, the two lower arches in particular, belong to me earlier age. On the inside wall are marks indicating the height to which the river has risen on occasions of great floods. On the 17th Sept., 1882, the greater part of the city must have been deeply under water.

The *Porta de' Leoni (D. 6) is much less perfect, being only part of the original Roman double gateway, but is in better taste, and probably of about the same age. At each side is a Corinthian column, and above are three windows with pilasters, and appreally-flated column.

FORTIFICATIONS.

These belong to five distinct periods. The earliest are those built by the Emperor Gallienus, of which the Porta dei Borsari formed a gate: large masses of this wall remain, but generally buried in other buildings. most apparent portion is in the Vicolo di San Matteo, a lane near the gate-To these imperial walls succeed those attributed to Theodoric. They are of great extent, built of alternate triplets of courses of stone and brick, the latter placed in herringbone fashion, as also employed in the churches of this city, and doubtless imitated from this structure. Another line, beyond the Adige, is popularly attributed to Charlemagne. The fourth set, built upon the walls of Theodoric, was begun by the Scaligers, who crowned them with the picturesque forked battlements, and the towers which rise upon the bold and precipitous hills and add much to the beauty of the town. Lastly are the outworks of the Scaligerian walls, begun by the Venetians about 1520, according to the plans of several en-gineers. Ultimately they were completed from the plans of Sammicheli (born here in 1484), who may be considered as the father of the science of modern fortification. Square and circular bastions had previously been introduced: of the latter kind a very remarkable one is yet subsisting, called the Bastione Boccare (A 6), containing within it a vast bomb-proof casemate, of which the vault is supported by a central pillar. circular bastion can never be perfectly flanked; and Sammicheli, considering this defect, introduced the triangular and pentangular bastion; and the Bastione della Maddalena (F. 9) was the first specimen of the defence which has become the basis of the present system of fortification.

The finest of the Gates designed by Sammicheli is the

which Sammicheli combined pure and beautiful architecture with the requisites called for in fortification may be seen displayed to great advantage. It is an instance of his wonderful ingenuity and taste."—Gwilt.

The Porta Nuova (F. 3) has great architectual merit. It is square, supported within by a number of piers of stone, with apartments for the guards, artillery, &c.

The Arsenal (B. C. 3, 4) is connected by a Bridge with the Castel Vecchio, erected in 1355 by Cangrande II. as a citadel, to keep the town in subjection. It is still a noble and picturesque pile, battlemented at the top. Within, the quadrangle has been much modernised, and some fine towers have been demolished, in adapting it to its present use.

The coeval Ponte di Castel Vecchio is also a picturesque object. It is of brick, turreted and battlemented. The arches are of unequal size; the largest is about 161 feet in span.

The fortified Barracks which form a striking object in all the views of the city, stand upon the site of the Castel San Pietro (B. 7), which replaced the palace of Theodoric, and was built in part of Roman materials. A flight of steps leads to it from the Ponte di Pietra, and the *View from the terrace embraces the great plain of the Adige and Po, studded with innumerable towns and villages, with the Tuscan and Modenese Apennines in the background. Higher up are the remains of the Castel San Felice, now crowned by a very strong fortress, also the work of Sammicheli. The limestone of the hill abounds in fossil remains; and in the history of geology they are remarkable, as being amongst the first which excited curiosity, when a specimen of them was presented to He psq the celebrated Fracastoro. read about them in Pliny and Theophrastus, and he came to the conclusion that they were not semblances, generated by the plastic force of nature, as was the opinion at the time, but had one day been real animals depo- | probably built by Fru Giocondo, whose sited by the sea.

The Modern Fortifications are among the most remarkable works of military engineering in Europe Since 1815, when the city devolved to Austria, every effort was made to render it a stronghold of the first order. Detached forts were erected on every assailable point in its vicinity, and every summit commanding the town was fortified, extensive barracks erected within the fortifications, and an Arsenal on an immense scale formed, so that the city thus became the key to the Austrian power in Italy.

SQUARES.

The Plassa Vittorio Emanuele, formerly Piazza Brà, is adorned with an equestrian Statue of Victor Emanuel by Borghi, and includes a small Public Garden. On the E. side stands the Roman Amphitheatre, and near it the Palazzo della Gran Guardia Nuova, built in 1840, now the Municipio. The adjacent Palazzo della Gran Guardia. a fine building, now principally used as a corn magazine, was designed, in 1610, by Andrea Milani, a pupil of Sammicheli. Behind it are remains of an ancient wall attributed to King Theodoric. N.W. are the Philharmonic Theatre and the Museo Lapidamo. A few yds. S.W., in the Corso, is a Statue of Sammicheli, by Trojani.

Piasza dei Signori (C. 6). Here are the palaces formerly inhabited by the Scaligers, the lords of Verona, which upon their expulsion became the seats of the municipal government. In the centre stands a good colossal marble Statue of Bante, by Zannoni, a native sculptor, erected on his sexcentenary anniversary (May 14, 1865). In the Palazza della Prefettura (see below) the Poet was hospitably received during his exile from Florence in 1316, by Can Grande della Scala.

At the N.E. corner of this square is the *Palaszo del Consiglio (La Loggia), in the mixed style of the 15th cent., portrait in relief may be seen on the corner pilaster Lalf-way up the bailding close to the W. end The Loggia was restored and repainted in 1874, and the interior gorgeously fitted up for the meetings of the council of the province. In the Hall of Assembly is a picture by Jacopo Ligozzi, representing the Surrender of Verona to the Republic of Venice, with other paintings. The old Chapel of the Scaligers is readily shown by the porter. Fra Giocondo (1499) was an excellent scholar, architect, and engraver. He was the first who gave a correct edition of Vitruvius, and he discovered at Paris the letters of Pliny. Coupled windows and arches supported upon columns, palasters with elegant arabesques, in a style similar to the Colleoni chapel of Bergamo, adorn other portions, all in good cinquecento style. The Annunciation in bronse at the doorway is a fine work of Girolamo Campagna. The cornece is surmounted by Statues of celebrated men claimed as Veronese, from having been born within the municipal jurisdiction, viz.: - I'ling the younger, claimed also by Como, and apparently upon good grounds, for though he speaks in his epistle of "our Verona," this probably refers only to his rights of citizenship in Cornelius Nepos - M cer. the city author of a poem upon the qualities and poisons of herbs and serpents-L. Vetrurius Cerdo - But, above all Cutullus, who reflected as much credit upon Verona as Virgil did upon Mantua .-

Tantum magna suo debet Verona Catubo, Quantum parva suo Mantua Virgilto. Mant atv. cp. 198.

Under the arcades are portrait-base and medallions of Veronese celebrates.

Of the modern period, and on the arch (Volta delle foggie) crossing the little street, is Fracustoro (1553), eminent as a physician, and one of the three great masters of modern Latin poetry, Vida and Sannazaro being the other two. And, lastly, over an Archivelet wo.

in the N.W. corner of the Plazza, stands Scipione Maffei, the historian of his native city Just within the Arch is a remarkable Well.

The Tribunal and Prefettura, on the S. side of the Piazza, both originally Palaces of the Scaligers, were built by Mastino (1272), and Alberto della Scala his son; but having been several times modernised, no traces remain of their ancient splendour. The palace on the E. is partly used for the courts of justice, but the principal part, including the Campanile, is turned into a prison. The court of the palace on the W. is exceedingly picturesque, and has a fine Starrcase leading to its upper galleries. The Campanile to the S.W. (272 ft.) is a magnificent and simple piece of brickwork, commenced by the Lamberti family in 1172.

On the S.W side is the *Pinzza delle Erbe, or vegetable-market, the Forum in the republican times of Verona, and still the central point of the life of the city, with many old and picturesque buildings connected with its history. The small open tribune in the centre, with its four chambered columns, occupies the place of an older building, to which the newlyelected Capitano del Popolo of the Free City, after having heard mass at the cathedral, was conducted, and in which, after he had addressed the people, he was invested with the inlignia of office. In after times the lentences of condemned criminals were pronounced from this tribune. Proclamations were made from it, and debtors were here compelled to submit to a humiliating punishment. The Fountain, with a statue of Verona, was first erected by King Berengarius in 916, but restored and provided with additional supply of water by Canignorio, ninth ruler of the Scaliger antily, in 1368. The same Cansigtorio erected the NW tower, and placed in it the first clock erected at Verona. The building on the W side of the Piazza, with arcades and pointed windows, is the Casa dei Mercanti, built as an Exchange by Alberto della block of Veronese marble, at the N. end of the Piazza, was set up in 1524 by the Venetians, to whom Verona was then subject, to support the lien of St. Mark. The name of the architect, inscribed on the base, was Michele Leo. The lion was thrown down when the republic of Venice expired in 1797. Near this pillar is the Palazzo Maffei (now Tress, see below). The houses overlooking the Fountain are decorated with frescoes, some of which have been restored. Adam and Eve, by Liberale; Virgin and Child, by Gir. dai Libri. Opposite is the Casa Mazzunti, once a residence of Albertino della Scala.

Tombs of the Scaligers (50 c.). These singular white marble monuments, of a mixed pointed and Lombard style, stand close to the Church of Santa Maria Antica, which had been the parish Church and buryingplace of the Scaligers, before they rose into power. "They are of singular interest, not only for the excessive beauty of the group of marble and stone which has made this church. yard, for some five hundred years, a central point of architectural interest, but because they give us dated ex-amples of the best pointed work during nearly the whole time of its prevalence in Verona."-Street. They are enclosed by a beautiful iron railing or trellis-work, consisting of open quatrefoils, in which the Scala, or ladder, the armorial bearings of the family, is conspicuous. The origin of the family of the Scaligers (Della Scala) is not known. We find them at Verona in 1035. In 1257 two brothers, Bonifacio and Federigo della Scala, of the patrician order, were beheaded by Ezzelino da Romano. Their fate first gave the name a place in history. In 1261, after the death of Ezzelino, the unanimons voice of the people of Verona, then a free town, raised Mastino della Scala to the office of "Capitano del Popolo." He had been a soldier of fortune in Scals, in 1801. The pillar of a single | the army of the tyrant. He governed Verona wisely and moderately for 15 years. After escaping several state conspiracies, he was killed by some of the members of a disaffected family, who considered that he had aggrieved them by delaying the punishment of an offender against their honour (1277). This assassination took place under the archway in the Piazza dei Signori; which retains from that circumstance the name vôlta barbara to this day.

The Tomb of Mastino on the rt. is a plain sarcophagus, ornamented only with a cross in relief. The original inscription is preserved on the wall

Mastino was succeeded by his brother Alberto I., who, during 24 years, kept the turbulent factions in order, and sowed the seeds of commercial prosperity. These two superior men were the founders of the greatness of their house. Alberto, who had served as Podesta of Mantua, was esteemed and loved for his pacific virtues; and was installed amidst the shouts of "Viva Alberto, assoluto oggi e per sempre"; and if any portion of the legal power of the old commonwealth had still existed, it now wholly expired. Alberto died in 1301.

Further on, to the rt., a sarcophagus, without inscription, is attributed to Alberto by immemorial tradition. Upon it is sculptured the Signore, riding in full state, with sword in hand. SS. Cristina and James beside him. On the other side he kneels before the Virgin and Child, with two Angels.

To Alberto succeeded his second son, Bartolommeo, a gentle and humane prince, who died in 1304. In his time lived Romeo de' Montecchi, and Giulietta de' Cappelletti, immortalised by Shakespeare.

Upon the death of Bartolommeo, Alboino I. was called by acclamation to the supreme authority. Henry of Luxemburg was then prosecuting his plans for the re-establishment of the imperial prerogative; and Alboino in 1311, surrendering his authority as Capitano del Popolo, received it back | the Guelphs against the Viscosii from the Emperor as Imperial Vicar in Verona, a concession by which the dignity was confirmed to the family. Alboino, a feeble ruler, called in the assistance of his brother Francesco, better known as Can Grande, who was associated with him by the Emp. Henry VII. as joint vicar of the The Tomb of Albonio, the empire. central one among three on the left, is of doubtful authority.

Cangrande was a Ghibelline in heart and soul, his court was the most magnificent of the age in Italy, and exhibited a combination of military splendour and profuse hospitality with liberality to the stranger and encouragement to literature. His palace became the refuge for all who, entertaining his political opinions, had in anywise subjected themselves to persecution; and it was here that Dante found an asylum, having been first received by Alboino.

Can Grande, or the Great Dog, died in 1329. History throws no light on the origin of his strange nickname.

His Tomb, executed by Bonino da Campiglione, stands over the portal of the Church Upon the sarcophagus the Signore is extended in his peaceful robes, girt with his sword, above, on a pyramid, is the equestrian statue of the warrior, in full armour. The sarcophagus rests upon figures of mastiff dogs supporting the shield charged with the ladders.

Cangrande was succeeded by Alberto II., his nephew. Then followed Mastino II., nephew of Alberto. From his time the history of the family, instead of exhibiting stateamen and heroes, becomes a melancholy and revolting picture of misfortune and crime. Mastino II. was vain, weak, and unprincipled. He was surrounded by a brilliant Court; Treviso, Vicens. Bassano, Brescia, Parma, Reggio, and Lucca, all acknowledged him as their lord; and he had won Padua from the powerful family of Carrara. liaving abandoned the imperial party, he was fixed upon by Pope Benedict XII # the head of the league or alliance of leaders of the Ghibellines. But he lost several of his most important possessions, and died in 1351.

The Tomb of Mastino II., at the entrance on the left, also exhibits the double effigy; the equestrian warrior the pyramid, and the recumbent povereign on the sarcophagus. It was executed by Perino, a Milanese sculptor, in 1380

The first of the three sarcophagi on the left is that of Cangranda II., who built the Castel Vecchio, and the adjoining bridge over the Adige. He was murdered in 1359, after a troubled reign of eight years, and succeeded by his brother, Can Signorio. On his death-bed he ordered the execution of another brother, Paolo Alboino, the erime being instigated by his desire of preserving the succession in his own descendants, which he feared might be endangered if this brother had been suffered to survive him. Next to insuring the inheritance of Verona to his sons, his most earnest passion was the erection of a sumptuous mausoleum during his lifetime.

High up on brackets, adjoining this Tomb, is the Monument of Giovanni della Scala (1850), with statues of the Virgin and Child, SS. Anthony of Padua, James the Less, James the Greater, and Francis.

The Tomb of Can Signorio (d. 1375), which rises in stories, surmounted by an equestrian statue, is exceedingly The plan is hexagonal; elaborate. and six Cornthianised Gothic columns support the lower story. The basement is surrounded by an iron trellis, of richer pattern than that of the rest of the cemetery. Upon the pilasters which support it are the warrior saints, Quirinus, Valentine, Martin, George, Sigismund, and Louis, in black marbie, formerly gilded. Beneath the Agures of Virtues: Faith, with the star upon her breast; Prudence, Charity, and three others. The figure is recombent upon a sarcophagus. An inscription in Gothic letters, just above two E. columns, preserves the name of Bonino da Campiglione, who was both the sculptor and the architect of this sumptions pile.

The Piazza dell' Indipendenza, near the Post Office (C f), has a small Garden, and an equestrian Statue of Garibaldi, by Bordoni, PICTURE GALLERY AND MUSEUMS.

The *Pinacoteca forms part of the Museo Civico at the Palazzo Pompel alla Vittoria (E. 6). The Palace itself, a handsome edifice, the front consisting of a Tuscan or rustic basement, surmounted by an elegant Doric portico, was an early work of Summeheli, and was bequeathed by its last owner, Count Pompei, to his native town for its present purpose.

Adm. 1 fr.; Nov. to March, 9 to 3; Apr. to Oct., 9 to 4. Free only on the 1st Sun, in the month. On Sun, and Holidays, open at 10.

The Ground-floor contains a series of casts from Canova's principal works, bequeathed by Marquis Pindemonte; a very interesting collection of fossil plants, and of fishes, from Monte Bolca, formed by the late Professor Massolongo; several Etruscan and Roman antiquities, collected by Count Verita, including fragments from the Roman theatre near the Ponte della Pietra, and a very rich Collection of Coins.

There are also Pre-historic remains: flint implements, terra-cotta lamps, glass vases, and various objects discovered in recently excavated Tombs, together with Etruscan tomb-figures and sarcophagi, and a few good busts and fragments of sculpture. Among the most interesting are five mutilated statues in Greek marble, and a torso bearing the name of Praxiteles, found in the cloister of the Duomo; three capitals; a Head, probably of Drusus; Christian urus; and a valuable collection of 48,000 coins. Among the bronze pieces should be observed the Victoria Partica, crowning the Emp. Vespasian. There are also upwards of 22,000 medals, considerably damaged by the floods of 1882, and not yet |

finally re-arranged.

In the vestibule is the great Bell, cast in 1370, formerly in the tower of the Piazza delle Erbe.

The *Picture Gallery was removed in 1858 from the Palazzo del Consiglio, and is now arranged in a handsome suite of apartments on the first floor.

Here only, or in the Churches of Verona, can be properly studied the works of Girolamo dai Libri (1472-1555), Carotto (1470-1546), and Morando, often styled Cavazzola (1486-1522), a pupil of Francesco Morone.

The first three rooms contain the collection bequeathed by Dr. Bernas coni. This part of the Gallery is full of pictures with false names, while many others, whatever may have been their value originally, are spoilt by repainting.

Room V. contains some very beautiful illuminated *Service Books, with miniatures by Girolamo dai Libri, Liberale, and others. The following List of Pictures is arranged in alphabetical order of Painter's Names :--

A gallery at one side of the court contains a number of Engravings given by Count Alessandro Pompei.

The Museo Lapidario (22, D. 4) contains a valuable Collection of ancient Inscriptions and Reliefs, disposed in a Court or beneath arcades. Near the entrance on the left, Asclepius and Hygieia, early Greek reliefs. It was begun by the Accademia Filarmonica in 1617; and Scipione Maffei bestowed upon it his collections, adding to their value by the description which he published of them in the Museum Veronnese. Many important adultions have been subse quently made, and the collection is full of monuments illustrating points of archæelegy and of local interest, though a considerable number were never returned from Paris after being carried off there in 1797.

CHURCHES.

The *CATHEDRAL of S. M. Matricolars (B. 6) is attributed on insufficient authority to Charlemagne, before whose time a Church existed here, erected on the site, and with the materials, of a Temple of Millerva. The episcopal chair was transferred hither from S. Stefano in 806. The greater part of the existing Cuthedral was probably rebuilt in the first half of the 12th cent., as a new Sacristy was built in 1160, and in 1187 Urban III. re-consecrated the edifice. The E. apse, and a portion of its sides, are in a very different style from the rest of the building, and perhaps a rem-nant of the original Roman church. The vaulting was begun in 1402, but not finished till 1514. In 1534 the choir, screen, and S. chapels were altered under the direction of Sammicheli. The fine Italian Gothic front is injured by a huge clock-face in the Loggia.

The handsome porch must have formed part of the new building, and belongs, therefore, to the 12th cent. Four columns, two resting on griffins, support two arches, one over the other. This treatment seems to have been common in Italy in the 12th and 13th cents. The *Paladins, Roland and Oliver, who guard the entrance, may be supposed to have been introduced with reference to the traditionary connection of Charlemagne with this building. The Lombard imagery no longer appears as an ornament of the mouldings, but the under-side of the arch which forms the vault of the porch exhibits a variety of grotesque images and symbols.

On the l. of the door. Orlando holds the sword with which he is fabled to have cleft the Pyrenees; upon the blade its name is inscribed, Durin-dar-da His shield is pointed at the bottom, and ornamented with a species of Etruscan scroll-work. His l. leg and foot are armed in mail, the rt. leg and foot are bare. Opposite is his companion Oliver, armed not with a sword, but with a truncheon of mace, to which is appended a ball held by a chain.

In the semicircle over the entrance is an ancient relief, representing the Adoration of the Magi; beneath are three female heads, weh executed, inscribed Fides, Spes, Caritus. To the L of the door, on the central moulding of the splay, 7 ft. from the ground, is a hog standing on his hind legs, dressed in a monk's robe and cowl, and holding in his fore-paws an open hook, upon which is inscribed A. B. PORCEL.

The S porch consists of two ranges of columns, with strange mystical or sattrical sculptures.

The spacious Nave has clustered columns with curious capitals and pointed arches. The more modern portions are exceedingly rich. An inscription over a door in the N. aisle commemorates the celebrated Pacificus, Archdeacon of Verona (778 846). His name is written in three languages - Pacificus, Salomon, Irenæus, Seven churches were founded by him at Verona, and he repaired the cathedral 80 years after Charlemagne's death. Between the 1st and 2nd alters on the rt. is the monument of the poet Antonio Cesari (1846), with good statues of Religion and Poetry, surmounted by his bust.

In scraping the whitewash from the walls of the aisles, some good frescoes were discovered, those on the N. side are attributed to A. Mantegna, on the S. to Falconetto. The paintings are in good preservation and the colours brilliant. 2nd altar rt., *Liberale, Adoration of the Three Kings, with a rich landscape; at the sides, Giolfino, S. Roch, Anthony the Her-mit, Bartholomew, and Sebastian. 3rd rt, Morone. SS. James and John Evan., with the head of the painter below. 4th rt., Giolfino, the Last Supper. *The Chapel of S. Agata, at the end of the rt. sisle, has a fine sculptured shrine of the saint, of the 14th cent.; the pilasters at the entrance, covered with handsome arabesque reliefs, were executed in 1508 The choir, with its curved colonnaded marble Screen, is by Sammicheli. On each side is a Chapel with good ambesque reliefs on the pilasters. The bronze Crucifix over it is by Giovand Battista da Verona (fl. 1500). It walls and mouldings are painted in fresco by Francesco Torbido, from the designs of Grulio Romano. In the 1st Chape. I, is the "Assumption, by Tition, which was taken to Paris.—" The execution is of high excellence."—Cla 3rd left, Predella, by Giolfino. In the Sacristy, SS. Peter and Paul, by Morone.

The Baptistery, or San Giovanni in Fonte, is said to have been re-built between 1122 and 1135, after having been destroyed by an earthquake in 1116. In the centre is a large octagonal *Font, 31 ft. in circumference, hewn out of a single block of yellow Verona marble. A frieze of small Lombard arches, supported by grotesque heads, runs round the summit. On the faces are represented (1) the Annunciation; (2) Visitation and Nativity, (3) Angels appearing to the Shepherds; (4) Adoration of the Mag; (5) Herod commanding the Slaughter of the Innocents, (6) Execution of his Decree; (7) Flight into Egypt; (8) Baptism in the Jordan sculpture is in a rude style. In the middle of the great basin there is an inner one of red marble, quatrefoil in shape, intended for the priest to stand in whilst the catechumens were being immersed in the larger basin. The picture of the Baptism, on the L of the entrance, is by Farmati Opposite is a good Venetian Virgin and Child, with SS. Andrew, Jerome, John Bapt, and a Bishop. On the walls are remains of frescoes.

The Cloister had originally a double arcade, still retained on the E. side; each arch rests on a pair of columns and each pair is of a single piece of red marble, the capitals and bases being united. Within its area was discovered in 1885 a *Mosaic Pavement below the present level, 400 ft. by 52, supposed to have been Baths. Traces of a Temple of Minerva were also brought to light, including a column, still left in eitu, while other fragments have been removed to the Museum. The picturesque little Church of S. PIETRO IN CATTEDRA, close to the Duomo on the S., is now a private Chapel, and contains nothing of interest.

The Biblioteca Capitolare, entered from the cloister, is one of the important collections in Italy for sacred and Patristic literature.

It was first formed by Pacificus, and contains a large proportion of very early MSS., some of the 4th and 5th cents. Here Petrarch first read the Epistles of Cicero; and the library is yet an unexplored mine for the historical, ecclosustreal, and liturgical enquirer. Many of the MSS, are palir pacets, and one of them furnished the Institutes of Gains,' an elementary treatise designed for the use of law students, and presenting a synoptical review under three heads (persons, things, actions), of the jurisprudence of the time of Antoninus Pius, and Marcus Aurenus. It was known that this treatise was the foundation of the 'Institutes of Justinian,' but not a fragment of it could be found, "A rumour, devoid of evidence, says Gibbon, "has been propagated by the enemies of Justinian, that the Jurisprudence of ancient Rome was reduced to ashes by the author of the Pandects, from the vain persuasion that it was now either false or superduous. Without usurping an office so invidious, the Emperor niight safely commit to ignorance and time the accompaishment of this destructive wish. Before the invention of printing and paper, the labour and the materials of writing could be parchased only by the rich; and it may reasonably he computed that the price of books was a hundredfold their present value. Copies were slowly multiplied and cautiously renewed; the hopes of profit tempted the sacrilegious scribes to crase the characters of antiquity, and Sophocles or Tacitus were compelled to resign the parchment to missals, homilies, and the golden legend." Years after the death of Gibbon bis sagacity was verified by the zeal of Niebuhr, who, when on his way to Rome in 1816, examined this Library. two small fragments relating to Jurisprudence, not palimpsests, had been published by Maffei, but he had not ascertained their author. Niebuhr suspected that they were parts of the 'Institutes of Gains'; and upon further examination he discovered nearly the whole of the remainder palimpsested beneath the homilies of St. Jerome, In the process of destroying the overlying homilies and restoring the text beneath by means of an infusion of gall-nuts, some portions of the parchment were rendered illegible, but in the main the lost work has been reproduced. Of the other palimpsests is a Virgil of the 3rd or 4th cent., under a commentary by St. Gregory on the Book of Job, in Longobard.e writing of the 8th. It may be older than the Virgil in the Lauren-tian Library at Florence. Here also may be seen the baptismal certificate of Prince Charles Edward Stuart, the young Pretender, dated "Roma, ultima Decemb. 1720"; a diptych of the Consul Anastasius in the 6th cent. - and medited poems by Dante.

The Vescovado (Bishop's palace), adjoining the Cathedral on the E., has been altered and rebuilt at various periods, but principally about the year 1356. Its entrance court with fauciful columns is striking, and affords a good view of the picturesque apse of the Baptistery. In the CHAPEL are three small paintings by Liberale -the Nativity, Adoration of the Magi, and Death of the Virgin, and a Raising of Lazarus, by Carotto. Facing the entrance is a fine colossal *Statue of a crowned female with the artist's name, Alessandro Vittoria It was intended to be placed, with three others, on the corners of the Tower, but the Austrians forbad the completion of the work.

*Sant' Anastasia (2, C. 6) is one or the most complete and representative Gothic brick Churches in the N. of Italy. The main fabric was begun in 1260, the casing of the front in 1426. The reliefs on the latter are incomplete. Two panels of a pilaster on the rt. represent the Preaching and Death of St. Peter Martyr. Of the W. doorway architects speak with enthusiasia. "You feel," says Mr. G. E. Street,

"as though Fra Angelico might have painted such a door in a Paradise, and as though it were too fair to be real." The woodwork should be noticed for its simple effective design In the interior twelve circular pillars support pointed arches and separate the nave The short from the narrow aisles. choir terminates in an apse of five sides. The transepts are short, with two chapels opening out of each, and in the angle between one of them and the choir is a square tower, terminating in an octagonal spire. All the arches and vaultings are obtusely pointed. The springing of the middle vault hardly exceeds the points of the arches into the aisles, and the windows of the elerestory are circular and very small. The Church is 75 ft. wide and 300 ft, long. It appears to have been originally entirely covered with frescoes, but many of them are almost destroyed; those, however, in the spandrels of the vaulting are remarkable for their beauty and fine preservation. The two basins for holy water are supported by grotesque figures; that on the L, an inverted capital, has its stem sculptured by Gabriele Caliari, the father of Paolo Veronese. The *Fregoso Chapel (1st rt.) has a monument by Daness Cuttaneo (1565). 2nd rt. St. Vincent, by Rotari: above is a curious fresco, in bad preservation. This and the next altar are surrounded by boidly executed arabesque reliefs of tortoises, lizards, birds and their nests, &c. Above the 3rd rt , frescoes by Liberale. 4th, Virgin and Child, with SS. Anthony the Hermit, and St. Martin, by Carotto. The last chapel contains a curious 15th-cent. piece of sculpture, a coloured Entombment, with half-lengths of 8 Apostles below. Here also is a wooden Crucifix, and an iron Lamp. In the rt. transept: the "Virgin, SS. Thomas Aquinas and Augustine, a kneeling friar, and two donors, an excellent picture, by Gir. dai Libri Good frame, and on the rt, of the altar a fine Tomb. The Chapel of S. Gemignano, furthest from the choir, has fine frescoes (probably by Altichieri connected with the Cavalli family, and a

Gothic tomb. † The next is the Pellegrini Chapel, in which are curious 15th-cent, reliefs in terra-cotta, of the life of our Saviour. The Descent from the Cross is the best, to the rt, of the window. Here are also two good red marble Gothic monuments of the Pellegrini, and some frescoes, in which portraits are introduced of members of the Alighieri and Bevilacqua families; on the rt, wall is the Virgin and Child with saints, angels, and donors; opposite, a similar painting. Over the arch is a St. George, much injured, by Vittorio Pisanello; the foreshortenings and projections, as usual, remarkably skilful. In the Choir, on the l, is the equestrian Statue and *Tomb of Cortesia Serego (1432), brother-in-law and general of Antonio della Scala, 1st Chapel in the L. transept: curious frescoes in the style of Mantegna, and a fine tomb of the Laragnoli family (1580). The next Chapel, where the bells are rung, has a good Tomb, and frescoes of SS, Mary Magd., Catharine, and another, by Liberale. The Stcristy is entered by a beautifully inlaid door, over which is a huge ugly picture, the Council of Trent, by Falcieri, with no merit as a work of art, but curious as a nearly contemporary memorial of that assembly. Within, Brusasorci: Saints, and portraits of members of the Dominican order. The 4th Chapel on the N. side  built from the designs of Bammideli: the altar-piece, in a Grottesque style, contains portraits of Mastino II. della Scala, and his wife Taddea Carran, kneeling before the Virgin, injured by time; the features of Mastino are remarkably expressive of his character. Above is the Descent of the Holy Spirit, by *Giolfina; higher up, the same subject, by Michele da Verona. 2nd left, SS. George and Erasmus, by Giolfino; 1st left, coloured figures, by Michele da Verona. Cenotaphs have been erected of Cossali, author of the Storia Critica dell' Algebra, a work of great merit, Cagnoli, the mathematician; Targa, the translator of Celsus;

monese, erected in 1888.

On the N. side is the interesting 14th-cent. Gothic Chapel of San Pietro Martire, which, with the adjoining buildings, now the Liceo, formed a part of the convent of Sant' Anastasia. Over the entrance, "supported on a large slab of stone, corbelled forward and balanced upon the top of a thin well " (Street), is the *Monument of Guglielmo da Castelbarco (1320), the friend and adviser of the Scaligers, and one of the chief benefactors of S. Anastasia. Its Gothic canopy is supported by four shafts of white marble, beneath which rests the red marble sarcophagus, supported on the backs of couchant lions, and bearing the recumbent effigy. " As far as I know or am able to judge (says Mr. Ruskin), the most perfect Gothic sepulchral monument in the world, my most beloved throughout the length and breadth of all Italy; -chief as I think among all the sepulchral marbles of a land of mourning." There are three other good 14th-cent. tombs within the courtyard.

On the E. wall of the Chapel are come damaged frescoes by Falconetto.

58. Apostoli, close to the Porta dei Borsari (C. D. 4), has three canopied Tombs, an old Tower and Apse, and (on the S.) a fragment of a very picturesque Cloister in two tiers, with round arches, and coupled shafts of red marble. Nearer the gate is the Kouse of Giolfino, covered with damaged frescoes.

San Bernardino (D. 2) is fianked by two clossters full of decayed and broken tombs. The Church was built about 1499, after the great pestilence, and restored in 1859. It has a fine rood and organ-loft. In the 1st chapel Jerome (1488). 4th rt. restored frescoes, Life of St. Anthony, by Dom. Morone. 5th, Crucifixion, by F. Morons (1498), and three frescoes of Passion Scenes by Gulfing, In one of them the painter has introduced a view of the Piazza di Brà (now Vittorio Emanuele) as it stood in his time -an interesting topographical memorial Further on is one of the finest works of Sammicheli, the little circular *Cappella Pellegrini, " whose beauty, we think, has scarcely ever been surpassed, and which exhibits, in a striking degree, the early perfection of the Venetian school. It was not finished under Sammicheli, and blemishes are to be found in it; it is, nevertheless, an exquisite production, and, in a surprising small space, exhibits a refinement which elsewhere we scarcely know equalled." - Gwill. In the Choir on the L, the Virgin and Child with SS. Bernardino, Peter, Paul, Francis, Anthony of Padua, Louis, and Jerome, by Benaglio. On the organ doors, SS. Francis and Bernardino; beside the Choir-arch, SS. Louis and Bonaventura; both by Morone. In the Closters, frescoes by Gaolfino; in the Refectory, entered from a door beyond the Convent gateway, frescoes by Morone, discordant, however, in style.

Sta. Elena, adjoining the Baptistery of the Cathedral, contains some currons ancient inscriptions, and the Tomb of Theodorius, cardinal in 1177. Behind the high altar is a painting by Felice Brususorci, of St. Helen and other saints.

Sant' Eufemia (5, C. 5), a fine brick building of 1262, but modernised, has a 15th-cent. front, with a large sarcophagus of Count Sanguinetti, supported on consoles. In the chapel on the rt. of the choir are frescoes by Carotto, representing the History of Tobias. 3rd chapel rt., D. Brususores, the Virgin and Child, with SS. Sebastian, Monica, Augustme, and Roch, in the background, SS. Christopher and Peter rt. are some damaged frescoes by Martyr. 1st chapel 1., Moretto, SS. Giolfino. In the 2nd, Bonsignori, the Paul and Anthony the Hermits. Many interesting Tombs were destroyed when this Church was repaved. Ontside the door (over which is a faded 15th-cent. *fresco of St. Augustine, by Stefano da Zevio) is a monument to Marco and Fier Antonio Verita, by Sammicheli, who also designed the Cloisters, now included within the Scuola Tecnica. The antiquary and historian Panvinio and Cardinal Noris were Austin friers in the convent of Sta. Eufemia, and Fracastoro was buried here.

*San Fermo Maggiore (E. 6). This Church "affords the best detail of brickwork in all Italy "-G. E. Street Its foundation may be traced as far hack as 751, though the Crypt does not appear to have been built before 1065. It originally belonged to the monks of St. Benedict, passing to the Franciscan friars in the 13th The rows of little arches are The some of them trefoil-headed. W. door is round-headed, with a profusion of ornamented mouldings. Above the four lancet windows with trefoil heads, is a smaller triple window, and a circular opening on each side of it. The building ends in a gable, whose cornice is loaded with ornament, with three pinnacles. I. of the principal entrance is the sarcophagus of Cangrande's physician, Fracustoro.

The interior is in a fine and bold Gothic style (1813-1882). The singular open Roof is of larch. In the Alighieri Chapel (S. transept) are two sarcophagi of the last members of the Dante family. They were erected by Francisco Alighieri, sixth in descent from the poet, to the memory of his brothers Pietro and Lodovico. Torello Saraina Chapel (3rd rt.) was built by the historian of Verona of that name in 1528. Opening out of the N. aisle is a Chapel erected about the beginning of the 16th cent., by Giulio Battista, and Raimondo della Torre, to the memory of their father Girolamo and their brother Marc Antonio. Both father and son were professors at Padua, and enjoyed the highest reputation. The monument, a lofty altar-tomb, was decorated with bronzes by Andrea Riccio, architect of Sta. Giustina at Padua. The few ornaments, bronze sphinxes, and portraits which remain, arel of great beauty: the principal reliefs were carried off to Paris, where they are fixed into a door of painted wood at the Louvre; they have been replaced by copies.

Over the W. door is *Crucifixion. supposed to be earlier than the time of Cimabae. On the l. wall, above the Brenzoni tomb, Vittore Pisanelle, Annunciation (1430). Adoration of the Magi, in a bad light. In the large chapel of the Sacrament l., is a very remarkable picture (1528) by *Carotto; the Madonna with the Infant and St. Anna in the clouds. surrounded by angels. Below are &S. John Bapt., Peter, Roch, and Sebastian. The whole is painted with great power, the colouring rich, the execution solid. On the l. wall is a Pieth Left of the Choir, Doby Barca. menico Morone, SS. Anthony of Padus, Biagio, and Nicholas. 3rd left, Orbetto, the Nativity. 1st left, G. B. del Moro, SS. Nicholas, Augustine, and Anthony the Hermit. 3rd rt., Torbido, Virgin and Child, with Raffael, Tobias, and St. Catharine. In the large chapel on the rt. is the tomb with recumbent effigy of Barnaba da Modena, who made the pulpit canopy. Outside the choir arch, frescoes of the Coronation and Aloration, by Prandle. To the rt of the Choir, D Bruensorei, Crucifixion, with the Virgin, St John, and the Magdalen. The Gothic Puters, with a marble canopy, by Barnaba da Modena, and frescoes of saints and prophets, by Stefano du Zevio, is remarkable. The Cloisters to the rt. of the Church are on a lower level. Here is a curious monument to Antonio Pelacant (Skin-the-dogs), who appropriately took to wife Mabilia Pelavicini Skin-the-neighbours), He was a professor of Music, who died in 1327, and is represented teaching four pupils. The neglected Crypt, close by, has curious fragments of frescoes.

San Giorgio in Braids (A.C), of very ancient foundation, was rebuils 1477. The interior, completed from the designs of Sammicheli, exhibits his talent and exuberant richness of fancy. The altar-piece by *Paolo Veroness, a large vigorous Martyrdom of St. George, was finished by his pupils. The painter has represented himself on horseback to the rt. The picture is enclosed within a finely sculptured zeredos, by Brugnoli, Sammicheli's nephew. To the rt, in the choir is *Farinati's Miracle of the Loaves and Fishes, painted in 1603, at the age of 79. With many defects, this picture is a remarkable performance. The painter has introduced himself on horseback to the l. The Fall of the Manna, begun by Felice Brusasorci, was completed by Ottini and Orbetto, his pupils. 5th altar l., Moretto, the Virgin and Child, with SS. Catharine, Lucia, Ceculia, Agata, and Agnes (1540). 4th l., *Girolamo dai Libri, the Virgin, SS. Zeno and Lorenzo Giustiniani. 8rd 1, SS. Sebastian and Rocco, by Carotto. 1st 1., *St. Ursula and ten Virgins, by the same painter. *Brusasorci, the Virgin and Archangels, supposed to have been executed in rivalry of the preceding picture. Over the door, *Jacopo Tintoretto, the Baptism in the Jordan; a fine work in bad preservation, copied in mosaic at S. Marco in Venice. On the Basins for holy water are brouze reliefs of St. John Bapt. and St. George. At the sides of the Organ, and opposite, is the Martyrdom of the Patron Saint, by Romanino, which once formed one painting. The Singing gallery on the rt. is wellcarved in wood.

principally remarkable for its crypt, which contains two early Christian Tombs in white marble. On the l. is a large Sarcophagus with reliefs of uncertain subjects, which appear to represent the Woman of Samaria, Demoniac, Christ between SS. Peter and Audrew, the Issue of Bood, and the Kiss of Judas. Above, the Temptation of Eve, and Adam in Paradise. At the sides, two figures bring offerings of sheaves and a lamb, probably symbolizing Cain and Abel; on the other side, Adam and Eve; on the face, St. Peter with the Cock. The two recumbent monks appear to have been added about 1495, when the tomb was discovered. The other Tomb represents two figures in relief, with Innocents at their feet. S. of the Church are scanty remains of a Cloister, with coupled shafts and round arches.

8. Lorenzo (C. 4), flanked by round brick turrets, is modernised within, but retains its ancient columns in the nave, and a gallery above the aisles. Over the high altar, Virgin and Child with SS. John Bapt., Laurence, and a bishop, by Brusasorci.

8. M. in Organo (C. 7), with an unflushed façade by Sammicheli, was built in 1481 upon the site of an ancient building called the Organum, of the time of the Lower Empire, which it is thought was either an arsenal or a prison.

The Church is chiefly celebrated for the *intarsiatura, or inlaid woodwork of the Choir and Sacristy, by one of the greatest masters in this branch of art, Fra Giovanni (1499), an Olivetan monk, to which order this Church belonged. The small landscapes on the panels of the Stalls are by Cavassola and Brusasorci. In the rt. transept is a large picture by Guercino of S. Francesca Romana. The fresco of the archangels Raphael and Gabriel, outside a Chapel in the rt. transept, is by Morando. In the Choir behing the altar is a beautifully carved walnut-tree *candelabrum.

Outside the Choir arch, freecoes of the *Paschal Lamb and Manna, and the Ascension, by Giolfino. On the walls of the Choir, Farinati, St. Peter sinking in the Waters; St. Gregory feeding the Poor. End of l. aisle, Domenico Brusasoroi, Resurrection of Lazarus; Pool of Bethesda, with Angels in the lunette above. In the Sacristy are *Freecoes by Francesco Morane — half-figures of Ohvetan monks in white dresses, on blue grounds, and lunettes with portraits of

On the wall is a Olivetan popes. portrait of Fra Giovanni da Verona, by Morone. The coloured landscapes below the intarsia work are by Here also is a finely Brusasorci coloured painting by *Gir. dai Libri -the Virgin and Child, with SS. Catharine and Stephen, unfortunately cut away at the margin; and a good St. Francis, by Orbetto. On the l, is an inscription to the memory of Coheth and Opha, two Anglo-Saxon kings (A.D. 714), who are supposed to have become monks, and are said to have assisted in erecting the celebrated Beweastle Stone (see Ferguson, 'History of Cumberland,' p. 119). 4th chapel 1, Savoldo, Virgin and Child, with SS. Peter, Bernardo Tolomeo, Zeno, and Paul; 3rd chapel, *Fr. Morone, Virgin and Child, with SS. Augustine and Martin (1503). The Campanile was erected in 1533 by Fra-Giovanni.

Beneath the Choir is a Crypt, with ancient Roman columns. In the Nave are some curious capitals. Several of the medallion portraits over the arches are attributed to Torbido.

- S. M. della Scala (D. 5) has a portal in the conquecento style, by Fra Giocondo. It was first founded by Cangrande. 4th altar i., is a fine Peruginesque Madonna, with SS. Jerome, Catharine, Lawrence, and Peter. To the rt. of it, temb of Scipione Muffer (1755,, the historian of Verona, perhaps the most able and judicious of Italian antiquaries, and also a dramatic poet of considerable ment. There is a good Gothic Tomb in a Chapel to the rt. of the high altar; and behind, in the Belfry chamber, are frescoes of the life of St. Anthony, by Stefano da Zerio or Pisanello.
- 88. Nazaro e Celso (D. 8) was partially rebuilt in 1464, and mutilated, its arches having been reduced to three. On the organ-shutters, over the entrance door, is a Choir of Angels, painted by Brusasorci. *Paolo Furinati's fresco of Adam and Eve is thought to be one of his best productions. The handsome chapel of S.

Blaggo in the 1, transept is Gothic, and covered with frescoes, some of which were painted by Bart. Montagua. The fine picture of St. Biagio and St. Sebastian, over the altar, with the Virgin and Child above, is by Bonsignori; the figures of the female saints, and especially of the patron saint holding an iron comb (the instrument of his martyrdom), are beautiful; the predella beneath, representing the martyrdom of several saints, is a good work by Girolamo dai Libri. On the W. wall, Mocetto, Virgin and Child, with SS. Biagio and Giuliana. In the rt. transept are panels by Bart. Mon-tagua, representing SS. Nazaro and Celso, attired as cavaliers and looking like portraits, and SS. John Baptist and Benedict. At the 2nd altar i., is a picture somewhat in Bonifazio's manner of the Virgin and Child, with SS. John Bapt., Anthony the Hermit, Benedict, and Biagio, and a page. In the Sacristy, Stef ino da Zevio, Piets with SS. Benedict and Albert; Montagna, Dead Christ with Angels. L a private garden formerly belonging to the monastery is a small chapel, excavated in the side of an adjoining hill, with frescoes of various dates, badly preserved.

- 6. Paolo (E 7) has at the 3rd altar rt, a Holy Family, with St. Paul and two donors, by Gir. dai Libri; in the transept, to the 1. of a copy from Paolo Veranese, the Virgin and Child, with SS. Anthony the Abbot and Mary Magd., by Bansignori; and over the high altar, the *Virgin and Child, with SS. Peter and Paul, by Carotto.
- 88. Siro e Libera (B. 7), below Caste. S. Pietro, reached by a flight of steps, has a projecting porch with frescoes of the Patron Saints in the lunette. It is one of the most ancient Churches in Verons.

Santo Stefano (A. 7), founded in the lith cent, but disfigured by alterations, has a good octagon tower. 20 Bishops of Verona are buried here; and it is probable that this was the original Cathedral. There is a markle throne for the bishop still existing. The crypt may, perhaps, date from the 7th cent., having every mark of early Christian antiquity. On the rt., descending to it, is an ancient Statue of St. Peter. Paintings.—In the rt. transept, *Carotto, the Virgin between SS. Andrew and Peter. To the rt. of the high altar, Giolfino, the Virgin and Child, with SS. Placida, Mauro, and Simplicio. Over a door on the rt., Dom. Brusasorci, a fresco; St. Stephen preceded by the Holy Innocents: close to it are remains of a fresco of the 14th cent. To the l, of the high altar, Brusasoroi, Adoration of the Magi. Chapel on the rt., Farinati, Massacre of the Innocents, *Orbetto, the Forty Martyrs.

was assigned to Thomas à Becket by Tebaldo, bishop of Veropa, in 1316, The front is of the 15th cent.; the principal doorway is good. In front of the Sammicheli Altar, 2nd rt, is buried the architect, Michele Sammicheli (1184-1554). His bust is on a monument to the rt. Paintings: at the high altar, Felice Brusasorci, Virgin and Child, with St. Catharine, SS. Thomas à Becket, Francis, Cyril, Bernard, and John Bapt. 3rd left, Farinati, Virgin and Child, with SS. Alberto and Jerome. In the sacristy is a good old Copy of Raffael's Virgin and Children in the Vienna Gallery.

*BAN ZENONE (B. 2) is the most interesting example in Verona of the ecclesiastical architecture of the middle ages, and has undergone little change.

(Intelligent sacristan.)

This Church (1138-1178) stands on the site of an earlier one built in the 9th cent. The plan is a Latin basilica, without transepts: the style is Lombard. The front is of marble: the sides are constructed with alternate layers of marble and brick. In the front is one of the earliest wheel-offortune windows. It was executed by Briolotus, who also made the Font. Its allegorical meaning is here made sufficiently clear by the King at the top of the wheel, the prostrate wretch at the bottom, and the verses both within and without, by which Fortune addresses the beholders.

The portal is a rich specimen of Italian work in the 12th cent, The figures are rudely sculptured; but the arabesques, which enrich the divisions of the different compartments, are beautifully designed, and not badly executed. The rude relief over the door is supposed to represent a deputation sent to San Zeno by the Emperor Gallienus. Just within the gable of the porch is a hand with two fingers extended in the act of benediction. On the flanks of the portal, rt., the history of Adam and Eve; l., the principal events in the life of our Saviour, explained in leonine verses in short epigraphs. The attitude of the perplexed St. Joseph, on the central pilaster left of the door, is marvellously dramatic. With these scenes are blended, as usual, subjects taken from ordinary life, and illustrating the manners of the times; and below the first series is a hunting episode, popularly called the Chase of Theodoric, in which the Emperor is riding headlong to the devil. The feet of the hunter, who is in Roman costume, are placed in stirrups; and this, according to Maffer, is the most ancient piece of sculpture in which they are exhibited. The pillars of the portal, as usual, rest on the backs of animals - lions of red marble, symbolical of the vigilance and strength of the Courch. Round the arch of the portal are representations of the months, beginning with March. The bronze doors, of the 9th cent., are very curious, consisting of 48 plates, fixed on a pinewood frame; the reliefs on them represent, in the rudest style of art, Scriptural subjects, and are perhaps amongst the earliest specimens, as they are amongst the rudest, of Christian sculpture.

The lofty Nave is entered by 10 descending steps, and is striking from its proportions and elevation. It is divided from the aisles, which are low, by alternate pillars and piers supporting semicircular arches in pairs. From the piers ascend ribs, in the form of rude Doric pilasters, to support the roof; the two on the W. support a direct arch across the nave, and the arrangement is not calculated to support any vaulting. At the 1st altar rt. is a Virgin and Child, with SS. Zeno, James, Anna, Christopher, and Sebastian, by Torbido. Notice the curiously sculptured red marble capitals of the 3rd columns rt. and 1. The Boof of larch is curious and elaborate, painted in faint colours. The clerestory windows are small roundheaded lancets.

On the rt. of the entrance door is an octagonal font of 1069, and behind it a 14th-cent. fresco of St. Benedict.

Opposite, on the N. side, is the Coppa di San Zenone, a vase formed out of a single block of red porphyry, the outer diameter of which is 13 ft. 14 in., the inner 8 ft. 8 in.; and the pedestal is formed out of another mass of the same material. It is of high antiquity, and, according to the legend, was brought by the fiend from Syria, at the behest of the bishop. It originally stood outside, and Maffei supposes it to have been intended for washing the feet of the pilgrims before entering the sacred edifice. Near it is a fine Gothic Cruccia, by Altichieri.

Many of the altars are adorned with pillars, taken, probably, from some more ancient edifice. In the 2nd rt., the columns are composed of four smaller shafts fastened in a kind of knot, and resting on a winged bull and lion. On the top of the central arch which supports the front of the Chancel is a relief of two cocks carrying a fox dangling from a pole, considered as symbolical of vigilance overcoming craft. On the Chancel screen are rude statues of Christ and the Apostles, of the 14th cent. The raised Chancel is reached by a double flight of handsome steps, as in some of the ancient basilicas: the Choir or tribune which terminates it is in the Pointed style, and covered with frescoes; but all this was rebuilt in the 15th cent.

On the rt of the Choir is a marble and that of St. John Bapt. On the less that of St.

giving his benediction (9th cent.). The fish is of silvered wood. San Zeno is the patron of Verona; he became in bishop in AD 362, in the reign of Julian the Apostate. He was an African by birth; and the painted figure represents him as brown as a mulatto, though not with a negro physiognomy. On the opposite side is St. Proculus, executed in 1392.

A Roman inscription of Augusta Atilia Valeria, on the lowest step leading to the altar, is one of the few early Christian ones which formerly abounded in this city. Several freecoes have been recovered from the whitewash, the most interesting of which is that over an arch to the rt of the raised Choir, representing a Procession of devotees to the Throns of the Virgin and Child (P. P. Cappello, 1397). To the rt. of the high altar is a fine picture by Mantegas in a handsome frame-" a masterpiece as to the whole feeling and capacity of the school"-Cre. It consisted originally of six compartments, which were all carried to Paris; only three have been restored, but these the most important. In the centre is the Virgin with the Infant Christ and eight Angels; rich architectural designs and festoons of fruit surround the composition; below, on the L, are SS. Peter, Paul, John Kvan., and Augustine; on the rt., SS. Benedict, Laurence, Gregory, and John Bapt. Beneath is a copy of the original Predella_

The spacious *crypt, reached by a double flight of steps, has a semi-circular ground roof supported by 48 pillars, with capitals of various forms, the main piers on each side of the Choir being continued downwards through it. In its recesses are dapersed numerous fragments of ancient frescoes and reliefs. On the 1., at the last altar, are the tombs of Eupreprios and Cricinus, with Statues of the Saints and St. John Evan.; opposite, those of SS. Proculus and Agabins, all bishops of Verona, with their Statues and that of St. John Bapt. On the last the entrance, is the plain stone sarcophagus containing the bones of St. Zeno, discovered in 1839. On the rt. under a window, is a remarkable sercophagus, perhaps of the 9th cent., serving as an altar with sculptures on three sides. At the extreme E. end is a new broase Tomb or S. Zeno (1889), surrounded by a wrought-iron railing, made by order of Ubertino when Prior in 1862.

The *Cloisters, restored in 1123, consist of brick arches, pointed on the E. and W. sides, circular on the two others. The coupled columns of red marble are united by a little appendage of the same substance at the neck and base. On the N. side is a projection, sustained by double columns of different diameters, those at the corners being more massive. It served as a lavatory, and formerly contained a large basin for the mouks to wash before entering the refectory. The cloister contains many tombs, some of which have been brought from suppressed churches. At the B.K. angle is the canopied tomb of Giuseppe della Scala, of whom Dante speaks, and at its foot that of Ubertino della Basia, superior of the Benedictines, and prior of this monastery.

Close by is a Chapel, resembling that which opens out of the Cathedral Cloister, with groined semicircular arches, supported on four pillars, all unlike, dividing it into nine equal squares.

The detached *Campanile to the S. is one of the most beautiful edifices of its kind, and one of the finest objects in the varied landscape about Verona. Begun by Abbot Albericus in 1045, it was completed in 1178, and is built of alternate zones of brick and marble. It has a double gallery of Lombard arches, crowned by a low conical spire and four turrets.

The adjoining disused Cometery, from which the campanile is best seen. contains an applient and singular monument. Descending by a flight of steps, at the bottom stands a N. Inly.

entrance is an inscription, approprinting it to Pepin, King of Italy, the son of Charlemagne, who died at Milan, A.D. 810. The urn is remarkable, and evidently belonged to some person of distinction; but the inscription is modern, and was put up by a priest in the course of the last cent, The water found in the tomb, caused by the percolation of the rain, is thought by the lower orders to possess medicinal virtues.

At the N.W. corner of San Zenone stands a brick Tower, asserted to have formed part of the palace of Pepin. The forked battlements are said to have been the originals from which later builders derived the idea, PRIVATE MANSIONS.

"Sammicheli's most admired works are at Verona; the general style of composition, very different from that of the palaces of Florence and Rome, is marked by the use of a basement of rustic work, wherefrom an order rises, often with arched windows, in which he greatly delighted, and these were connected with the order after the manner of an arcade, the whole being crowned with the proper enta-The façade of the Pal. blature. Palasso *Bevilacqua, in the Corso, is a beautiful fragment of an unfinished design. It is in a neglected state. It may be distinguished by a row of seven busts over the door and windows of the ground - floor, and by the spirally fluted columns between the windows over the continuous balcony.

Palamo *Canoran, by Sammicheli, also in the Corso, distinguished by a row of statues on the roof balustrading. This palace, belonging to one of the most influential families of Verona. was begun in 1527, by Lodovico da Canoran, Bishop of Bayeux, in France. His armorial bearings are on the front. It was not completed till 1560 mediaval acroophagus. Over the It contains paintings by Bruscaorel, Farinati, Orbetto, Giolfino, and Pisa- 1 There are frescoes by Tiepolo in the great hall, and a ceiling charmingly painted in grotesque, on the ground-floor Good view over the Adige. On the palace next to this are some carious picturesque chimneys.

Palazzo Portalupi, also in the Corso, with an lonic front, of the 18th cent. There is a row of statues in the attic, and a handsome staircase in the vestibule.

Palazzo *Maffei (now Trezza), in the Piazza delle Erbe, built in 1668, was once the residence of the patrician family of which the historian of Verona was a member Its style is very effective, and the construction of the staircase remarkably bold. There is here a good statue of Serapis.

Palazzo Giusti, on the declivity of the hill overlooking the Adige, has remains of a front painted by P. EXCURSIONS.

The circuit of the Fortifications from Porta Vescovo to (1 hr.) Porta & Giorgio is strongly recommended. There is a good carriage - road, though in places one should take by preference the footpath along the turf on the edge of the ditch. The view is magnificent, especially towards sunset, embracing the Tyrolese Alps, the Euganean Hills, the windings of the Adige, and the boundless expanse of the Lombard plain.

San Michele, where the architect Sammicheli was born (1484), is about 2 m. E. of the Porta Vescovo. is the fine Church of the Madonna di Campagna, built by the architect. The Steam Tramway to (26 m.) Cologna (Rte. 75) passes through the village.

Towards the N., the Val Policella is filled with villas, the summer residences of the rich Veronese. The former is justly celebrated for its excellent wine. It is best reached from the Porta S. Giorgio (A. 5) by a local Rly., which runs N.W. in 2 hrs. to Caprino (p. 217), passing (10 m.)

Gargagnago, where Dante is said to have composed his Purgatorio, and where he possessed a villa, which afterwards passed into the Serego!

Alighieri family. It is in a wild and picturesque situation.

Near Sant' Ambrogio, about 2 m. further, are quarries from whence much of the red marble of Verona is obtained. The workmen are remarkable for their cleverness in sculpture, which art, as at Como, they follow from father to son.

San Giorgio, 11 m. N.E., stands upon a lofty hill, apparently easy of ascent, but in fact very difficult, whence it has the name of Inganna poltrone (Cheat the lazy). Here is a good Lombard Church, where columns and inscriptions of Liutprand were found. At (15 m.) Domegliarà (p. 222) the main line is crossed, and our Rly. ascends to (27 m.) Caprino.

Due N. of Verona a road passes up the Val Pantena, through pleasant villages, towards the Monti Lessini.

Near (4 m.) Quinto is the sanctuary of S. M. delle Stelle, with a very curious *Roman Crypt, which Italian antiquaries have supposed to be a cave dedicated to Mercurius Trophonius (a creation of their own). In 1187 it was consecrated by Pope Urban III. A heathen altar or Roman sarcophagus, now in the crypt, may have been brought from its vicinity. The floors exhibits the remains of a beautiful mosaic; a stream of very pure and limpid water, which still flows into the crypt in the original Roman conduit, and the remains of other Roman constructions adjoining, lead to the supposition that the cave was originally a Bath.

7 m. Grezzana (600 ft.), chief village of the Valley. Near it is the Villa Cuzzano, a good and unaltered specimen of an old Italian mansion, containing frescoes by Paolo Veronese. On the limestone N. of Grezzana grows the very rare Campanula petræa (Ball).

8 m. further, in a deep ravine, is the Ponte di Veja, a natural arch, beneath which rushes a cascade. The span of the arch is about 150 ft.; the breadth varies from 10 to 15 ft. beyond it is the village of Sant Anna, in a secluded spot.

The highest summit of the Monti Lessini group is Monte Tomba (6485 ft.), rising immediately S. of Ala. The district around it is locally called Podestaria.

A mile further, on a projecting mass of rock, is the Castle of Rocca d'Anfo, assaulted with much loss by Garibalds in 1866, and evace ated by the Austrians the same night 3 m. beyond the Rocca, a good road ascends 1. in curves, commanding splendid views, to (4 m.) 45 m. Ponte di Caffaro, in the broad valley of the Chiese (Austrian frontier and Custom House). S.E. rises Bondone, romantically perched on the summit of a steep rock, nearly 1000 ft. above the water. The Cima Spessa (5950 ft.), easily ascended from Loddrone in 4 hrs., affords a fine view, and a path leading S.E. from it, and crosses the ridge of Mte. Tombes to Magasa in Val Vestino. (See below)

[The road N. up the valley of the Chiese leads into the romantic scenery of the Giudicaria and the Dolomital of the Breuta Alta in Val Renders (see Ric. 382, Handbook for S. Garmany).]

Our road ascends a limestone cleft

52 m. Fort Ampola, a ruined stronghold that delayed the Garibaldians several days in 1866.

[Here the Val Lorina enters from the S., a wild and deep glen, the path leading along the bottom, and finally ascending to a ridge (3420 ft.) between the Cima della Guardia and Mte. Tombea (6800 ft.), the N. face of which especially is remarkable for many rare plants. The descent crosses the S. face of Mte. Tombea to Magasa in Val Vestino, the upper part of a valley which lower down is called Val Tossolano: scenery rather tame. It issues on the Lake of Garda at the village of Toscolano (Rte. 72).] An ascent between steep walls of limestone leads to the

56 m. Summit of the pass, marked by a small pool, succeeded by marshy ground. Further on, the wide basin of the Val di Ledro opens to view, and the road descends gently to 60 m. Bessecos. Here was fought the last action between the Garibaldians and Austrians in 1866.

61 m. Pieve di Ledro (2185 ft.), close to the charming Lago di Ledro. The lake is of irregular shape, and about 2 m. long. It is surrounded by sloping meadows and wooded hills, with higher mountains in the background. After passing it, the road descends rapidly by the stream of the Ponale, which finally flings itself by a cascade into the Lake of Garda. At a point 700 ft. above the waters of the lake the wonderful *Cornice Road turns 1., and is carried for 2 m. along the face of a tremendous precipice, commanding splendid views, to Verona is described in Rte. 73.

From the Porta Vescovo Stat, the line skirts on the l. the last spurs of the Alps, picturesque hills, with many villages and Scaligerian castles on them. Looking back on the city, the view of Verona, with its medizeval walls, and its heights crowned by the modern fortifications, is beautiful. As far as San Bonifacio the Steam Tramway for Cologua runs nearly parallel with our line on the rt. 14 m. l. is passed the village of San Michele, where the architect Michele Sammicheli was born Here was a very ancient monastery, which afterwards became a convent of Benedictine nuns, where Aligheria, Gemma, and Lucia, granddaughters of Dante, the children of his son Pietro, took the veil, the last having been abbess in 1402. The family of Dante became extinct in the male line in 1558, the last descendant who bore that great name then holding a municipal office in Verona.

Immediately beyond S. Michele is the *Church of the Madouna di Campagua, designed by Sammicheli, a circular building with a Tuscan colonnade, crowned by a cupola of great beauty and originality. The contrivances of the vaulting, the winding statrcase, and other portions of the fabric, show great ingenuity. Within are some good paintings by Brusasorci and Farinati; by the latter a Nativity Before the altar is interred Davila the historian: he was assassuated close to the Church.

On the other side of the Adige is the Lazaretto, built in 1591, for which Sammichell gave the designs. It is a parallelogram of about 700 ft. by 300, containing 150 cells. In the centre is a graceful circular chapel of marble. The building is now used as a powder-magazine.

About 3 m. from San Michele, on the 1., is the village of Montorio, remarkable for its well-preserved Scaligerian defences.

4 m. San Martino, where is the handsome Villa Musella.

8 m. Caldiero, anciently Caldiarium, from its sulphureous thermal springs, still much frequented. In the season trains stop at the Stat. of the Baths, a mile further. They were built or repaired by Petronius Probus A.C.C. 763 (the first year of the Christian era), and deducated to Juno. The buildings stood and continued in use until 1240, when they were destroyed by Ezzelino da Romano; but the Venetian republic, more than two centuries afterwards (1483–1500), directed the building of a new bathhouse.

At Caldiero, and on the heights of Cotagnols near it, the Austrians took up a position, towards the beginning of November, 17.56, where, on the 11th of the month, they were assailed by Napoleon, whom after an obstinate struggle they defeated. Napoleon then retreated to Verona, which be quitted suddenly two days afterwards with all his disposable forces, and by a rapid march along the rt. bank of the Adige, crossed that river at Ronco, a movement which was followed by his brilliant victory of Arcole.

From Caldiero, a branch of the the centre, leads straight to Arcole, by Tramway crosses our line, and runs a stone bridge over the little stream of N. in an hour to Tregnano, passing the Alpone; the third, on the rt., tollow

(4 m.) Illasi, where is a handsome Villa of Count Pompei, surrounded by beautiful park-like grounds. The ancient *Castle of the family commands an extensive view. From Tregnano (1090 ft.), a road follows the stream N. to (5 m Badia Calavena, whence the traveller may reach the basaltic rocks of Vestena, or Monte Bolca (Rte 80).

After leaving Caldiero, the picturesque town of Boave, on the declivity of a hill, is passed on the left. The modern town is in the plain, but the mediæval walls, which are well preserved, with their square towers, are seen converging to the summit of the eminence, terminated by the ancient Castle—the general disposition of all the fortresses in the hilly region of this part of Italy. Further on is Villanuova, with campanile formed out of an ancient feudal tower, formerly part of the castle of the noble family of San Bonifacro, by whom the place was founded. The altar has a good relief in the style of the 13th cent, and the capitals of several of the columns seem to have belonged to some early Christian structure. The village on an eminence to the 1. is Monforte.

13 m. San Bonifacio, on the 1 bank of the Alpone (Rte. 80) Steam Tramway to Louigo 3 m S. is Arcôle.

It was near this point that Napolcon, after his check at Caldiero, determined to assall the Austrians in flank; and be therefore stationed his army in the low grounds which extend from this village to the Adige. He thought, with reason, that, on the narrow causeways which traversed these marshes, the superiority of numbers on the part of the enemy would be unavailing, and everything would depend on the resolution of the heads of court ns. The position which he had chosen was singularly well adapted for the purpose he had in view. Three roads branch off from Ronco; one, following the l. lank of the Adige. ascends that river to Verena; one, in the centre, leads straight to Arcole, by a stone bridge over the little stream of the descending course of the Adige to ! Albaredo. Three columns were moved forward on these roads: that on the l. was destined to approach Verona; that in the centre to uttack the flank of the Austrian position by the village of Arcole; that on the rt. to cut off their retreat. At daybreak on the 15th, Massena advanced on the first road as far as a small enumence, which brought him in sight of the steeples of Verona, and removed all anxiety in that quarter. Augereau, with the division in the centre, pushed, without being perceived, as far as the bridge of Arcole; but his advanced guard was there met by three battalions of Croats, by whom the French were driven back. The Austrians despatched by Alvinzi passed through Arcole, crossed the bridge, and attacked the corps of Augeneau, but they also were repulsed, and followed to the bridge by the victorious French. There commenced a desperate struggle; the republican column advanced with the utmost intrepedity, but they were rethey staggered and fell back. Napoleon, deeming the possession of Arcole indispensable, not only to his future operations, but to the safety of his own army, put himself with his generals at the head of the column, seized a standard, advanced without shrinking through a tempest of shot, and planted it on the middle of the bridge; but the fire face became so violent that his grenadiers besitated, and, seizing the general in their arms, bore him back amidst a cloud of smoke, the dead, and the dying. The Austrians instantly rushed over the bridge, and pushed the crowd of fugi-tives into the marsh, where Napoleon lay up to the middle in water, while the enemy's sold ers for a minute surrounded him on all sides. The French grenadlers soon perceived that their commander was left behind: the cry ran through their ranks, "Forward, to save the general!" and, returning to the charge, they drove back the Austrians, and extricated Napoleon from his perilous situation. During this terrible strife, Launes received three wounds. His aide-de-camp, Meuron, was killed by his side when covering his general with his body, and almost all his personal staff were badly wounded.

The battle continued with various fluctuations through the 16th and 17th, when both parties advanced, with diminished numbers but undecaying fury. They met in the middle of the dikes, and fought with the utmost animosity. Towards noon, however, Napoleon, perceiving that the enemy were exhausted by fatigue, while his own soldiers were comparatively fresh, deemed the moment for decisive action arrived, and, ordering a general charge of all his forces, cleared them of the enemy, and formed his troops in order of battle at their extremity, having the rt. towards Legnago. By the orders of Napoleon the garrison of Legnago issued forth to take the enemy in the rear, while a body of trumpeters was sent, under cover of the willows, to their extreme I. flank, with orders to sound a charge as soon as the action was fully engaged along the whole line. These measures were completely successful. Austrian commander, hearing a can-nonade in his rear, and the trumpets of a whole division of cavalry in his flank, ordered a retreat, and, after a desperate struggle of three days, yielded the victory to his enemies.

An obelisk was creezed near the bridge of Arcole in commemoration of the victory, but it has been mutilated and disfigured.

17 m. Lonigo Stat., 3 m. from the town, which lies on the rt. The handsome Romanesque Church with twin spires is modern. Steam Tramway to (6 m. S.) Cologna.

20 m. Montebello lies at the base of a hill to the 1., on the summit of which are ruins of a mediaval stronghold. and a large modern Villa of Count Arrigh; on the right is the wooded volcanic group of Monti Berici. There are several handsome villas here. The two Castles of Montecchio now come into view; and on the opposite side of the valley which leads towards Vicenza, the Castle of Brendola, on the slopes of Monti Berici. The castles of Montecchio were strongholds of the family of that name, rendered celebrated by Shakspeare as the rivals of the Capulets Fine view across the plain to a deep bay amongst the hills terminated by the Venetian Alpa.

VICENZA is beautifully situated at the foot of Monti Berici. The outskirts have been planted with trees, affording shady promenades. rapid Bacchiglione, which runs through the city, and is joined within its walls by the Retrone, though small, sometimes does much mischief. bridges cross these rivers, one of which, that of *San Michela (D. E. 3, 4), a bold single arch, is attributed to Pallarlio. Of Roman remains, little has been discovered beyond portions of a theatre. Nor are there many structures of the middle ages, owing to the influence of Palladio (1518-1580) in this his native town, and of those architects who more or less followed his school.

Palladio's buildings at Vicenza are in general very beautiful; but most of them are at present in a very forlorn condition. The fronts, and even the columns are of brick, the entablatures of wood, and the stucco, with which both have been covered, is peeling off.

Palladio was succeeded by Scamozzi, also a Vicentine (1552-1616). His style, formed by the example of Palladio, may be studied best at Venice, though some good specimens of his triumphal arch; Palladio carved

In the Plasza dei Signori are the two columns which the Venetians used to erect in all the cities of their dominion, in imitation of those in the Piazza di San Marco. The lofty and slender Torredell Orologia is 270 ft. in height, though only 23 ft. wide; the range of shields on it are those of the ancient magistrates.

The *Rasilica, which encloses the Gothic Palazzo della Ragione, is surrounded with open galleries in two tiers, Doric below, lonic above, by Palladio, commenced in 1560. The great hail on the first floor has a beautiful wooden roof. The STATUS of Palladio, by the Roman sculptor Gajassi, in the Piazza, was given (1859) by a patriotic Venetian nobleman, Conte Bressan.

The Tribunale, forming the continuation of the Basilica into the neighbouring Piazza della Biadia, is partly from the designs of Scamozzi; it now contains the municipal office and the law-courts. The Torre dell' Orologie is connected with it.

The Palazzo Prefettizio, opposite the Basilica, was designed also by Palladio, but, being at Rome when it was in the course of construction, it is said that those who had the direction of the work departed from his designs. It is Corinthian, rich and fanciful. The front towards the E. is a Roman

CHURCHES.

The Duomo (1235-1467) is Gothic, with a curious mixture of styles in the The nave is nearly 60 ft. wide; the roof appears low. broad flight of steps leading up to the choir has a good effect. In the 4th chapel l. are some ancient frescoes representing the Martyrdom of Sta. Montana, much restored; on the opposite wall, six Passion scenes. the altar, Virgin and Child with the Magdalene and S. Lucia, by Montagna; in the lunette above, the Saviour with SS. Sebastian and John In the 5th chapel rt. is a curious painting of the Virgin and saints, by Lorenzo (1366), in 31 compartments, on gold ground: Death and Assumption of the Virgin, Crucifixion above, and half-length Saints at the sides and on the predella. On the wall, frescoes attributed to Mantegna. The choir was erected in 1574. Council of Trent held some of its meetings here. Outside, on the E. wall of the S. aisle, is a good Gothic Tomb, with Statue of Bp. Giov. Cacciafronte.

S. of the Cathedral is a small Church, a well-proportioned specimen of late Renaissance (1596).

In the Piazza is a Statue of Victor Emanuel, by Benvenuti. W. of the Cathedral is the Bishop's Palace (Vescovado), in the Court of which are five good arches, adorned with arabesques (N. side). Further N., in the Corso, is the Palazzo Loschi, containing a much restored painting of Christ bearing the Cross, by Giorgione.

San Lorenzo, an elegant Gothic edifice, having for a long time been desecrated, has been restored. The front is divided by 7 high pointed arches, in the centre of which is a recessed marble doorway, having on either side canopied tombs of the 14th cent. The interior contains several monuments, many of which have been removed here from desecrated churches. Immediately on the l. of the entrance is the tomb of Vincenzo Scamozzi (1516), with his bust; and beyond it the red sepulchral tablet of Bartolommeo Montagna (1572). Next, slab-tomb of Giov. Ant. Fasoli, pupil of Paolo Veronese; then a monument to Leonardo Porto in the form of an Ionic portico, having his urn in the centre, and those of two members of his family beneath. The tomb of Isabella Allidossi consists of a cinquecento urn. On the wall beyond is the slab-tomb that formerly covered the grave of the celebrated Giovanni Giorgio Trissino, poet and orator Then follows an altar hand-(1615).somely sculptured with birds among foliage. The Chapel to the left of the Choir has a large fresco of the Martyrdom of St. Paul, attributed to Mantegna. In the rt. transept is a beautiful *Altar—Pietà between SS. Francis and Bernardino; above, fresco of the Crucifixion by Montagna; on the cornice, relief of the Virgin and Child with SS. Sebastian and Anthony the Hermit; to the rt., bust of John of Schio, or Schelders, the contemporary and friend of St. Dominic, the "Angeli Pacis Nuncius," "Tyrannorum Gladius," and "Hereticorum Malleus," as his inscription tells us, "qui vigebat sæculo ferreo xiii." Over the 3rd altar rt., dedicated to SS. Lorenzo and Vincenzo, is a much injured painting of these saints by Montagna, with a view of the church in the background. Beyond the 1st altar rt., Tomb of Ferretti, the historian of Vicenza.

Santa Corona, also Gothic, restored in 1504, has a rose-window in the brick gable end. Here are several sepulchral inscriptions and monuments removed from other churches. 2nd chapel 1., *Bart. Montagna, S. M. Magdalen enthroned with saints, probably portraits. 3rd 1., St. Anthony giving alms, by Bassano. 4th 1., the Madonna crowned, painted by Verla (14th cent.), and a glory of angels by Fagolino. 5th 1., *Baptism in the Jordan, by Giovanni Bellini, with an elaborate landscape background. Around the picture are beautiful arabesque reliefs. On the last pillar to the I in the nave is an inscription recording the sepulture of Palladio, whose remains, however, have been removed to the Campo Santo. In the Chapel to the 1 of the Choir is the altar-tomb of the Beato Bartolommeo de' Breganzi, founder of the Church. He was a most fanatical follower of St. Dominic. He had been deputed to the court of St. Louis, who in 1262 endowed the Church with a Thorn of our Saviour's Crown, from which the building derives its name. This friar was beatified towards the close of the last cent., at the instance and heavy cost of the Bourbon dynasty of Parma. The high altar is a pyramid of Florentine mosaic. In the chapel on the rt. of it are two fine Gothic tombs of the Thiene family, with recumbent statues in armour; the tombs and ornaments are richly gilt, each having a fresco of the Virgin and Child with Saints. Beneath the Choir is a Crypt, in disorder, and inaccessible. On the side wall of the 3rd chapel rt. is the Adoration of the Magi, by Paolo Veroness, much damaged. Over the chief entrance is an old picture, the Mocking of Christ, well painted, but in a vulgar style. Below it, on the 1. of the entrance, a fresco of the Virgin with donors, by Speranza.

- S. Croce (A. B. 1).—1st altar rt., Entombment, School of Bassano.
- 8. Rocco (C. 1). Behind the high altar is a good painting of the Virgin and Child with SS. Peter, Paul, Vincent Ferrer, and Sebastian, by Buonconsiglio.

wall of the 1st chapel L, in a very bad light, St. Paul, by Tintoretto. An inscription below states that it was rescued from "abject squalor" by the Parish Priest in 1804.

SS. Felice e Fortunato (E. 1) has a remarkable tower, dark and deeply machicolated, which forms rather a prominent object in the view from the Monte. It was erected by the Scaligers as the March Tower between Lombardy and the Venetian states, and it is now used as the campanile of the church.

San Pietro (C. 5, to which is annexed the Ospizio de' Poveri. Just within the door of the Ospizio on the rt. is a relief by Canova-Charity, writing on a pedestal which supports the bust of Ottavio Treato, the founder of the institution In the Church, at the end of the rt. aisle, a king offering his son to St. Benedict; at the high altar, the Saviour presenting Garlands of Flowers to St. Peter and St. Paul; both by Maganza. 2nd left, Zelotti, Christ delivering the Keys to St. Peter. 2nd rt., two good columns of breccia corallina. To the I. of the Church, over the entrance to a Chapel, is a good fresco of the Virgin adored by the Confraternity of S. Pietro.

PRIVATE MANSIONS (PALAZZI).

These may be classed under two heads, those built in the Venetian semi-Gothic style, and those by Palladio and his followers in the Classical Of the former the Palarso Schio, in the Corso, is a fine specimen of the period: under the Renaissance gateway and in the courtyard are several ancient inscriptions, the most interesting of which are three in the so-called Euganean character; they were found at the foot of the hills about 6 m. S.E. of Vicenza, over the entrance of a cavern, and are supposed to have belonged to the Euganean tribes, who preceded the Romans in this part of Italy, as the Etruscans did beyond the P. Colleoni (10, C. 3), in the Venetian style, with a handsome gateway.

Among the fine specimens of Classical architecture the most remarkable is the

- P. Porto Barbarano (11, D. 3), by Palladio (1570), Ionic and Corinthian, with rich festoons.
- *P. Giulio-Porta (D. E. 2), better known as the Casa del Diavolo. "This fragment is by some attributed to Palladio, by others to Scamozzi; but the latter disclaimed it, and it appears to me to be Palladian. Whoever was the architect, we may certainly pronounce it a noble design, although a very small part has been executed, and that fragment is nearly in ruins."—Woods.
- P. Tiene (16 D. 3). The front was designed by Palladio, while the back part, now the Banca Popolare, is in an earlier style.
- P. Trissino, nearly opposite, by Scamozzi; a noble edifice, though it wants something of that undefinable grace of proportion we admire in Palladio, and it stands in so narrow a street that one can hardly judge of it fairly. There is a pretty little Cortile here.
- P. Valmarana (13, D. 3), by Palladio, only in part completed. Composite.

Casa Pigafetta. In the Contrada della Luna, a narrow street behind the Basilica, is a fine specimen of highly decorated domestic architecture (1481). It consists of a basement and two upper stories, each with three windows, surmounted by a cornice. the basement are sculptured groups of roses, with the inscription in French, "Il n'est rose sans espines," and "K. L. Augusti." The windows have elaborately-carved balconies and canopies, ornamented with griffins and other animals, the spaces between being covered with arabesques in low relief, flowers, eagles, &c. It was inhabited by the celebrated navigator |

Antonio Pigafetta, one of the companions of Magellan. The family still exists at Vicenza. The name of the architect is not known.

The Teatro Olimpico (20, C. 4) is the most curious of the works of [Custodian behind the Palladio. Theatre, l. of the Bridge (50 c.).] The Accademia Olimpica of Vicenza had been accustomed to act translations of the ancient Greek tragedies, and Palladio being a member, they employed him to give the designs for this fabric, of which the first stone was laid on the 23rd of May, 1580; but in consequence of the death of the architect, which followed almost immediately afterwards, it was raised and completed by Scilla Palladio, his son. He followed, as strictly as he could, the text of Vitruvius and the remains which existed. The scenery, which is fixed, represents the side of a species of piazza, from which diverge streets of real elevation, but diminishing in size as they recede in the perspective. Daylight, however, which a traveller usually sees it, is injurious to its effect. As an opening piece the academicians performed the Œdipus Tyrannus,' a play to which the scenery is entirely unadapted. is such as would have been used for the comedies of Menander, and other plays of the New Comedy.

P. Chierigati (12, C. 4), one of the finest of Palladio's palaces. The lower order has a fine Doric portico, the upper an Ionic, with two Loggie on the sides. It has been purchased by the Municipality, and restored according to the original plans of the great architect. During the bombardment of Vicenza in 1848 by the Austrians, a cannon-shot pierced the roof and injured the vaulting of its great saloon.

Here is the Museo Civico, containing a small Collection of Antiquities, on the ground-floor (open daily 11—2, free; at other hours, small fee). The handsome vestibule is paved with ancient marbles, discovered in the excavations of the neighbouring Roman

Around the walls are arranged various fragments, including some remarkably fine broken columns of Affricano and cipollino, and some draped Statues. A handsome staircase, lined with medallions of celebrated men of Vicenza, leads to the first floor, where is the *Pinacoteca. There is no Catalogue, and no method of arrangement; but the little Gallery is of very high interest, as containing several fine and untouched paintings by Montagna. The large Saloon is handsome.

Beyond the picture gallery is an extensive series of Engravings, and a collection of 56 original Drawings, by the three great architects of Vicenza -Palladio, Scamozzi, and Calderari. Those of Palladio are particularly interesting. They consist of designs for some modern edifices, such as the palace at Vicenza, and the Rialto bridge at Venice, and of copies of ancient Roman edifices, triumphal arches, temples, thermæ, &c., as they existed in his time.

The Collections of Natural History consist principally of objects from the neighbouring provinces. Amongst the fossil organic remains are the bones of a rhinoceros from the bone breccia of Monte Zopea, near Soave, and a fine fossil shark from Monte Bolca; there is also an extensive herbarium, in which has been incorporated that of the Venetian provinces, formed by the celebrated Arduino. In an adjoining room are Coins, and the smaller specimens of ancient Sculpture, discovered by Count Velo during his excavations at Rome, chiefly in the baths of Cara-

Near the summit of Monte Berico, S. of the city, rises the Service Chards brated place of pilgrimage. It is best reached by a covered Portico 730 yards long, with 168 arches, which ascends from the Bridge (F. 3) near the Rly. Stat. Each of the arches of the Portici del Monte bears the shield, device, or name of the fraternity or individual at whose expense it was erected. The Church was built in 1428, to commemorate the apparition of the Virgin to a lady of Vicenza, and the liberation of the town from the plague. Of this period is the Gothic S. end, the rest was added in 1688, in the form of a Greek cross, which iuternally is very beautiful. The nave of the old Church has thus become the transept, and the altar now stands in the middle of one of the original aisles. In a chapel to the rt. of the high altar is an excellent painting by *Bart. Montagna (1505), the Dead Christ, mourned by Joseph of Arimathma, the Virgin, St. John, and the Magdalen. In the Sacristy is a small Preta in fresco, brought from a desecrated Service Church at the foot of the hill. The Refectory of the Convent. contains a large Supper of St. Gregory the Great, by Paolo Veronese, 281 ft. wide. It was most wantonly hacked into 32 pieces by the Austrian soldiery who occupied that building after the bombardment of Vicenza in 1848. The fragments have been since put together, after a good copy made some years before, and now in the Pinacoteca. It was from this hill before it that the Austrians, after having driven away the Italian corps which defended the heights, so cruelly bombarded Vicenza on the 24th May of that year, during 9 successive hours. On the N, side is a Statue, in honour of the Italians who then fell; on the W. a monument has been erected by the Austrian Emperor to the memory of his soldiers.

5 min, higher up the road, bearing to the rt., a charming view is gained of the city of Vicenza, 320 ft. below, and the snow-capped peaks of Friuli; to the N, are the Alps beyond Bassano, the gorge through which the Brenta breaks into the plain, the sermeted ridges which encircle the upper valley of the Adige, at the foot of which can be easily descried the towns of Bassano, Schio, and Treviso; to the N.W. the two castles of Montecchio form very picturesque objects in the landscape. Looking E. from the Church steps are seen the Enganean hills, separated from the Alps by the wide plain in which Padua is clearly visible, and extending to the lagoous of Venice and the shores of the Adriatic. Immediately at the foot of the hill is the Rotonda (see below). Between the Euganean hills and the equally insulated Monti Berici, both of them volcauic, is the depression through which a portion of the waters of the Bacchiglione are carried to form the canal of Este, communicating with the Adige. To the S, the slopes are covered with villas of the Vicentine gentry, among which that of Count Ramboldo, on the site of a Cistercian convent, is worthy of a visit.

The *Rotonda Capra, so well known as Palladio's Villa, copied by Lord Burlington at Chiswick, "is a square building, containing a round saloon lighted from above. From the four sides you ascend on broad stairs, and reach at every side a porch formed by 6 Corinthian pillars. It may be that architecture never pushed aplendour to a higher pitch. The space taken up by stairs and porches is far greater than that of the building, because every side would be quite sufficient for the entrance to any temple. The saloon exhibits the finest proportions, as well as the rooms. Every side presents itself from all parts of the adjoining country in a most magnificent manner." - Goethe. Occupied, like the Convent of Monte Berico, by the Austrian soldiery in 1848, it was stripped of everything that could be carried away, its furniture dispersed, and its statues mutilated.

5 min. N.W. is the Villa Valmarana, surrounded by extensive gardens. The central saloon is covered with frescoes by Ticpolo. The traveller who does not propose to visit the Rotonia may return to Vicenza in a road which bears rt. from the angle half way down the Portici, and terminates in a flight of 192 steps, which descend to the Porta Monte (F. 5). Hence a crooked street leads to Palladio's Bridge, the Ponte S. Michele (see above).

Just beyond the Porta San Bartolo (A, 3) is the Palazzo Trissino in Cricoli, interesting, both on account of its beauty, and as having been the residence of the celebrated Giovanni Giorgio Trissino, whose name appears on the architraves of the upper windows. Trissino was a poet of considerable eminence, and it is said that the palace was built from his own designs.

The Cemetery (A. 5) consists of a large quadrangle surrounded by a high wall, enclosing porticoes with 124 arches, built of rock. Under the areades are the vaults and monuments of the higher classes; in the centre the graves of the poor. In the middle of the N.W. arcade is the monument to Palladio, by Fubris, of Rome, raised at an expense of 5000l. by Count Velo. (See Santa Corona., Of the other mo-numents may be noticed those of Countess Isabella Velo, with a fine recumbent figure of the deceased on an urn; the Toguzzaro family, by an artist of Padua, Count Trissino; and the Prince of Thurn and Taxis, killed in 1848 in the conflict which took place close to the gates of this cemetery.

VICENZA TO PADUA.

The tower and cupola of Monte Berico are seen on the hill above the Stat., and soon after leaving it a tunnel pierces the basaltic rock. On emerging, the ruined Rotonda may be perceived to the S. of the line. The Rly. runs over a dead flat, in some places swampy. Before reaching 40 m. Pojana, the low hill of Monte Galdo may be seen on the rt.; beyond it across the plain rise the Enganean hills. The Ceresone, and afterwards the Brentella, are crossed before reaching 50 m. Padua Junet. Stat., at some distance from the centre of the town.

PADUA (Padova la Dosta) contains 50,000 inhab., and is perhape the oldest city in the N. of Italy. It is situated on the Bacchiglione, and its foundation was attributed to Antenor by the Romans (Virg. Æn. i. 243).

The ancient defences are much dilapidated, but a few towers remain. The numerous street arcades remain the traveller of Bologun, and several canals recall Venice. Here and there, too, are façades with pointed windows in the Venetian fashion. There are some gateways by Falconetto, in a good style.

The Palanco della Ragione (13, D. 3) is the most peculiar and most national edifice, and was built by Pietro Cozzo between 1172 and 1219. It forms one side of the market-place, standing entirely upon open arches surrounded by a loggia of the same | period. The E. end has some shields and armorial bearings. A vast roof, and said to be the largest, unsupported by pillars, in the world, towers above It was added in 1306 by the edifice. Fra Giovanni, an Augustin friar and a renowned architect and engineer. He had travelled far and wide, over Europe and in Asia, and he had brought back plans and drawings of all the buildings which he had seen; amongst others, one of the roof of a great palace in India. This design greatly pleased the Paduans, and they requested him to roof their hall (which had previously formed three chambers) in like manner; and Fra Giovanni assented, asking no other pay than the materials of the old roof, which he was to take down. The present roof is of iron, having been renewed in 1857.

The interior, commonly called *Il Salone, is 91 yds. long, 30 yds. wide, and 80 ft. high. It was covered with frescoes by Giotto, but these were destroyed by the successive conflagrations of the building, especially that of 1410. They were executed according to the instructions of the physician, astrologer, and alchemist, Pietro di Abano (1250–1316), the first reviver of the art of medicine in Europe. His bust is over one of the doors of the hall; the inscription placed beneath it indignantly repudiates the magic and sorcery ascribed to him.

The present strange mystical frescoes, supposed to be the work of anonymous Padovese and Ferrarese painters, form 319 compartments. They have been repeatedly damaged by fire and water; and have been entirely re-They represent constellapainted. tions—sacred subjects—apostles and saints—winds and elements—allegorical figures of Virtue; but the principal series consists of the months of the year, with their ruling planets and constellations; the employments of the month; and the temperaments, assigned, according to astrological rules, to those who are born under the different astral combinations. The apertures, or windows, are said to be so disposed that the solar rays in each month travel along the representatives of the signs and planets then in ruling activity. Dante is introduced as Sagittarius; beneath Pisces is a young woman tenderly supporting an aged person; generally, the figures personify the trades and occupations of human life. Among the sacred subjects are the Coronation of the Virgin—the Magdalene—and St. Paul in prayer.

At one end of the hall is the socalled monument of Livy, erected in 1547. Like the great physician of the 13th cent., he was born at Abano. According to an immemorial tradition, the site of Livy's house can be pointed out in the Strada San Giovanni; and in 1363 an inscription was found near the Church of S. Giustina, purporting to have been placed there by a certain Titus Livius Halys, erroneously attributed to the historian. In 1413 a tessellated pavement was discovered, beneath which was found a leaden coffin containing a skeleton, supposed to be that of the great historian himself. The discovery excited the greatest enthusiasm, and it was determined to place the remains in the Palazzo. The translation took place with as much pomp as if Livy had been a tutelary saint. The relics were divided: the jawbone was deposited in the Cancellaria; and Alfonso of Aragon, King of Naples, despatched (1450) a special embassy to request the gift of an arm-bone, which was conceded by the Paduans, as appears by an inscription on a marble tablet over the door. The inscription at Sta. Giustina has been let into the wall; and statues of Minerva (or Eternity), Fame, the Tiber, and the Brenta, have been added; above is a bust, upon which are engraved the letters P. T. L. E. (? Patavini Tito Livio Erexerunt). The bones are placed over one of the side doors leading to the Uffizio della Sanità. Over a third door is a relief of Julius Paulus, a native of this city, and prætorian prefect and writer on law of the time of Alexander Severus. Alberto Padovano, commemorated over another doorway (1828), was a preacher of | eminence in his day; Sperone Speroni, a local writer, also has a statue, erected

The bust erected in 1661, by the city to the memory of Lucrezia Dondi, is, perhaps, unique: it bears witness to her virtue and to her death, under circumstances nearly similar to those of her Roman namesake Lastly, in this assembly of illustrious Padovanese, is the bust of Belzoni, by Rinaldi, in Turkish costume, between the two Egyptian statues which he presented to his native city. No circumstance in poor Belzoni's life pleased him more than his being able to present these trophies to Padua. A medal was struck by the city as a token of its gratitude, in addition to the bust thus placed in this great hall.

At one end of the hall is a black gravite altar of insolvency (Lapis Vituperii et Cessionis Bonorum), upon which debtors cleared themselves by their exposure. The enormous wooden horse, by Donatello, formerly in the Palazzo Emo, was executed in 1443 as a model for the Gattemala Statue (see below); and afterwards, covered with skins, and bearing a figure of Jupiter on its back, figured at some public rejoicings, held in the city at the expense of Count Capodalista. A meridian line crosses the hall; the rays of the sun pass through a hole in the centre of a golden face on the roof.

Archivio Pubblico. Entrance from the Delegazione Municipale. In a suite of apartments near the entrance to the Palazzo della Ragione, and forming a part of the municipal buildings, are placed the extensive series of Paduan archives. Some of these rolls go back to the 9th cent.; a bull, in particular, of Pope Eugenius II., when the Roman pontiffs signed such documents, instead of, as at a later period, appending a leaden bulla. There are several diplomas of the German emperors of the Franconian line. Two of Henry IV. (1091, 1095) are merly the place of meeting of markable as showing that he had municipal body. The Baptistery is a Lombard building of the 13th cent., similar to those at Parma and Cremona. The walls and vaulting are entirely covered with frescoes, executed at the expense of Fina Buzzacarina, wife of Francesco Carrara the elder, representing histories of the Old Testament, by Giovanni and Antonio of Padua; on the cupola Paradise, with numerous angels and saints, and on the walls New Testament scenes. In a dark Chapel close to the door is a fine Gothic ancons in many compartments on gold ground.

The triumphal arch near the Cathedral was erected in 1632, in honour of Alvise Valaresso, captain of Padua.

The Biblioteca Capitolare (apply for adm. in the Sacristy) contains upwards of 10,000 vols., 450 of the 15th cent., and several inedited MSS. Amongst others, those of Sperone Speroni, with several letters of Tasso, a MS. of the 14th cent. containing the description of Dondi's clock, and some spleudidly illuminated missals, and collections of decretals, also with miniatures of the 14th and 15th cents. In the entrance-hall are some curious old paintings of 1367, by Niccold Semitecolo, relative to the life of S. Sebastian, much valued as a document in the history of the Venetian School.

The Palamo Vescovile contains ruined frescoes by J. Montagnana, a pupil of Giovanni Bellini (1495). In one of the upper rooms are portraits of the bishops of Padua to 1494. In the chapel are the Apostles, in chiaroscuro, and the Annunciation, by the same artist; and in the private chapel are several small paintings, and an Ancona with St. Peter in the centre, and the Saviour on the Cross above.

Over the door of one of the rooms is a portrait of Petrarch, originally painted upon the walls of his house, demolished in 1581. It is reckoned as one of the most authentic, and is attributed to Guariesto.

*SANT' ANTONIO or LL SANTO. " (

the death of S. Antonio, in 1231 (born at Lisbon in 1195), the citizens of Padua decreed that a magnificent temple should be erected in honour of I their patron saint. To accomplish this object, they sent for Niccolò da Pisa, who produced one of the most remarkable buildings in Italy. The fashion of the day compelled him to adopt the Pointed style, but with this he combined some of the Byzantine features of St. Mark's at Venice. St. Authony's is crowned with 8 capolas, which give it an oriental character. It is in the form of a Latin cross, 280 ft. in length, 138 ft. in breadth to the extremity of the transepts. It was completed in 1307, with the exception of the cupola over the choir, which was not added till 1424. If the external features are meagre, if the great doorways are hald when compared with the contemporary portals of the N, it must be remembered that Nicholas of Pisa was compelled, by the fashion of the day, to adopt a style which he did not like, and which, it must be confessed, he did not understand" -G Knight. The W. front, which has been completely renewed, has four pointed arches of unequal width, in the centre of which is a niche containing a statue of S. Antonio (14th cent.). Over this rises a portico of pointed arches with a balustrade, surmounted by a handsome Lombard turret. The fresco of SS. Antonio and Bernardino, in the lunette over the principal entrance, 18 by A. Mantegna (1452). The two octagonal bell-towers beyond the transepts, on ranges of pointed niches and arches, are very beautiful.

The interior is remarkable for the splendour and beauty of its decorations On the 1, is the *Cappella del Santo, thronged at all hours by devotees. It was begun in 1500 by Giovanni Minelli and Antonio his son; coutinued by Sansovino, and completed by Falconetto, in 1553, The richlyworked entrance pilasters are by Raising of a Child, both by Sansovino; 6 Stone discovered in a miser's breast, by Tullio Lombardo, 7. Healing of a broken leg, by the same; 8. Re-forming of a broken glass, by Sansovino; 9. *Child bearing witness to its mother's innocence, by Autonio Lombardo (1505). The altar is of verde antico; the bronze statues of S. Anthony, Bonaventura, and Louis are by Tiziano Aspetti The fine marble sculptures supporting two large silver candelabra are the work of Oruzio Marinali (1450), and Filippo Parodi.

Further on is the curious Gothic chapel of the Madonna Mora, so called from the swarthy picture over the altar. It formed a part of the Church of S. M. Maggiore, built in 1110, and pulled down to make room for the present edifice. On the S. wall is an interesting sarcophagus of one of the Obizzo family. The sepulchral ura on its other face, turned towards the aisle, belongs to Raffaele Fulgasa, an eminent juris-consult of the 14th cent. Opening out of this chapel is that of the Beato Luca Belludi, companion of S. Antonio, covered with much-restored frescoes relative to St. Philip and St. James, by Giusto Padorano: the apparition of S. Antonio to the Beate, to announce the liberation of Padua from Eccelino, is historically interesting.

In the S. transept is the beautiful *Cappella B. Felice. It was originally dedicated to St. James, and erected in 1376, but subsequently to St. Felix, when his remains were deposited here in 1504. It is faced by Gothic arches in red Veronese marble, above which rises an entablature of white and red marbles disposed in fish-scale form The wall, lanettes, and vaulting are covered with excellent early freezes Pironi and Mattee Aglio. The wall behind the altar is divided into five spaces by columns and pointed arches, in the centre of which is a fresco of the Crucifixion. To the rt. the soldiers are casting lots for the garments of Christ. The skill displayed in this composition seems almost in advance of its time. To the l. is the crowd following Jesus from the city; a beautiful group represents a woman supporting the fainting figure of the Virgin Mother, followed by another who is leading her infant son. 5th space to the rt. is nearly filled with the Tomb of Bartolommeo Scrovegno, wife of Marsilio Carrara, second lord of Padua; above it is the Resurrection. On the opposite side is the Tomb of the founder of the chapel, Bonifazio de' Lupi, Marquis of Soragna; over it is the Deposition from the Cross. Over these are three compartments, each having a pointed arch, filled with a painting. On the l. is the Denial of St. Peter; in the centre Christ led to be crucified; on the rt. the Entombment. The monument to Alessandro Contarino, upon the same pier, erected in 1555 at the expense of the republic, is from the design of Summicheli, the sculptures being by A. Vittoria and

In the adjoining handsome Clotsters, and in the passage leading to them, are several sepulchral monuments; that of Manno Donati (1370) is remarkable for its inscription On the 1, issuing from Petrarch. the 8. door, is the Tomb of Luigi Visconti 1553), by Sammicheli, Many monuments have been brought hither from desecrated churches, one of which, between the two cloisters, is a good Gothic tomb of 1390. From the Cloisters a beautiful view is gained of the Church with its domes and towers. Out of the Closster which has large pointed arches opens the Library, containing nearly 15,000 vols. In one of the rooms of the convent is a Holy Family, by Garofalo. Behind the E. end of the Church a small portion still exists of the ancient cloister belonging to the demolished Church of Sta. Maria. In a hall opening out of the sacristy are much damaged frescoes of St. Francis and other saints.

In the Sacristy is some beautiful intarsia work by the Brothers Canozza (1475), including large figures of SS. Bernardino, Jerome, Francis, Anthony, Louis, and Bouaventura. These are framed in an exquisite Renaissance design, above which is a relief of St. Anthony's mule by Bellano, Close to the Sacristy door is a good recumbent effigy under a pointed arch. In the Piazza, to the rt. of the W. front, is the Tomb of Rolando Piazzola, under a Gothic canopy, one of the staunchest defenders of his country's liberties against the Emperor Henry VII. To the 1. stands the bronze equestrian *Statue of Gutta Melata (Erasmo da Narm), who commanded the Venetian army in 1438, by Donatello. It is the only equestrian statue he ever executed, and bears his name, "Opus Donatelli Flor." Close to the former tomb is the

The adjacent Chapel of San Giorgie (key at S. Antonio), erected by Raimondino da Soragna in 1377, containt some celebrated *Frescoes by Altichiers, assisted by Jacopo d' Aranzo. The subjects are from the New Testament, and histories of SS. George, Catharine, and Lucia: the large painting of the Crucifixion behind the altar, and over it the Crowning of the Virgin, are very fine; a votive painting in the upper series on the I wall next to the altar represents several members of the Lupa family kneeling before the Virgin, to whom they are presented by S. The *Madonna dell' Arena (C. 4) stands in an oval garden, the site of an Amphitheatre, whose foundations have recently been exposed to view. (Entrance, 1 fr.) It was built in 1303 by Enrico Scrovegno, the son of Reginaldo, consigned by Dante to the Inferno for his usury and avarice.

The very curious statue of the founder is in the sacristy, with the inscription, "Propria figura Domini Scrovegni, militis l'Arena." His dress is merely the ordinary "abito civile" of the time. About this time Giotto, then young, was working at Padua, and Scrovegno employed him to decorate the edifice, which still belongs to a descendant of the Count Gradenigo of Venice whose sister Scrovegno married. The Chapel consists of a nave with a tribune at its extremity in a simple Gothic style.

These *Frescoes illustrate Sacred History with a dignified as well as touching simplicity, eminently befitting the Divine theme. The subjects are taken partly from the New Testament and partly from the Apocryphal Gospels. No artist of any period has been more successful than Giotto in telling his story in a striking and intelligible manner, combined with exquisite feeling for graceful beauty and deeply pathetic expression.

Second in consideration, but equally remarkable, is Giotto's skill in ornamental design; and his judgment must be commended in reserving purely decorative work for the ceiling. "The Arena chapel is not only the most perfect expressional work, it is the prettiest piece of wall-decoration and fair colour in North Italy."—Ruskin. Everything here has been repainted, except the figures in chiaroscuro, which are precisely as Giotto left them.

On the wall over the entrance is the Last Judgment, much injured. The vices of the clergy are brought forward with peculiar prominence. In the centre, and not connected at all with the rest of the composition, Scrovegno is represented offering his chapel, which is accepted by three angels.

The uppermost range on the rt. contains scenes from the Life of the Virgin, principally from the Apocryphal Gospel attributed to St. James the Less. Commencing on the S. wall, and nearest the altar,—1. Joachim driven from the Temple by the priests, because he had not begotten any issue in Israel; 2. Joachim returns to his sheepfolds, and prays during 40 days and 40 nights; 3. the Angel Gabriel appears to Anna, and reveals that the prayers of her husband have been heard; 4. Sacrifice of Joachim; 5. Joachim's Vision; Meeting of Joachim and Anna at the Gate of the Temple—a most graceful composition. On the wall opposite: 7. Birth of the Virgin; 8. Presentation of the Virgin in the Temple; 9. Suitors bringing their rods; 10. Watching of the Rods; 11. Marriage of Joseph and Mary; 12. Procession after the Marriage; 13. Annunciation, over the chancel arch: here the grace which Giotto imparts to his female figures is peculiarly discernible.

2nd row on the rt.—1. Nativity, injured; 2. Wise Men's Offering; 3. Presentation of Jesus in the Temple; 4. Flight into Egypt; 5. Massacre of the Innocents. On the 1.—6. Our Lord among the Doctors: much injured; 7. Baptism in the Jordan

6. Marriage in Cana of Galilee; 9 Raising of Lazarus : a magnificent composition; awe approaching to terror in the bystanders, death yet struggling with life in the resuscitated corpse, 10. Entry into Jerusalem, 11. Christ driving the Moneychangers out of the Temple. On the l. of the altar is the hiring of Judas, with a demon behind the traitor.

Below, on the l. 12 Last Supper: much ornament, very minutely finished, is introduced into the architecture; each Apostle has a marked and peculiar dress, either in colour or fashion, which is preserved in all the other paintings in which they are introduced; 13. Christ washing the feet of the Apostles -a very beautiful composition; 14. Jesus betrayed by Judas, 15. Jesus before Caraphas; 16 Jesus scourged and crowned with thorns; 17. Jesus bearing the Cross -a full composition with some beautiful groups, particularly Mary and her companions pushed back by the Jews; 18. Crucifixion: the thieves are omitted; 19. Deposition from the Cross. In expression this is considered the finest of all the existing works of Giotto, here or elsewhere: the deep and tender affliction of the Virgin, the impassioned eagerness of St. John, and the steady composure of Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathæa, are all in accordance with their characters; 20. Resurrection and Noli Me Tangere: the figure of St. Mary Magdalene is an admirable personification of devotion, 21. Ascension; 22. Descent of the Holy Ghost singular in its arrangement.

The lowest range of paintings consists of allegorical or symbolical figures of the Virtues and Vices intermixed into architectural compartments, presenting imitations of marble. panelling, &c., with borders, exactly like those executed in mossic upon the tomb of Edward the Confessor in Westminster Abbey. This species of decoration seems to have been a fa. rourite amongst the Italian artists of minate in claws. In one hand the time of Giotto, as it is found in the bolds a sheathed sword in wait the time of Giotto, as it is found in the \ papal chapel of Avignon, painted in evidently no terror to evil does to each Virtue is the antagonistic Vice; the figures are tinted in chiaroscure. In many the allegory is intelligible, in others obscure The Virtues are turned towards the Paradise, the Vices in the direction of the Inferno or Last Judgment. Commencing on the rt. by the door-Hope, winged, scarcely touching the earth which she is quitting, and eagerly stretching forwards and upwards to the celestial crown,-On the opposite wall Despair, a female, who, at the instigation of the Frend, is in the act of hangung herself,—Charity, a triple flame issuing from her head. Her countenance is beaming with joy. She holds up her right hand to receive gifts from heaven; and in her left is a vase from which she dispenses them. Enry, standing in flames; a serpent issues from her mouth, and recoils on herself; she has the ears and claws of a wolf. Faith, holding the Creed, and trampling on a horoscope; in the other hand she grasps the Cross. When we recollect the trust which, in the age of Giotto, was placed in astrologets, the boldness of thought which this figure discloses will be appreciated. -Unhelief, a Roman helmet upon her head, in her hand an ancient heather idol, to which she is mosed, and by which she is dragged to the pit; she turns her back on the hand from heaven bearing a scroll,-Justice, a crowned matron seated upon a throne, her countenance severe and thoughtful In one of the scales of the balance an angel presents laurel-wreath to the good; in the other is the destroyer wielding the sword for the punishment of the wicket. Beneath is a composition with figures hunting, sporting, merchants travelling; apparently indicating the em and comfort enjoyed by those who live under a good government. Injustice, an elderly man in the dress of a judge, of a harsh and forbidding countenance: he is "sitting in the gate;" but the path to his tribunal is overgrown with thorus and briers, and his tingers terhis style or by his school. Opposite the other a book, the emblem of city. In the compartment below, the travellers represented above are assaulted and murdered, indicating a contrast to the figures on the opposite side, the miseries of living under an evil government. Under his robe appears a coat of mail.—Temperance, a female figure fully draped. She holds a sword, but it is bound into the scabbard: a bit is placed in her mouth—emblem of restraint.—Anger, a hideous crone, tearing her dress.— Fortitude, in ancient armour; the skin of a lion thrown over the shoulder. She rests tranquilly upon the shield which she opposes to her enemies.— Inconstancy, a young girl, falling backwards from a wheel, upon which she tries to balance herself; in allusion to Eccles. xxxiii. 5.—Prudence. sitting at a desk, and contemplating herself in a mirror. At the back of her head is the face of an old man, but apparently a mask, or part of her head-dress, and not a second face, as in the tomb of San Pietro Martire at Raphael adopted this mode of allegorising the Virtues.—Folly, in a fantastic dress, probably intended for that of a court fool or jester.

The Choir is painted with the history of the Virgin, probably by Giotto's pupil, Taddeo Gaddi. They are much inferior to the rest, and represent: 1. Visit of the Virgin to St. Elisabeth; 2. Compact between the Devil and Judas: 3. the Virgin announcing her death to St. John; 4. (opposite) Her Death; 5. Obsequies of the Virgin; 6. Ascent to Heaven; the altar is Coronation. Behind the Tomb of Enrico Scrovegno, who died in exile at Venice in 1320. The altar is surmounted by small statues of the Virgin and Child, with two angels. The sculptor is unknown, although on one of the statues is cut the name of Johannis Magistri Nicoli, whence it has been supposed the work of Giov. Pisano. The windows of the chapel mostly retain the ancient Venetian glazing—small circular panes of thick glass—which adds to its antique effect. In the small Sacristy, opening out of this tribune, is the statue of the founder in a Gothic niche.

At the altar, Virgin and Child, wrongly ascribed to Palma Vecchio. To the l., Meeting of Joachim and Anna, an inferior work by Titian. A Statue of Petrarch was erected in the Piazza to commemorate the 500th anniversary of his death, in 1874.

Close to the Ponte Molino, S.W. of the Church, is an old tower bearing a tablet with this inscription, "Eccelino eresse, 1250." On the other side of the bridge the street passes under another tower, which is inscribed, "Da questa Torre Galileo molta ira de' cieli svelò."

The Eremitani (C. 4), a Church of the Augustines, was erected between 1264 and 1276, and restored in 1880. The panelled wood roof was added in 1306 by the same Fra Giovanni who put up that of the Palazzo della Ragione, and who is said to have employed here the old one which he obtained for his labour. From its simplicity as well as its ornament the interior is impressive. It consists of a single nave, nearly 300 ft. long, lighted from the extremities. Over the S. door is the bust of its architect, Giov. Lando. The large Choir has some curious Frescoes, attributed to Guariento, remarkable for their mystical and allegorical character. The lower tier in chiaroscuro represents planets ruling the constellations more peculiarly appropriated to them, or, as some suppose, the Days of the Week. Above are large paintings, in six compartments on either side, representing subjects from the lives of St. Augustine; some of them have suffered from damp, time, and neglect. In Chapel to the rt. of the Choir is a good Gothic tomb. The two frescoes of the death of St. Christopher have been detached from the wall. They have suffered greatly of late years, and the figure of the Saint in both bas almost entirely disappeared. The soldier holding a spear, at the entrance on the rt., is a portrait of Mautegua. The compartments of the upper row are by Bone and Ansuino, of Forli, disciples of Squarcione. At the altar are coloured terra-cotta figures of the Virgin and Cuild, with SS Francis, Authory of Pad 1a, John Bapt., James, Christopher, and Anthony the Hermit, by Giovanni da Pisa, a pupil of Donatello. Behind the altar is the "Assumption of the Virgin, by Pizzolo, the

Near the W. end of the Church is the Tomb of Jacopo Carrara, 5th lord of Padua, the friend and patron of Petrarch, who composed the Latin epitaph upon it Opposite, on the S. wall, is that of his father, Ubertino (1354 Each is beneath a canopy as large as a church portal: the figures are of beautiful execution The countenance of Ubertino, the bard old man, is expressive. With the exception of these tombs, there are but few memorials of the once powerful lords of Padua. The extinction of the family is one of the most gloomy events in the history of Venice After a valuant defence the last Francesco Carrara and his two sons surrendered Padua to the Venetians (14-5), they were independent princes nowise subject to Venice; but by the Council of Ten they were condemned and strangled in the dangeons of St. Mark in 1406. The monument to the architect is in a robe. On the L, half-way along the N. wall, is the spiended monument of Benavides, professor of law 1563, by Ammanati. The artist has equal ; displayed his talents as a scriptor and as an architect. Benavides would not trust his executors, and therefore he erected this memorial in his lifetime. It is decorated with allegorical figures of Wisdom and Labour, Honour and Fame. In a Chapel I of the Choir is the Tomb of Gen. Sanguinassi.

In the Sacristy, to the rt. of the entrance, is a Gothic monument in red Verona marbie to the painter Paulus de Venetus 1429). He is lecturing to his pupils, men as old as himself, with cowls and hoods; but, as at Pavia, the dignity of the professor is preserved by his being represented four times as large as his anditors. In the Oratory of B. Thippo Heri. opening out of the Sacristy at S. Tommaso (E. F. 3), under glass, is a beautiful fragment of a Virgin and Child, by Giovanni and Antonio de Murano.

B. Francesco (6, E. 4) was designed by Sansovino. The second chapel on the rt has frescoes by Girolamo do Santa Croce (1530, representing the Birth, Presentation, Aununciation, and Marriage of the Virgin, with figures of Charity and Faith, and beads of Prophets and Kings on the piers and arches. In the transents are the divided panels of a monument to Pietro Roccabonella with bronze reliefs by Bellano (1498)—the Professor at his desk, and the Virgia and Child with SS. Francis and Peter Martyr. Below this is a good kneeling-ages in white marble. To the N. of the Church is a picturesque Cloister.

San Gaetano (D. 4) has a façade by Scamozzi. There is a small half-figure of the Virgin by Titian, in the chapel of the Holy Sepulchre, reached by some descending steps on the 1.

*Santa Giustina (G. 4), supposed to stand on the site of a Temple of Concord, has been repeatedly ruined and rebuilt. The present large edifice was begun in 1502, by Padre Girolamo da Brescia, and completed in 1532–1549, by Andrea Morone. The brick front, approached by a broad flight of steps, is rough and unfinished; but the general style of the interior is good, from its proportions, its great expanse, and its piers and cupolas. The aisles form a series of vaulted recesses opening into the nave, and communicating with one another by lower arched openings.

The *Martyrdom of Sta. Giustina, at the high altar, is by Paolo Veronese. At the 4th chapel rt. is the Death of Sta. Scolastica, by Luca Giordano; 5th rt., St. Benedict with SS. Placidus and Maurus, by Palma Giovane. The chapel rt. of the choir contains a beautiful group by Parodi, representing a Dead Christ, with the Virgin, Mary Magdalene, and St. John. fine *sculptured woodwork of the choir was executed from designs of A. Campagnola in 1556. On the upper row, New Testament subjects-Old Testament scenes on the lower. On the lower stalls, statues of the Evangelists, Latin Doctors, Isaiah, and David, SS. Giustina and Prosdocimo; close to the altar on the rt., Conversion, Preaching, and Arrest of St. Paul; 1., St. Peter healing the cripple, Baptism of Cornelius, and Death of Ananias. In the passage leading to the Sacristy is a very early piece of sculpture, representing Justice with two kneeling figures. Beyond, in the ante-room, are some damaged reliefs, and various scraps of fresco. The stalls in the Coro Vecchio, the only portion of the older Church that was I preserved, are by two artists of Parma and Piacenza (1448). They are inlaid with beautiful architectural designs. Here is a recumbent effigy of Jacopo degli Zocchi, Doctor of Laws, and opposite that of an Abbot. At the altar once stood Romanino's great picture, now in the Museum. In the Chapel of S. Prosdocimo, below this, is a white marble carving of the Saint, by a monk of the Convent. Steps lead down to the Catacombs of SS. Giustina, Prosdocimo, and Daniel. The Chapel of S. Prosdocimo also contains a miraculous image of the Virgin, supposed to have been brought from Constantinople by St. Urius, where it escaped the flames raised to destroy it by the iconoclast Emp. Constantinus in the 8th cent. altar in the l. transept is supported by two spiral columns of alabaster, and two of rare granite. Behind it is a sepulchral urn erected by Gualfortino Mussato in 1316 for the remains of St. Luke. It is adorned with alabaster reliefs of the Evangelistic symbols and four Archangels. In the opposite transept is the altar of St. Matthew, with Greek marble reliefs of the Apostles.

Facing this Church is the Piazza Emanuele II., formerly called the Prato della Valle, a large, irregular open space, the centre of which is occupied by an oval surrounded with Statues, and by a canal supplied with water from the Bacchiglione. It was intended to limit the memorials to the great men of Padua; but as even local fame could not supply a sufficient number of subjects, they have been forced to enlist some celebrities from other countries, who, as Auditores Patavini, had been educated in the University: Antenor, Pietro di Abano, Petrarch, Tasso, Galileo: 78 in all. That of the Marquis Giovanni Poleni, a correspondent of Sir Isaac Newton, is one of the early works (1789) of Canova. Gustavus of Sweden, the "Lion of the North," has a full right to his station here, for in 1609 he studied at Padua, and attended the lectures of Galileo: and in consequence of this, when his unfortunate namesake visited Padua in 1783, he requested permission to erect this statue of his great ancestor. Excellent statues of Giotto and Dante, by Vela, have been placed beneath the Gothic Loggia, erected in 1863 as a Grand Stand for the judges at the annual races (12th June), on the W. side of the Prato.

S. Maria dei Servi (E. 3), now a Parish Church, has a 15th-cent. Pieta in fresco beyond the 1st altar rt., and a bronze relief by Bellano of two University Professors adoring the Virgin and Child, over the Sacristy door.

Sta. Maria in Vanzo (F. 2, 3) is entered through the adjoining Seminamo, of which it is now the Chapel. Over the high altar is the Virgin and Child with SS. Peter, John Bapt., Catharine, and Paul, by Bartolommeo Montagna. The fresco of the Coronation of the Virgin on the vault is by the same painter. In the Chapel to the i. is an Entombment, by Jacopo Bassano. The artist, according to his custom, has introduced portraits of himself and his family. In the 4th chapel on the rt. is a painting by Maganza of the Madonna with the Virgin Martyrs, SS. Barbara, Agnes, Giustina, Catharine, Apollonia, Ce-cilia, and Lucia. The frescoes over the arches of the gallery that crosses the church are by Campagnola. The adjacent Seminario Vescorile, or College for students in Theology, contains a library of upwards of 40,000 printed books and several MSS, amongst which is an autograph letter of Petrarch to Jacopo Dondi, a curious Psalter of the 14th cent, and the original MS, in 12 vols by Forcellini of his great Latin Dictionary.

San Michele, an Orntory, W. of 8. Maria in Vauzo, is a fragment of a demolished Church, which was full On the l. wall is of good frescoes the Adoration of the Magi, by Jacopo the Carrara family. The four heads | and Sebastian.

to the rt in the Funeral of the Virgin opposite are said to be those of Boccaccio, Dante, Petrarch, and Pietro di Abano. Above this, Bt. Anthony the Hermit; to the rt., Descent of the Holy Spirit.

A little further W is the Specols, or Astronomical Observatory, situated a the mediæval tower of S Tommiso, formerly the principal defence of Padua on the W. side. Erected by Eccelino da Romano, it served as the prison in which many of his victime suffered. The Observatory is ven supplied with instruments from London, Munich, and Vienna. The view from the summit is very fine, over the N.E. Aips, the Lagunes of Venice. and the Euganean Hills.

Santa Bofia (D. 5), supposed to be the ancient cathedral of Padua, is an interesting 12th-cent. Church of basihea form, much modernized. Part of the original apse may be seen beyond the Sacristy, to the l. of the high altar. It contains some early paintings.

The Museo Civico F. 4 is a modern building on the site of the old monastery of S. Antonio In the beautiful pointed Cloisters are the Roman antiquities found beneath the Caffè Pedrocchi see above . consisting of broken columns, and various architectural fragments. On the further side is the Tomb of the Volumnii, among numerous sepulchral monuments. A handsome starcase leads to the badly arranged but interesting

Here are also modern pictures, pieces of sculpture, and other objects bequeathed by Cavaliere Bottacini.

Magni's Reading Girl was much admired at the London Exhibition of 1862. The collection of bronzes contains a small candelabrum by Briosco (or Riccio), the sculptor of many reliefs in S. Antonio.

The Collection of Coins embraces all those struck at Padua, and many specimens from Venice, as well as the seals of the Carrara rulers. The series of Ancient Deeds and Autographs is most interesting, from the 11th cent. to the present day—three of the unfortunate Doge Marino Faliero are extreme rarities. Forming a part of the Museo is an extensive series of engravings.

The LIBRARY is rich in works connected with Padua, containing nearly 10,000 printed vols., and a large series of MSS. of local interest.

Further S. is the Botanic Garden, the most ancient in Europe, having been instituted by the Venetian senate in 1543. The celebrated Prosper Alpinus professed here in 1545. The garden is interesting as containing some of the oldest specimens of exotic trees and plants now common in Europe, the patriarchs of our shrubberies, plantations, and conservatories. Lebanon cedar, the oriental plane, and a Gleditschia 93 feet high, may be noticed. The magnolias are superb. Attached to the garden is a Botanical Museum with an extensive herbarium.

The so-called Tomb of Antenor (17, E. 4) is a large antique marble sarcophagus, resembling those of the Lombard period at Ravenna, supported by stumpy columns of the 13th cent., and covered by a brick canopy.

It was discovered in 1274 underground, containing a second sarcophagus of lead, and a third of cypresswood. In the latter was a skeleton grasping a sword, an inscription upon which, in barbarous Latin, was interpreted to indicate that the tomb belonged to Antenor. The supposed remains of the founder of the city were then deposited in the Church of San Lorenzo, now demolished. When Alberto della Scala governed Padua in 1334 the sarcophagns was opened, and he requested as a gift the sword of the Trojan hero. It is probable that the tomb is that of one of those Hungaman invaders who descended into Italy in the 9th cent Nearly opposite is the House of Dante, marked with an inscription.

The University occupies a building called il Bo, from the sign of the Ox tavern upon the site of which it stands. The University enjoyed considerable celebrity as early as 1221, when Frederick II. commanded the students of Bologna to forsake that city, which had incurred his displeasure, and to resort to the city of Antenor. It was specially protected and encouraged by the Venetians. At first it was preeminent in law, and the great Baldus taught here. Padua also excelled in medicine; and the professorships of the university include some of the greatest medical names of the 16th and 17th centuries-Vesalius (1540), Fallopius (1561), Fabricius ab Aquapendente (1565), under whom our own countryman Harvey, discoverer of the circulation of the blood, studied, and took his doctor's degree in 1602, and Spigelius (1618). Here Sanctorius tanght (1611); and, in times nearer our own, Morgagni continued to emulate their learning. At the present day it enjoys perhaps greater reputation as a medical school than any in Italy. There are five faculties, -Theology, Law, Medicine, Philosophy, and Mathematics. Each faculty has a Direttore or Dean. The head officer is the Rettore Magnifico, who rules the university with the assistance of a Senutus Academicus. There are 46 professorships, and the students vary in number between 1500 and 2000.

The building was begun in 1493, at the expense of the republic of Venice The court, designed by Pulladio or Samovino, has two ranges of columns, Doric below, Ionic above; the walls are covered with armorial bearings and monuments of former students, among which are the names of several Englishmen [William Stokeham (1661), | pressed convents.

Robert Napier (1662,). At the foot of the staircase on the rt. of the entrance is the Statue of Elena Lucrezia Cornaro Piscopia, who died in 1684, aged 48 years. She spoke Hebrew, Arabic, Greek, Latin, Spanish, and French, with fluency, was a tolerable poetess, an excellent musician, wrote mathematical and astronomical dissertations, and received a doctor's degree from the university She died unmarned, having refused many offers. monument is dated 1773. The anatomical Theatre was built by Fabricius ab Aquapendente in 1594. Although it only replaced a pre-existing one of the 15th cent., it still is the oldest in Europe. The design for it is said to have been given by Fra Paolo Sarpi The Anatomical Colfections and Models are worthy of a visit. The Natural History section is rich in fossils of the Veronese and Vicentine hills, especially in fossil fishes from Monte Bolca. Galileo was professor of mathematics here for upwards of ten years; and in the Gabinetto di Fisica they exhibit one of his vertebræ, parloined probably when his remains were removed in 1757 to their present resting-place at Santa Croce at Florence. The Gabinetto Antiquario e di Numismatica, opening out of the cortile, contains several Roman and Greek bronzes, mscriptions, &c., and a currous papyrus from Ravenna, of the year 616-619-a deed of sale.

PRIVATE MANSIONS, THEATRES, &C.

Palazzo Giustiniani, in the Via del Santo (F. 4), designed in 1524 by Fulconetto. Adjoining it is a beautiful rotonda, intended for musical entertainments, and built expressly for the celebrated Luigi Cornaro, the writer on the mode of prolonging life.

group, by Agostino Fasolata, of Lucifer and his companions cast down from Heaven. It consists of 60 figures, carved out of one block of marble. These figures are so twisted together that it is difficult to understand how the artist could have managed his tools. It is five feet high, and the sculptor was employed upon it twelve years.

The House of Ezzelino is now converted into the Marionette or Puppet Theatre of Santa Lucia. Some Gothic windows are preserved.

The Teatro Nuovo is opened during the "Fiera del Santo" (Fair of St. Anthony), which begins in June and ends in August; the Teatro Nuovissimo, near the cathedral, and the Teatro Diurno are for representations by daylight.

Hospitals.— The Spedale Civile, in the street behind the University, is an extensive building, erected on the site of a suppressed college of the Jesuits in 1798. It can receive 500 patients. Five of its wards constitute the Clinical School of the University. One division is set apart for lunatics. In the Chapel is a monument to Bishop Giustiniani, the great benefactor of the charity, by Canova.

The Istituto degli Esposti (Foundlings) was founded in 1097, and is consequently the oldest institution of the kind in Europe. The annual admissions average about 400; there are upwards of 3000 children on the books, the deaths averaging 15 per cent.

Venice owes its existence as a city to the fugitives, who, on the invasion of Italy by Attila, sought safety, after the fall of Aquileia, from the sword of the Huns, among the neighbouring islands "at the extremity of the Gulf, where the Hadratic feedly imitates the tides of the ocean; near a handred small islands are separated by shallow water from the continent, and protected from the waves by several long slips of and, which admit the entrance of vessels through some secret and narrow channels ' -Gibbon,

In this expanse (the Laguna or Lagoon) are several small islands, among which the Isola di Rialta (Rivo altodeep stream), had long served as a port of Padus, and a few buildings for naval purposes had been constructed upon it. The fall of Aquileia, and the self-bunishment of the neighbouring inhabitants of Concordia -Opitergium, now Oderzo and Patavium, - A.tinum, Altino Padua-occurred in the year A D. 452 but as early as 421 a church dedicated to St. James had been erected on the island of Rialto. Sabellico has preserved a tradition that the earliest buildings of this town were raised on the very spot now occupied by the Cathedral of St. Mark, and that the first foundations were laid on the 25th

As a general description of Venice, that of Rogers is still true, except that the radroad has superseded the passage from the mainland in a gondola.

There is a glorious city in the sea. The sea is in the broad, the narrow streets, Ebbing and flowing and the salt sea-weed Clings to the mar' le of her pasaces. No track of men, no footsteps to and fro, Lead to her gates. The path lies o'er the Three main bridges cross the Grand Canal that if the Rialto, in stone, the other two in iron one leading to the Accadema delle Belle Arti, the other to the Rly. Stat.

The smaller bridges are so numerous, that there is no part of the city that is to say, no house-which cannot be reached on foot through the narrow lanes called cash (sing. calle); but many of the finest buildings having their façades on a canal, can only be seen from the water, out of which they rise. A gondola is therefore at times indispensable to the stranger.

Besides the general term calle, the narrow lanes where several run together from the rt. and l. are called lista, and when long and paved, the Calle is styled savizada selejata.

When a footway intervenes between the houses and the water it is called a

The larger and wider Rive are called Fondamente. The open spaces are Campi. A canal is Rio.

The population of the city is now 158,575, though at the close of the 15th cent. it exceeded 180,000.

"The Venetian dialect, or rather language, was formerly so much therished as a token of nationality, that the speakers in the Senate were comperiod to employ it to the exclusion of the luscan or Volgare. ETERRAN WRITE,-Situated in the of a salt marsh, Venice had been elent on its cisterns for fresh water, its being brought from the mainin large flat bottomed boats, atwith great expense; but several Wan wells were sunk in 1847, at expense of the municipality, and the direction of a French engineer. Present unceasing streams of fresh emply fountains in several of Squares of Venice, as in the Campi M. Formosa, Genutt, &c.; and anugh at first prejudices were raised What it, from its slightly chalybeate noter contains a small quantity of and some vegetable matter, the Atter derived from the peaty stratum Prough which it fisters, and strangers bugged avoid drinking it without wine. Here and there, as in a garden on the underca, the water is highly charged teh indommable gas, forming bubbles the surface, which ignite on the 1. Theren.

Venice is now supplied with drinking water from the main land.

The Gendola is a long flat-bottomed boat, tapering towards each end, where it rises considerably above the water, the whole painted black (in pursuance, it is said, of a law passed in the 15th cent.). The well-cushioned seats are rather estern of the centre of the boat, and are generally protected by the feles, a covering, overspread with black cloth, which forms a small cabin and affords complete protection against wind and rain. It is furnished with a door in front and a sliding window at each side. This canopy may be entirely removed, and an awning substituted in summer. The boat is managed by means of an oar working on a crooked rowlock. The rower stands upright on the popps (stern), behind the seat, facing the direction in which the gondola is intended to move: he impels it by pushing the our from him, retaining the blade in the water on the backward stroke for the purpose of steering If a second rower is employed, he stands in the fore part of the boat, and also rows forwards. A halberd-like piece of ron with projecting teeth (ferro) is carried at the prow. It acts as a counterpoise to the rower at the stern, and tests the height of the bridges. A gondola will accommodate under its cover 3 persons comfortably—there are seats for 4. The gondoliers are usually strong, active, and civil fellows. Their cries to avoid a collision on turning a corner are peculiar (già premè, to the rt., sia li, to the l.). They are to be found for hire principally at the Piassetta, but also at the ferry stations (traphetti) and other points. For Tariff, see Directory.

The fandele is a smaller boat than the goodels, but built much on the same principle.

*PIAZZA DI SAN MARCO.

This beautiful and celebrated Square, the centre of business and amusement, is usually entered by the stranger from the W. side, under the Atrio, or Nuova Fabbrica, built in 1810 upon the site of the old Charch of San Gemignano (see Plan of Venice at the Arsenal). This Church had already been shifted in the 12th cent. to this spot, having originally stood near the centre of the Pinzza Beneath the central passage of the Atrio is the grand entrance to the Royal Palsoe (see below). Standing in the square and looking towards the Basilica of St Mark, on the left runs the long hue of the Procuratio Vecchie, beyond which is seen the Torre dell' Orologia, or Clock Tower. On the rt are the Procuratie Nuove, terminated by the Libreria Vecchia, whose front lies towards the Piazzetta. The length of the Piazza is 192 yds.; its width at the E. end, 90 yda; at the W. cod, 62 yds.

The Piazzetta runs off at rt. angles from the S.E. end to the edge of the canal. On its W. side stands the Libraria Vecchin; on the E. the Ducal Palace Near the Canal stand two granite columns, one sumrounted by the bronze hon of St. Mark, the other by a statue of St. Theodore Across the water, on a small island, stands the Church of S. Giorgio Maggiore; nearer at hand, and to the rt., are the Dogana and Sto. Mario della Solution while to the l. stretches a long line of quay at which many vessels are moored, known as the Riva degli Schiavoni, beyond which the view is terminated by a green point which indicates the Public Gardens.

The *Procuratie Vecchie, standing upon an arcade of 50 arches, within which are shops, form nearly the entire N. side of the Piazza. This entire N. side of the Piazza. fabric was raised by Bartolommeo Buono and Guglielmo da Bergamo, in 1517, and was intended for the habitation of the Procurators of St. Mark, the most important dignitaries of the republic. Nine in number originally, they were the churchwardens or trustees of San Marco; Francesco Gradenigo, appointed in 996, being the first upon record. With the increase of the riches of San Marco, their numbers were augmented to about 34, and the enlargement of the board was accompanied by a great extension of their powers. Amongst other duties, they constituted a court of orphans, being their official guardians and trustees. The Procuratori were in such high repute for their integrity and good management, that it was a common practice for parents in other states of Italy to appoint them executors of wills. The Doge was usually elected from this body. The office was held for life, and, as the Republic declined, a certain number of the places were sold as a means of filling the coffers of the state. practice began during the disastrous war of Candia. They had two prices: the old nobility paid 30,000 ducats (6000l.) for their gown, the new 100,000 (20,000*l*.). For the accommodation of the increasing numbers, the Procuratie Nuove were erected on the opposite side of the square. This building is in the two lower stories a continuation of the Libreria, and was designed by Sansovino; but on his death, Scamozzi, to whom the work was entrusted, added a third story. The sculptures here are elegant, particularly the foliated frieze of the Ionic story, interspersed with seagods and nymphs.

Royal Palace. The Procuratie Nuove were converted into a Palace by the Viceroy Eugène Beauharnais, and now constitute a portion of the Palazzo Reale, which is continued along the W. side of the Piazza above the Atrio (see above). Open on Sun. and Thurs., 12 to 3 (1 fr.); entrance from the Piazzetta. The great hall (still called the *Libreria Vecchia, though the books were transferred in 1812 to the Ducal Palace), was designed for the Senate in 1536 by Sansovino and completed by Scamozzi in 1582, to receive their collections of books and MSS., including the donations of Petrarch and Cardinal Bessarion. "The Library is a building of noble design, notwithstanding the improprieties with which it is replete. It consists of two orders,—the lower one of highly ornamented Doric, and the upper one Ionic, and very graceful in effect. Of both these orders the entablatures are of inordinate comparative height. The upper one was expressly so set out for the purpose of exhibiting the beautiful sculptures with which it is decorated. cornice is crowned with a balustrade, on whose piers statues were placed by the ablest scholars of Sansovino. A portico occupies the ground-floor, which is raised three steps from the level of the piazza. This portico consists of 21 arcades, whose piers are decorated with columns. In the interior are arches corresponding to the exterior ones, 16 whereof, with their internal apartments, are appropriated for shops. Opposite the centre arch is a magnificent staircase leading to the hall, beyond which is the Library of St. Mark. The faults of this building, which are very many, are lost in its grace and elegance; and it is, perhaps, the chef-d'œuvre of the master." -Gwilt. The interior decorations are in keeping with the exterior. stairs are eight handsome columns of breccia pavonazza, and in the 2nd Room two of verde antico. On the ceiling of the 1st Room is a painting of

Wisdom by Titian. The ceiling of the | great Half, in which the books were deposited, is filled with very fine ornaments in stucco, and with 21 paintings by the seven best Venetian artists of the time, each painter contributing three subjects in a row. The sixth Honour, Mathematics, and Music are by Paolo Veronese; the rest by Giulio Licimo, Salviati, Franco, Strozzi (of Genoa), Padovanino, and Andrea Schlavone On the rt of the entrance door, Tintoretto, St. Mark delivering a Saracen; on the I Exhumation of the relics of St. Mark at Alexandria. On the I wall, Bonifazio, Virgin and Children, with SS. Omobono and Barbara, over the door of exit, Rocco Marcone, Adulteress. Scattered through the rooms of the Palace are several other pictures by Bonifazio Veneziano the younger, Paulo Veronese, and Bassano. Twelve portraits of Directors of the Mint and two fine pictures of St. Mark and St. George, by Tintoretto The ball-room is a fine hall, with 10 chandeliers of Venetian glass. The long saite of rooms terminates at the top of the grand Staircase, designed by Sansovino, and decorated by Vittoria.

The *Campanile was begun in 902, under the government of Domenico Tiepolo, but was not carried up to the belfry until the time of Domenico Morosmi (1148-1155), whose epitaph is so ambiguously worded as to claim the honour of the entire edifice. The height is 323 ft., and the width 42 ft. at the base. The ascent (15 cents.) is by a continued inclined plane a cordoni, which winds round an inner hollow tower. The belfry, an open loggia of four arches in each face, was built in 1510, by Maestro Buono; the whole being surmounted by a lofty pyramid. The general *view is magnificent, but the canals cannot be seen, and the city looks like an ordinary town on an island, for which reason the ascent of the tower of S. Giorgio is often preferred. A watchman is stationed in the belfry, who strikes the great bell at every ! hr day and night. The Angel surmounting the I trance to the tower, and serving as a weathercock, is 16 ft. high.

At the foot is the much criticised *Loggietta of Sansorino, built about 1540, ornamented with four brouze statues of Pallas, Apollo, Mercury, and *Peace, cast by him There are three arches, divided by pairs of columns within which are statues in niches. The elevation contains several relief in marble, of which the three principal are in the attic, and represent in the centre Venice as Justice, with two rivers flowing at her feet, on the riof the spectator, Venus—the symbol of the Island of Cyprus on the I. Jupiter the symbol of Crete. The reliefs to the N. beneath the bronze statues are, the Fail of Helle from the Ram of Phryxus, and Tethys assisting Leander. The small bronze gate was cast by Antonio Gan, in 1750. In the interior, which was used as the station of the Procurators in command of the guard during the sitting of the Great Council, is a Madonna in terra-cotta, by Sansovino. The public lottery is drawn here at 3 p.m. on Sat.; at other times, apply to the Director at the Ducal Palace.

The *Clock-Tower (Torre dell' Oroologio) has on its face a dial respiendent with gold and azure, the sun on the hands travelling round the sodiscal signs which decorate it, and marking the time of twice twelve hours. The two bronze figures strike the hours The Virgin and Child upon the bell in gilt bronze, and a gigantic hon of St. Mark, upon an azure and stellated ground, decorate the two upper stories. The tower was built by Pietr Lowbards in 1494, and restored in 1859. The clock, as appears by an inscription beneath, was made by Gurran Paolo Rinaldi, of Reggio, and Gian Carlo, his son. Having been injured by lightning in 1750, it was restored by Ferracina of Bassano, in 1755. The wings on each side of the tower were added at the beginning of the 16th

Beneath the clock-tower is the extrance to the Merceria, the part of Venice which exhibits most commercial activity. Here are some of the principal shops; and much of the best retail trade carried on in the city is done in this quarter. The streets about the Merceria, and through which a way may be found to the Rialta Bridge, are intricate, narrow, and crowded.

The three red *flagstaffs (pili) of larch in front of St. Mark's are stepped in beautiful bronze pedestals, and surmounted by winged lions. From these masts once proudly floated the three gonfaloni of silk and gold, emblematical of the three dominions of the republic—Candia, Cyprus, and the Morea. They are replaced by the flag of Italy, hoisted on Feast-days. The elaborate reliefs of sea nymphs and tritons on the pedestals are the work of Alessandro Leopardi (1505).

A large flock of pigeons frequent the Piazza and the neighbouring buildings. They have existed here so long that their origin is forgotten. They are protected by the almost superstitious care and affection of the Venetian people, and are fed with great delight by visitors. A handful of Indian corn thrown down at any time will attract a large number.

*DOGE'S PALACE (Palazzo Ducale)
—1 fr. daily from 10 to 3, Sun. free;

Prisons, 20 cents extra.

The first Palace was built on this spot in 820, destroyed in a sedition, and replaced by another, about 970, under the Doge Pietro Orseolo. last was, 150 years afterwards, destroyed by a great fire, which consumed a third of Venice. The reconstruction of the present building began under the Doge Marin Falier (1354-5), from the designs of his relation Filippo Calendario—the same, according to modern historians, who appears as a conspirator in Lord Byron's tragedy. That a person so named did take an active share in the plot, and that he was hanged with a gag in his mouth from the red pillars of the balcony of the palace from which the doge was wont to view the shows in the Piazzetta, is unquestionable; but the contemporary chronicle describes him as a seaman; and it would seem that the real Filippo—at least, the real artist—died in the preceding year whilst employed upon his works. Very little of Calendario's edifice now remains, the principal part of the palace dating from the reconstruction commenced in 1420 under Doge Tommaso Mocenigo. In this the family of Bon or Buono, native architectsor, as they are termed in a contemporary document, stone-cutters (Tajapieri)—bore the principal part: the most eminent of whom was one of the sons, Bartolommeo. To their period belong the beautiful colonnades towards the sea and the Piazzetta, the Porta della Carta, and the passage leading from it to the Great Inner Court, which appears to have been completed about the year 1471. great deal, particularly the sides of the Court, is of a later date—the interior of the building having been reduced to a shell, by two successive fires, in 1574 and 1577.

The paintings by Gentile and Gio. vanni Bellini, Carpaccio, Pordenone, and Titian, representing the triumphs of the Republic and the heroes of her annals, together with the vast halls whose walls they covered, perished in these conflagrations. The walls were calcined and riven, and after one corner of the building had fallen, and several columns and arches were shattered, Palladio, who was consulted with other architects, maintained that it would be dangerous to attempt the re-insertion of the floors, and proposed to rebuild the whole palace in a more uniform and elegant style. much consideration in the Senate, it was however determined not to innovate, but to retain the fabric as much as possible in its ancient form; though in the repairs and alterations of the interior cortile, the later Italian style of the Renaissance was a good deal introduced.

The whole building is in course of restoration. Some of the capitals, which were fractured and unsafe, have been replaced by new ones, and parts of the stone-work, &c., have been re-

EXTERIOR. The plan of the building is an irregular square, of which the W and S, sides are supported upon two tiers of arches. The upper gallery has ogee arches supporting a line of quatrefoil circles, above which rises a flat smooth face of wall composed of red and white marble bricks, and broken by seven broad windows without tracery. The central window projects, and is decorated with statues, mouldings, cornice, and a balcony supported upon consoles. Along the top of the walls runs a somewhat poor cornice, crowned by stone pinnacles or battlements, not too graceful in shape, each 7 ft. high. The height of the wall above the upper colonnade, adding the cornice, is 39 ft.f The treatment is almost exactly the same on the S. and W. sides, except that the central window of the former is more e'aborate, and unmixed with Renaussance details. Its two easternmost windows also are of three lights, and retain their tracery. The E, face, in four stories, towards the Bridge of Sighs, is a beautiful early Renaissance elevation of Antonio Rizzo (1484).

The 7th and 9th columns on the W. side are of larger diameter than the rest, because the one has to carry the N. wall of the Sala del Maggiore Consiglio, and the other the S. wall of the Sala dello Scrutinio. The *capitals, executed probably by Bart. Buono from the designs of Calendario, are extremely curious for their varied designs and elaborate execution. They contain figures and groups emblematical of good government and the due administration of the law; such as the Justice of Trajan (at the N.W. corner), the Seven Sages, and analogous allegories. The 9th and 10th columns of the upper tier, reckoning from the N., as welf as the railing between them, are of red marble; from between these were proclaimed.

The sculptures best worth notice, beginning from the S end, are the (2) Patron Saints of Sculptors at work; (4) the blacksmith, carpenter, and other armsans, following their trade; (5) the Seven Ages and death of Man -infant, schoolboy, warrior, student, etc.; (7 Married Life -- courtship, wedding, birth and death of the firstborn; and, finest of all, the corner capital, with Justice, the law givers Aristotle, Solon, Numa, and Moses, and the Emp. Trajan reining in his horse to listen to a widow's petition Perkins, Over this capital is the Archangel Gabriel, patron of lawabiding citizens; over that on the SW., which represents Adam and Eve placking the forbidden fruit, is St. Michael who drove them out of Paradise-a warning against disobedience; over the S.E. capital, sculptured with the drunkenness of Noah, is Raphael with the young Tobias, whose filtal piety is contrasted with the undutiful conduct of Noah's sons.

The figures and reliefs of the large window facing the sea were executed probably towards the close of the 15th cent by Autonio Rizzo. The other large window, towards the Piazzetta (1523-1538), is by Tullio Lombardo and Guglielmo Bergamusco.

The principal entrance to the Palazzo is through the *Porta dalla Carta, so called from the official placards which used to be posted at the door. It bears the inscription "Opus Bartholomai" over the doorway (1439-1448). The statues of Force, Prudence, Hope, and Charity, and the seated figure of Justice above the window, are good specimens of the sculptures of the 15th cent.; the statue of Doge Foscari, during whose reign this gate was erected, kneeling before the Lion of St. Mark, was brutally broken to pieces by the democratic rabble in 1797, and is replaced by a modern copy.

The *Socia dei Giganti, erected towards 1483 by A. Rizzo, derives its name from two colossal statues of Mars and Neptune, by Sansovino, which stand on either side at the head of the staircase. The beautiful Court by Scarpagnino (1550) has an inner W. front by Rizzo (1490). The portals and arches are inlaid and incrusted with marbles, most delicately worked, by Bernardo and Domenico da Mantova; and the steps themselves are inlaid in front with a species of intarsiatura in lead. The statues of *Adam and Eve, opposite the Scala dei Giganti, are by Rizzo (1471), and are considered to surpass all previous productions of the Veneto-Lombard School. It was on the platform at the head of these stairs that the Doges were crowned: it was here also that Lord Byron placed the closing scene of Marino Faliero, for which there is no documentary authority.

In the courtyard are two finely sculptured bronze *cisterns (puteali), one executed by Niccolò dei Conti in 1556, the other by Alfonso Alborghetti in 1559. On the l., ascending the Giants' Staircase, is a beautiful front in two stories, by Guglielmo Bergamasco, forming one side of the Corte de' Senatori.

INTERIOR.—On the top of the Giants' Stairs is an inscription let into the wall of the loggia, commemorating the visit of Henry III. of France to Venice in 1574.

In the colonnade, which surrounds three sides of the cortile on the 1st floor, are busts of Venetian celebrities—Enrico Dandolo, Morosini, Bembo, Arduino, Lazzaro Moro, Marco Polo, Tintoretto, Fra Paolo Sarpi, Paruta, Carlo Zeno, and Vittorio Pisani; together with Doges Foscari and Renier, the last but one of the lords of Venice; also of Galileo, Sebastian Cabot, &c.; some placed here by their descendants, but the greater number by a society of patriotic Venetian gentlemen.

The Scala d'Oro, on the l., was largely constructed by Sansovino. The ornaments in stucco are by Alessandro Vittoria, and the paintings by Franco; the whole was completed about the year 1577. The adaptation of the fretwork to the cove of the ascending roof is particularly skilful. On the loggia beyond this staircase, which is not used by the public, are the Stanze degli Avvogadori, in one of which is a Pietà by Giovanni Bellini; it was here that the Libro d'Oro, or Roll of the Venetian Aristocracy, was preserved.

A second staircase beyond this, and much less decorated, gives access to the grand halls which occupy the greater part of the building. The first of these is the

*Sala del Maggior Consiglio, a truly magnificent Hall, 59 yds. long, 28 yds. broad, and 52 ft. high, begun in 1310, and completed in 1334. It was afterwards painted by Titian, the Bellini, Tintoretto, and Paolo Veronese. fire of 1577 destroyed it, and the adjoining Sala dello Scrutinio, with all the works of art they contained. It was used for the Council of Nobles, whose names were inscribed in the Golden Book, and who really represented the sovereign power in the state; it is now the principal place of deposit for the great Library (see below). The decorations of this hall, as reconstructed by Da Ponte, and filled with pictures of the later Venetian school, remain unaltered, and the splendid paintings which adorn the walls are proud memorials of the opulence and power of the Republic, though many of the scenes depicted are more flattering to the national vanity than consistent with the facts of history. The E. wall is covered with Tintoretto's immense picture of *Paradise, the largest ever painted upon canvas. Damaged and blackened by time and picture-cleaners, it is still powerful and impressive.

Next to this, on the N. wall:-

There are three octagonal pictures on each side of the oval by Palma. The two middle ones are by F. the Venetians; to the l. the capture of Gallipoli, in 1484; all three by Tintoretto. The two last compartments are painted by Palma Giovane: rt., the Capture of Cremona, by F. Bembo, in 1427; l., that of Padua, by Andrea Gritti, in 1509.

The frieze of Portraits of 76 Doges round the Hall, commences from A.D. 809. A black veil is painted over the space which should have been occupied by the portrait of Marino Falieri, with the inscription, Hic est locus Marini Falethri decapitati procriminibus.

A corridor connects this hall with the Sala dello Scrutinio, which occupies the rest of the front towards the Piazzetta. In this fine hall, formerly used to elect the 41 nobles, who afterwards nominated the Doge, are now preserved the MSS. collections, and the Aldine editions of the library. The large doorway opposite the entrance represents a triumphal arch erected in 1694 to Francesco Morosini, surnamed Il Peloponesiaco, from his having conquered the Morea.

On the entrance - wall is Palma Giovane's *Last Judgment, one of his finest works.

A frieze of 39 Doges is continued in this hall, and concludes with the last Doge, Lodovico Manin, under whom the republic collapsed in 1797. On the ceiling, the best painting is an oval next to the Last Judgment, by Francesco Bassano, representing the capture of Padua from Carrara in 1405.

The Biblioteca di San Marco is open daily, except Sun., from 9 to 3, but the visitor must be accompanied by a custodian. Returning to the entrance of the Great Council Hall, a door leads into a vestibule filled with books, and adorned with portraits of Cardinal Bessarion and Paolo Sarpi, by L. Bassano. With this is connected the Reading Room. In the librarian's apartments are preserved the MS. treasures, including the *Grimani Breviary, purchased by Doge Grimani for 500 sequins, with more than 100 miniatures of the 15th cent. It is now placed under glass — one miniature being shown. To examine the whole MS, permission must be obtained from the Librarian. It is now known that no part of it was painted by Memling. The finest miniatures are by Gherart, whose name is signed on one of them. A MS, of the Divina Commedia, of the 14th cent., with contemporary minia-

(1415); the Will of Marco Polo (1373); and many fine Greek MSS. bequeathed by Cardinal Bessarion. Amongst the books, the first printed at Venice, Cicero ad Familiares (1469, and the Ed. Prsn. of Homer (1483, on vellum, in richest binding, adorned with camei and melli. Autographs of emment personages are exhibited under glass, and there are two fine antique cameos of Jupiter Ægrochas

The Library, transferred in 1817 from the Libreria Vecchia, contains npwards of 120,000 volumes, and 10,000 MSS. The nucleus of it was formed out of the books bequeathed by Petrarch who, while the plague was raging at Padua, had fixed his abode in Venice, and wrote on the 4th September, 1362, to the Senate,-" I wish, with the good will of our Saviour, and of the Evangelist himself, to make St. Mark heir of my library." The Great Council gladly accepted this liberal donation, and addressed its thanks "to a scholar unrivalled in poetry, in moral philosophy, and in theology " A palace which belonged to the Molina family, and which in later years had been converted into a convent for the nuns of St. Sepulchre, was assigned as a residence for the poet, and as a depository for his books. Among these were treasures of no ordinary value:-A MS, of Homer, given to Petrarch by Nicolaus Sigeros, ambassador from the Greek Emperor; a copy of Sophocles; the entire Iliad, and great part of the Odyssey, translated by Leontio Pilato, and copied in the writing of Boccaccio, whom the translator had instructed in Greek; an imperfect Quintilian; and most of the works of Cicero, transcribed by Petrarch himself. The Venetians grievously neglected the stipulations (as to the care to be taken of the books) that accompanied the poet's gift, and the whole of Petrarch's MSS, have been destroyed. This first public library in Venice was largely increased in 1468, by the munificence of Cardinal Bessarion, who, as patriarch of Constantinople, possessed fre- and contains some Greek mart quent opportunities of securing MSS. of great rarity, and who may be considered the founder of the present library; and afterwards by the collections of Cardinal Grimani and of Professor Melchior Wieland, who bequeathed his library to it.

The Museo Archeologico, shut on free days, occupies a suite of rooms, which, up to the beginning of the 16th cent, were inhabited by the Doges. It contains a small collection of antiquities, a few early Greek statues, some curious maps, coins and bronzes, &c.

In the first room are some ancient marbles, a colossal Minerva, much repaired, and a statue of Æsculapius, discovered at the baths of Abano. Opening out of this is the Camera degli Sourlatti, where the scarlet robes of the members of the Maggior Consiglio were kept. Here is a fine chimneypiece, richly ornamented with scutpture, executed for Doge Barberigo, about 1490. Over the door is a relief of Doge Loredano at the feet of the Virgin, and several ancient marbles, with copies of others made in the 15th cent. Sala dello Scudo, so called from the heraldic shield of the Doge being placed here on his election. The walks are covered with maps of countries explored by Venetian navigators and travellers; they were originally drawn by the learned geographer Ramusio in the 16th cent., but these having almost disappeared, the present once only date from 1762. Here is the *Mappamendo of Mauro, a Camaldolese monk of the Convent of St. Michael at Murano, who composed for Alphouso V., of Portugal, this species of geographical encyclopædia of all that was known at the period of its construction in 1457 Photographic copies of it have been taken by Naya. The Turkish map of the earth, in the form of a heart, is by the Tunisian Hadgi Mahomed (1559). Alongside is the engraved wood-block from which it was struck; it was found in a galley captured by the Venetium.
Sala dei Bassi-rilievi. This hall we the aute-room of the Doge's resident among which a curious inscription of the Archons of Athens, and a sarcophagus with a relief of Niobe and her children. The Camera dei Busti has also a chimney-piece of the 15th cent., and some ancient marbles. In the Camera dei Bronzi (shown only by special permission from the Director) are Venetian coins and medals, miscellaneous objects in ivory, glass, terracotta, &c., and a few bronzes. In the last room, the Camera degli Stucchi, is some stucco-work of the 18th cent.

From the landing-place outside the Archeological Museum, a flight of stairs leads to a suite of rooms forming the second story of the Ducal Palace.

The following sequence of rooms is adapted for free days; on Week days the visitor ascends the Scala d'Oro, and begins with the Scala d'Ingresso. On Sunday, he will first enter the

The splendid fireplace and rich doorway were designed by Scamozzi; the columns of verde antico and cipollino are said to have been brought from Santa Sofia. Over the door are three statues by A. Vittoria. The fresco on the ceiling is by P. Veronese.

Crossing the Sala delle Quattro Porte, we enter the small SALOTTO D'INGRESSO, containing some good portraits of senators, and a ceiling painted by Tintoretto, Venice offering the Sword and Scales of Justice to Doge G. Priuli.

From the landing-place by the entrance to the Palace, stairs lead to the Sotto Piombi, at the top of the building, — as their name denotes, "under the leads." They were formerly used as prisons, and acquired celebrity from the description of their miseries by Jacopo Casanova, who escaped after being shut up in them in 1775, and by Silvio Pellico, who was, however, never confined in this part of the building. They were destroyed in 1797, but the rooms which replaced them have been recently made accessible, and are shown, together with the Pozzi, or dark cells in the two lower stories (20 c.). These prisons still correspond with the accurate description given by Sir J. C. Hobhouse in his notes to the fourth Canto of 'Childe Harold.' They were all lined with wood, but this wainscoting was for the most part destroyed when the cells were thrown open by the French.

The Ducal Palace is separated, on the E. side, by the Rio della Paglia, from the Carceri, or Public Prisons, a fine building capable of containing about 400 prisoners, built in 1589 by Antonio da Ponte, with rustic arches below, a range of Doric columns on pedestals above, and a large cornice with consoles in the frieze. The side facing the Palace has a gloomy character suited to its destination. The front towards the Riva is of a less severe character, comprising the apartments of the Signori di Notte (night-police), with larger openings than in the portion intended for the security of criminals.

The Rio della Paglia is spanned by

*Ponte dei Sospiri (Bridge of Bighs), which served as a covered passage between the Ducal Palace and the prisons, the interior being divided into a double footway. Prisoners, when taken out of the prisons to die, were conducted across this gallery to hear their sentences before they were led to execution. It is a single arch, 33 ft above the water, of bold design; but having been built at so recent a date in the annals of the Republic, its interest is scuttmental rather than historical, In form and architecture it resembles old Temple Bar.

The *Zecoa, or Mint, since 1870 used as a Chamber of Commerce and Exchange, adjoins the Libreria, on the Molo, and was built by Sansor ino in 1536; it is a noble specimen of Italian rustic work, above which are two orders, Doric and Ionic. The entrance is under the portico of the Libreria Vecchia, and is distinguished by two colossal statues in menacing attitudes, by G Campagna and T Aspetti. The Court is by Scamozzi. Here is a singular Apollo, by Cattaneo, holding a golden ingot. From this establishment the Zecchino, or Sequin, the ancient gold com of the Republic, derived its name. Over an inner door, close to the porter's lodge, is a Madouna in fresco, by Titian, ruined by damp and decay.

Beyond the Zecca is the Garden belonging to the Royal Palace. Part of it has been converted into a Public Walk, at the end of which is a Cafe, much frequented on summer evenings.

At the southern extremity of the Piazzetta are the two

*Granite Columns, one surmounted by the winged lion of St. Mark, the other by St. Theodore, executed by Pietro Guilombardo (1329). These columns so completely formed a part of the idea of Venice, that they were repeated in most of the cities subject to its dominion. St. Theodore stands upon a crocodile; his l. hand wields

This is considered, says Francesco Sansovino, as symbolical of the temper of our Republic; she exerts her strong hand for her own defence, and not to attack others. St. Theodore Tyro was a young Syrian soldier, who suffered martyrdom under Maximinian, and was much honoured by the Eastern Church | Narses, after expelling the Ostrogoths, visited (A.D. 553) the rising republic of the Venetians-for Venice, properly so called, did not then exist-and built a Chapel in honour of St. Theodore, now included in the Basilica of St. Mark; and St. Theodore continued the patron of the Republic until St. Mark supplanted him in the popular veneration.

The lion, a work of the 15th cent. with modern wings, suffered during the republican rule of the French. From the book which he holds, the words of the Gospel were effaced, and Droits de l'Homme et du Citagen substituted Upon this change a gondoher remarked that St. Mark, like all the rest of the world, had been compelled to turn over a new leaf. The hop was afterwards removed to the Inculide at Paris, but was restored at the peace of

The capitals of the columns bespeak their Byzantiue origin. Three were brought from the Holy Land in 1127. One sank into the mud as they were landing it; the other two were safely lodged on the shore; but as the story goes, there they lay no one could raise them. Doge Sebastiano Ziani (1172-1180) having offered as a reward that he who should succeed should not lack any grazia onesta, a certain Lombard, nicknamed Niccolo il Barattiere (Blackleg), offered bis services, and placed the columns on their Niccolò claimed as his pedestais. reward that he might keep a gamingtable probibited elsewhere by law) between the columns. should be inflicted in the privileged gambling spot, by which means the space "between the columns" be came so ill-omened, that even crossing it was thought to be a precursor of misfortune.

CHURCHES.

SAN MARCO.† Until the year 1807, when the patriarchal seat was removed hither from San Pietro di Castello, the Basilica of St. Mark was merely the Chapel attached to the Ducal Palace, It was founded in the year 828, by the Doge Gustiniant Partecipazio, for the purpose of receiving the relics of St. Mark, which were removed, under pretence of greater safety, from Alexandria, by Bono, the "Tribune" of Malamocco, and Rustico of Torcello These remains were deposited in the Chapel of St. Theodore: but the popular veneration was transferred from St. Theodore to the Evangelist, whose symbol became the emblem of the Republic, and the too humble Church of Narses gave way to the more splendid edifice of the newly-chosen protector Giustiniani left the Church unfinished; but it was completed by his successors, and stood until destroyed in the conflagration which terminated the life and reign of Pietro Candiano IV. in 976.

Pietro Orseolo I., the successor of Candiano, laid the foundations of the present edifice in 977; but nearly 100 years elapsed before the walls were completed, under the reign of Domenico Contarini in 1043. Many precious adornments, and in particular the mosaics, were added by the Doge Domenico Selvo in 1070; and it was not consecrated till the time of Ordelafo Fahero, on the 4th October, 1111. To this period belongs the curious Crypt under the Choir.

Although it has been disputed to which of the several cras of construction the present Basilica is to be ascribed, and whether or not it is to be considered as a specimen of Byzantine art, it may be without much doubt said that the original design has undergone little alteration, and that it was due to Greek architects, or to artists who had studied in the school of Constantinople and the East. The mosaics, within and without, cover a surface of 5000 sq yds.

Exterior.—The principal façade is very striking, with its five great round arches on each tier, its mosaics and columns, the whole surmounted with pinnacles and backed by domes of oriental aspect. The columns, about 150 in number, are chiefly of Greek marble banded white; a few are of verde antico and red porphyry. In the S.W. angle, on the upper tier, are two of rare *porfido verde. Some of them bear Armenian and Syriac inscriptions deeply engraven, and show by their variety of style and dimensions that they were brought from older buildings

Five large *Mossics fill the recesses over the doorways. Beginning on the S., the subject of the 1st and 2nd is the removal of the body of St. Mark from the tomb at Alexandria by Pietro Vecchio (1650); in the centre, the Last Judgment (1836); next, the Venetian Magistrates venerating the body of St. Mark, designed by Rizzi, in 1728; the *last, probably of the 13th cent., representing the Church of St. Mark, with groups of royal and ecclesiastical persons in front of it. Above, are mosaics of the Deposition, Descent into Hades, Resurrection, and Ascension, by Luigi Gaetano (1590), from the drawings of Domenico Robusti, son of Tintoretto. The archivolts of the central doorway, and of the portal which encircles it, are embossed with Prophets and Evangelists, allegorical representations of the months of the year, trades, and labours; while, within and without, are mystical figures of lions and other animals devouring or combatung human beings. The four ing over the central porch of the vestibule (in a position which renders it difficult to see them well either from below or from the level on which they are placed), was sent from the Hippoxliome at Constantinople in 1204 by the Doge Dandolo, as part of the share of the Venetians in the plunder when that city was taken by the Crusaders in the 4th Crusade. They were removed to Paris by Napoleon I. in 1797, and adorned the Triumphal Arch in the Place du Carrousel, but brought back in 1815. Antiquaries hesitate concerning the date, and even the country of these horses; for by some they have been assigned to the Roman period, and to the age of Nero; by others to the Greeks of Chios, and to the school of According to the most Lysippus. generally received opinion, Augustus brought them from Alexandria, after his victory over M. Antony, and erected them on a triumphal arch at Rome; they were successively removed by Nero, Domitian, Trajan, and Constantine, to arches of their own; and in each of these positions it is believed that they were attached to a chariot. Constantine in the end transferred them to his new capital. They are not in the bighest style of art, and the casting of them was so ill managed, that the artist was compelled to finish them up by many solderings. The weight of each horse is 17 cwt., and its height 5 ft.

On the N side of the Church is a small open space known as the Piazzetta dei Leoni, from its two rude red marble lions. This side has been recased (1864-70) with velued marble. Here there are 4 arches to the nave, with a corresponding row above the gallery. Several tablets of ancient sculpture are inserted in the outer walls. Between the first and second arch is Proserpine, or Ceres, holding a torch in either hand, in a chariot drawn by two dragons, of which a duplicate occurs at San Donnino, near a porphyry sarcophagus, on four chapel and the Baptistery. The verbrouze lions, with a pedestal of Pon- ing of the vestibule is covered severa serpentine, is the body of Daniele Manin, Dictator of the Republic of Venice (1848). He died at Paris, and the body was transported here in 1868

On the S, side of the nave there are only two arches in each tier. At the S.W corner is the stump of a porphyry column called la pietra del bando, from which the new laws were proclaimed In front of the bronze to the people gates which lead into the baptistery are two quadraugular *pillars, originally forming part of a gateway in the Church of San Sabbaat Ptolemais: after a contest between the Venetians and the Genoese for that Church, in 12.8, in which the former were successful, they brought away these piers as a trophy. They are covered with fretwork and monograms, and supposed to date from the 7th cent. The Latin cross sculptured on the S. face of each pillar is of a much more recent date. Close by is a remarkable group (10th or 11th cent.) of four figures in red porphyry. each crowned, and wearing swords with handles of eagle-heads. It was brought from Acre, where it had ornamented the pedestal of an equestrum statue.

Vestibule. -- The five outer doors are of brouze: that next to the central one, on the l., bears an inscription, showing that it was executed in the year 1300, by Bertuccio, a Venetian goldsmith

Within, by the central portal, small lozenge of white and red marble on the pavement marks the spot where Pope Alexander III. and the Emperor Frederic Barbarossa were reconciled on the 23rd July, 1117, through the intervention of the Venetian republic. The Pope, it is said, placed his foot upon the head of the prostrate Emperor, repeating the words of the Psalm, "Thou shalt tread upon the from and the adder." This vestibule or atriam originally extended round the Church to the transepts. The N. arm is still open, but that on the & very early 13th cent. mosaics of Old Those executed Testament subjects. by the brothers Zuccati are later, including *St. Mark, in pontifical robes, over the central door (1545), from the designs of Titian. Opposite, in a lunette, is the Crucifixion (1549), from the designs of Pordenone.

On the rt., just within the vestibule, is the monument of Doge Vitale Falier (1096), made up of fragments of an ancient sarcophagus; on the left is that of the Dogaressa Felice Michele (1111). At the S. end is the Zeno chapel, containing the *tomb of Cardinal Zeno, cast in 1505-1515, from the designs of Pietro Lombardo. The heavy and uninteresting statues of the Virgin and Child, with SS. John Bapt. and Peter, on the altar, are by Zuane delle Campane. Beside the altar are two lions in Verona marble; in the apse towards the vestibule, single figures of saints in mosaic.

At the N. end of the vestibule is the marble sarcophagus of Doge Bart. Gradenigo (1342), and in the N. passage the monument of Marino Morosini (1256), in an early Christian sarcophagus, with an ancient relief of Christ and the Apostles.

Of the three W. doors in bronze, the two on the N. are Venetian works executed between 1100 and 1112. That on the rt. is said to be of Byzantine workmanship, and to have been carried off from S. Sofia at Constantinople in 1203. The central one is in the same style, having 48 compartments, with inlaid figures in silver. The 8 columns of marmo Imezio were brought from Constantinople in 1205. Each of the side doors is flanked by two pair of columns of bianco e nero.

Interior.—The general plan is a Greek cross. At the centre, and over the middle of each arm of the cross, there is a cupola. The rest of the The walls and coroof is vaulted. lumns are of precious marbles, and the vaulting covered with mosaics on gold ground. There are 14 principal pillars in the nave and transept.

each of the four compartments, and support galleries above. The capitals of the pillars are of exquisite foliage, and are free from the imagery which at that time abounded in other churches of Italy. In the decoration of this building, without and within, above 500 pillars are employed. They are all of marble, and were chiefly brought from Greece, and other parts of the Levant. While St. Mark's was building, every vessel that cleared out of Venice for the East was obliged to bring back pillars and marbles for the work in which the Republic took so general an interest."—Gally Knight.

Mosaics.—Over the central door (11th cent.) Christ, the Virgin and St. Mark. On the vault above, Apocalypse by the Zuccati (1560). 1st of the five domes, *Pentecost, with a very remarkable personification of the various nations, in pairs, between the windows. aisle, Mount of Olives; Martyrdoms of Apostles (12th cent.) above; l. aisle, Paradise, Martyrdoms of Apostles (16th cent.), Simon Magus; nave, Martyrdoms, Passion Scenes; in the principal dome, Christ in glory; transepts, Miracles; front of Choir, Transfiguration. Dome of the Choir, Christ with Old Testament Kings and Prophets; below, Symbols of the Evangelists, early. On the vault, Apostles and Saints; on the walls, Life and Miracles of St. Mark; Life of St. Clement (13th cent.). In the apse, Christ enthroned (1505) with Saints. The red porphyry basin for holy water, to the rt., stands on an ancient Greek altar, with reliefs of children and dolphins.

In the N. aisle is the little Chapel of the Holy Cross, an octagonal structure with six columns, two of which are of bianco e nero, one of black granite, and three of very rare pavonazzetto. Above the arches of the nave runs a Gallery, faced with panels on which are carved Byzantine reliefs. Suspended by a chain from the cupola hangs a great lamp of quaint form.

In the S. transept, which has a large rose-window, the chapel nearest the It pos door is that of the Sacrament.

mosaics with scenes from the life of St. Leonard, and in front of it are two beautiful bronze candelabra made by Averoldus of Brescia, whose name is on them. The obscure chapel between this and the choir is St. Clement's. Its altar has a 16th-cent, relief of SS. Nicholas, James, and Andrew, who presents Doge Andrea Gritti.

The marble pulpits are supported by columns of beautiful marbles. That on the rt. is used for preaching, and here it was that the Doge showed himself to the people. On the l, is the Gospel Ambo. The great lamp suspended in front of the choir is peculiar.

The Choir is parted from the nave by a rich screen, surmounted by 14 marble *statues executed by Jacobello and Pietro Paolo delle Massegns (1393), pupils of the Pisan school: the cross over the centre, with the statue of Christ in silver, is by Marco Benato (1394). At each side of the choir are three intersia panels, executed in 1536, and above them are bronze reliefs, with incidents in the life of St. Mark, by Sansovino. On the S. is a fourth panel, returned; the corresponding one on the N. is hilden. The high altar stands under a Baldacehino, supported by four marble columns, covered with bands of sculpture and Latin inscriptions, of the 11th cent, These bands, nine upon each column, contain the principal events and traditions of the Gospel history, from the Marriage of St. Anna to the Ascension. On the marble railing beside the high altar are eight bronze statues - the *Evangelists, by Sansovino (1552), and the four Doctors of the Church by G Caliari (1614). Behind the high altar is a painting in fourteen compartments, by Messer Paolo and his sons (1344), very interesting as a specimen of early Venetian art, but almost rained by successive restorations. It is more Greek and stiff than contemporary works at Florence The Pala d'Oro, or Icone Bisantina, above the altar, is shown daily from 12 to 2, by tickets (25 c.), to be obtained in a room which is reached by a staircase from the N. transept. A similar | which are to be seen at the top we ticket (25 c.) granted at the same time admits to the Treasury (see below), This remarkable specimen of Byzantine work, arranged in five horizontal rows of 85 panels, was made in 976 at Constantinople, by order of Doge Pietro Orseolo; but repaired under the latter doges, and again in 1836-47. By these processes it has gained in splendour, but has lost in originality. It exhibits a mixture of Byzautine and Gothic styles. Some of the inscriptions are in Greek, some in Latin, The material is silver-gilt, encircled with coarse gems and enamels. The letters are in niello. The subjects are taken from Scripture, or from the legendary life of St. Mark. There is also a curious representation of the Doge Falier and the Empress Irene.

Under the high altar are the two coffins, placed here in 1811, containing the supposed relies of St. Mark, which had been for centuries lost sight of in the crypt. The original body is said to have been destroyed in the fire of

Behind the high altar is the Altar of the Holy Sacrament, with rehefs of SS. Francis and Anthony. It stands under a canopy, supported by four spirally fluted columns, said to have been brought from the Temple at Jerusalem. The two outer columns are of pavonazzetto, the inner ones of semi-transparent oriental alabaster. The little door on the tabernacle by Sansovino is of gilded bronze, and bears a relief of Christ attended by Angels.

On the altar are three slabs of cipollino rosso, which is very rare except at Venice and Ravenna; at the sides, two large columns of rerde antico. To the L is the entrance to the sacristy, closed by the *bronze door, upon which Sansoring has engraved his name, and is said to have exercised his talents during 20 years. The subjects of the reliefs are the Eutombment and Resurrection, On the border are six small heads, four Evangelists, and three Prophets, starting forward with exceeding vivacity. The names assigned to the heads bottom corner, and at the middle of the sides of this door, are:

P. Veronese. Titian.
P. Aretino. Sansovino.
Palma Giovane. Palma Vecchio.

The expense was defrayed by Federigo Contarini, a procurator.

The Sacristy is a noble apartment, and was probably used also as the chapter-house for the canons of the Basilica. The coved roof is richly covered with mosaics of Christ, the Evangelists, and Prophets. Over the door, the Virgin, by Rizzo, and SS. George and Theodore, by Zuccato. The presses and seats are ornamented with intarsia work by Sebast. Schiavone (1523).

In the N. Transept is the chapel of the Madonna, the most popular altar in Venice, on account of a Greek painting attributed to St. Luke, and brought from Constantinople by Doge Enrico Dandolo in 1204.

To the l. of it is the chapel of St. Isidore, founded in 1355, by Andrea Dandolo, to receive the body of the saint, brought from the island of Chios. On the wall above the entrance is a curious mosaic, representing the genealogical tree of the Virgin (1552). The chapel has mosaics and reliefs of the life and miracles of the saint.

Further W., in the corner of the transept, is the Chapel of the Madonna de' Mascoli, of which the marble altar, as well as the statues of the Virgin, of St. Mark, and St. John, are good The *Moworks of the 15th cent. saics here are by two artists, father and son, both of whom bore the name of Michele Giambono. To the elder belong the Birth and Presentation of the Virgin, on the l. of the waggonshaped roof (1430), with an architectural background of Venetian Gothic; opposite are the Visitation and Death of Mary, by the younger Giambono, These mosaics are finished in 1490. among the finest specimens of the art, and merit particular attention.

The Crypt had been abandoned for nearly three centuries, and until 1868 was filled with water. It was then cleared out and restored, but it is at all times liable to be flooded, and can seldom be visited. The descent is from the Sacristy. In the centre is a massive altar with four stumpy columns, the most ancient part of the Church, surrounded by a strong stone grating, in the centre of which rested the relics of St. Mark (now beneath the high altar). This altar is surrounded by a choir or presbytery, on the outer side of which are sculptured crosses, in low relief, the whole very like that of S. Clemente at Rome. The crypt consists of a long nave and aisles, surrounded by seats, with doors leading to the Basilica above. stunted arches are supported by 60 columns, many with basket-head capitals and Greek crosses. There is no reason to doubt that this crypt, as we now see it, was that founded by Pietro Orseolo in the 10th cent., although the general plan, and some of the materials, may date from the original edifice of the Doge Participazio in the early part of the 9th. The outer side of the apse, and its pointed arches, may be well seen from the Courtyard, behind the Sacristy.

The Baptistery, entered from the S. aisle, is adorned with marbles, reliefs, and mosaics, all executed about the The Font has a bronze 14th cent. *cover with low reliefs by Tiziano Minio and Desiderio da Firenze, pupils of Sansovino (1545); on the top is a statue in bronze of St. John the Baptist, by Francesco Segala (1565). The mosaics of the Crucifixion, over the altar, and those representing several modes of baptism by the Apostles, on the cupola over the font, are curious as works of art, but have been much restored. Behind the altar are reliefs of the 14th cent., representing the Baptism in the Jordan, St. George, and St. Theodore. The altar-table, behind the modern altar, is a massive red granite slab brought from Tyre in 1126, upon which our Saviour is said to have stood when He preached to $a_{\mathcal{S}}$ the inhabitants of that city. Against the rt, wall is the *monument of Doge Andrea Dandolo (1354), the fourth of his name, the friend of Petrarch, and descended from the celebrated blind hero of the crusades. He was the last doge who was buried in St. Mark's. The other tomb, in Gothic style, is of Doge Soranzo (+328).

Tesoro. The door into the Treasury is in the S. transept. (Adm., 12 to 2 daily, 25 c; see above.) It contains sacred reliquaries, and other objects of art. This treasury became at various times very opulent, and formed a sort of reserve fund on which the State drew in great emergencies. In 1797 most of the available articles were turned into money, and the valuable objects which remain were deposited at the Mint; they have been of late years arranged here, and offer the richest collection in existence of ancient Byzantine jewellery. The relies, which are only shown on Oct. 30th, include a bit of the dress of our Saviour, a small quantity of earth imbued with His blood, a fragment of the pillar to which He was bound: a portion of the true cross, enclosed in a *reliquary, presented in 1120 to Santa Sofia at Constantinople by the Empress Irene, wife of Alexis Comneaus. Among the most interesting objects exposed are two candelabra ascribed to Benvenuto Cellini, the sword of Doge Morosmi, and a stone seat which bears the name of the Cattedra di Sun Marco, and is said to be St. Mark's own chair as bishop. It is at any rate of extreme antiquity, and probably dates from the 6th or 7th cent. Four book-covers, in a glass case; enamelled Byzantine work, from S. Sofia; domed Tabernacle of Greek marble; paliotto of gilded silver, placed before the high altar on high festivals, and adorned with single figures of Saints; another of 1400, with fewer figures in higher relief, used for minor feasts. In the middle of the room, agate chalices from Constantinople; two jugs of tories. Egyptian alabaster, vessels of onyx, with bilingual inscription in caneiform and hieroglyphics. Greek tapestry in gold thread, representing the archangels Michael and Gabriel; handsome Cross and Pastoral Staff: richly wrought enamels,+

Pavement. - The marqueterie in marble, called vermicolato, which forms the pavement of St Mark's, is not only remarkable for the beauty and richness of the patterns, but for the symbols and allegories supposed to be contained in the various devices. The following are given as instances: The round, well-fed, sleek Lion on the sea, and the lean, meagre Lion on the land, denoted what would be the fate of Venice if she deserted the profits of her maritime commerce for the vain-glories of territorial conquest. Two cocks carrying off a fox indicate the conquest and capture of the crafty Lodovico Sforza by the two Gallie monarchs, Charles VII. and Louis XII. The frequent unevenness of the floor speaks only too plainly of the instability of the foundation, but a considerable portion of the pavement has been restored.

The Churches of Venice may be grouped into four principal styles, which, amongst themselves, are very uniform. The 1st is a peculiar Gothic, generally plain, massive, and solemn (Frari). The 2nd is here termed Lombard, but is a revival of the Romanesque style in the 15th cent. (Meracoli). The 3rd is classical-Italian, properly so called - of which the principal examples in the sacred edifices here are Palladian (Redentors). The last is the modern Italian : sometimes overloaded with superfluous ornament (Salute).

Perhaps no city in Italy, not even Rome itself, possessed formerly so many churches in proportion to its population. It was the policy of the Venetians that every shool and island should have its mother Church, surrounded by a bost of munor or

- f. Alvise (A. 4) has on its entrance wall eight panels, attributed by Ruskin to Carpaccio, but very inferior works of some very inferior painter. A fine Calvary and other Passion Scenes by Tispolo at the end of the nave and on the rt. in the Choir.
- L Angelo Raffiele (D. 2). Here are two large paintings of the Last Supper by Bonifasio Venesiano, one at the end of each aisle—S. side the best. On the pulpit are some good wooden reliefs of 1687, spoilt by paint and gilding in 1729 Procession of Apostles, Virgins, and Prophets; Disputation in the Temple; SS. Peter, Paul, and Latin Fathers.
- 5. Autonino (C. 6). Entombment, by Lassaro Sebastiani, at the end of the rt, sisle.
- 48. Aposteli (B. 5) was rebuilt in 1750. The *Cappella Cornaro on the B. side belongs to the older building, and was erected in 1575 by Guglieluso Bergamasco. Fanciful Corinthian pillars, half fluted vertically and half spirally, support it. Here are the tombs of Marco Cornaro, father of Catharine, Queen of Cyprus, and of Giorgio her brother.
- 8. Bartalemmen, close to the Goldoni Statue (C. 5), is interesting as the Church for which Albert Dürer painted his beautiful Virgin and Child (1506), now at Prague. It stood at the end of the rt. aisle. On the W. wall, beside the organ, and beyond the 1st chapel rt. and l., are large single figures of SS. Louis, Sinibaldo, Sebastian, and Bartholomew, by Seb. del Piombo.
- Biagio, close to the Steamboat Stat. (D. 7), has on the l. the recumbent effigy of Adm. Angelo Emo, by Giov. Ferrari-Toreti, master of Canova (1792).
- I Carmini (C. D. S) is a fine Church founded in the 14th cent., spoilt by tawdry decorations, with a modern as finished façade. The curious sculptures of birds and animals built up - into the N. porch are said to have come from Aquileis. At the 2nd altar on the rt. is the "Nativity, by Cima da Conegliano: at the last, the Presentation in the Temple, by Tintorette. At the 2nd altar on the l., St. Nicholas, with Saints and Angels, and a fine effect of dawn breaking over the sea, by Lor. Lotto. To the l. in the Campo is the Scuola dei Carmini, with some good paintings by Tiepolo (key in the Sacristy, 50 c.). At the N. end of the adjacent Campo S. Margherita (No. 7) is the Chiesa Evangelica, with some currous carvings, and a row of heads under the caves towards the Bridge.

- II. Cassiano (B. 4), rebuilt for the sixth time in 1611, beyond the Rialto Bridge, has three paintings by Tintoretto in the apse; the Crucifixion, Descent into Hades, and Resurrection At the 1st altar on the rt. Palma Vecchio's *St. John the Baptist, with SS. Peter, Mark, Andrew, and Paul Under the pulpit are two columns of verde antico.
- S. Catarina (A. B. 5), contains an excellent picture by P. Veroness—the Marriage of the Saint.
- 3. Fantino (C. 5), a well-proportioned building in the Renaissance style, by one of the Lombardi. The Choir is an excellent work of Sansovino (1538), and has two monuments, probably by Tullio Lombardo (1517). On its rt. wall is a small Holy Family, School of Giov. Bellini. On the high altar, pulpit, and pavement, are several fragments of porphyry, granite, serpentine, and ancient marbles.

In a Court, a few yds. W., is a house front with cannons and balla, and a bronse profile bust of Massis, commemorating the resistance of Venice to the Austrians in 1849.

At the holy-water basins are bronze statuettes of St. Francis and St. John Bapt., by A Vittoria. 1st chapel rt. Last Supper, by F. Santacroce 4th. The *Frari (S. M. Gloriosa de Frari) was designed by Niccolò Pisano, about 1250 (C. 3). The front is not pleasing; it exhibits too much bare wall, and has a bad outline. The nave and aisles are 230 ft. long by 104 ft., the transepts, 160 ft. by 48 ft., with three | Giovane. On the rt. in the transe

Having belonged to the Franciscans, whose churches were favourite burying-places, it contains several tombs of historical interest mounting the basins for holy water are bronze statuettes by Girolamo Campaqua-St. Anthony and Innocence.

On the rt is the colossal *Monu-MENT OF TITIAN, who died here of the pest, in his ninety-ninth year, in 1576. It was completed at the expense of the Emperor Ferdinand I. of Austria, and uncovered in 1853. Upon a massive basement rises a highly decorated Corinthian canopy, under which is a sitting statue of the painter crowned with laurel are reliefs of his three greatest works -the Assumption of the Virgin, Death of St. Peter Martyr, and Martyrdom of St. Lawrence. There are several statues allegorical to the Arts, on either side, and two on the basement; one holding the inscription Tiliano monumentum erectum sit Ferdinandus I., 1839; the old man holding a book, on which is written, Eques of Comes Titianus sit. Carolus V., 1553, at whose feet is a volume inscribed, Canones et Decreta Concilii Tridentini, is intended for Fra Paolo Sarpi The statue of Titian and the two just mentioned, are by Zandomeneghi, who was also the principal designer of the monument. Lorenzo Bregni: on his l. is a fine one of Mars, by Baccio da Montelupo. The Bregni, who flourished about the latter part of the 15th and the beginning of the 16th cents., were members of one of the families of artists, of which there were many in Italy, amongst whom art was so successfully carried on by tradition. Paolo was an architect; Antonio, his brother, a sculptor; and both worked upon these tombs. Lorenzo Bregni, not less eminent, lived a generation later. On the l. of the entrance to the sacristy is an equestrian statue of Paolo Savelli, a condottiere, who fell in battle, fighting against Francesco Carrara, in 1405.

In the Sacristy is a beautiful *painting over the altar by Giovanni Bellini (1488) — Virgin and Child, with SS. Ambrose, Augustine, James, and Benedict; below, two exquisite Angels; handsome frame.

In the 2nd chapel rt. of the choir is a good Gothic tomb of Duccio degli Alberti, a Florentine Ambassador (1336).In the Tribune are two splendid monuments: on the rt. that of the unfortunate Doge Francesco Foscari (1457)—an exceeding noble elevation by Ant. Rizzo, with 18 statues. Lord Byron's tragedy has rendered the history of the Foscari family familiar to the English reader. Opposite is the *tomb of the Doge Niccold Tron (1472), by Antonio Rizzo, 27 ft. in width and more than 40 in height, with five stories and 19 figures, besides a profusion of reliefs and other ornaments.

The high altar was erected in 1516. The Assumption of the Virgin is by Salviati.

The *apse, with its traceried windows, has the peculiarity of ending with an angle at the middle. Choir extends across the transept and for some distance into the nave, a very unusual arrangement in Italian churches, though common in Spain, and partly adopted in Westminster Abbey. The *stalls are of excellent woodwork, the backs inlaid, or worked in tarsia, by Marco da Vicenza (1468). Above, heads of Saints; below, archi-A *door on each tectural scenes. side outside the choir, near the projecting pulpits, is beautifully inlaid with tarsia, and has a border of vines, exquisitely carved. The marble screen before the choir has low reliefs of saints and prophets, of the 15th cent.; the rood-screen are indifferent statues.

In the 1st chapel l. of the high altar is a *Virgin and Child by Bernardino Licinio, "his best altar-piece," Cic. The Saints are Francis, Anthony of Padua, Louis, Andrew, Jerome, and three others. Next comes the monument of Melchior Trevisano (1500), by Dentone; the statue above is in complete armour. The St. John, in wood, over the altar, is by Donatello. There is some good painted glass by Maestro Marco (1335), in the corner chapel opening into the l. transept. In the next chapel in the corner is an *altarpiece, by Luigi (Alvise) Vivarini, completed by Basaiti: St. Ambrose on the episcopal seat, with SS. Catharine, Sebastian, John Bapt., Gregory, Augustine, Jerome, and two others; two warriors guard the throne; above, in a balcony, the Crowning of the Virgin.

On the W. wall of the l. transept is a monument by one of the Lombardi (15th cent.); raised by Maffeo Zen to his wife Generosa Orsini; beside it, an altar-piece in three compartments of St. Mark, with SS. John Baptist, Jerome, Augustine, and Matthew, by *B. Vivarini (1474).

In a Chapel opening out of the l. aisle, through a lofty Gothic arch, is a font with a statue of St. John the Baptist, by Sansovino; an Ancons with statues of St. Peter in the centre.

SS. Jerome, John Baptist, James, and Francis; above, half lengths of the Virgin and Child, with 88. Barbara, Catharine, M. Magdalene, and Chiara, by Jacobello dalle Massegne (1485). The tomb of Bishop Mians, with five statues, is probably by the same artist (1464). Further on is the monument, rich in Oriental marbles, of Jacopo Pesaro (1547). Over the Pesaro altar is the votive picture by *Titian, called the Pala dei Pesari, the property of the Pesaro family. The Virgin is seated in an elevated situation, within noble architecture, with the Infant in her arms, who turns to St. Francis; below is St. Peter with a book; on one side of him St. George bearing a standard, on which are emblazoned the Pesaro arms, with those of Pope Alexander VI.; below are the donatario, a bishop, and five other members of the Pesaro family-"a work of quite unfathomable beauty, but greatly injured by restoration."-Cio. Titian received, in 1519, 102 golden ducats for this work, including six for the frame.

The stupendous but tasteless monument of the Doge Giovanus Pesaro (1659) is supported by colossal Moors or Negroes, dressed in white markle; their black elbows and knees protruding through the rents of their white jackets and trousers. In the centre sits the Doge. The architect was Longhena, the sculptor Barthel.

The fine detached bell-tower was commenced in 1361 by Jacopo, and finished in 1396 by Pietro Paolo della Massegne. The octagonal upper part is a familiar landmark in this part of Venice.

The Venetian Archives (daily from 10 to 3), are deposited in the old conventual buildings of the Fran. Their bulk is appalling: they are said to fill 295 rooms, and to consist of upwards of 14 millions of documents, extending from A.D. 883 to the present time. They have been formed from the collections of suppressed monastic establishments, from the records of noble Venetian families, and from the ancient diplomatic archives of the Republic.

I Gesuati (S. M. del Rosario), a Church of the 18th cent., in bad taste, on the quay opposite the Giudecca (D. 4). The Ciberio on the high alter has colonnettes encrusted with lapis lazult. At the 1st altar rt, is a striking picture by Tiepolo the Virgin, with SS. Catharine of Siena, Agues of Monteputciano, and Rosa, who carries the Child. On the ceiling, the Glory of St. Dominic, Institution of the Rosary, and St. Dominic blessing Fra Paolo. The Crucifixion, in the last chapel L, is by Jacopo Tintoretto. 1st. specimen of the theatrical and meretricious taste of the order. The walls are encrusted with coloured marbles in flowers. At the pulpit, marble similarly treated is made to imitate curtains, and on the altar steps a carpet. The tabernacle is enriched with lapis lazuli.

In the chapel on the l. of the high altar is the tomb of Doge Cicogna (1595), by G. Campagna, and in that on the rt. the mausoleum erected to Orazio Farnese by the senate in 1676. In the 1st chapel rt. is a painting of Tobias and the Archangel, by Palma Giovane, and opposite on the l. an entirely repainted and ruined work by Titian, the Martyrdom of St. Laurence. In the l. transept is an Assumption, by Tintoretto. The columns of the great altars in the transepts are of Serravezza marble.

Nearly opposite is the Oratorio del Crocifisso, containing some large ceremonial paintings of the late Venetian School, and a Scourging of Christ on hinges, attributed to Tintoretto.

8. Giacomo dell' Orio (B. 4) is a very curious old Church, rebuilt at different periods, with a fine wooden Entering by the S. door, immediately to the rt. is a rich fragment of a carved gilt ceiling; beneath it, St. John Baptist, by Fr. Bassano. Close by to the l., a handsome column of verde antico. Further l., Laurence, Sebastian, and Roch, finely coloured, by Buonconsiglio. In a dark chapel behind the fantastically shaped pulpit, Virgin and Child, with SS. James, Andrew, Cosma, and Damiano, by Lor. Lotto (1546).

S. Giacomo di Rialto (B. 5), close to the bridge, occupies the site of the first Church built in Venice (421). It was rebuilt in 1194, and again in 1531, in the old form, as stated in an inscription in the portico. It is now closed as unsafe, and its works of art have been removed.

In the Campo, in front, is the old roken statue of a crouching figure, lled Il Gobbo del Rialto, and near it red granite column, from which the laws of the Republic were promulgated.

Renaissance; on it are statues of SS. Anthony, Bernardino, and Louis of Toulouse. Near the 3rd altar on the rt. is the hideous monument of Count d'Argenson by the Parisian Claude Perrault, in which two crowned basilisks are seen looking up in a comical manner at a little angel 4th altar, SS. slumbering above. Andrew, Peter, and Nicolas, with an angel, by Paris Bordone. In the chapel rt. of the choir is a Nativity, by Savoldo, whose works are very rare. In the Sacristy, Annunciation with SS. Anthony and Michael, by the Vivarini; the Marriage of St. Catharine, by Previtali; and a portrait of the Doge Cristoforo Moro by Gentile Bellini. The arabesque reliefs in the Lombardi style (1470) on the pilasters, frieze, and arches of the choir deserve particular notice. There are statues and medallions of the Evangelists borne by angels. Behind the altar are well-carved stalls. A large slab in the centre of the Choir, with a most beautiful border of oak foliage, marks the tomb of Doge Cristoforo (1462-1470), a great patron of learning and the arts, in whose reign printing was introduced into Venice. has been conjectured that this 'Moro,' or a member of his family, was the 'Moor of Venice,' and that 'Othello' is a corruption of 'Tofallo,' the Venetian diminutive of 'Cristoforo." will be observed that the heraldic arms here are mulberries, not strawberries, as on Othello's handkerchief in Shakespeare. The chapel at the end of the l. aisle is richly decorated. The alto-relievo of St. Peter in the 1st chapel l. is by Antonio Rossellino, with statues of St. Basil and angels. In the 2nd are good statues of SS. Francis and Authory, by the Lore bardi; and on the vault five circular reliefs of the Almighty and the Evangelists, in Robbia ware, the rest of the roof being in chequered tile-work, Crossing a bridge to the other side of the Canareggio, the traveller may visit the Ghetto or Jews' quarters, where there are several Synagogues, that of the Spanish Hebrews being the most remarkable.

San Giorgio de' Greci (C. 6), the Church of the Greek rite, was erected in 1570, by Sante Lombardo, from the designs of Sansovino. Medallions of mosaic adorn the front. On the iconostasis which separates the sanctuary from the nave are paintings covered with silver, having crowns and other ornaments of gold attached to them, and leaving hardly anything visible but the faces The mosaic of the Transfiguration, to the rt. of the screen, is a fine work of the Zuccati. On festivals the singing, without organ accompaniment, is very attractive. In an adjacent building are several MSS., including a Ravenna papyrus of 558, and three 10th-cent. Greek Gospels. The campanile was erected in 1590. On the N. side of the bridge is a very picturesque housefront,

*Ban Giorgio Maggiore (D. 6). This fine edifice, on the island of the same name, was designed by Pulladio, and begun in 1556, though the front was not completed vil 1610. The bronze angel at each side of the altar, the brackets, and the bandsome candelabra, are by Niccolò Roccatagliata (1598). A door on the rt, on entering the choir leads into a cortidor, in which is a monument erected in 1657, from the design of Longhena, to the memory of Doge Don.enico Michiel, who abdicated in 1130, and died in a convent the same year. It was this doge who urged the Venetians to co-operate in the crusade, and who brought both the columns on the Piazzetta. He is styled on this monument, Gracorum In the chapel on the l. of the choir is the Resurrection, by Tintoretto; and in the N. transept the Martyrdom of St. Stephen, also by him; in the 2nd altar from the door a statue of the Virgin and Child, by Campagna; and in that next the door the Martyrdom of St. Lucia, by Leandro Bassano. Over the principal entrance is the monument to Dogs Donato (1612), the supporter of Fra Paolo Sarpi in his discussions with Rome on the rights of the Republic; and on the l. of the door is the tomb of Doge M. A. Memmo (1615). The portico and refectory to the monastery are amongst the last works of Palladio. The election and coronstion of Pope Pius VII, took place bete in 1800.

The Scuola in the upper story has a splendid ceiling by Palma—St. Trifone, the Virgin and Child, God the Father, Evangelists, SS. Barbara and Jerome. Over the altar, coloured reliefs of St. George. with SS. Jerome and Trifone below. Ruskin has given an elaborate account of these pictures, for which a fine day should be chosen, as the church is very dark.

A few yds. E. is the Church of the Knights of Malta, San Giovanni dei Furlani, which contains, on the l. wall, a monument to Archduke Frederick of Austria, who died at Venice in 1847, aged 26. The high altar was brought from the demolished Church of S. Gemignano, and has two colonnettes of verde antico, with Statuettes of SS. Theodore, John Baptist, and

On the predella, hardly visible, are events in the lives of these saints. On the pier at the rt. of the chief altar is a painting by *Cima da Conegliano, of St. Helena and Constantine at the Cross; and on the opposite pier is a Christ Triumphant, by L. Vivarini (1498). Behind the high altar is a large Baptism by *Cima. It has been much restored, and is badly seen, on account of the position of the altar, but "in the dignity of the head of Christ, in the beauty of the angels, and the solemn gesture of the Baptist, incomparable."-Cio. On the l. are large pictures by the younger Palma, Christ before Pilate, and the Washing of Feet. Also a *Last Supper by Paris Bordone, and a triptych by Bart. Vivarini (1478)—the Madonna, St. John Baptist, and St. Andrew. Below is a predella by Cima.

On the paliotto, Entombment relief, by Campagna. 2nd rt., Coronation of the Virgin, and the Apostles, relief by Tullio Lombardo, with clever management of perspective.

San Giovanni Elemosinario, W. of the Rialto (B. C., 5), built in the 16th cent., by Scarpagnino, contains at the high altar a fine picture of the Saint by *Titian, "an example of the grandeur and dignity with which Titian could invest any subject which he undertook" (K.) On the rt. *SS. Sebastian, Rocco, and Catharine, one of the finest works of Pordenone. On the left, the Blessing of a Doge, St. Mark, and the Patron Saint giving alms, by Marco Vecellio, Titian's nephew.

*8. Giovanni e Paolo (B. 6), better known as San Zanipolo (1246-1390), is a fine Italian-Gothic building with an unfinished front. The best part of the exterior is the restored E. end, which has two tiers of windows divided by a brick cornice, and there is a balustraded passage before the upper windows. Its length is 110 yds., breadth 30 yds., length of transepts 48 yds., height 123 ft. The principal door, with columns and sculptures, is in the Pointed style of the 13th cent. There are some rade reliefs of the 7th and 8th cent. let into the wall, and in the niches on the side of the door some tombs of doges of the 13th cent.

The Nave bas wide pointed arches on either side, and between the short transcrts rises a dome. The once handsome tribune has been sadly disfigured by the modern adaptation of Cornthian ornament.

On the rt., monument with 15 statues to Doge Pietro Mocenigo (1476) by Pietro (the father) and Autonio and Tullio Lombardo (the sons). Above it, a good relief of the Empty Tomb. Renaissance monument of Adm. Girolamo Campi (1535); below it, Christ between two flying Angels, relief of the 13th cent. Monument of the heroic Marcantonio Bragadino, who defended Famagosta in Cyprus against the Turks, by whom, on the surrender of the fortress (1571), he was put to torture, and then skinned alive, in violation of the terms of capitulation. The skin was stuffed with straw, and sent to Constantinople, where it was borne in triumph through the city. The Sultan afterwards sent it to the family, and it is enclosed in the urn underneath the bust.

First altar, Carpaccio or Giov. Bellini, Virgin and Child, with SS. Paul, Louis, Francis, John Baptist, Peter, Bernardino, Bonaventura, and Jerome, on the predella, Annunciation and Pieta, with SS. Christopher, Vincent Ferrar, and Sebastian. Further on, colossal monuments of Doges Silvestro and Bertuccio Valier (1658, 1700), and of Elisabetta, the wife of the former, by Tirali (1708). Next chapel, reliefs of St. Dominio, by Mazzu, five in bronze, the 1st on the rt, in wood. In the rt, transept near the angle, St. Augustine seated, by

B. Vivarmi (1473).

Over the door, tomb and statue of General Donigi Naldo (1510), by Lorenzo Bregno; on the rt. that of Niccold Orsini, Count of Pittighano (1509), both in the service of Venice of the primitive anatograpy. The primitive anatograpy of the state league of Cambrai; founder of the family was a bounder of the state of the primitive policy of the state like was the first of the newly-ennotied families admitted to the honours here.

In the first on the rt. are single figures of Saints, by Bouif izio Veneziano; an altar of black marble, with statues by Aless. Villoria; and a monument to "Odoardo (Edward) Windsor, Barom Anglo," The second chapel has an altar with statues of SS. Andrew and Philip in the style of the Lombardi; some tombs of the Guistiniani family; and a painting of the Virgin with three Camerlenghi kneeling before her, by Tistoretto.

On the rt, of the high altar is "the richest monument of the Gothic period in Venice" (Ruskin), that of the *Doge Michele Morosini (1082). In this doge's short reign of four months, Tenedos was captured. Next, that of Doge Leonardo Loredano (1521), one of the wisest of the princes of Venice, when her prudence and fortitude baffled the League of Cambrai. The design is by Girolamo Graphylia (1572). The statue of the Dogets by G. Campagna, the others by Danese Cattaneo. On the l., *recumbent effigy of Doge Andrea Vendramia (1478). "The reliefs and statuettes round the sarcophagus seem as if taken from the intaglio of a Greek gem, so pure is the outline, so graceful the invention, and so dignified the style."-Cicognara. It the N. transept is a marble group representing Vittore Capello receiving the baton of command from St. Helena, by Antonio Dentone (1480); the monument of Leonardo Prato (1511), with a good equestrian statue, and the Gothic tomb of two ladies of the Venier family; over the door is the tomb of Doge Antonio Venier The door leads into the (1400). Chapel of the Rosary, ruined by fire in 1867, when Titian's masterpiece, the Death of Peter Martyr, Bellini's Madonna, with ten saints and three singing angels, deposited here only temporarily, and other pictures, were destroyed. The Chapel was decorated with statues, mosaics, carved wood, and a series of *beautiful marble reliefs, the remains of which may still be seen on the walls. Fortunately good photographs of these had been taken before the fire, and are sold by the custodian. The architect of the chapel was A. Vittoria, and it was built as a thank-offering for the victory of Lepanto in 1571. In the relief of the Adoration, to the rt. of the altar, is a group of Bonassa, sculptor of this and the opposite Nativity, with his wife and daughters.

Beyond a Crucifixion by Tintoretto, ve reach the Sacristy door, above hich are the busts of Titian, Palma Vecchio, and Palma Giovane, both of whom are buried in front of the door.

In the Sacristy, Christ bearing the Cross, by Alvise Vivarini; Honorius III. approving of the Order of St. Dominic, by L. Bassano. Further on is the monument of Doge Pasquale Malipiero (1462). In subjacent niches are the tombs of Doge Michael Steno (in whose reign Padua was seized, and Francesco Carrara barbarously murdered in his prison), with the recumbent statue of the deceased (1413), and of Alvise Trevisan (1528). Then follow monuments of doges and generals: a gilded equestrian statue of Pompeo Giustiniani (1616); Doge Tommaso Mocenigo, by Pietro da Firenze and Martino da Fiesole (1423); and Doge Niccolò Marcello (1474), a fine specimen of the Lombardi style, by Alessandro Leopardi. At this altar stood Titian's St. Peter Martyr: an inferior copy occupies its place. Passing the equestrian statue of General Baglioni, killed in 1617, we reach a fine statue of St. Jerome, by Alessandro Vittoria, said to be a portrait of Titian. the l. of the principal door is the *monument of Doge Giovanni Mocenigo (1485), a fine work of Tullio Lombardo. *8. Maria dei Miracoli (B. 5), built between 1481 and 1489, has been well restored (1862-87). The Church was founded by Angelo Amadi, in honour of a miracle-working picture of the Virgin and Child with SS James and Anthony, and was originally attached to a Numbery of S Chiara.

The exterior, panelled all over with slabs of Greek and Carrara marble, exhibits a curious attempt to unite the Byzantine and Italian styles. The designs were carried into effect by Pietro Lombardo, and some portions are his own. Within, the ornaments of the raised presbytery, in the centre of which stands the high alter, have singular beauty, especially the arabesque reliefs on the columns.

wooden ceiling is painted with 50 heads of saints, by Pennacchi (1528). On the Choir-screen are statuettes of the Annunciation, and of SS Francis and Clara, by Girolamo Campagna. There is a beautiful Tabernacle on each side of the Choir arch, and a pe forated altar-screen. On the altar, bronze Statuettes of SS. Peter and Anthony the Hermit. In the Sacristy, good small reliefs of the Virgin and Child and of the Resurrection, in the passage, fragment of a rough 16th cent, relief of the Last Supper. Close to the church is a very fine Venetian Gothic doorway, with a courtyard containing an interesting well-mouth.

*8ta. Maria della Salute (D 5) was founded by decree of the senate in 1631, as a monument of thanksgiving after the cessation of the great pestilence, in which 60,000 of the inhabitants are said to have died It is a domed octagonal Church, out of which opens a deep recess, forming the Choir, erected under the direction of Baldassare Longhena. The dome is supported on pillars, outside which rans a passage with eight recesses, six of which are chapels, the others being occupied by the entrance and the Choir. In the chapels on the rt. are paintings, by Luca Giordano, of the Presentation in the Temple, Assumption, and Nativity of the Virgin

At the high altar is a marble group of the Madonna and an angel with a figure to represent the Pest fleeing in terror, in allusion to the foundation of the Church The four columns of white mottled marble which support the arch were taken from the Roman amphitheatre at Pola On the l is a large bronze candelabrum, by Andrea da Breseia. On the ceiling behind the high altar are paintings by G. Salviate, and around them are heads of the Evangelists, and Doctors of the Church by Titian, who has painted himself as St. Matthew (2nd medallion from the Sacristy, in a line with the doors.) The stalls are finely carved.

throne with SS. Cosma, Damiano, Roch, and Sebastian; an early work, painted while under the influence of Giorgione, and much restored. Opposite is a curious relief of the Deposition, attributed to A. Dentone. roof is also painted by Titian, with the Death of Abel, Sacrifice of Isaac, and David and Goliath. Over the altar is the Virgin and Child with Angels, by Padovanino; to the rt. of it, Holy Family, School of Bellini; above it, Virgin and Child Saints, School of Palma. O. On the rt. wall the *Marriage in Cana, by Tintoretto (1561)—a large, crowded picture, in which Christ is an insignificant figure at the distant end of the table; but the golden-haired Venetian women, filling the centre of the picture, are finely painted; beside it, Samson and Jonah, by Palma Giovane; below Jonah, St. Sebastian, by Basaiti; to the l. of the altar, a curious Ancona, the Virgin and Child, with SS. Cyprian and Benedict, and lunette of the Almighty with Angels, by Cristoforo da Parma (1495). Abraham and Melchisedec and the Triumph of David on the opposite wall are by Salviati, who also painted the three large pictures on the entrance wall. Below them, Girolamo da Treviso, S. Rocco, with SS. Jerome and Sebastian; Pennacchi, Virgin and Child; and four Heads of the Madonna, by Sassoferrato. An inner room contains four *altar frontals, one of which, wrought in tapestry with the Descent of the Holy Spirit, was designed by Titian.

In the Church, 3rd chapel 1., is the same subject by Titian, painted in his 74th year.

The conventual buildings have been converted into the Seminario Patriarcale, on the 1st floor of which is the Pinacoteca Manfredini (see below). In the Cloisters are fragments of sculpture, sepulchral and others, of artistical and historical interest, removed from desecrated Churches, including the fine sepulchral urn, brought from the Frari, of Doge F. Dandolo (14th cent.), with relief of the Death of the Virgin, and other subjects. In the Oratory is the tomb of Sansovino, N. Italy.

and over it a terra-cotta bust by A. Vittoria. Sansovino's remains, after having lain for 250 years in the Church of S. Geminiano, were removed here in 1820.

- S. M. Zobenigo (D. 4) has curious plans of towns carved in stone panels on its front—Zara, Candia, Padua, Rome, Corfù, and Spalato. Above are naval battles. In the 1st chapel on the rt. is an old Byzantine Madonna, and in the Sacristy a good Holy Family of the School of Rubens.
- S. Martino (C. 7) has over the N. door a Last Supper by Gir. da Santacroce; and on the E. side an oblong font, with statuettes of SS. John Bapt. and Peter, and four angels below, by Tullio Lombardo. The ceiling is painted by Tiepolo, with clever effect of perspective.

San Moisè (C., D. 5), with a florid over-decorated front of 1688. A small lozenge slab in the floor six paces within the entrance marks the grave of John Law, originator of the South Sea scheme, who died here in 1729, and whose remains were transferred from S. Geminiano, by his descendant, Marshal Lauriston, governor of Venice in 1808.

San Pantaleone (C. 3) was built in 1668. On the roof is an enormous painting of the Glorification of the Saint, by A. Fumiani (1690), "on surfaces of linen nailed up," Cic. the 2nd chapel on the rt. is S. Pantaleone healing a child, by P. Veronese; and in a chapel to the l. of the high altar, the Coronation of the Virgin, by G. and A. da Murano (1444), with numerous Saints, among which the Evangelists and Latin Doctors occupy the foreground (much repainted). The finely worked Gothic altar has a relief of the Entombment. E. of this is a closed chapel arranged in the form of the Holy House at Loreto, with a statue of the Virgin and Child.

La Pietà (C. 6) has in a gallery over the entrance the *Supper in the House of the Pharisee, one of the finest works of Moretto. On the ceiling, Victory of Faith, by Tiepolo.

San Pietro di Castello (C. 8), on an island which forms the extreme E. part of Venice, was the Cathedral from the earliest times of the Republic down to 1807. The campanile of Istrian marble (1474) is fine. The front was erected in 1594; the interior, by Grapiglia, between that period and 1621. Near the 2nd altar on the rt. is an ancient episcopal seat, said to have been that of St. Peter, at Antioch, and given by the Emp Michael III. to Doge Tradonico, in the middle of the 9th cent. back of it is inscribed with Arabic characters, and seems to have been an Arabian or Moorish grave-stone 3rd altar, Marco Basniti, St. Peter enthroned with SS. Andrew, Magno, James, and Anthony "excellent," Cic. On the W wall is St. George on horseback, by the same artist (1520), "lovely even in its injured condition," Cic. Behind the high altar is a bust of Lorenzo Giustiniani, first patriarch of Venice (1447), afterwards canonised, who is represented on the rt. as praying for the cessation of the pest, and on the l. as distributing alms. The Vendramin chapel in the l. transept, richly adorned with statues, reliefs, and marbles, but not in good style, was designed by Longhena. Here 15 Luca Giordano's picture of the Madoona and Purgatory. In the chapel of Ognissanti, opening out of the l. nisle, is a mosaic of Paradise, by Zuocate (1575) after a design by Tintoretto.

*Redentore (E. 4), on the island of Giudecca, an ex-voto built by the Republic after the staying of the plague of 1576, was begun by Palladio by in the following year, and is considered the finest of his ecclesiastical edifices. It has the advantage of a commanding situation upon the broad canal; the front exhibits columns and plasters of the composite order, supporting a pediment over a doorway reached by a flight of steps, and wings resting on Corinthian columns. "It has a fine, wide, single nave. The termination of the choir wants consequence, and the plain whitewashed wall, behind the semicircular screen of columns, is absolately disagreeable. The supports of the dome are good, and have no sppearance of insufficiency." Woods. 1st altar rt., Nativity, by F. Bassano; 3rd, Flagellation, by Tintoretto: 3rd 1., Deposition, by Palma Giarane; 2nd, Resurrection, by F. Bassam: 1st, Ascension, by Tintoretto. In the sacristy, *Virgin with the Child asleep, and two angels, probably by Alvise Vicarini; Madouna between SS. John the Evangelist and Catharine, attributed to Bissolo; and another between SS. Jerome and Francis, by a pupil of Bellini. The high altar, an elaborate structure of marble, has bronze statues of St. Francis and St. Mark, by G. Campagna, who also executed the bronze crucifix.

The island of La Giudecca was originally called Spinalunga: it received its present name when the Jews obtained permission to settle on it.

San Rocco (C. 3), built to contain the relics of the patron Saint by Bartol. Bon in 1489, was rebuilt in 1725, on the original plan. The poor front was added 50 years later. On the rt. of the nave, Christ healing the sick; above it, St. Roch in a landscape both by Tintoretto. On the l., Money changers in the Temple, by an inferior painter; above it, *SS. Martin and Christopher, with St. Roch and peasants at the side, by Pordenone. At the end of the rt. assle, * Titian, Our Lord dragged to execution, a very early picture, much injured. Under the pulpit, a marble relief in imitation. The high altar was designed by Bartol Bon. The statue of S. Rocco is by Bon, those of SS. Sebastian and Pantaleone by Moschino Left of the chief door is a fresco of S. Rocco before the Pope, by Tintoretto.

Magdalene, St. Mary of Egypt, Circumcision, and Assumption. The statue of S. Rocco, on the altar, is by Campagna. On the staircase, Visitation, by Tintoretto; *Annunciation, by Titian. Passing through an arch of white marble, adorned with reliefs, we enter the upper Sala, filled with paintings by Tintoretto; *Miracle of the Loaves and Fishes, *Last Supper, *Resurrection, Raising of Lazarus, Christ on the Mount of Olives, the Birth, Baptism, and Ascension of Christ, Temptation by the Devil, and Pool of Bethesda. At the altar, S. Rocco in glory, by Tintoretto; at the side, SS. John the Baptist and Sebastian, by G. Campagna. Round this hall are carvings in wood, by Francesco Pianta, and Michel Angelo, a Floren-The ceiling in compartments, Tintoretto, contain subjects all by from the Old Testament, with works in chiaroscuro at the corners. Over the doorway is a *portrait of Tintoretto, painted by himself at 66 years of age. In the Cancelleria is an Ecce Homo, an early picture by Titian. In the Sala dell' Albergo, so called because the fraternity received their guests here, is a *Crucifixion, considered as the masterpiece of Tintoretto (1565), showing great powers of invention and composition. other subjects in this room are Christ before Pilate, Mount Calvary, and the Crowning with Thorns. On the ceiling, St. Roch in Glory, by Tintoretto. The wood panelling here is very fine. The confraternita of San Rocco consists of 300 members, and was founded in 1415. The Union became a very powerful body, to which the wealthiest citizens belonged, and it acquired a separate administration and jurisdiction. It was abolished under the French rule, but revived in 1806, and still exists.

*San Salvatore (C. 5) was commenced in 1506, and completed by Tullio Lombardo and Sansovino about 1534; the heavy front was added in 1663 by Sardi. Two previous Churches had been built upon this site, one of which dated from the 10th cent. The nave has a series of recesses, the farthest of which is longer than the others; each intersection is covered with a little dome, and each dome is crowned with a small The piers which separate lantern. these transepts are perforated in both directions with a small arch. lights are kept high, and the general effect is very good.

Beyond the 1st altar rt. is a monument of Andrea Dolfin and his wife, by Giulio del Moro (1602). The 2nd altar, and the statue of the Madonna and Child, are by Campagna. Then comes the splendid *monument with recumbent effigy of Doge Francesco Venier (1556) by Sansovino, executed in his 80th year, but exhibiting no mark of decaying powers. In niches are statues of Charity and Prudence, and in the lunette a Pietà. At the next altar, designed by Sansovino, is an Annunciation, by Titian, painted when he was nearly 90 years of age.

In the rt. transept, in the centre of a Corinthian portico flanked by tombs of cardinals, is the monument of Catharine Cornaro, Queen of Cyprus. She was buried in the Church of the Apostoli, and her remains were afterwards transferred hither. The relief represents her delivering up her crown to Doge Barbarigo. It was by showing her portrait to the young Lusignar that her uncle Andrea Corner, then in exile at Cyprus, excited first the passion of the prince. Lusignan was then Archbp, of Nicosia, and being - illegitimate, without pretensions to the throne: but the protection of the Soldan of Egypt, the support of the Republic, and the favour of Pope Pius V, a strange communation, enabled him to win the crown. Catharine was solemuly adopted as the daughter of the Republic, and given with a rich dowry to the archbishop, who had ascended the throne as King James Lusignan II., but died within two years of his marriage. A posthamous child was the fruit of this union, who, proclaimed as James III., died an infant in 1475; and the Republic, as the grandfather of the minor, claiming his inheritance, the daughter of Venice was forced to abdicate, her dear mother, the Republic, obtaining the sovereignty. This took place in 1489, and Catharine, abandoning her kingdom, retired to the castle at Asolo with the empty title of Queen, which she retained until her death, surrounded by a diminutive court, of which the celebrated Pietro Bembo, afterwards Cardinal, formed a part.

Over the high altar is the Transfiguration, by Tilian, also a work of his declining years; behind this is a *Pala of embossed silver, executed in 1290, a very remarkable specimen of Venetian work—It is uncovered only at Christmas, Easter, Whitsuntide, and on the 6th Aug. (Transfiguration), the Dedication Feast of the Church. (At other times, fee of 10 fr., It represents the Transfiguration, with eight Saints—the Virgin and Child with eight half-lengths above, and weighs

In the Chapel to the rt. of the Choir is a large Martyrdom of St Theodore, by Bonifazio Veneziano. To the 1 of the high altar is a very fine picture of the *Supper at Emmans, by Calena or Benedotto Diana. The seated figure in black on the rt. is said to represent Giov. Bellini; that in red, standing, Doge Leonardo Loredan. On the doors of the Organ, St.

Jerome and Lawrence) In the l. transept are tombs of the Cornari, called Corner in their native city, and further W. the monments of Doges Lorenzo and Girolamo Priuli, in black marble, with statues of their patron saints above That of St. Jerome is by Tommuso Lombardo; the altar frame by Guglielmo Bergamasco (1550).

S. Maria degli Scalsi (B. 3), the Church of the Barefooted Friars, close to the Rly. Stat., built in 1680. Longhena was the architect, Surdi designed the front (1689), now restored, and Pozzo the internal decorations. The wails are vencered with Italian marbles, and the altars overladen with ornament in the taste of the period. In the ceiling of the 1st altar 1., *Angels with instruments of the Passion, by Tiepolo, admirably foreshortened. Behind the high altar, Virgin and Child, School of Givranni Bellini, on wood, much eaten.

Lodovico Mania (1802), the last of the Doges, is buried in front of the 2nd altar 1 The inscription, ETER-NITATI SUE MANINI (INERES, is singularly affecting. Manin, a weak and honest man, was unequal to the exigencies of the times, and when required to take the oath of allegiance to the Austrian Emperor he dropped senseless upon the ground, so poignantly did he feel his country's misfortunes.

*San Sebastiano (D. 2, 3) was built by F. Castiglions of Cremona (1506), except the front, which is attributed to Sansovino (1548). It is the burial-place of Poolo Veronese. For the inscription to his memory might be substituted the well-known epitaph of Wren, for the Church contains some of the best productions in his first manner. On the ceiling, Esther before Ahasuerus, her Coronation, and the Triumph of Mordecai over Haman. 1st altar rt., St. Nicholas, painted by Titian in his 86th year; 2nd, a small Virgin and Child with S. Colomba and a portrait of Fra Michele Spaventi, the rpainter's Confessor, by P. Veronese; 3rd, a fine group of the Madonna, Child, and St. John, by Tommaso Lombardo; 4th, Crucifixion, by P. Veronese, and figures of St. Anne and St. Joseph, by A. Vittoria. The *large monument to Bishop Prodocataro is by Sansovino (1556). High altar, Virgin and Child, with SS. Catharine, John Bapt., Sebastian, Francis, and Peter: on the rt. Martyrdom of S. Sebastian; on the l. that of *SS. Marcus and Marcellinus, all by P. Veronese. 4th 1., fine bust of a Grimani, and small figures of SS. Mark and Anthony the Abbot, by A. Vittoria. On the doors of the organ, Purification, with Nativity below; inside, Raising Lazarus, by P. Veronese; below on the rt., bust of the Painter, by Bozzetti, with a most inflated inscription; and on the pavement in front of it, a sepulchral slab covering his grave, upon which is inscribed the day of his death (May 14, 1588). The roof of the Sacristy has fine frescoes of the Coronation of the Virgin, and the Four Evangelists. The Baptism in the Jordan, at the 3rd altar on the l., is also by P. Veronese.

San Silvestro (C. 4) has at the 1st altar 1., a picture by G. Santacroce, Thomas Becket, with SS. Matthew, John Baptist, Francis, and Theodore; opposite is the Baptism of Christ, the lower part by Tintoretto.

Santo Stefano (C. 4) a handsome Gothic Church, with a leaning Tower of brick, was built by the Augustinian friars in 1294-1320, and has been restored. The fine *portal is attributed to the Massegne. The interior consists of a nave and aisles, with a fine wooden roof, six good pointed arches on either side, and boldly carved capitals—which, as well as the billet hood-moulding over the arches, are in blue and gold. To the l. of the door is the tomb of *Jacopo Suriano, a physician of the 16th cent. In the centre, near the W. end, is the slab-tomb in bronze relief of Doge Fr. Morosini, surnamed Peloponesiaco (1694). 3rd altar 1., SS. Paul and Jerome, by P. Lombardo. Beside the high altar are statues of the Apostles and Augustinian Saints; 1., Niccolò Tolentino, Giov. da San Facundo; rt., Imbania, Simpliciano; with reliefs of the Evangelists and medallions of SS. Augustine and Stephen, by Vittore Camelio (1475). Two handsome bronze candelabra of 1577, and beautifully carved Stalls, by Marco Veneziano (1488). The statues of Augustine and his mother Monica are in bronzed wood. Near the Sacristy door, bronze relief of the Virgin and Child with two Saints by Jacopo Suriani. In the Sacristy, Virgin and Child, with SS. Joseph, Mary Magdalene, and Catharine, School of Palma; marble statuettes of SS. John Bapt. and Anthony of Padua, by Pietro Lombardo; SS. Nicholas and Laurence on gold ground, by Bart. Vivarini.

The red flagstaff in the Campo commemorates the birthplace and burial of Francesco Morosini, and the union of Venetia to the kingdom of Italy. The adjoining *Cloister was erected in 1532. On its E. wall is the sarcophagus of Doge Andrea Con-It was during his tarini (1382). reign that the Venetians recovered their supremacy over the Genoese by the victory of Chioggia (1380). the cloister are some scanty remains of frescoes by Pordenone, as to which the story runs that he was armed as he worked, for fear of being attacked by Titian. Over a doorway leading N. from the Cloister (looking back) is a coloured relief of St. Augustine with attendant friars of his Order; and in the adjacent Campo S. Angelo is a sitting marble Btatue

Spirito Santo (D. 4). 3rd altar rt., Christ between SS. Jerome and Secundus, finely coloured, by Buonconsiglio.

I Tolentini (C. 3) "is perhaps one of the best works of Scamozzi. The front is a handsome portico of six Corinthian columns. The nave has three chapels on each side the transept, and a dome at the intersection; the choir is somewhat harrower than the have " Woods. The front was, however, altered by Andrea Tirali, by whom the building was completed after the death of Scamozzi. In the first chapel on the rt., Padoranino, Two scenes from the life of S. Andrea Avellano. 3rd chapel, Herodias and the Feast of Herod, by Bonifazio Ven.

88. Gervasio e Protasio (D. 3), corrupted into San Tropaso, is a Palladian building of 1583. In the Chapel of the 1, transept is a sculptured altarpiece, probably by Sansocino (1540). At an altar in the rt, transept, *three reliefs of singing angels by Domatello. On the wall close by Virgin and Child, School of Bellini The Crucifixion in the chapel rt. of the high altar is by Domenico Tintoretto; on the wall l. of it, a good half-length of Christ bound, School of Palma. To the l. of the high altar, Temptation of St. Anthony, by Tintoretto, where is also a good S Crisogono on horseback, of the Florentine School. In the l. transept, Last Supper and Washing of the Feet of the Apostles, both by Jacopa Tintoretto.

8. Vitale (D. 4) has a fine painting behind the altar by *Carpaccio the Saint in armour on horseback, with his mother Valeria, his sons Gervasius and Protasius, SS. George, John Bapt., and others (1514).

San Zaccaria (C. 6), in a remarkable transition style from Gothic to Remaissance (1456-1515), by Martino Lombardo. The W. front is somewhat later. The *Statue of St. Zachamas over the entrance is by A Vittoria. The handsome interior is Gothic in the choir, and semi-Byzan-tine in the nave. The ausle is continued round the great alter in the form of a five-sided tribune, with circular arches below and pointed ones above. A fine picture of the Virgin and Child, with SS. Peter, Catharine, Lucia, and Jerome, by *G reanni Belline (1505), stands in the large chapel on the S. side. It was taken to Paris in 1797, transferred from panel to canvas, and badly restored, especially in the upper part of the Virgin and Child: it was returned in 1815. In the same chapel, formerly used by the nuns as a choir, is the Birth of St. John the Baptist, by Tintoretto. At the end of the rt, aisle is the chapel of S. TARASIO, usually closed. Here are several remarkable wood carvings and *paintings, valuable specimens of 15th cent. Venetian art. The three Anconas in compartments were painted by Giovanni and Antonia da Murano (1443), the carvings are by Lodorico dal Friuli. Steps lead hence down to a small Crypt, the only remaining portion of an earlier Church built in 827, and destroyed by fire in 1105. It is open for a short Service on Friday at 9. Here were interred eight Doges who lived between the above dates. The tomb of Marco Sanu lo (1505) is by Leopardi On the semi-dome are some much damaged frescoes of 1442. Behind the high altar is a small and badly-lighted Circumcision (School of Bellini), of which there are replicas or old copies in numerous galleries. On the rt. of the door leading into the sacristy is the *monument of Aless. Vittoria (1608, designed and partly executed by himself 2nd altar la Virgin and Child, with SS, Mark, Sdvester, Anna, Joachim, and a bishop, School of Palma Vecchio The statuettes of the Baptist and Zachariah on the Holy water basins rt, and 1, are by Vittoria. In the square in front of this Church Doge Pietro Tradenico was murdered in 864.

SCUOLE.

These semi-religious confraternities, of which there were five, were associations composed principally of laymen, but acting by authority of the Church. They effected most of the objects for which our modern benevolent and charitable institutions are founded, and became very opulent by the private contributions, gifts, and legacies which were bestowed upon them. The buildings in which they assembled are remarkable monuments of the People of ancient Venice, for the foundations were in the strictest sense voluntary and private.

The most interesting are the Scuola di San Rocco (p. 306), the Scuola di S. Marco (p. 302); the Scuola di S. Giorgio degli Schiavoni (p. 299). The Scuola di S. Giovanni Evangelista, N. of the Frari (C. 3), erected in 1481, has a handsome Renaissance gateway, and a fine staircase and hall. In the Court-yard is an interesting relief of St. John blessing the Confraternity. The Scuola dell' Angelo Custode, S. of the Apostoli (B. 5), now the German Protestant Church, has a painting attributed to Titian.

The greater part of the original building, designed by Palladio in 1552, was burnt down in 1630. On the suppression of the Convent, to which the Scuola was attached, the buildings were for some time occupied as barracks; but in 1807, Napoleon having decreed the formation of an Academy of Fine Arts, they were arranged for that purpose.

The front, in Istrian marble, was designed by Giorgio Massari. In the old Cloister are some fragments of frescoes by Paolo Veronese. The Pina-coteca is on the 1st floor. A small Vestibule to the left of the large Hall contains a group of Chiron, a statue of Adonis, and a bust of Titian, all by Rinaldo of Rome. In a Room opening out of it is a group of Dædalus and Icarus, by Canova.

Several of the rooms contain objects worthy of notice, besides their pictures.

Sala I. (delle Antiche Pitture).— The roof is an elaborate specimen of painted and gilt wood-carving of the Renaissance.

The Pinacoteca Contarini (Room II., III.), is a collection of more than 270 pictures formed by the late Count Girolamo Contarini, who bequeathed them (1843) to the Academy.

In a neighbouring corridor (Sala IV.), are sculptures in wood, chiefly ebony and walnut, executed by Brustoloni about 1750, for the patrician Pietro Venier, &c.

Sala VII.—The painting on the ceiling, of St. Helena discovering the Cross, is by Tiepolo. The original model of Canova's group of Hercules and Lycas is here.

In Sala XI. is a small collection of framed *Drawings by Leonardo da Vinci and others. Those attributed to Raffael, with the exception of two Studies from Leonardo's Battle of Anghiara, are probably by Pinturicchio. Here also are some reliefs in bronze by Riccio, of Padua, and a vase of red porphyry, containing the right hand of Canova, with his chisel above.

Sala XIII. (dell' Assunta).—The Prodigal Son, and Cardinal Virtues, on the ceiling, by J. Tintoretto, formed the vault of the Hall of the Inquisitors of State in the Ducal Palace.

Sala XIV. (over the Entrance).—
The fine gilt and carved roof of this hall, which was the principal room in the convent, is supposed to have been executed by Fra Cherubino Ottali, in the 15th cent. The painting of St. Nicholas, Bishop of Mira, in the centre, is by P. Veronese; the four Prophets by D. Campagnola; the Prodigal Son, and the figures of Faith, Truth, and Justice, by Jacopo Tintoretto. Round the cornice are portraits of the most celebrated artists.

the Venetian school, by pupils of the Academy (1849-55).

Giorgione (now generally attributed to Paris Bordone): *St. Mark staying miraculously the Tempest.

The subject of this picture is a story very characteristic of the superstitious age in which it was believed, and often referred to in the works of art at Venice. "In the year 1341 an inundation of many days' continuance had raised the water three cubits higher than it had ever before been seen in Venice; and during a stormy night, while the flood appeared to be still increasing, a poor old fisherman sought what refuge he could find by mooring his crazy bark close to the Riva di San Marco. The storm was yet raging, when a person approached and offered him a good fare if he would but ferry him over to San Giorgio Maggiore. As the stranger promised to guard him from harm, he at last consented. The passenger landed, returned with a companion, and ordered him to row to San Niccolò di Lido. The astonished fisherman again refused, till he was prevailed upon by a further assurance of safety and excellent pay. At San Niccold they picked up a third person, and then instructed the boatman to proceed to the Two Castles at Lido. Scarcely had they gained the strait, when they saw a galley rather flying than sailing along the Adriatic, manned with devils, who seemed hurrying, with fierce and threatening gestures, to sink Venice in the deep. The sea, which had hitherto been furiously agitated, in a moment became unruffled, and the strangers, crossing themselves, conjured the fiends to depart. At their word the demoniacal galley vanished, and the three passengers were quietly landed at the spots at which each respectively had been taken up. The boatman, it seems, was not quite easy about his fare, and, before parting, he implied pretty clearly that the sight of this miracle, after all, would be but but bad pay. 'You are right, my friend,' said the first passenger; 'go to the Doge and the Procuratori, and assure them that, but for us three, Venice would have been drowned. I am St. Mark, m two comrades are St. George 8.

St. Nicholas. Desire the magistrates to pay you, and add, that all this trouble has arisen from a schoolmaster at San Felice, who first bargained with the Devil for his soul, and then hanged himself in despair.' The fisherman, who seems to have had all his wits about him, answered that he might tell that story, but he much doubted whether he should be believed: upon which St. Mark pulled from his finger a gold ring, worth about five ducats, saying, 'Show them this ring, and bid them look for it in my Treasury, whence it will be found missing.' On the morrow the fisherman did as he was told. (See Paris Bordone, below). The ring was absent from its usual custody, and the fortunate boatman! not only received his fare, but an annual pension. Moreover, a solemn procession and thanksgiving were appointed in gratitude to the three holy corpses which had rescued from such calamity the land affording them burial."—Ven. Hist.

The Museo Civico (B. 4) is a miscellaneous collection of pictures, majolicas, gems, medals, and other works of Art, the nucleus of which was bequeathed to the city by Teodoro Correr in 1830. It is arranged in the Fondaco dei Turchi, a fine building of the 13th cent., which has been completely restored and fitted up to receive it. [Adm. daily 9 to 3, 1 fr., free on Sundays; Catalogue, very untrustworthy, 1 fr.] The arrangement is not yet complete, the pictures are badly placed without reference to schools or periods, and many of the most interesting and important are bung so high that they cannot be seen.

In the Court yard are some fragments of Greek, Roman, and early Italian sculptures, including a colossal statue of Marcus Agrippa, said to have been brought from the Pantheon; a Roman altar; some inscriptions and reliefs; the sarcophagus of Marino Faliera, with other tombs: and an interesting series of wellmouths (vere), resembling fouts (10th to 16th cent. .. The Raccolta Muni (closed on free days) consists of ethnographical objects from South Africa,

In the PALAZZO CORRER, across the alley to the W., are: (1) Drawings and models by Canova: a mask of his face taken after death, and a collection of carious musical instruments, (2) Documents connected with the Revolution of 1848-9. (3) Various objects of natural philosophy and

On the 2nd floor are the Works of Art, exhibited in 12 rooms.

I. and II. Engravings, wood-cuts, and drawings. Only two drawings (on one sheet) are by Raffael; all those which formed part of the socalled Raffael Sketch-book are by Pinturicchio. Large *Plan of Venice, cut in wood, by Jacopo dei Berberi (1500), with its original block.

IV. Bronzes, some of great beauty. Notice especially those of Valerio Belli (1470–1546). Byzantine lectern of brass (double eagle). Bronze candelabrum by Vittoria, put together from the remains of two which were damaged in the fire of 1867 at SS. Giovanni e Paolo. Bust of Jacopo Loredano (15th cent.).

V. Armour and arms. Fine view from the windows.

VI. Carvings in wood and ivory. Three little Wedding Chests, with reliefs and inlaid work of ivory, wood, and bone (14th cent.). VII. Documents of great interest. Commissions given by the Republic to governors, officers, and admirals. Rules and regulations of guilds and corporations, and various diplomatic documents, autographs and minia-VIII. A very fine collection of majolica and terra-cotta. 17 plates, blue on white ground, probably from Castel Durante near Urbino, designed by Timoteo Viti (Orpheus, Narcissus, Apollo, and Marsyas, &c.).

IX. Miniatures, gems, works of art in silver. On a carved wooden pedestal, under glass, is a very interesting 15th-cent. *nuptial cup of blue Murano glass with figures. Coins. Toilette fittings in agate and silver-gilt (17th cent.). In the centre, Flag of Bucintoro (see Arsenal). Opposite the window, the door of the Bucintoro, opened for the Doge, when he threw the ring into the Adriatic.

X. (opening back out of IX.) Obtoms of the Venetians from the 14th to the 18th cent.

XI. Small collection of coloured engravings, glass, crockery, and indifferent furniture, bequeathed by the widow of Conte G. B. Giustiniani in 1889.

XII. Porcelain from China and Japan, and a collection of ancient Muranese glass.

The Arsenal (C. 7) is reached by the Rio dell' Arsenale at the E. eud of the Riva degli Sch.avoni. (Armoury, daily, 9 to 3, on sending in a card, to visit the Docks, a letter must be addressed to the Secretary of the Admiral in command.)

The Arsenal was founded in 1104, but attained its present dimensions, nearly 2 miles in circuit, between 1307 and 1320. Walls and towers, battlemented and crenellated, attributed to Andrea Pisano, surround it. In the 16th cent, the number of workmen employed here exceeded 16,000; and as the safety of Venice depended on the arsenal, these arsenalotti had a special organisation and peculiar privileges, including the right of guarding all the important parts of the city, and of carrying the Doge during his first tour of the Prazza. The principal *Gateway, erected in 1460, as appears from an inscription upon the column on the l. side, is an adaptation of a Roman triumphal arch. An attic with a pediment was added in 1581, surmounted by a statue of S. Giustina, by Girolamo Campagna, in commemoration of the great battle of Lepanto, fought on the festival of that saint, 7th Oct., 1571. Beside this entrance are two colossal lims of Pentelio marble, brought by Morosini from Athens in 1687. That on the l. stood at the entrance of the Piraus, which from this image was commonly called the Porto Leone It is 10 ft. high, of very ancient workmanship. Eagraven on this lion's shoulders and flanks are some Runic inscriptions, Hakon and Harold the Tall in 1040, (See Quart. Rev., vol cxxxv. p 167.) The head of the rt. lion is a restoration. Goethe refers to these lions in his poem beginning-

Stehen zwei alt griechische Loewen.

On the rt. are two more lions of remarkable form.

In the courtyard are some cannon of 1568, restored from Constantinople ın 1873.

The Armoury was in part dispersed. by the French, and again by the Austrians in 1866; but it has been rearranged as a Museum, and contains some very interesting objects, many of which were brought from the Ducal Palace. On the ground floor is the Model-Room, containing some currous materials for the history of naval architecture. The collection was once exceedingly rich and important, but the revolutionists at the close of the last cent. destroyed a great portion. Towards the end of the room is a Model of the Bucintoro (as built in 1728), the vessel from which the Doge annually, on Ascension Day, espoused the Adriatic, and which, after having successively served as a gunboat and a prison, was burned in 1824. The ceremony of the esponsal, which took place off the Lido entrance to the Laguna, and was intended as a contipued assertion of the right of the republic to the dominion of the Adriane, has been traced back to the time of Doge Pietro Orseolo in 998, - The model of the ring which was used for the purpose, and given by Pope Alexander III. to Doge Ziani in 1177, has been removed to the Treasury of St. Mark's. At the end, near the window, is a model showing the piles of which Venetian houses are built, and on the wall, by the door leading to the staircase, is a very curious plan of Venice, by Jacopo de Barberis, similar to that at the Museo Civico. Near the end of the room are two Greek lanterna, taken at Lepanto. On the 1st floor is the Collection of April Prof. Rafur of Copenhagen, as refer-ring to the conquest of the Piræus by Mortar, of cords bound roun leather, used by Zeno at the siege of | Chioggia. Close to the window, the executioner's sword with Marino Faliero was decapitated. On the l., the great standard of the Turkish admiral, taken in the battle of Lepanto, of red and yellow silk. On the l., half-way down the room, full suit of Henry IV. of France, given by him to the Republic in 1603 (the sword was stolen in 1797). Opposite, a *Monument raised by the republic to the High-Admiral Emo (1792), who commanded the expeditions against the pirates of Barbary in 1784, and bombarded Tunis with floating batteries. The reliefs from his tomb, representing naval subjects, were brought from the Servite Church, when it was pulled down. memorial, a rostral column surmounted by a bust, was made for the place where it now stands, and is interesting as being amongst the earliest works of Canova, executed at Rome in 1795. Further on, ancient artillery and fire-arms; a springal of iron, not cast, but composed of 11 pieces riveted together, and covered with exceedingly elegant arabesques, made by the son of Doge Pasquale Cicogna, who flourished in the first half of the 16th cent. Armour of Gattamelata, for man and horse, of fine Milanese workmanship of the 15th cent. In a case on the rt., at the end of the room, sword of Doge Sebastiano Ziani, (1172–1178). Cross-bows, of remarkable power.—Helmets and shields of the ancient Venetian soldiery, of strange forms.—Quivers filled with arrows, perhaps used by the Stradiotes and other semi-barbarian troops of the republic; -instruments of murder and torture.—In the last case on the rt., a species of spring pistol, in the shape of a key, with which it is said that Francesco Carrara, the tyrant of Padua, was accustomed to kill the objects of his suspicion, by inducing them to take hold of it, when a poisoned point pricked their fingers. Close to it, Sword given to Doge Cristoforo Moro by Pius II. in 1463.

The Arsenal contains two large and two smaller basins, nearly surrounded by dry docks, building slips, and workshops. The roofs are supported by ancient arches, lofty and massive, some circular, some pointed, standing upon huge cylindrical pillars, with angular leafy capitals. The columns are sculptured with numerous shields and inscriptions, some of which are in the ancient Venetian dialect. The rope-walk (Corderia della Tana) dates from 1579, having been erected by Doge N. da Ponte; it is 346 yards long, and is supported by 92 Doric pillars.

Long before the fall of Venice the Arsenal displayed all the decrepitude of the state. When the French entered Venice in 1797, they found 13 men-of-war and 7 frigates on the stocks. This enumeration seems respectable; but of these vessels, none of which were completed, two had been begun in 1752, two in 1740, two in 1732, and the remainder at subsequent periods. The establishment by the Austrian Government of naval stations at Trieste, and especially at Pola on the peninsula of Istria, tended to destroy its importance, but the annexation of Venice to Italy has revived it again, and at present the Arsenal employs about 2000 workmen, and ranks third in importance in the king-

THE GRAND CANAL.

This is the main thoroughfare of Venice, corresponding with the Corso or Central Promenade of other Italian cities. It is traversed by Steam Launches, which start every 12 or 15 min. from the Giardini Pubblici (D. 8), and reach S. Chiara (B. 2) in ½ hr. (Fare 10 c. for any distance; 15 c. on Sun.). The Stations on the Riva are San Biagio (Arsenal), S. Zaccaria (Bridge of Sighs), and S. Marco.

The Steamboat Stations on the Canal are marked St. St.

- *P. Foscari, end of the 15th cent., attributed to Bartolommeo Bon, architect of the Doge's Palace.

The tragic history of Doge Francesco Foscari is well known. Through the intrigues of the Laredano party, his son Jacopo was three times banished and finally died in exile. On his own deposition in 1457, after ruling for 35 years, the old man retired to his palace, but fell dead on hearing the bell announcing the election of his successor. Here, in 1574, Henry III. of France was lodged; having served during the Austrian rule as barracks, it was purchased by the Municipality, and restored in 1867. It is now used as the Scuola Tecnica di Commercio, for young men destined for the Consular service and for mercantile pursuits. The three Palaces at this turn in the canal form a conspicuous group, and are a favourite subject with artists.

P. Balbi, by Aless. Vittoria (1582)—Rustic, Ionic, and Composite. Behind it is seen the Campanile of the Frari. The temporary building for the public authorities, who distribute the prizes at the regattas on the Grand Canal, is always erected by the side of the Balbi Palace, as it commands a view of both reaches of the great canal, and Napoleon I. witnessed the regatta in 1807 from this palace.

*P. Grimani, now used as Courts of Justice, from the designs of Sammicheli, who died before it was completed (1554). Its three Corinthiau orders are exquisitely worked. It is one of the finest of the more modern palaces.

Sammicheli, who was employed to build it by Girolamo, father of Doge Marino Grimani. had great difficulties to contend with, in consequence of the irregular form of the site, of which the smallest side fronts the Grand Canal. The Grimani were originally Vicentine nobles, but after their removal to Venice they rose to high dignities in the state. Two doges were of this family-Antonio and Marino.

The Fabbriche, a series of buildings, partly connected by arcades, were anciently employed as warehouses; the exchange being held in the piazza opposite the Church of San Giacomo, an irregular quadrangle now serving as a Vegetable Market. The whole place was the resort of the mercantile community; but if we seek to realize the locality of Shylock and Antonio, we must station ourselves in the double portico at the end of the piazza opposite to the Church, that being the spot where the Banco Giro was held, and where the merchants transacted the business of most weight and consequence.

In the night of the 10th of January, 1513, a fire broke out which destroyed all the Fubbriche Vecchie as well as their contents. The senate immediately decreed the reconstruction of the commercial buildings, and they were entrusted to Antonio Scarpagnino, whose designs were preferred to those of the celebrated Frate Giocondo. He was an artist of small reputation; and Vasari speaks most contemptuously of his productions. The Fabbriche are now principally converted into private houses. Many portions have been demolished; all are neglected and in decay; and the merchants no longer congregate here, but transact their business in their counting-houses.

Palazzo Manin, by Sansovino (1560), restored by Selva: with a Doric, Ionic, and Corinthian front. It belonged to the last Doge of Venice, and is now the National Bank.

The *Ponte di Rialto was begun in 1588, in the reign of Doge Pasquale Cicogna, Antonio da Ponte being the architect. His design was preferred to those by Palladio and Scamozzi; but the edifice is more remarkable for its solidity and originality than for its beauty. In the 12th cent. the two sides of the canal were united by a bridge of boats; but a wooden bridge was built in 1246, which was destroyed in the Conspiracy of Bajamonte Tiepolo (1310). After being rebuilt, it broke down in 1450, on the occasion of some festivities, and was then supplanted by one with booths, seen in Carpaccio's picture in the Academy. This, being considered unsafe, was replaced by the present structure of Istrian marble. It was intended that the bridge should have been much more adorned than it is at present. The ornaments which it now exhibits are confined to the statues in the spandrels, of the Annunciation, and the patrons of Venice, St. Theodore and St. Mark.

The span of the arch is about 91 ft., and the height from the level of the water is 24½ ft.; it rests on 12,000 elm piles, and the width of the footway is 72 ft. This width is divided longitudinally into three passages, and two rows of shops. The number of shops on it is 24,

All the land on the rt. hand in passing up the canal forms the island of San Marco, that on the l. the island of the Bialto; and at this part of the canal, near the Rialto Bridge, on the l. hand, is the spot on which Venice as a city first existed. Even till the 16th cent., and perhaps later. Rivo alto was considered as the city in all legal documents, and distinguished as such from the State of Venice. After the population was extended into the other quarters, the Rialto continued to be the central point of trade and commerce.

The Findacki were connected with the ancient commercial prosperity of Venice. They were the factories of different nations, very similar in object to some still possessed by the Franks in the Levant, or by the Europeans at Canton, where the merchants of each isognast and race could dwell together under a domestic jurisdiction, where their business could be transacted and their goods safely housed. Some are converted into public offices, but, generally speaking, they are falling into decay.

Palazzo Labia, with very fine *frescoes of Anthony and Cleopatra, &c., by Tiepolo, on the 1st floor (1 fr.). After passing under a bridge, the

was formerly celebrated for its fine collection of pictures, which filled ten rooms. All the best have been sold. Some few remain for sale, and can be seen daily from 10 to 3 (50 c.). A little beyond, on the same side of the canal, is the

Palazzo Savorgaan, the property of the ex-Dake of Modena. It has a pretty garden behind. On the apposite side of the canal is the Ghetto, or Jews' quarter, with lofty houses facing the canal, and an interesting old Synagogue. Farther on, the campanile of San Gubbe is seen on the l. An interesting Procession takes place on the Canareggio on St. John's Day, 24th June.

The most interesting Palaces, not upon the Grand Canal, are the Palazzo Badoaro Partecipazio, in the Campo S. Giovanni Bragora, a fine specimen of Gothic (1310): but it has been restored, and the front painted barbarously in white and red squares, like a chess-board.

Palazzo Bernardo, half-way between S. Giacomo dell' Orio and San Polo (C. 4) has a fine Gothic front of the 14th cent.

*Palazzo Corner Mocenigo (Campo di San Polo), built by Sammicheli (1548), ren-arkable for its boldness of elevation and grandeur.

*Palazzo Falier, near the SS. Apostoli, in the Arabo-Byzantine style of the 13th cent., has four bandsome pointed windows behind a modern balcony. It was erected out of the ruins of the palace of Marino Faliero, the decapitated Doge, confiscated to the State after his execution in 1355.

Palamo Giovanelli (B. 4), Gothic of the 15th cent., restored in 1847. The modern decoration of the apartments is very rich. The collection of ancient and modern paintings, not shown except by private introduction, contains a very beautiful "landscape with naked figures by Giorgione, formerly in the Manfrin Collection; an interesting picture by Bachiacca (Moses striking the Rock), formerly attributed to Albert Dürer; a Madonna with Saints, by Paris Bordone; and a small St. Jerome, by Titian.

The Palazzo Grimani, in a narrow street near the Church of S. Maria Formosa, is attributed to Sammicheli. It contains a few ancient statues, reliefs, and inscriptions. In the court is a good torso in armour, of the time of the Antonines, restored as a colossal statue of Augustus. There is a Christ crowned with Thorns, by Palma Vecchio, in the chapel.

Palazzo Morasini, on the W. side of the Campo S. Stefano (D. 4), is of the 16th cent. Here was born F. Morosini, surnamed Peloponesiaco. On the opposite side are the P. Loredano, rebuilt in the 16th cent., and the vast P. Pisani, let out to artists and others, with a Furniture Magazine on the ground floor,

Palazzo Sanudo, near the Church of S. Maria dei Miracoli, Gothic of the 14th cent., has a richly sculptured door and a picturesque courtyard, with an interesting old well.

*Palamo Trevisan or Capello, at the Ponte di Canonica, behind St. Mark's, by G. Bergamasco (1530), richly incrusted with fine marbles, and marking the transition from the Gothic to the Italian. It was purchased by the notorious Bianca for her brother Vittore Capello, in 1577.

Palazzo Moro, in the Campo del Carmine (C. 3), is a modern building on the site of the supposed residence of Cristoforo Moro, the Othello of Shakspears. Overlooking the Canal is the statue of a warrior of the 15th cent., probably by Rizzo, which the gondoliers called Otello.

Walking E. from S. Giovanni Crisostomo, and passing the Teatro Malibran, is reached the Ponts del Teatro, close to which an inscription marks the House of Marco Polo, the renowned traveller, who died here in 1323.

*Palazzo Ariani, or Cicogna, N. of S. Angelo Raffaele, now a School, has a row of six windows, surmounted with pierced quatrefoil panelling.

Tintoretto's house was close to the bridge of the Campo dei Mori, a little S. of the Madonna dell' Orto; and Titian's at S. Cancino ai Birri, in the Campo Tiziano, No. 5182 (B. 6).

Giorgione lived in the Campo S. Silvestro, opposite the Church.

Daniele Manin, the patriot of 1848, who is buried outside St. Mark's, lived in the Campo S. Paternian, where a monument by Luigi Borro was erected to him in 1875. From the left hand of the Statue a narrow passage leads to the Corte Contarini del Bovolo, where is a curious and beautiful early *Renaissance staircase in the form of a Turret, with seven spiral tiers.

THEATRES.

La Fenice (Phænix), the principal theatre (C. D. 4), was built in 1789, and improved after a fire in 1836. It is open during the Carnival, and in the early months of winter, for operas and ballets. The booking-office for all the Theatres is No. 112, about the middle of the Procuratie Vecchie.

The Teatro Rossini (C. 4) was built in 1755. In summer, winter, and spring, a company, usually secondrate, performs operas at this theatre.

The Teatro Malibran (B. 5) is a large house, built in the 17th cent. It is open all the year round, except in Sept., operas and comedies.

The Teatro Goldoni (C. 5) is well worth a visit, for the sake of the characteristic performances in Venetian dialect of Goldoni's Comedies, &c., by Zago, Borisi, and other actors.

GARDENS.

The Giardino Pubblico (D. 8), occupying the triangular space at the E. extremity of Venice, was laid out by Napoleon in 1807, but has been extended and improved of late years. It is too far off to be popular. It is approached on the land side by the Via Garibaldi, one of the broadest streets in Venice, made by the French in 1810 by filling up a canal. The views from the gardens over the Lido and the Islands are fine, including the adjacent little island of St. Elena, formerly occupied by a large convent, with a fine Gothic cloister, now by a hideous iron-factory, with high chimney, &c.

The Giardinetto Reale is the small piece of ground lying between the Royal Palace and the Grand Canal.

EXCURSIONS.

San Lazzaro, the Catholic Armenian convent, on an island, 2 m. S.E. of the city, was founded in 1717 by the Abbot Mechitar. It is a model of neatness and good order. Here Lord Byron amused himself by studying the Armenian language; and he has borne full testimony to the merits of the worthy inmates. His autograph signature, in English and Armenian, is shown by the brothers who conduct strangers over the buildings. The excellent library of 30,000 volumes contains a great number of curious Oriental manuscripts; and the convent may be regarded as a centre of Armenian literature. They are enabled to print in 32 languages. Many important works, such as the translation of Eusebius, have been printed here, besides the greater portion of the liturgical and other religious books used by the community elsewhere. The sale of these works brings a small profit to the convent, and visitors are invited to buy. The Armenians are amongst the most respectable and opulent native merchants at Calcutta, and they contribute liberally to the support of this national institution. San Lazzaro is under the protection of Turkey, whose flag floated over it during the siege of 1849. Its priests, who have also a college in Venice, are Catholics, and are not of the orthodox Armenian sect. They have little or nothing to do with Armenia proper.

A little beyond San Lazzaro is a long sandy island, stretching across the Lagoon, and called the Littorale di Malamocco, or

Lido. From the Piazzetta, gondola (25 min.) or Steamer in 15 min. every & hr. (in winter, every hr.). The N.E. entrance into the Lagoon is protected by the Forte S. Niccold, and opposite to it is the Castello di S. Andrea, a work of great beauty and solidity, by Sammicheli (1554). The foundations of the fortress were not laid without great difficulty. micheli was much censured, and it was rumoured that the edifice was insecure. Such an accusation might have cost the architect his head, but the Senate, as the story goes, deter-mined to prove the fortress. The 40 embrasures were mounted with the largest guns, double charged, and all were fired simultaneously; but not a stone was moved, and Sammicheli's detractors were dismissed with deserved contumely.

The shore of this Littorale, towards the Adriatic, constitutes the Lido, now associated with the name of Byron, as the spot where he used to take his rides, and where he intended to have been buried; but the weird look and feeling of solitude which formerly haunted the place have now disappeared. Large Restaurants have been erected in connection with the Bathing Establishment, and the place is thronged on summer evenings when the band plays. The bathing is ex-cellent. The ceremony of esponsing the Adriatic was performed by the Doge at the Porto di Lido off the N.

SAN MICHELE AND MURANO.

the memory of the Greek monk Eusebins upon a tablet on the l. wall, in a beautiful arabesque frame (1502), was composed by Aldus Manutius. A small lozenge in the middle of the pavement close to the entrance marks the tomb of the statesman Fra Paolo Sarpi (1623). It formerly stood in the demolished Church of the Servites at Venice, and was removed here after its desecration in 1796; the friars, however, to please the clergy. effaced the inscription, which the authorities have obliged them to restore. On the l. is the *Cappells Emiliana, a beautiful six-sided structure covered by a dome supported by fluted columns, designed by Gaglielmo Bergamasco (1530). It opens from the vestibule, and has three doors alternating with three altars, which have good reliefs by Bergamasco (Annunciation, Nativity, and Adoration of the Magi).

This Church formed part of a large Camaldolese Convent, which existed from 1210 until its suppression in 1810; it has now been transferred to the Capuchins, and the grounds of the monastery converted into the great public Cametery. In the old Protestant burying-place, no longer used, lies James, the novelist, who died when Consul-General here in 1860. In the New Prot. Cemetery is the grave of Robert, the celebrated French painter. Frate Mauro, the eclebrated cosmographer of the 15th cent., was a member of this community, and here he composed his Mappa mondo; and in our own times the enlightened Cardinal Zurla, historian of the Venetian Navigators, and Pope Gregory XVI., as Padre Mauro Cappellari. There are two handsome cloisters, and a garden, now incorporated with the Cemetery.

MURANO, † This island (pop. 5000, formerly 30,000) lies 14 m. N. of the city. The glass manufactures of Murano were the most renowned in Europe, not only during the middle ages, but even till the beginning of the present century. Mirrors, flasks, drinking-cups, and an infinite variety of small articles were made here. At present the industry employs about 2500 hands, beads for the Eastern market and coloured glass constituting the most important of the articles manufactured. The principal manufactory, known as the Venice and Murano Co. (formerly Salviati), belongs to an English company (Office, Campo San Vio, on the Grand Canal). A large manufactory of common glass has been established on the island in the ancient church and convent of Sta. Chiara.

The Church of S. Pietro Martire, a simple Renaissance building (1509), contains some good paintings, mostly brought from the neighbouring Augustinian nunnery of S. Maria degli Angeli. Over the 2nd altar, Virgin and Child, with Jeremiah and St. Jerome, by Fr. da Santacroce (1507), Beyond the 2nd, donna and Angels, with SS. Mark and Augustine, presenting the donor, Doge Agostino Barbarigo, by Giov. Bellini (1488). Beyond the 3rd, St. Jerome in the desert, by P. Veronese. In a chapel to the rt. of the high altar, tomb of 1666, with two reliefs, on the l. wall. Painting of the Virgin and Child, with SS. John Bapt., Augustine, Ambrose, and George, attributed to Bart. Vivarini. l. of the Chancel is an altar in the Lombardi style, with a good relief of Above the Sacristy door, Baptism of Christ, by Jacopo Tinto-In the Sacristy are woodcarvings of the life of John the Baptist, with busts of Roman emperors and philosophers. Crossing a bridge, and turning to the left, we reach

Over the pulpit, Finding of the body of St. Mark, by Tintoretto. Near the bridge is the fine old Palazzo da Mula, of the 14th cent.

On the quay, 5 min. E., is the Museum formed in 1861 at the Municipio, formerly the bishop's palace, chiefly by the zeal of the parish priest, the Abbate Zanetti. In the Entrance Hall are three sarcophagi, a wellmouth, and various sculptures. Out of it opens a large hall, filled with more ordinary glass, contributed by the principal manufacturers, and especially by the Venice and Murano Co. On the upper floor are the finer kinds of work, such as chandeliers, beads, many specimens of ancient Venetian glass, and some curious old coins of Murano, called Oselle.

A few yards further on is the

*Duomo. In the year 1125 Domenico Michiel, 34th Doge of Venice, on his return from the Holy Land, brought from the island of Cephalonia the body of San Donatus, bishop of Evorea, in Epirus. This treasure he deposited in the ancient Church of Sta. Maria, at Murano, thence forward called S. Donato and probably rebuilt soon afterwards, as the style of architecture is that of the 12th cent. outside of the apse has a double row of round brick arches in the Lombard style, most effectively treated. Close to the W. end is a high square campanile, from the summit of which there is a splendid view. At the principal door, forming the base of the pilasters, are two Roman columns, with sculptures, probably of the time of the Antonines. The pavement resembles that of St. Mark, and is extremely beautiful, abounding in curious early Christian emblems. An inscription in the centre, 6 yds. from the door, is dated 1140. The Church underwent s most elaborate and careful restoration at the expense of the Government, in 1870. The columns are of white and grey Imezio marble, with Corinthian capitals, probably brought from the ruins of Altinum On the wall of the l. sisle, near the entrance, is s curious wooden relief of San Donato, coloured and gilt, including diminu-tive portraits of the Podesia Memmo and his wife (1310), among the earliest known specimens of the Venetian school, as the inscription is one of the oldest in the Venetian dialect. In the Baptistery, opening out of the laisle. are several fragments of Roman inscriptions and reliefs, including the base of the tomb of Lucius Aulius Persia from Altinum. Over the Baptistery door, Lazzaro Sebastiani, Virgin and Child, with SS. John Bapt, and Donatus, who presents a kneeling On the altar to the l, behind the pulpit, is a beautiful tabernacle of rock crystal and gilded ebony. The vaulting over the altar, covered with mosaic on gold ground, contains a lengthened figure of the Vargin, in the Byzantine style, with a Greek monogram, not later than the 12th cent. Below it in the apse are damaged 15th-cent, frescoes of the Evangelists.

4 m. beyond Murano are the Islands of Mazzorbo and Burano,-The former has large kitchen gardens, which supply a large proportion of the vegetables and fruit consumed at Venice. At Mazzorbo, which the gondola passes on the rt., is a Gothic doorway of 1368, and a good white marble relief in the lunette above it. Burano, which lies to the rt., is best visited on the return. About 2 m. beyond Mazzorbo is

TORORLLO, an unhealthy island, with figures of the Apostles in mosaic; the population of a mere village, above are the Virgin and Child—in the Venetian states; the spot to which a restored series of "mosaic complete unfortunate in a state of the later." the unfortunate inhabitants of Altinum | ments of an earlier period, pro-

Torcello thus peopled became a town, and had its cathedral and its bishops, long before the existence of St Mark's Others sought refuge here from the Arian Lombards; and to escape their yoke, Paul, Bishop of Altino, translated his see hither about the year 635, taking with him the relics and treasures of the cathedral which he abandoned. The succession of the Episcopal see continued until the revolution. There was a podestà and senate of Torcello, in whom all the rights of the ancient community were vested, and who conferred titles of nobility on such as were willing to assist the treasury of the state by the payment of ten zecchini, somewhat above five pounds sterling.

The *Duomo (Sta. Maria), was rebuilt in the beginning of the 11th cent., by Orseolo, Bishop of Torcello, and son of the celebrated Doge Pietro Orseolo, but the outside has been modernised. The windows on the S. side of the choir have their conginal shutters formed of slabs of stone working on pivots. The pavement affords a fine example of opus Alexandrinum. The capitals of the marble columns brought from some more ancient building are beautifully carved, and though Corinthian, a Byzantine influence is evident.

The nave and aisles, of 10 bays, end in apses. A striking peculiarity is the preservation of the original internal arrangement of the central apse, which ends in three semicircular steps of brick, once covered with white marble, forming seats for the clergy of different degrees, and conducting to the bishop's throne, which occupies the central spot. Three bays are given to the chancel, which is divided off by elaborate carved marble screens of Byzantine work,

The central apse is covered with

Church; Hades and the Resurrection; Christ in glory surrounded by Angels; the Last Judgment, where Kings and Emperors are introduced as usual, their costume Byzantine; Hell and Heaven, and the *Saviour receiving Children. The Virgin, in the lunette of the door, is of the same period. As works of art they are curious. side the choir on the l. is a pulpit on four slender marble columns, and a bracket ambo, on a short octagonal column of stone, with some good Byzantine carved work. On the face of the Chancel arch is the Annunciation in mosaic, and in front of the screen the slab tomb of Abp. Mocenigo (1404).

On the vault of the rt. apse are also some curious mosaics of the 11th and 12th centuries, with Latin inscriptions. Below, SS. Gregory, Martin, Ambrose, and Augustine. The crypt, a mere passage behind the Choir, is probably of the 7th cent.; it is semicircular, and surrounded by niches for bones or The detached Campanile, to the E., may be ascended without difficulty. From the top a fine view is obtained of the Venetian Alps, the Adriatic, and the N. portion of the Lagoon. Mass is celebrated in the Cathedral only on the 27th Apr. (S. Liberale), 3rd July (S. Elidoro), and 15th Aug. (Assumption).

"The *Church of Santa Fosca must have existed before the year 1011, and is said to have been the Baptistery of the adjoining cathedral. It contains the remains of Sta. In front of S. Fosca is a massive stone chair, called the Throne of Attila. It is perhaps the seat in which the chief magistrates of Torcello were inaugurated.

Adjacent to the N. is the small Palazzo del Comune (13th cent.), in which has been arranged a Museum of antiquities, found at Altinum and Torcello. On the ground floor, architectural fragments; upstairs, the Pala or Cathedral altar-front, of embossed silver, in twelve compartments, each containing the figure of a Saint. It is of Greek workmanship, but several of the panels are missing. Here also are bronzes, mosaics, pottery, vases, Service books, and smaller sculptures.

About 6 m. from Torcello, reached through intricate canals, is the village of Altino, near one of the branches of the Sile where it enters the Lagoon; it is now a poor place, and offers nothing to attract the traveller, although occupying the site of the onceflourishing Altinum.

MARTIAL.

The island of Burano (5500) is inhabited chiefly by fishermen, who preserve some features of the ancient character of the Venetians. Many of the women are engaged in the production of thread-lace. The laces school, in which a variety of ancient laces are most skilfully imitated, employs about 300 girls, and is well worth visiting. (Agent in Venice, Jesurum.) It is chiefly maintained by the Countess Marcello, and has already done much to improve, morally and materially, the condition of the inhabitants of this very poor island. The Church of San Martino has in its Choir the Flight into Egypt, and Adoration of the Magi, in the style of Giov. Bellini; in the Sacristy, St. Mark enthroned, with SS. Bernard, Nicholas, Laurence, and Vitus, by G. Santaeroce (1541), restored. 2 m. S. is the Island of S. Francesco del Deserto, planted with cypresses and pines.

On leaving Roveredo (680 ft.), described in Rte. 73, the road ascends the rt. bank of the Leno S.E., crosses the E. branch of that torrent, and turns nearly due S. into the Vall' Arsa, a pleasing valley, whose upper part is enclosed by lofty summits. The ascent is somewhat rough and steep to 12 m, Pieve di Vall' Arsa (2655 ft.), the principal village of the valley. S.W. rises the Cima di Posta (7545 ft.), N.E. Monte Pasubio (7325 ft.), both abounding in plants of interest to the botanist. The road then passes on the rt. the bold peak of the Cengio Alto, and ascends to the Italian frontier at 15 m. Piano delle Fugame (4120 | ft.), a low col. on the watershed between the Leno and Timonchio.

The scenery here is bare, the head of the valley being enriched with limestone cliffs; but it improves on the descent, the Val di Canale, a wild glen, opening to the l., and the traveller soon reaches 20 m. Val dei Signori, whence a frequented mule-path leads S.W. in 2 hrs. to Recoard (Rte. 80). Our road descends the Timonchio to 23 m. Torre, whence a Rly. runs E.

26 m. Schio (665 ft.), a flourishing town of 11,000 inhab, many of whom are employed in the extensive woodfactories The largest mill-owner is Sign. Rossi, who has established Schools, and founded Churches for the benefit of his workmen. Sign. Lodo-vice Pasini, an Italian Senator, has a valuable Geological Museum, well worth a visit from the scientific traveller. The Cathedral dates from 1512. The Gothic Church of S. Francesco (1486) has some good paintings. In the Church of the Oxpedule is a Virgin and Child with SS. Lucia, Catharine, and others, by Fr. Verlas (1517). N.E. rises Monte Sumano (4300 ft.), celebrated for its rare plants and insects.

From Schio a Rly, runs N. to Arsiero, and S.E. to Vicenza. By means of the first an interesting excursion may be made to the

Bette Comuni. A singular district, occupying a high table-land (3250 ft.) between the rivers Astico and Brenta, and carrying on an extensive trade in cattle, cheese, timber, and strawplait. It is penetrated by but one road, which ascends from the side of the Astico, and by a few abrupt and rough paths. The whole mountain mass is of great geological interest (see Murchison in 'Geol. Journ.,' vol. v. pt. i. 1849). The chief peculiarity of the district, however, is derived from the character of the population. The inhabitants, about 40,000 in number, are Germans, divided into seven parishes or communities spread chiefly over the southern half of the plateau, and dis- | tinguished in language and manners, as formerly in dress, from the Italians, by whom they are surrounded. They were supposed by some writers to be the descendants of the Cimbri, defeated by Marius near Verona. while they were regarded by others as a remnant of the Alemanni, whom Clovis vanquished at Zülpich, near Cologue, A.D. 496, and who, it is said, obtained an asylum in Italy from Theodoric. Their language is an old Alemannic-Swabian dialect, which has a resemblance to that of the Nibelungenlied. The Alemannic-Swabian tribe occupied, in the middle ages, part of Western Tyrol, and the Vorariberg They may perhaps be the descendants of Alemannic-Swabian colonists, who settled here in the 11th or 12th cent., but it is far more probable that they are merely a remnant of their tribe, isolated by the encroachment of the Indian population and language, which, it is well known, has been, and still is, gradually gaining ground on the German language in Cisalpine Tyrol, and will probably, at no distant period, entirely supersede it. The Sette Comuni themselves are becoming more and more Italianised, especially since they have discontinged to receive their clergymen from Swabia. The people carry down a large quantity of timber in the rainy season by the Valstagna, to be floated down on the Brenta to Bassano. Until 1797 they formed a republic under the protection of Venice.

The Rly., on leaving Schio, runs N.E. to Piovene and Roochette, where it enters and crosses the Val d'Astico, and by a steep ascent along the mountain side, reaches its summit level. Thence, over an undulating country, broken by protruding rocks, it proceeds N.W. to Arsiero, whence a good road leads to (15 m.) Asiago.

The geologist will, however, find it more to his advantage to abandon this route for the old one, which ascends the valley of the Astico from Arsiero to (1) hr.) Pedescala. Thence by a steep ascent to the plateau, where a succession of colitic strata full of fossils, covered by red limestone containing ammonites, will be observed. I hr. further is Rotso, near the edge of the plateau; thence it is almost level to (2 hrs.) Roana; then the deep ravine of the river Assa has to be crossed; and 1 hr. further is Asiago. It is a long, straggling, and rather dirty village, with a large new church.

A pathway, only passable in dry weather, leads in 4 hrs. from Asiago to Valstagua, on the Breuta; 1 hr. over the open plain on a good road, passing Gallio, one of the Sette Comuni; then 1 hr. down a stony gully, to Boso, where is a small church, picturesquely situated. At this point both stream and path drop suddenly into a grand and deep gorge, which descends in 2 hrs. to Valstagna (510 ft.), whence a carriage-road leads down the valley to (11 m.) Bassano (Rte 79).

The Vicenza line, on leaving Schio, runs W., skirting a range of low hills,

6 m. Thieue, a market town with some second-rate paintings in its Church, and frescoes attributed to Paolo Veroness in its Château. Here the line turns S. to 20 m. Vicensa Junet. (Rte. 75).

This fine and interesting picture is badly placed, and seen with difficulty. In the Sacristy are frescoes of Justice, Prudence, and Fame, by P. Veroness. They originally adorned the Villa Soranza, a fine building, by Sammicheli, outside the town The Casa Pellizfirst floor, painted friezes, said to be by Giorgione.

Treviso Junct. for Belluno (Rte. 78), Venice, Motta, and Udine (Rte. 82).

TREVISO (28,000), on the Sile, a tributary of the Piave, is the ancient Travisium and capital of the province of the same name, and a bishop's see; it is situated in a fertile territory, and possesses manufactures of cloth, paper, &c.

The Duomo (closed at 3 o'clock) is of the 12th cent., restored by P. Lombardo in the 15th. Though unfinished, it is a handsome edifice, with five cupolas.—2nd rt. Adoration of the Shepherds, by Paris Bordone, born bere in 1500. On a pier nearly opposite, relief of the Visitation, with a rabbit below. End of rt. aisle, *Annunciation, by Titian, the Angel plays the gainer. This very temarkable work is *Frescoes by Pordenone (1520), with most beautiful Angels on the vault, Virgin and Child with SS. Sebastian and Roch, by Gir. da Treviso (1487). In the Choir to the l., *sarcophagus of Bp. Zanotti, magnificently carved by Pietro Lombardo (1483). At the high altar, busts of three local Saints; above, statues of the Virgin, St. Peter, and S. Prosdocimo. To the rt. of the Choir, sculptured fragments by the Lombardi on the wall, and a good tomb of Bp. Lupo (1668). In the Sacristy, a Procession of the Trevisan authorities, by Domenici, also born here, and three small subjects in one picture -the Annunciation, Nativity, and Resurrection, by P. Bordone. Over the door of the sacristy, Assumption, by Pennacchi. The chapel of the Sacrament was designed by Tullio Lombardo, and sculptured with brouze reliefs of the Washing of Feet, and other subjects. 3rd l., S. Euphemia enthroned, with SS, John Bapt., Catharine, and a donor, by Bissolo. In the Crypt, ancient columns, and tomb of Bp. Liberale, by the Lombardi. In the Cloister, curious inscriptions and tombe.

The Dominican Church of S. Miccold is a large Gothic building of red brick, with two tasteful doorways, a W. wheel, and long lancets in apse, transepts, and nave. The curiously designed wooden roof has been freely restored. There is a clerestory, but no triforium. -1st chapel rt., SS. Authory the Hermit and Sebastian, by Giacomo Paduano, with coloured wooden statue of S. Roch, in a frame by Anionio Lombardo (1490). 2nd rt., handsome white marble altar, with Statues of Christ, the Virgin, and St. John Evan. Early frescoes on several piers. Giottesque frescoes well preserved, in a Chapel to the rt. of the Choir. Behind the high altar, a *large painting of the Virgin and Child, with the Beato Niccolò Boccaccino, SS. uncertain attribution, but is now generally assigned to Savoldo. To the l., tomb of Senator Origo, by l'ietro Lombardo (1485), with a background painted by Giov. Bellini. In the Chapter House, entered from the Cloister on the rt., is a painted frieze representing forty distinguished Dominicans seated at their desks, and a very ancient fresco of the Crucifixion.

- S. Andrea.—1st left, *Virgin and Child with SS. Chrysostom and Lucia, probably by Bissolo.
- S. Leonardo.—1st rt., Virgin and Child with two Saints; end of rt. aisle, St. Erasmus enthroned, with SS. John Bapt. and Sebastian; both of uncertain attribution.
- S. M. Maddalena.—Behind the high altar, Christ as a Gardener, with angels and donors; above, Virgin and two Saints—by P. Veronese.

In the Monte di Pietà there is a celebrated picture attributed to Giorgione, the Entombment of Christ, with three Angels; but in the opinion of C. and C. it is a work of Pordenone. Signor Morelli assigns it rather to Dom. Caprioli.

The Pinacoteca, open on Sun., Tues., and Thurs., from 10 till 2, contains pictures which have been removed from various desecrated Churches, and a modern collection bequeathed by Signor Santi Giacomelli. Among the best examples are an Adoration of the Shepherds, by Caprioli; the same subject by Bassano; Virgin and Child with SS. John Bapt. and Jerome, by P. Bordone; a Venetian Adoration of the Magi; and a Virgin and Child by Giov. Bellini.

The Palazzo Pubblico and Theatre are fine buildings. The Villa Man frini has a large garden.

Treviso is delightfully intersected with running water, the bridges over which offer picturesque scenes. A pleasant walk may be taken along the line of the old walls N. of the town, enjoying fine views of the Venetian Alps. Following the Borgo Cavour to the Gate, and turning in 5 min. to the left at the end of the first straight stretch of road, the traveller may visit

6 m. Santa Cristina, in the Church of which village is a beautiful painting by Lor. Lotto—the *Virgin and Child, with SS. Peter, Cristina, Jerome, and Liberale. The patron Saint holds up her millstone most touchingly to the Infant Saviour, who looks down kindly upon her.

This Rly., which offers the shortest route from Venice to the Dolomites, strikes N.W. across the plain to Montebelluna Junct., whence a line leads S.S.W. to Castelfranco (Rte. 77). Through a short tunnel the train then reaches Cornuda, at the foot of a singular range of low hills which run from E. to W., affording beautiful and extensive views. [Hence a good carriage-road leads W. to (2½ m.) Maser, with a modern round church containing statues of Christ, John Baptist, and the Virgin and Child, by Vittoria. On the rt. is the Villa Giacomelli, built by Palladio for Daniele Barbaro in 1580, and adorned with beautiful and interesting *frescoes and decorations by Paolo Veronese. In the smaller rooms, lady, servant, and page, with dog and parrot, and other figures on a balcony.—Holy Families,

In the central cruciform saloon are full-length figures, a page standing in a doorway, and a little girl in another. Opening out of it on either side is a bedroom entirely painted with landscapes and mythology by P. Veronese.—Medallion portraits of Alessandro Vittoria, Daniele Barbaro, Andrea Palladio, and the painter. Outside the villa to the N. is a building decorated with stucco figures by Vittoria.

4 m. further W. is Asolo (Rte. 79). The pedestrian will find a pleasant walk of 1½ hr. back to Maser along the uneven ridge of the picturesque hills; or he may follow a good road S.S.W. to (6 m.) Montebelluna, skirting at some distance on the left the Bosco Montello, a forest which furnished timber for the Venetian navy during the time of the republic.]

Soon after leaving Cornuda the valley of the Piave becomes narrow and picturesque until reaching the plain of

Feltre (5000), which lies near the confluence of the Stizzone and Colmeda torrents, in a rich agricultural district, at the foot of the last slopes of the Rhætian Alps. Remains of its middle-age fortifications are seen in the upper town. On the highest point rose the Rocca, or Castle, of which a tall square tower remains, commanding a fine view over the upper valley of the Piave and Alps of Cadore. In the Piazza is the Town Hall, with a front attributed to Palladio, and a pillar on which once stood the Lion of St. Mark. In a street adjoining is the Monte di Pietà, the first of those useful establishments in Europe. A certain Fra Bernardino, a native of the town, was the origi-Feltre gave a ducal title to Gen. The Rly. on quitting Feltre runs through the wide valley of the Piave, the hills on the N. of which are very picturesque. At Sedico Bribano it crosses the Cordevole.

BELLUNO (1365 ft.), a town of Venetian aspect (16,000), is situated at the junction of the Ardo with the Piave. whose gravelly bed is sometimes ½ m. broad. In summer there is just water enough to float down timber-rafts, with cargoes of turpentine, pitch, &c., from the mountains. The place is mentioned by Pliny under the name of Bellunum. In the Cathedral, built by Palladio, but seriously damaged by an earthquake in 1873, is a S. Lorenzo, by Jacopo Bassano, a Deposition by Palma Giovane, and a bust of Gregory XVI., a native of the The Palazzo della Ragione is a fair specimen of Venetian architecture of the 15th cent. In front of S. Stefano is a Roman sarcophagus of the 4th cent. belonging to C. Hostilius Sertorianus, with reliefs of a chase; it was found in the vicinity. The town is supplied with water by an aqueduct 6 m. long.

The country is here composed of tertiary greensand and sandstone deeply indented by torrents and rivers. E. of the city the Ardo flows through a deep ravine into the Piave, so that Belluno is flanked on two sides by a precipitous hill. The greensand in itself forms a varied and picturesque country, even independently of the loftier mountains which are seen 3 m. N.W., on the road towards Bolzano (a small mountain hamlet), is Colontola, a spot said to have been sketched by Titian, and introduced into one of his pictures. It lies below the road in the hollow of the Ardo, and is nothing but a mill and a few houses; but the combination of scenery is extremely fine.

Good carriage-road across the hills to (6 m.) Mas, where the tertiary sand is covered by the fall of the neighbouring calcareous mountains.

2 m. N.W., on the rt. bank of the river is the large suppressed Cistercian monastery of Vedana. The road to it passes through huge fragments of the landslip.

A mile beyond Mas the road enters the *Canal d'Agordo, a magnificent gorge of the Cordevole, which it follows to 17 m. Agordo (2000 ft.), described in the Handbook for Southern Germany.

Another road leads N. from Belluno by (3 m.) Capo di Ponte, where the Piave is spanned by a fine wooden bridge of one arch, to (11 m.) Longarone (1470 ft.). Here opens on the l. the charming *Val Zoldo, through which a road leads to (10 m.) Forno di Zoldo (2855 ft.) chief village of the valley. better known as Bassano, after his native place.

The Museum, in the Piazza San Francesco, contains a valuable library of 60,000 vols.; a collection of autographs, 15th to 19th cent.; a Picture Gallery, in which is a Virgin and Child, with SS. Peter and Paul, in a fine landscape, by Francesco da Ponte (1509); a Crucifixion by Guariento; and several works by Dario da Trevigi, and by the Bassano family and their The interesting casts from the works of Canova, and a collection of his drawings and MSS., were the gift of his brother. Coins, Roman, Consular, and Imperial; Venetian of the middle ages. Prints, 12,000, including playing-cards by Mantegna; many rare engravings of Ugo da Carpi, Ant. da Trento, G. and Niccolò Vicentini, &c. Geological specimens and minerals, partly collected by the eminent geologist G. B. Brocchi, a native of Bassano.

The Castle, at the N. extremity of the town, built by the tyrant Ezzelino da Romano, is now the Archbishop's palace. It is partly in ruins, but is imposing from its situation and many towers.

Close to it is the Cathedral, which contains an Assumption, with portraits of Charles V., the Doge, and reigning Pope; an Adoration of the Shepherds; and the Martyrdom of St. Stephen, all by Jacopo Bassano. In the Church of S. Valentino is the *Baptism of S. Lucilla; and in the Municipio, St. Martin dividing his cloak with the beggar; both fine works by the same master.

The Villa Rezonica, 11 m. distant, is celebrated for its views, extending as far as the Euganean hills, and over those of the Sette Comuni, Asolo, &c. It contains, besides other works of art, the Death of Socrates, by Canova. The grounds of the Villa Parolini, outside the walls, are handsomely laid out, and contain a Pinetum and a good botanical garden.

On the 8th Sept., 1796, Napoleon here surprised and aunihilated the Austrian army under Wurmser, four days after the battle of Roveredo, having made a forced march of 60 m. from Trent in two days. He subsequently bestowed the title of Duke of Bassano on his minister Maret.

Carriage-road N.E. to (13 m.)

Possagno, the birthplace of Antonio Canova (1757-1822 . The road runs through a lovely country, passing by Romano, the birthplace of the tyrant of Padua, Ezzelino, and the village of Crespano. There is here a collection of pictures in the Casa Ajeta, of the early Venetian school, worth visiting, and a Library, rich in musical works and in rare early printed books, bequesthed to Crespano by Prof. Pietro Canal. This district suffered much from the earthquake in 1846, the central or most violent action of which was about Romano. The fine *Bridge at Crespano (see below) was erected by a bequest from Canova. The road rous along the last declivities of the Vicentine Alps, and over the tertiary hills, which extend from their base to the great plain between the Brenta and the Piave. The village of Possagno, where the father of Canova lived as an obscure architect and builder, is prettily situated at the base of one of the most southern spurs of the Alps in a small valley separating it from the tertiary group of the Asolan hills. With the laudable intention of conferring a permanent benefit on the place of his birth, and of leaving a monument of his piety, Canova began during his lifetime a magnificent Church, in the form of an antique temple, combining the Doric peristyle of the Parthenon with the cupola of the Pantheon. The general plan was by Canova bimself, but the carrying out of the work was entrusted to Giovanni Zardo of Crespano, by whom it was completed after the sculptor's death. The Church contains an altar-piece painted by the founder, but possessing little merit; a bronze relief of the Entombment, a very fine work, and the last which he modelled; and I the tomb of Canova, whose body was removed here from Venice, where he died on the 13th Oct., 1822, and deposited in a sarcophagus made by himself for the tomb of Marchese Berio at Naples, which had not been claimed by that family. He left by his will funds to complete the church, and to erect a fine *Bridge of a single arch (110 ft. span) over the torrent-bed of the Astego. It is principally of brick; part of the spandrels, and the base and coping of the parapet, are of stone.

The Palazzo, or House of Canova, is elegantly fitted up, and contains many interesting relics of the great sculptor. A very handsome wing has been added to it since his death, by his brother, to form a Museum, which contains casts of most of his works, some of his unfinished sculptures, and a monument to the daughter of a Spanish nobleman, the Marquis of Santa Crus, which, being unpaid for, remained on his hands.

12 m. E. of Bassano, or 6 m. S.S.E. of Possagno, is Asolo (3500), a very picturesque medizeval town at the foot of a hill surmounted by the rains of a Castle, from which is gained an extensive panorama of the great plains of the Brenta and the Piave, with the encircling Alps, the distant insulated group of the Enganean hills, and near Venice, the extreme K. horizon, terminated by the blue line of the Adriatic.

The town of Asolo is surrounded by a wall with mediseval turrets, and several of its houses have painted façades. In the Town-house is preserved one of Canova's earliest productions, a relief, presented by him to the municipality in grateful remembrance of their having conferred upon him his first title of nobility, when it had been indignantly refused to him by the authorities of Bassano, on the plea of his being a mere stone-cutter—taglia pietra.

The principal Church contains an altar-piece by Lor. Lotto, an early Bellinesque work of 1508.

The CASTLE, a quadrangular building with a donjon tower, is an interesting ! monument of the 12th cent. It was the residence of the beautiful Catarina Cornaro, the last Queen of Cyprus, after the forced resignation of her kingdom to the Venetians in 1488. Here this lady of elegant taste and refined education passed her days in comparative obscurity, in the enjoyment of an empty title and a splendid income, and surrounded by a small intellectual court and several literary characters. Of these, one of the most celebrated was Pietro Bembo, the historian of Venice, afterwards cardinal, whose philosophical dialogues on the nature of love, the "Asolani," have derived their name from this locality. The ex-queen died at Venice, while on a visit there.

The geologist will find much to interest him in the country about Bassano, Possagno, and Asolo, which was for the first time illustrated by our distinguished countryman Sir R. Murchison.

The Tramway leaves Vicenza by the Campo Marzio, near the Rly. Stat., and runs parallel with the Rly. as far as Tavernelle (Rte. 75). Thence to Montecchio (6000), with its two conspicuous Castles, and the Villa Cordellina, adorned with frescoes by Tiepolo. [From Montecchio a bridle-path follows the hills by Castel Gomberto, thence descending into the Val d'Agno: this route will reward the geologist by its fine sections of volcanic tufas of the tertiary period, especially at Montecchio and Gomberto.] From San Vitale a branch line strikes off W. to Arzignano. Hence a road ascends the l. bank of the torrent to (4 m.) Chiampo, from which village the pedestrian may reach in an hour the curious interesting geological formations at Vestena. The nearest approach by Rly. to this interesting district is from the E. side, but the entire region may perhaps be best explored from the S., ascending the Alpine torrent from the Stat. of San Bonifacio (Rte. Vestena the basaltic prisms are very lofty and erect. In one part they form a cliff nearly 50 ft. in height, down which the torrent Alpone pours a beautiful cascade. The basaltic columns are called Stanghellini, a name similar in its etymology to the Hebrides Staffa, for Stanga means a pole or staff.

About 3 m. farther is Monte Bolca, the largest and most singular deposit of fossil fishes yet discovered. The mountain, which is of a conical form, consists partly of basalt. The impressions of the fish are found in the schistose strata, which give out, when broken, a bituminous smell. A lignite of inferior quality is found here in the same tertiary marine strata under the basalt.

Winding round to the N., the Rly. now enters the Val d'Agno, rich and dotted with villages, at Cornedo, beyond which the scenery becomes sub-alpine.

Near the village of Valdagno (7500), on the 1. of the road, are coal-mines, which produce an imperfect coal or anthracite of very inferior quality for ordinary purposes, but rich in oil. Valdagno is situated in the tertiary strata (870 ft.). Here the Tramway ends, and a hilly road ascends to San Quirico. The micaslate, the fundamental rock of this part of the Alps, now appears, and after passing the bridge, a mile below Recoaro, several interesting specimens of basaltic dykes may be seen cutting through it on the side of the road leading to the baths.

7 m Becoaro (5600), beautifully situated at the head of a valley on the banks of the rapid Prekele (1500 ft.). Behind it, encircling its valley on the N.W., rises a very grand circus of serrated Dolomitic peaks, which form a wall 6000 feet high between it and the valley of the Adige the most remarkable of which are the Campo Grosso and Cima delle Tre Croci. To the W. is (1 hr.) Monte Spitz (2500 ft.), which commands a most extensive view of the whole range of the serrated pinnacles that shut in the valley.

The waters of Recoaro (52° to 55° Fahr) issue from the red sandstone and mica-slate strata, where these latter are cut through by a powerful basaltic dyke. The general composition of the water is the same in all, containing carbonates of lime, iron, and magnesia, and sulphate of lime, with a great excess of carbonic acid, which renders them acidulous and particularly agreeable to the taste.

They are considered to be very efficacious in all chronic disorders of the digestive organs and liver In urinary complaints, in general debility, and in complaints of the nervous system, they are used internally.

The Fontana Regia (or Lelia) is enclosed within grotto-like buildings, connected by a covered promenade: the flow of its waters has been much | Yicentino, 8vo. Padova, 1834.

increased by judicious underground operations. The pump-room is surrounded by beautifully-arranged and picturesque grounds. The Funte del Capitello, another favourite resort, is perched up near the summit of a hill which rises abruptly from the little village Piazzetta; the terrace commands one of the most charming views imaginable. Further away lie the Fontana del Franco, the Oreo, the Emiliano, and the Civillina, each of which is an easy walk from the village. Recoaro is much frequented from every part of N. Italy in June, July, and August. The pathways are numerous and well-shaded, and the walks in every direction charming.

A large quantity of the mineral waters of Recoaro is exported in bottles; it is to be met with every-where in Italy, and is sent also into the Levant, where it is much used by the Greeks.

The Geology of the environs of Recoaro has been well illustrated by Signor Maraschini,† and more recently by Sir Roderick Murchison, in his paper on the Structure of the Alps. In the upper part of the valley are calcareous beds (the Muschelkalk of German Geologists), and higher still the limestones of the colitic series, which, being converted into Dolomites probably by subterranean igueous action, form the high peaks of the Cima delle Tre Croci, Campo Grosso, &c. A curious porphyritic rock, which pierces the limestone at Tongara, is probably connected with the conversion into Dolomite of the elevated ridge of Laste and of the Cima della Fratta on the S. side of the valley.

interesting excursion be made in 3 hrs, to Schio by Rovegliana, across the hills that separate the valleys of the Prekele and Signori. But the geologist will find a good day's work between the two places. Ascending through chestnut groves to the village of Rovegliana, he will do well to visit a locality called La Commenda, near the Pass, where the muschelkalk is well characterised, and where he will find an abundance of its rare and characteristic fossils in the slaty limestone at the base of Monte Civillina and in the ravine descending to the Valle de' Signori. A fine view over the latter valley may be had by going to the top of the last-named hill; and the geologist will not fail to remark, on the opposite side of the Valle de' Signori, high up on the mountain-side, a projecting vein of crystalline marble (first observed by Arduini), from which he deduced some of his ingenious views on the changes produced on compact rocks by ingenious agency, perhaps the earliest mention of the modern theory of geological metamorphism. From the Pass of Civillina the path descends into the arid Val degli Zuccanti, where the basaltic rocks appear in large masses. On the S. of this valley the oolitic limestones are covered with beds of red scaglia containing cretaceous fossils; and these latter are seen to alternate with beds of volcanic or basaltic conglomerate, the whole surmounted by tertiary rocks containing nummulites, &c.

The road, before reaching Schio, passes through the village of Magre.

The pointed Spitz di Schio, at the bottom of which Magre is situated, is one mass of porphyritic rock.

On leaving Venice (Rte. 75), the Rly. crosses the lagoon to Mestre Junct. (Buffet), and turns N. from the Padua line to 12 m. Mogliano. Carriage - road thence between acacia hedges to (3 m. E.) Zerman, in the Church of which is a fine *painting by Palma Vecchio—Virgin and Child, with S.

Catharine of Siena, Peter, John Bapt., and Matthew. The large Cross held by St. Catharine is so cleverly painted that it stands out from the picture like a relief.

19 m. Treviso Junct., where the Belluno line branches off NW. [Another branch strikes N.E.E. to (22 m.) Motta di Livenza. Here, in the *Galleria Scarpa, is a portrait of a Lady, by Titian; St. Audrew, and the Resurrection, by Gaudenzio Ferrari; a colossal Sebastian, by Maidegna; round Virgin and Children, by Sodoma; Holy Family, by Savoldo; and Portrait of a Knight and his lady, playing the guitar, by Bernardino Licinio. Outside the town is the Pilgrimage Church of S. M. dei Miracoli, reached by an avenue. 1st altar left, Adoration of the Magi, by Savoldo, probably his earliest painting. The Cathedral, built by Sunsovino, has at the 1st altar left a painting by Pomponio Amalteo.

Leaving Treviso, the Rly. runs nearly due N. through the plain, passing by 28 m. Spresiano, 3 m. beyond which the Piave is crossed.

32 m. Suseguna. In the Church is a beautiful *Virgin and Child on wood, damaged and neglected, with SS. John Bapt., Peter, Catharine, and John Evan., by Pordenone. About a mile distant, perched on a hill, is the miniature fortress town of S. Salvatore di Colalto, with battlemented brick walls, commanding a fine view over the plain. In the Church, the Court of which is entered by a drawbridge, are some half-ruined frescoes by Pordenone (Flight into Egypt the best), an early Virgin and Child, and a large picture by Greelamo da Treviso.

The Rly follows the foot of the bills to 36 m Conegliano (6000). The town is surmounted by a large Castle, that gives a fine appearance to it as it is approached. There are frescoes by Pordenone, now nearly obliterated, on the outside of several private houses. Here was born the celebrated Giov. Batt Cima, by whom, however, there is only one painting in his native town-a *Virgin and Child with six Saints and two exquisite Boy angels. over the high altar at the Cathedral. At S Fiore di Sopra (4 m. E) is a group of Saints by him, over the altar. At Conegliano is a triumphal arch, in honour of the late Emp Francis i of Austria. A branch Rly strikes N. to (9 m) Vittorio, whence a good road leads to (10 m.) Belluno (Rte 81). Vittorio, named in honour of the late King of Italy, comprises the two adjacent towns of Berravalle and Ceneda, In the Piazza is a Statue of the King, by Del Favaro.

In the principal Church at Serravalle is a large Virgin and Child, with SS. Andrew and Peter and two Angels, by Titian. The old Church of S Giovanni has ancient columns and quaint capitals, spoilt by modernisation, and a Virgin and Child, with four Saints, by Jacope da Valenza (1502).

At Ceneda are two paintings by the same master—Virgin and Child with SS. John Bapt, and Biagio, and another with SS Sebastian and Anthony of Padus. 3rd altar rt., Virgin and Child, with SS. Roch and Sebastian, by Natalino da Murano. In the Monte di Pretà is a fine painting by Previtali. (For the road hence into the Dolomite country, see Southern Germany, Rte. 369)

46 m. Sacile (4600), on the Livenza, retains traces of its former importance, being surrounded by a good wall and ditch, the palace of the Podesta is a considerable building.

54 m. Pordenone (7000), is supposed to occupy the site of the Portus Naonie of the Romans. It contains large paper-works on the Noncello torrent. Giovanni Antonio Sacchi, called Pordenone, was born here in 1483. In the Cuthedral is a Holy Family with St. Christopher by him, and other paintings in the Church of San Marco. In the speciety are preserved thirteen silver-gilt reliquaries, fine specimens of the 11th, 14th, and 16th cents. In the Gothic Municipio is a painting of *St. Sebastian, with a bishop and knight, and two angels listening for each other's note, by Pordenone. Opposite, a Holy Family with St. Catharine, by Padovanino. At Torre, 3 m. N., is a *fine painting of the Virgin and Child with SS. Hilary, Paul, John Bapt., and Anthony, by Pordenone (1515). Between Pordenone and

64 m. Casarsa Junct., the Rly. crosses several torrents descending from the Alps. [Rly. S. to Portogruaro.] The Choir of the Parish Church at Casarsa is covered with frescoes of the History of the Cross, by Pordenone. [At Spilimbergo, 12 m. N., are fine paintings of his in the Choir, the best of which are a Conversion of St. Paul and Assumption of the Virgin.]

71 m. Codroipo (quadrivium, Fr. carrefour), takes its name from its situation at the point of intersection of two lines of Roman road. From Codroipo a road runs N. to (12 m.) San Daniele, where, in the Church of S. Antonio, are wall paintings by Martino da Udine, executed partly in 1498, partly in 1521. (Tramway to Udine, p. 344.) 5 m. further is Osopo, where is a Virgin enthroned with Saints, and a rich architectural background, by the same painter (1494). Osopo is more conveniently reached from Gemona (see below).

The Tagliamento is now crossed upon a wooden bridge, nearly two-thirds of a mile long, the bed of the river being here upwards of a mile wide, and a real "Sea of Stones," showing the changeable nature of the river's course.

78 m. Pasian Schiavonesco. A little further, on the rt., is Campo Formio, or more properly Campo Formido, where the treaty between General Bonaparte and the Emperor of Austria was signed in October 1797, by which Venice was so shamefully sacrificed by the French general to Austria—one of the deepest blots in the political history of Napoleon. The mean house in which this disastrous treaty was concluded is still pointed out; the leaden inkstand, from which it was signed, is preserved, as a melancholy record of the Republic's fall, in the Museo Correr at Venice.

85 m. UDINE Junct. (24,000), once the capital of Friuli, surrounded by pleasant gardens on the site of its old walls. In the centre is the Castle, now used as barracks, built in 1517 by Giov. Fontana, on the height chosen by Attila to view the burning of Aquileia. Udine presents many features of resemblance in its buildings to the mother city, to whose rule it was so long subjected: it has its grand square, its Palazzo Pubblico (1457)—a fine Gothic building on pointed arches—the two columns, the winged lion of St. Mark, and the campanile with two figures to strike The Palazzo Pubblico has been well restored since a fire in Feb. 1876, and the Municipal Offices are decorated and furnished with taste in the style of the building. The original fresco of the Madonna by Pordenone, damaged by the fire, is now concealed by an excellent copy by Ghedina of Cortina. The Cathedral, modernised, except its *fine W. front and Gothic portal, contains on the l. a painting by Martino da Udine (Pellegrino di San Daniele), St. Joseph and the Infant Saviour, with the Boy John Bapt. as a pilgrim. Two of the Chapels have paintings by Tiepolo (Vault and Crucifixion). Behind the high altar is a sculptured sarcophagus, originally intended for the bodies of SS. Ermanno and Fortunato, patrons of the diocese, containing the body of the Beato Bernardo da S. Ginesio, Patriarch of Aquileia, murdered at Rinchivilla in 1350. The body is richly robed, and among its ornaments are some handsome rings and other jewellery. The sword which killed the Patriarch lies by his side.

In the Sacristy is a good Virgin and Child with S. Lucia, by Dom. do. Tolmezzo.

The campanile dates from the 12th cent., and the building presents some beautiful details of pointed brickwork.

The Baptistery, just across the road, has a fine Assumption on the ceiling by Tiepolo, with an altar-piece of the Madonna della Purità, and paintings in chiaroscuro on the walls, by G. D.

Tiepolo, his son.

In the Church of S. M. della Grazie is a fine Virgin and Child, with SS. Gervasio, Protasio, Sebastian, and Roch, by Luca Monverde (1522); and in San Giorgio the Patron Saint slaying the dragon, with other subjects, by Florigerio of Conegliano (1543), the only known painting by this master, except two unimportant panels at Venice. The latter Church has a good belfry.

In the Bishop's Palace are some interesting paintings on the walls and ceilings by Tiepolo, and some restored frescoes by Giovanni da Udine.

The Museo Civico in the Palazzo Bertolini deserves a visit. It contains a fine *Coronation of the Virgin by Girolamo da Udine, a few pictures by Palma Giovane, Tiepolo, and others, a good 15th-cent. relief of the Virgin and Child, and a bust of Fra Paolo Sarpi. There is also a small but interesting Collection of articles in amber, ornaments in gold, jewels, Roman coins from Aquileia, and bronze implements found in the lower plain of Friuli. [Branch Rly, E. to Cividale (Rte. 85). Rly. N to Pontebba, passing Gemona, a walled town with a fine 12th cent. Church. 3 m. S.W. of it lies Osopo (see above). The remainder of the line is described in the Handbook for Southern Germany (Rte. 806).]

On leaving Udine the Rly, turns N. and ascends the Torre, which it crosses before reaching 90 m. Battrio.

94 m. S. Giovanni Mansano, Italian Custom-house.

The Judrio torrent, which forms the frontier, is crossed 2 m. before reaching

98 m. Cormons, Austrian Customhouse. The line now runs at the base of the hills, gradually approaching the Isonzo, the ancient Sontius, the hypothetical boundary of Italy, which it crosses before reaching 106 m. Gorisia or Görs (20,000), a modern manufacturing town on the Isonzo (see Handbook for South Germany, Rte. 106). The course of the Isonzo is followed to 114 m. Sagrado, where the line turns abruptly to the S.

119 m. Monfalcone. The Rly. now runs near the Adriatic through S. Giovanni on the Timavo, the ancient Timavus, Am. from the coast, the most northern point of the Adriatic. Shortly before arriving at Trieste, the chateau of Miramar, formerly the residence of the unfortunate Archduke Maximilian, is seen near the sea on the rt.

Aquileja, 12 m. S.W.W. of Monfalcone (5000), is reached by a ferry across the Isonzo. This was in ancient times one of the most important provincial cities of Rome, and the chief bulwark of Italy towards the N.E. Augustus often resided in it, and its population was then estimated at 100,000. It was taken by Attila in 452, and reduced to ashes by that ferocious barbarian. Its climate is pestilential at certain seasons, from the marshes around. The *Duomo (1019-42) retains the E. apse and low crypt of that date. The pointed arches of the nave, &c., resting on classic columns and capitals, seem to have been rebuilt in the 14th cent. It was the metropolitan Church of the Patriarch, whose stone throne is still preserved in the apse. Roman remains in the neighbourhood are abundant; a small Museum contains inscriptions, on a State of Venus. (See Southern Germany, Rte. 106.)]

Here our line turns N. to San Vito, where are some good paintings in the principal Church —a large altar-piece by Fr. Vecellio (1524), and frescoes of New Testament subjects in the Choir by Pomponio Amalteo (1535). The Rly. proceeds to Casarsa, which has some wallpaintings in its Cathedral by Pordenone, well worth notice. 79 m. Adria, a small town on the site of a very ancient city, which gave its name to the Adriatic Sea. Here is an interesting Museum of Terra-cotta vases and other antiquities. Beyond

87 m. Loreo, the Rly. turns N. to

99 m. Chioggia (21,000), a town on an island at the S. extremity of the Laguna. It consists of a wide street, extending the whole length of the island, with smaller ones branching off at rt. angles. On the E. side are canals, streets, and alleys filled with boats, masts, nets, and the usual implements of a fishing town. A wide arm of the Lagoon separates the town from the bank or sandy island which here divides the Lagoon from the open sea. On this island is the small town of Soito Marina (4000), between whose inhab, and those of Chioggia there exist great rivalry and jealousy.

The Cathedral, rebuilt after a fire in 1632, has a handsome pulpit, and a 14th cent. tower. The Gothic Granajo, or corn-store, resting on 64 pillars (1322), now serves as a fish and vegetable market. At the end of the main street a long low bridge of numerous small arches connects the town with the mainland. The harbour is much frequented, being convenient for the small coasting vessels of the Adriatic. The population is engaged in the coasting trade, in fishing, and in piloting vessels into the harbour of Venice.

Chioggia was founded, like the rest of the islands in this lagune, by the inhabitants who fled from the neighbouring mainland on the invasion of the barbarians. It was conquered by Venice, and from 1214 to 1797 a Venetian noble always filled the office of podestà. The Genoese got possession of the town after a severe struggle in 1379, but the Venetian nobles and merchants made desperate sacrifices to fit out a fleet, with which they reconquered the place a few months after. The island has a reputation for the beauty of its women, who are said to have furnished the models of the fine figures of the Venetian painters. The people of Chioggia are very proud of their descent: they are remarkable for their attention to dress. The Mantiila and Zendale may still be seen there, and the regular old Italian storyteller heard in the street. Goldoni's account of the inhab. in his day drolly hints their decline in prosperity : "In questo paese si divide tutta la popu lazione in due classi: ricchi, e poveri Quelli che portano una parrucca ed un mantello, sono i ricchi; quelli che non hanno che un berretto, ed un cappotto, sono i poveri, e bene spesso questi ultimi hanno quattro volte più danaro degli altri."

Cividale, the Roman Forum Julii, and ancient seat of the Lombard dukes. Within the Renaissance Cathedral is a curious octagonal Baptistery, much restored, but dating from the 8th cent. The Cathedral archives are of the highest interest. *Tempietto Lombardo, or Chapel of B. Geltrudis, attached to a Nunnery, is a remarkable building of various dates; and the little Church of S. M. dei Battuti contains a good painting by Martino da Udine (1529). For full description, see Handbook for Southern Germany (Rte. 106).

ROUTE 86.

VENICE TO RAVENNA, BY CHIOGGIA AND COMACCHIO.

Steamer from Venice to Chioggia, several times daily, in 2 hrs.; Rly. thence to (12 m.) Loreo or (20 m.) duesti ultimi hanno quattro volte più Adria (Rte. 84); canal - boat and carriage onward. This is a difficult.

At the mouth of the river Brenta is route at the best; the road is in place very indifferent, and the terrible inundations of 1881-2 have not contributed to improve it. Provisions ought to be taken. The journey may be divided into three days, stopping at Chioggia, and Mesola or Ariano. Should the traveller leave the Rly. at Loreo, a boat will take him to (6 m.) Taglio di Po, and a carriage thence to (6 m.) Mesola. Should he descend at Adria, where better arrangements can be made for the journey, he will drive to (6 m.) Corbola, crossing the Po, and row thence to (6 m.) Ariano and (6 m.) Mesola.

The steamer leaves Venice from the Riva degli Schiavoni, calling at Malamocco and Pelestrina. The excursion as far as Chioggia and back is easily made in a day, and affords a good opportunity of seeing the famous Murazzi, or great sea-wall of Venice. The time occupied in rowing the distance in a 6-oared boat is about 6 hours; it would, of course, be much shorter to sail, with a fair wind.

In returning from Chioggia to Venice, in the afternoon, the sunset over the Lagoon, with the Euganean hills and the Veronese mountains in the distance through the golden haze, is very fine.

The steamer proceeds down the Orfano Canal, leaving on the l. the Lunatic Asylum, and the Armenian convent of S. Lazzaro, and on the rt. La Grazia: then entering the canal of S. Spirito, it passes on the I. S. Clemente, where there is an Institution for female lunatics, and S. Spirito, a powder magazine, and on the rt. the quarantine ground of the Lazzaretto di Poveglia. It then runs nearer to the long island of the Lido, which forms a part of the natural breakwater extending nearly 80 m., from the mouth of the Piave to Brondolo, and formed by the deposit brought down by the rivers. first stopping place is (6 m.) Malamocco, a village of 800 inhab. employed in gardening and fishing. Metamaucum, the old capital of the district, and seat of a bishopric as far back as the 7th cent. was situated on another island near this, but has been submerged, Further on is Forte Alberoni, which stands at the extremity of the island, and guards the Malamocco entrance on the N., with Forte S. Pietro on the S. side at the N. extremity of Pelestrina. Extensive moles, formed with large blocks of stone brought from Istria, are seen on each side of the Malamocco entrance: these have been made of late years in order to increase the scour at the ebbing of the tide, by contracting the width of the channel, and thereby produce a greater depth in the pass; this has succeeded so well that vessels drawing 30 ft. water can now enter the Lagunes through The principal dyke of Diga, completed in 1847, is 1½ m. in length, and runs eastward from Forte Alberoni into the sea. The steamer coasts along the island of Pelestrina, 6 m. in length, passing a succession of small towns, but stopping only at (12 m.) Pelestrina (7000).

A little N. of this spot begins the line of the Murazzi, protecting the long sandy spits that separate the Lagune from the Adriatic. great sea-walls consist of an embankment of huge blocks of Istrian stone. rising 15 ft. above high water, presenting an inclined face towards the sea, in the form of stairs. Their entire length, including those on the island of Sotto Marina, where they can be seen, is 3½ m.; they were commenced in 1741, and completed in 1782; the slope towards the sea is as 1 to 4; the width of this pyramidal structure at its base, on the level of the sea, is 45 ft.

At the S. end of the Isola di Pelestrina are forts, protecting the entrance to the Porto di Chioggia from the sea.

Chioggia or Chiozza is described in Rte. 84. In the following sketch of the journey onward, it is assumed that the traveller does not avail himself of the Rly., but trusts to the boats and carriages of the country. Leaving the town, we proceed to (2 m.) Brondolo, on the Brents, and thence by the Canale di Valle, which connects the latter river and the Adige.

to (5 m.) Cavanella dell' Adige (Stat.) ascend the Adige W. for 2 m., and the 6th century. In the Refectory then turn S. along the Canale di Loreo to (10 m.) Loreo (Stat.), where the Rly crosses the canal. Thence to (13 m.) Cavanella di Po, on the l. bank of the Po Grande, or della Maestra. The other branch farther B, is the Po d: Goro, and between the point of bifurcation at the Punta di Sta. Maria and the sea these two arms of the river enclose the Isola d'Ariano, frequently subject to the destructive inundations of both its branches. On the northern shore of this island is (16 m) Taglio del Po, where the traveller should leave his boat and take a carriage to (22 m.) Mesola (2000), on the rt. bank of the Po di Goro. Here a country carriage, quite good enough for the roads, may be hired for the next day's journey. Mesola appears to have been considered important as a frontier town, since it is recorded that it has been twice purchased of the House of Austria by the Church—by Pius VI., for a million of scudi, and by Leo XII., in 1822, for 467,000. The expense of keeping up the embankments of the canals and rivers in this part of Italy, which are admirably constructed and managed, is said to have made the acquisition an onerous one to the Papal Government. The interesting Church, erected in 1071, was once attached to a rich Benedictine abbey. pavement of opus Alexandrinum is worth attention. The spaces over the columns and the apse, formerly covered with mosaics, were subsequently painted by a certain Chegus, who has left his name on them. In the Refectory, now the property of Count Guiccioli, are three good subjects - the best, our Lord giving His benediction, between a group of saints -probably by Pietro da Rimini.

Leaving Mesola, the road proceeds along the flat sandy tract to 30 m. Pomposa, formerly an island, but now nearly 10 miles from the sea, s most interesting place, well worth a visit, The Benedictine Abbey, one of Vienna, by an Austrian force; but the the earliest in Europe, was founded in is a Last Supper of the School of Giotto. Guido d'Arezzo, inventor of the musical scale, was a monk in this abbey. The *Church has a W. front ornamented with marbles, and a nave and aisles with 18 arches, supported on marble columns with rich capitals. The frescoes in the choir deserve attention. In the Alexandrine pavement is the stone of dedication, bearing date 7th March, 1026. The campanile (165 ft.), built in 1068 by Azzo, has 9 stories, surmounted by a conical roof. Before the sea receded so far it was a landmark for mariners.

A mile beyond Pomposa, the Volano is crossed by ferry, and the road passes over a sandy district to the 42 m. Porto di Magnavacca. 3 m.

W. lies Comacchio (8300).

The Lagunes of Comacchio, similar to those of Venice in their mode of formation, occupy an area of 106 sq. m, between the Po di Volano on the N. and the Po Primaro or Reno on the S., separated from the sea by a long sandy spit which has only one communication with it by the cut of Magnavacca. These Lagunes have from time immemorial been noted for their fisheries, consisting chiefly of eels and grey mullet: by means of a most ingenious system, the rivers which encircle them at a certain period of the year are allowed to flow in, and thus to introduce the young fry which ascend these streams from the sea; the fish are allowed to increase in size, and all exit is prevented by nets and sluices. The fishery employs nearly 8000 persons, and produces about 800,000 francs (32,000%) annually. The fish is cured on the spot, and exported to every part of Italy. The contrivances for enticing the young fish, and for retaining the old returning to the sea, which are very ingenious, have been described by Tasso and Ariosto.

The town of Comacchio was formerly fortified, and occupied, in virtue of a stipulation in the Treaty of defences were destroyed in 1848. It stands on an elongated island, having the Convent of the Cappuccini at one end, and the remains of the Citadel at the other. The depth of the Laguna varies from 3 to 6 ft.

About 7 m. S. of Magnavacca the road crosses the Reno at Il Passo, the supposed Spineticum Ostium of the ancients, leaving on the l. the almost abandoned town of Primaro and its small port, formerly defended by the Torre Gregoriana.

1½ m. further the Lamone is crossed, and we soon enter the northern extremity of the Pineta, many of whose finest trees were almost destroyed by the severe winter of 1880. The road traverses this tempest-stricken forest, and near the tomb of Theodoric, by the Porta Serrata, we enter 60 m. Ravenna (Rte. 97).

In the reverse direction this journey has been thus described:

"On leaving Ravenna, the road passes by the tomb of Theodoric, and soon after enters the Pineta. The deep silence of the forest is unbroken by the noise of the carriage, which passes over the green turf, scarcely marked by any track; and the traveller soon feels that without the aid of a guide, or the instinct of the North American, his path would be lost.

"18 m. Magnavacca. We changed horses and carriage at this place, by which we neither improved our vehicle nor the quality of the horses. The conveyance to which we were now transferred was somewhat ruder in construction than a tax-cart. We were given to understand that next day we should obtain a better carriage at

"38 m. Mesola, which we reached at sunset. Mesola consists of a large building, the residence of the governor, apparently constructed so as to be turned into a fort if necessary, and a few straggling houses, all lying below the level of the river, which is here magnificently embanked. During this day's journey we crossed five streams by means of ferry-boats; but the steepness of their banks, and the. bad arrangements of the boats, convinced us that no English carriage could be safely transported without improved means. We started from Mesola the next morning at daybreak, and drove along the S. bank of the Po di Goro, or Po Piccolo, to the point opposite Vicolo, where we found numerous boatmen, and soon made an arrangement for our conveyance to Chioggia. We were now dragged in a canal-boat, by two men, up the Po to (40 m.) Sta. Maria in Ponto, without landing at Ariano. Before arriving at Sta. Maria we left the boat in order to avoid the tiresome navigation round the western point of the island. reached Sta. Maria in this way, after a walk of a mile, while the boat did not arrive for 3 hours. The effects of the floods on this island of Ariano were still visible in the broken banks, and in the vast masses of shingle thrown up on various parts of the surface. The inhabitants were unable to leave their houses for 15 days during the great flood of November, 1839. On the arrival of our boat we proceeded on our voyage, passing through numerous canals, and seldom encountering a lock, in consequence of the level character of the country. We crossed the Po della Maestra, the Adige, and the Brenta, during the day; but the only towns we passed were (46 m.) Cavanella di Po and (49 m.) Loreo. We arrived at Chioggia at 8 in the evening, and our route altogether, in spite of the drawbacks mentioned, was far from being uninteresting; the swamps, canals, and rivers were so unlike anything we had seen before, that we were amused by the novelty of the scene; the time passed away pleasantly under the awning of the boat, or in walking along the banks of the canals, which the slow movement of our boat permitted; we were struck by the simple manners of the peasantry, and still more by the extreme beauty of the women; we were not annoyed by beggars; we enjoyed a freedom unknown to travellers in diligence; and at the close of our journey we almost regretted that it was the only one, and the last of the kind." - Dr. Fraser.

ROUTE 87.

TRENT TO BASSANO, BY THE VAL SUGANA -- CABRIAGE-BOAD.

60 m.—Dil. daily in 11 hrs.

The scenery is far superior to that between Trent and Verona. The Val Sugana is highly picturesque, the Gorge of the Cismone very striking, and the spurs of the hills beyond Bassano offer charming views over the great Venetian plain.

The improved road, soon after leaving Trent (685 ft.), enters the gorge of the Fersina, and is cut through the rock by an easy gradual ascent to

7 m. Pergine (1580 ft.)—a pretty town of 4470 inhab., with a Castle of the Bishops of Trent on a rock of slate, on the l. bank of the Fersina. It stands in the midst of charming scenery near the watershed between the Adige and the Brenta. Beyond it the river Brenta takes its rise in the two small picturesque lakes of Caldonazzo and Levico, on the rt. of the road. The upper part of the valley through which it flows, and our road descends, is called Val Sugana. and it presents features of extreme interest. The post-road between Pergine and Levico, being carried through a defile flanked by heights which conceal all view, will convey but a very limited notion of the beauties which surround the cradle of the Brenta. [From Pergine a road strikes S, by Sta. Catarina, along the W. margin of the Lake of Caldonasso, through the extensive chestnut-woods of Castegne, which overshadow it, and through Calcerancia, to the village of Caldonazzo at the lower end of the lake. Here it turns N.E., and falls into the post-road at Levico.] The main road. descends to skirt the margin of the the traveller may proceed throw little Lago di Levico, separated from the Lake of Caldonazzo by a low ridge, along which ran formerly the Roman road between Trent and Treviso.

14 m. Levico (3670), with mineral springs, recommended for theumstism, liver complaints, and consumptive disorders. A large Bath house affords accommodation for 300 persons. The country in the immediate vicinity is bleak and tree-less, but the excursions around are numerous and beautiful.

S.W. a good road leads to (3 m.) Caldonaszo, and follows the Val Centa S. to (8 m.) Lavarone (3375 ft.), beautifully situated near the little Lake of the same name. Footpath thence S.W.W. through park-like scenery in 2 hrs. to Folgaria, and (2 hrs.) Serrada. 3 hrs W. of Lavarone is Vezzena, reached by way of the little Lake of Laghetto, and the Inn at Monterovers (4265 ft.). From Vezzena the high road may be regained by the Val di Bella, where is an Establishment of Baths.

18 m. Masi, a pleasantly situated village, where the fine Dolomite peaks of the Cima Dodici (7660 ft.) begin to show themselves to the S. 2 m. further, to the l, of the road, rises Roncegno (1760 ft.) with a muchfrequented establishment of springs and mud-baths.

21 m. Borgo di Val Sugana (1475 ft.), the principal place in the valley, has 3900 inhab, most of whom are occapied and enriched by the culture of It is somewhat compressed within the neighbouring heights, and occupies the site of Burgum Ausugii, a military station on the great road made by the Romans to connect the shores of the Adriatic with the colony of Tridentum. Among the castles with which this part of the valley abounds, that of Borgo, which be-longed to the Counts of Telvana, is the most conspicuous. From Borger Castelnuovo into the Val Tesino. The road quits the Bassano route at Castelnuovo, turns N.E., passes by Strigno and Bieno, crosses a low col, and descends to Pieve di Tesino.

31 m. Grigno, on the boundary of Tyrol, and in the province of Venice. Near this the Vale of Tesino opens out from the N. It is inhabited by a race who follow the profession of pedlers and printsellers, and wander all over the world with rude pictures of saints, &c., for sale. This trade began in the middle of the 17th cent.; and though it has now much fallen off, the inhabitants of this obscure valley still maintain agents in some of the principal cities of Europe and America. The family of Artaria come from hence. The children of the valley never fail to return with the earnings of years of toil, to spend them and end their days by the banks of the Tesino. Brenta, which has hitherto flowed E., now turns S. through a rocky gorge, in the midst of which is 35 m. Tezze, with the Austrian Custom House.

40 m. Primolano. Napoleon here surprised and defeated the Austrian vanguard in the memorable campaign of 1796. Primolano, as well as Borgo and Levico, were also the scenes of engagements between General Medici's division of the regular Italian army and the Austrians in July, 1866. There is an excellent carriage-road to (12 m.) Feltre. (Excursion to Primiero and Agordo, see Rte. 365, Handbook for S. Germany.)

[From Primolano, or Borgo, or, better still, from Pedescala or Valstagna, an excursion may be made S. of our road to the Sette Comuni (Rte. 76).]

Between Primolano and Cismone the Brenta traverses the magnificent *defile of Covelo (Kofel), and the road is carried through it at a considerable height above the river, with precipices above and below. Where the rocks are highest and wildest a singular fortress-cave once existed in the face of the cliff, 100 ft. above the road. It was capable of containing a garrison of 500 men, and its guns completely commanded the passage. Maximilian took it from the Venetians in 1509, and it was thenceforth held by Austria, though within the territory of Venice. It completely commanded the passage valley: it had no visible approach from above or below, and was supplied with water from a spring within the cave. Its powder magazine was cut out of the rock.

At Cismone, where the torrent Cismone enters the Brenta, Napoleon halted the night before he routed the Austrians at Bassano in 1796, and was glad to content himself with half a private soldier's ration of bread for supper.

47 m. Valstagna, on the W. bank of the Brenta, is famous for its manufacture of broad-brimmed hats. placed at the opening of a deep ravine penetrates into the Sette Comuni, and offers the easiest access from the valley of the Brenta, by which the principal traffic is carried on with Bassano. A stone bridge over the Brenta leads to the hamlet of Oliero, with a large paper manufac-No traveller should pass this picturesque spot without seeing the magnificent natural cavern in the Dolomitic limestone, which here forms a vertical wall towards the valley of the Brenta, and from which issues a considerable stream or river of most limpid water, evidently one of the principal subterranean drains of the superjacent table-land of the Sette It may be explored by Comuni. torchlight in an hour. The stalactites are fine, and the whole scene very striking. [There is a road to Bassano by the rt. bank of the Brenta.] The valley opens at 60 m. Bassano (Rte. 79).

Antonio, the doubletopped tower of the Observatory, and the lofty roof of the Palazzo della Ragione. Crossing the Canal, and bisecting the plain, the Rly. approaches the northern extremity of the Euganean hills, near which is situated 29 m. Abano, much frequented by Italians during the bathing season (June, July, and August), with a well - appointed Stabilimento. baths have retained their celebrity from the time of the Romans, and under the name of Fons Aponus, the place is repeatedly mentioned by classical authors; medals and other remains of antiquity have been found here in abundance: the place is also remarkable as the birth-place of Livy, of Valerius Flaccus, and of Pietro d' Abano, in whom the Paduans take almost equal pride.

"From a sort of natural tumulus, about 15 ft. high, and above 100 in circumference, burst two or three copious streams of hot water, varying from 77° to 185° Fahr.: they contain a minute portion of muriates of soda, lime, and magnesia, and sulphate of lime; the gaseous emanations with which they are accompanied consisting of azote and carbonic acid. A part serves to fill the baths and pits for heating the muds; a part loses itself in cuts and wet ditches, amidst the meadows; and a part turns the wheel of a mill, which whirls amidst volumes of smoke.

"The meadows, which are of surprising fertility, extend about 2 m. to an insulated hill, entirely covered with trees, brushwood, and vines; from the foot of this issue smoking streams, and a little farther is another single hill, from whose roots issue hot mineral waters. The structure of the hills, and their character and position, show evidently that they are N. Italy.

outliers of the volcanic group of the Euganeans.

"There are other springs of the same nature, and having all of them more or less medicinal virtues; which procured apparently for this place the ancient name of Aponon, derived from a, privative, and movos, pain.

"It is celebrated for its Muds, which are taken out of its hot basins, and applied either generally or partially, as the case of the patient may demand. These are thrown by after having been used, and at the conclusion of the season, returned to the hot fountain, where they are left till the ensuing spring, that they may impregnate themselves anew with the mineral virtues which these are supposed to contain. The muds are, on being taken out, intensely hot, and must be kneaded and stirred some time before they can be borne. When applied — an operation which very much resembles taking a cast—they retain their heat without much sensible diminution for three-quarters of an hour, having the effect of a slight rubefacient on the affected part, and producing a profuse perspiration from the whole body. Heat is considered as so essentially seconding their operations, that this watering-place, or rather mudding-place, is usually nearly deserted by the end of August; though there are some who continue to wallow on through the whole of September.

"The baths, though sometimes considered as a remedy in themselves, are most generally held to be mere auxiliaries to the muds, and usually but serve as a prologue and interlude to the dirty performance which forms the subject of the preceding paragraph, they being supposed to open the pores and dispose the skin to greater susceptibility."—Rose's Italy.

The thermal springs in this district are very numerous. Besides those at Abano, there are others at Ceneda, Monte Gottardo, Sant' Elena, San Pietro Montagnone, Monte Grotto, San Bartolommeo, Monte Ortone, and San Daniele in Monte.

The Rly, rans at the foot of wellwooded and extremely picturesque hills to 3 m. Montegrotto, where there are several hot, gaseous emanations, and bath-house. Beyond a tunnel through a spur of the Euganeans, is seen on the l. the Castle of Cattajo, bequeathed by Marchese Obizzo (a Venetian nobleman), to the Duke of Modena. The old part of the castle, built in 1550, contains some frescoes by Gian Battista Zelotti, a friend of Paolo Veronese. The Archeological Collection is full of interest, and there are specimens of old armour and warlike weapons, early Christian inscriptions, Etruscan, Greek, Egyptian, and Roman sculptures, and other curious antiques and relics.

34 m Battaglia, situated in an amphitheatre of hills, at some distance from the village. Here are some thermal springs, much frequented in July and August. The Stabilimento di Sta. Elena lies in the beautiful park of the Wimpffen château, which is conspicuous on a terraced knoll close to the line. The treatment pursued is similar to that at Abano; but the place is quieter. Opposite, on the top of a hill, stands the picturesque Castle of Monticelli.

[About 2 m. E. is Carrara di S. Stefano, once celebrated for its Benedictine Monastery founded in 1027. Several of the Carrara family were buried here. Marsilio (1330) has a marble monument, with reliefs of the Virgin, SS. Antony and Benedict. On a pilaster by the S. wall is an inscription in Lombard characters relative to the death of Ubertino Carrara in 1365, in which the family is designated by the name of Papafava, lords of Carrara and Padua. The bell-tower hears the date of 1293. The fine old monastery was supplessed in 1777, and sold by the Venetian Government to the Erizzo family.]

38 m. Monselice Junct (8000), in a depression between two peaks, is surmounted by a Rocco, or Castle of the 13th cent., even more feudal in aspect than Este It has long ranges of curtain walls with stepped battlements, studded with bold square crenellated towers. They ascend and descend the hill-sides, intermingled with rich vegetation. Monselice was a place of importance in the middle ages; in the 10th cent, it became a feudal possession of the House of Este, even before they had acquired the town whose name they subsequently adopted (1165). The bill of the Rocco, from which the town derives its namemountain of silex -- is formed of trachyte, known by the local designation of masegna, which is extensively quarried for building purposes. The Palace on the hill belongs to the Duodo family. The Church, with its seven detached chapels, in imitation of the seven basilicas of Rome, was designed by Scamozzi. In the Villa Cromer is preserved one of Canoca's earliest works (1778), a statue of Æsculapius. All the country is exceedingly rich, but intersected by maddy canals. Rly. W. to Este Rte. 57).

EXCURSION TO ARQUA.

[3 m. S.W. is Arquà del Monte Carriage there and back, 10 fr.), reached by a picturesque road at the foot of the hills. The return may be varied by joining the Rly. at Rate, or vice tersa. Arqua is beautifully situated amongst the Euganean hills, here Petrarch lived and died (1304 74) The house shown as his habitation ta the upper part of the town has wallpaintings of subjects taken from his poems (16th cent.), but is much altered (Custode, 50 c.). Here is Petrarch's chair, and Petrarch's pretended cat, or miccia, as he used to call her (and as all cats are still called in Italy), a here stuffed in a small niche. The tomb of the Laureate, of the same form as Antenor's at Padna, stands on four stumpy pillars in the churchyard. It is of red Verous marble, and was raised by Francesco di Brossess husband of Francesca, one of the illegitimate children of the poet. The inscription is by Petrarch himself. Above is a bronze bust, placed there in 1677. Byron has sketched this sepulchre in a well-known passage of ' Child Harold,'—

There is a tomb in Arqua, &c.

The Pozzo di Petrarca, a walled cistern, is said to have been built at his expense for the use of the town. Near Arqua is a spring of strongly sulphureous water. Very good figs and white wine are grown here.

46 m. Stanghella, where we cross the Canale Gorzone, which flows into the sea near Chioggia. 2 m. further we reach the Adige, in crossing which there is a good view over the plain of Rovigo, the river being here at a higher level than that town. The circular fort on the left was erected by the Austrians. The country is flat and marshy, but luxuriant in vegetation.

51 m. ROVIGO Junct. (11,000), an active and cheerful city, the seat of the Bishop of Adria. The Duomo is a plain building, with some good columns of Serravezza and local conchylious marbles. In the Piazza Maggiore is a Column on which once stood the Lion of St. Mark and a marble pedestal for the gonfalone of the Republic. The Chapel of the Madonna, a circular edifice at the extremity of the city, contains a host of votive offerings and paintings, the latter principally by inferior artists of the Venetian school. At the Town Hall is the *Galleria Municipale, which contains several paintings of interest, mostly Venetian.

71 m. FERRARA (29,000), the capital of a province, in a fertile but unhealthy plain, at a level of only 61 ft. above the sea, and at a short distance from the Po, whose bed is on a level with the tops of the houses city, the Forum Alient of Tacitus, and once the residence of a court celebrated throughout Europe, still retains many traces of its ancient grandeur. There are broad and ample streets, but grass grows on the pavement; the Palaces are falling into decay; and the walls, 7 m. in circuit, which once contained nearly 100,000 inhab, now enclose vast areas of kitchen garden and deserted sites. The population is collected together in the centre of the city, and thinly scattered over the remaining portion. Jews are an opulent body, and number about 3000. In spite of their deserted appearance, the broad and handsome streets are imposing; the Corso di Po, by which the city is entered from the Rly Stat. with its prolongation the Corso di Porta Mare, is 1 m. in length.

The modern city is supposed to have been founded in the 5th cent., when the invasion of the Huns and the destruction of Aquileia drove the inhabitants into the marshes for security. Its walls were built in the 6th cent. by the exarchs of Ravenna, and it was raised to the rank of a city in 661, when the bishopric of Vigovenza was transferred to it, its archbishopric was founded by Clement XII. in 1755. But the chief interest of Ferrars arises from its connection with the House of Este. As far back at the 10th cent. we find this family connected with Ferrara, first as suprem magistrates, and afterwards as hereditar princes (1240), acknowledging generally the suzerainty of the Pope, though some times asserting their independence. Full rara remained under their sway untithe extinction of the legitimate brand in 1597, in the person of Alfonso II. and in the following year it was annexed to the States of the Church by Come VIII., on the pretext that Cesare d Esti the representative of the family by collateral line, was disqualified by illi gitmacy. During the 16th cent, to Court of Ferrara was unsurpassed by any in Europe for its refinement and in telligence; its University was renown throughout Christendom, and so much English students were collected with its walls as to form a distinct nation that learned body. But there are greate names associated with the history t Ferrara at this period than those of a princely sovereigns. "Melanchely the city looks now, every lover of Italia poetry," says Forsyth, " must view will affection the retreat of an Amosto, a Tasso a Guarini. Such is the ascent of wealth over genius, that one or two princes could create an Athens in the midst of this Bootia. The little courts of Ferram and Urbino seemed to emulate those of Alexandra and Pergamos, contending for pre-emmence only in literature and elegance.'

In addition to the ancient brilliancy of its court, Ferram offers no inconsider able interest to the English travelle for the in pulse which it gave to the Reformation, and for the asylum give to Calvin and to Marot by Duches Rance, the high-minded daughter of Louis XII., and wife of Ercole II She afforded protection to numerous friends of the Reformed Faith who fled from other parts of Italy, and even from countries beyond the Alps. That accomplished princess had become acquainter with the doctrines of the Reformer previous to her departure from I rance in 1527, by means of some of thou learned persons who frequented the court of Margaret, Queen of Navarre "She extended her protection and how pital ty to many of her own country men whom the violence of persecution has driven out of France Mad. do Soubia the governess of the duchess, resolute the court of Ferrara, along with her a

In 1584 the French poet, Clement Marot, fled from his native country, in consequence of paraecution; and, after residing for a short time at the court of the Queen of Navarre, in Bearn, came to Ferrars. He was recommended by Madame de Soubise to the duchees, who made him her secretary. About the same time the reformer John Calvin visited Ferrara, where he spent some months under the assumed name of Charles Heppeville. He received the most distinguished attention from the duchess, who was confirmed in the Protestant faith by his instructions." Among the other learned personages assembled here at this time was Fulvio Peregrino Mozata, who had been tutor to the two younger brothers of the duke. and who became still more calebrated as the father of Olympia Morata, the most enlightened female of her age; who first "acquired during her residence in the Ducal Palace that knowledge of the Gospel which supported her mind under the privations and hardships which she afterwards had to endure.

Under the sway of the house of Esta, Ferrara was one of the great commercial cities of Italy. Its trade began to decline in the 16th cent., and, aithough it has been much reduced even since that period, the city still carries on a considerable traffic in agricultural produce. A great deal of business was formerly done here in bemp, of which large quantities found its way into the English dockyards, the Ferrara growth being considered the best for cordage.

Ferrara had its SCHOOL OF PARK-Time, but none of them rose to the first rank, and their leaders were infinenced in turn by the Schools of Padus, Bologna, and Venice. Examples of all the chief painters will be seen in the Churches and Pinacoteca, unhappily in many cases over-restored. CHURCH IN.

The "Cathedral was consecrated in 1136; its highly interesting Gothic exterior, with few exceptions, belongs to that period, but the interior has been spoiled by modern renovations. The *beautiful W. front is divided by buttresses capped with turrets into three equal portions, each subdivided into a triplet, with two exquisite areades one above the other, a small wheel window, and a third arcade beneath the caves of the low-pitched gable. There is no finer work of the kind in Italy. The porch is composed of a semicircular arch supported by columns, which rest upon curious figures on red marble lions; the side doors have also semicircular arches. The rade reliefs with which this part is covered are in a good state of preservation; they represent the Last Judgment, various events in the Life of Christ, the Seven Mortal Sins, and numerous mered, profane, and grotesque emblems. Over the S. door is a colossal marble bust of Douba Ferrara, sinter of the founder, and on the same side a statue of Alberto d'Este, la vise pilgrim's dress, in which he returned from Rome in 1330, laden with buils and indulgences. Over the central door is a relief of St. George and the Dragon, and higher up the long-venerated miraculous statue of the Virgin, attributed to Niccolò da Pisa.

The double areade is continued round the flanks of the edifice. At the S.E. extremity is the huge but unfinished Campanile, in four tiers of high round arches, built of Verona marble, in the time of Duke Ercole H.

The interior is in the form of a Greek cross. The semicircular choir was first added in 1499, by Rosette, a native architect, known as one of the earliest restorers of Italian architecture; the portion beyond the transept dates from 1637, and the remainder from 1712 to 1735, the 3rd chapel rt. 18 Garofalo's picture of the Virgin and Child in the clouds, with two female saints below. In the 4th chapel rt. are works in distemper by Cosimo Tura, Martyrdoms of saints, boldly painted in a large In the transept are excellent coloured scalptures of Christ and the Apostles-half-lengths in niches, by Alfonso Lombardo; and bronze statues of the Crucifizion, the Virgin, St. John, and St. George, by Niccolò Baroncelli, much admired by Donatello. On the vault of the choir is the *Last Judgment, by Bastianino, one of the favourite pupils and the best copyist of Michel Angelo. Lanzi says that it occupied 3 years in painting. Like Dante and Michel Angelo, Bastianino availed himself of the opportunity to put his friends among the elect and his exemies among the damned; the picture consequently contains numerous portraits of both. Among the latter is pointed out the young woman who refused his hand, while the one whom he married is placed among the blessed, and is seen maliciously gazing at her early rival. It is much to be regretted that recent attempts to restore this fine work have rt and the St. George on the 1., are | sepulchral monuments, and the

Over the 6th altar on the 1. is a *Coronation of the Virgin with ten Saints and an Innocent, by Francia, a beautiful work. In the 3rd chapel on the l., Madonna with SS. Paul, Giustina, Catharine, and another Saint, by Garofulo 1524). To the l, and rt. of the entrance door are large frescoes of S8. Peter and Paul, by Garofalo. In a room near the Sacristy, Annunciation by Garofalo, Virgin and Child by his master, Panetti, and a Statue by Jacopo della Quercia. On the wall of the choir is the sepulchral memorial of Pope Urban III., who died of grief here in 1187, on hearing of the reverses of the second crusade, previous to the fall of Jerusalem.

S. of the cathedral is the Palasse della Ragione, with an old arcade in the Pointed style.

San Benedetto (9, B. 2). The most remarkable paintings are Christ on the Cross, with St. John and other saints. by Dosso Dossi, the Martyrdom of St. Catharine, by Scurrellino, one of his finest works; a Circumeision, ia the rt. transept, by Luca Longhi of Ravenna; and an Assumption of the Virgin, in the I., by Scarsellino. The monument of Ariosto, removed to the library, stood in the chapel on the rt. of the choir, where is a representation of it in painting. The Convent has been turned into Barracks. On the ceiling of an Office, formerly the vestibule of the refectory, is a painting of Paradise, with a choir of angels, by pupils of Dosso Dossi.

B. Cristoforo (6, B. 3), whose time architecture is attributed to Sansovino, is decorated with sculptures by that celebrated artist. The twelve chapels are remarkable for as many paintings of the Mysteries by Niccold Rosselli. The adjoining Campo Santo occupies injured the effect of the original the gardens and clossters of the Cercolouring. The Annunciation on the tosa. The cloisters are covered with of the monks converted into mortuary chapels. Among the tombs are those of Borso d'Este, first Duke of Ferrara, founder of the monastery; Duke Venanziano Varano and his wife, by Rinaldini; Lilio Giraldi, the mythologist, by Lombardi, removed from the cathedral; the wife of Count Leopoldo Cicognara; and Bernardino Barbulejo, or Barbojo, said to have been the preceptor of Ariosto. Here also may be seen the bust of Cicognara, Canova's last work: the tomb of Count Mosti, by Tadolini; that of Count Costabile by Tenerani, and the monument of Garofalo, containing his ashes, brought from Sta. Maria in Vado. The remains of the painters Ortolano, Bononi, and Bastianino, were also brought here from that Church. Forming the entrance to one of the chapels is a beautful doorway by Sansovino; another chapel, intended to contain monuments of illustrious Ferrarese, contains good statues of Monti and Varano by Ferrari, a native artist of merit.

Corpus Domini (C, D. 3) has some tombs of the d'Este family.

San Domenico (7, C. 2) is remarkable for the statues on its front by Andrea Ferreri. Here is the tomb of Caliognini, precursor of Copernicus. There are also some pictures by Scarsellino, and in the 4th chapel 1. is a bust of St. Hyacinth, by Antonio Lombardo.

S. Francesco (9, C. 3) was founded by Duke Ercole I. (1494). chapel on the 1. of the choir are the Marriage of the Virgin and the Flight out of Egypt, by Scarsellino; and an interesting work by Ortolano in the 4th chapel 1. In the rt. transept are two pictures by Bononi, and a good painting by Scarsellino, the Virgin and Child with S. Theresa. same arm of the transept is the monument of Marchese di Villa of Ferrara, celebrated for his defence of Candia against the Turks in 1676; and that of Giambattista Pigna, historian of the family, and secretary of Duke Alfonso. In the first chapel on the l. is a marble altar-piece in high relief, attributed to the Lombardi. Not the least remarkable curiosity of this Church is the famous echo, said to reverberate 16 times.

Il Gesù (10, C. 3).—In the choir is the mausoleum of the Duchess Barbara of Austria, wife of Alfonso II., eloquently eulogized by Tasso.

8. Giorgio (E. 4) is celebrated as the scene of the General Council held at Ferrara by Pope Eugenius IV., in 1438, for the purpose of bringing about a union between the Greek and Latin Churches, and at which the Emperor John Palæologus was present. at that period the atmosphere of Ferrara was tainted by malaria, for it is recorded that the council was removed to Florence in consequence of the unhealthy climate of this city. The Chapel on the rt. of the choir is painted with the Miracles of St. Benedict. On the l. is the magnificent *tomb of Lorenzo Roverella, physician to Julius II., and afterwards Bp. of Ferrara, by Ambrogio da Milano (1475). It consists of a recumbent effigy, on a sarcophagus within an arched recess, all in white marble, relieved by inlaid bits of porphyry. Sculptures of the Virgin and Child, with three bishops, St. Jerome, St. John Bapt., and numerous angels, adorn the tomb, and the whole is surmounted by figures of St. George and The high altar is richly the dragon. inlaid with jasper and alabaster, and there are some good intarsia stalls.

Sta. Maria in Vado (D. 3, 4), one of the oldest churches in the city, but entirely altered by modern restoration, is celebrated for a miracle resembling that of Bolsena. The Church tradition relates that, the faith of the prior having failed at the moment of the consecration on Easter Sunday, 1171, the Host poured forth blood, and converted him from his disbelief. Here are some fine paintings by Carlo Bonons. In a chapel near the choir is a painting of Justice and Power, by Cotignola, containing the celebrated Latin enigma of Alessandro Guarini, which has not yet been explained.

- S. Maurelio (4, B. 2, bas a Virgin and Child with saints, and another with Capuchin nuns, both by Scursellino; SS. Christopher, Autony the Abbot, Dominic, and Francis, in the sacristy, by Carlo Bonone.
- S. M. della Rosa, in the Via Giardini (C. 2) contains a *Pietà with terra-cotta figures, by Guido Maszoni (1488).
- 8. Paolo (12, C. 2) has one of the masterpieces of Scarsellino, the Descent of the Holy Ghost. An Adoration of the Maga, and the vault of one of the side-chapels, are by the same master. The choir was painted by Scarsellino and Bonone. The Resurrection is by Bastianino. Two painters of this school are buried Two here, Giambattista Dossi, and Bastaruolo, who perished while bathing in the Po. Upon the 5th pilaster rt, is the *bust, by Viltoria, of Antonio da Montecatino, friend and Minister of Duke Alfonso, better known as a professor of Peripatetic philosophy.

The *CASTLE, formerly the Ducal Palace, surrounded by its ample most and bridges, carries the imagination back to the fortunes of Ferrara during the middle ages. "It stands," says Forsyth, "in the heart of the subjugated town, like a tyrant intrenched among slaves. It is a huge, square building, with towers at the angles; it retains few traces of the ducal family, and wears an air of melancholy, in accordance with the descried aspect of the city." Its apartments were formerly decorated by the first masters of the Ferrarese school, but the paintings have entirely disappeared, except on the ceilings of the antechamber and the Saloon of Aurora, where some by Dosso Dossi still remain. The building is now occupied by the | fr.; Catalogue, | fr., is at the Atomes

Telegraph and various Public Offices. In the daugeons beneath the N.E. tower, Parisina, wife of Nicholas III., and her guilty lover Ugo, his na-tural son, were put to death. The outlines of that dreadful trugedy have been made familiar to the English reader by the beautiful poem of Lord Byron, to whom the subject was suggested by a passage in Gibbon. The following description of the closing scene is from Frizzi's 'History of Ferrara':- "It was in those frightful dungeons which are seen at this day beneath the chamber called the Aurora, at the foot of the Lion's Tower, at the top of the street of the Giovecca, that, on the night of the 21st May, 1425, were beheaded, first Ugo, and afterwards Parisins. At the S.E. corner of the Castle is a monument to Girolamo Savonarola, born here in 1452.

Further S is the Municipio, an old mansion of the Este family; and, nearly opposite, the Archbishop's Palace.

The Bominario, behind the latter towards the E., has some admirable *Frescoes of Biblical and Mythological subjects by Garofalo.

The "Picture Gallery (10 to 3, 1

Civico (14, B. 2, 3). The Palace, erected in 1493 for Sigismondo d'Este, and in 1567 altered to its present form by another of the family, is entirely of stone, a rarity in this alluvial district; only the N. and W. fronts have been completed, and exhibit diamond-shaped projecting courses, a very unusual style of construction, from which it is generally known as the Palazzo de' Diamanti. Most of the pictures have been brought from suppressed Convents or desecrated Churches, and are much restored.

Bastaruolo: Crucifixion, a good specimen of a rare painter.

Caletti (Il Cremonese): St. Mark writing his Gospel, the painter's best work (1640).

Carpaccio, *Death of the Virgin, surrounded by the Apostles (1508), in a glowing light, with his favourite architectural background.

Carpi: St. Catharine of Alexandria.

Cortellini: Virgin and Children, with SS. Agata, Apollonia, and Lucia (1544).

Cosimo Tura: Scenes from the life of S. Maurelius—two round paintings, here attributed to Francesco Cossa.—*St. Jerome, with a striking architectural background.

Cotignola: St. Sebastian (1513).

Dosso Dossi: *Virgin and Children, with SS. John Evan., Andrew, Sebastian, George, and the Four Latin Fathers; "one of the greatest treasures of art in N. ltaly" (Cic.), but ruined by re-painting.—*St. John the Evangelist.—Annunciation.

Ercole Grandi: Assumption of St. Mary of Egypt, here ascribed to Timoteo della Vite.—*SS. Sebastian, Joseph, and Job, with donors of the Mori family.—Nativity.—*Virgin and Child, with SS. Petronius and Jerome.

Falzagalloni (of Ferrara): Virgin and Child, with St. Anthony the Abbot and St. Roch.

Garofalo: Old and New Testaments, a fresco transferred to canvas. This immense and most curious composition formerly stood in the refectory of S. Andrea; it represents the victory of the New over the Old Testament, the ceremonies of the Mosaic being contrasted with those of the New Law.—St. Peter Martyr.— Holy Family—Madonna del Riposo (1525).—*Madonna and Child in glory, with SS. Jerome and Francis, and two donors of the Sussena family (1514). Fine landscape background.—Virgin and Child (del Pilastro), with SS. Jerome, John Bapt., Francis and Anthony, and a donor of the Trotti family.—Same subject with St. Bartholomew—the painter's last work (1549).—Mass of S. Niccolò Tolentino. *Adoration of the Magi (1537), one of his masterpieces. The pink (garofalo) introduced, in allusion to the painter's name.—Christ in the Garden. — Slaughter of the Innocents (1519).—*Resurrection of Lazarus.— Discovery of the Cross.

Guercino (1536): St. Bruno before the Virgin.—*Decollation of S. Maurelio.

Lorenzo Costa (School of): Nativity (1513) here ascribed to Ortolano. Perhaps by Garofalo.

Luca Longhi: Circumcision.

Mazzolino: Nativity with SS. Benedict and Albericus—his only large work.

Panetti: Fresco bust of St. Paul.—Annunciation.—Same subject, with the Trinity above.

Rocco Marconi: *Tribute Money, here ascribed to Palma.

Subleyras: Portrait of Benedict X1V.

Tintoretto: Madonna del Rosario, with SS. Dominic, George and Maurelius.

Opposite the Museo Civico is the Palazzo Prosperi, with a beautiful decorated entrance designed by B. Peruzzi.

Palazzo del Magistrato (16 C. 2, 3). In a hall of this palace the Accademia degli Ariostei held its sittings; it has succeeded to the Accademia degl' Intrepidi, one of the first poetical societies of Italy, but is now a literary and scientific institution. Near its hall of assembly some small rooms are shown which were occupied by Culvin, when he found an asylum at the Court of the Duchess Rence under the assumed name of Charles Heppeville. Here the stern reformer secretly expounded his doctrines to the small band of disciples whom the favour of his patroness had collected together. Among these were Anne de Parthenay, Olympia, Morata, Marot, Francesco Porto Centese, and other Protestants whom persecution had driven from beyond the Alps.

The University, or Studio Pubblico (15, C. 3), enjoys some celebrity as a school of medicine and jurisprudence. It contains a rich cabinet of medals, and a collection of Greek and Roman inscriptions and antiquities; among which is a colossal sarcophagus of Aurelia Eutychia. But its chief interest is

The *Public Library (8 to 3), containing 100,000 vols., and upwards of 1000 MSS., among which are the Greek palunpsests of Gregory Nazian-zen, St. Chrysostom, &c. The most remarkable, however, and the most valuable of all its treasures, are the MSS, of Ariosto and Tasso. The former are in a room where the poet's armchair of walnut wood, the beautifully executed medal bearing his profile, which was found in his tomb, and his bronze inkstand surmounted by a Capid enjoining silence, which he is said to have designed himself, are deposited. These MSS, comprise a copy of some cantos of the Orlando Furiosa, covered with corrections, and remarkable also for the following memorandum which Alfieri begged permission to inscribe-" Vittorio Alfieri vide e venerò 18 Giugno, 1783"; one of the Satires; the comedy of La Scolastica, and some highly interesting letters, among which is one from Titian to Ariosto The MS, of the Gerusalemme is one of the most touching records in Ferrara; it was corrected by Tasso during his captivity, and ends with the words Laus Deo. Like the Orlando, this is also remarkable for its corrections and cancelled.

passages, many of which are extremely curious, and worthy of being published. There are likewise nine letters of Tasso, written while confined in the hospital of St. Anna; and a small collection of his Rime. Auother MS., which seems to lose its interest by the side of the two great Epic poems, is that of the Pastor Fido of Guarini A valuable treasure, but of a different character, is the senes of Choir Books, in 18 volumes, filled with beautiful miniatures, which formerly belonged to the Certosa. There is also a Bible, in one large volume, illustrated with miniatures in the same style, and apparently by the same hand.

Among the printed books are 52 early editions of Ariosto, a fine collection of cinque-cento editions, and a large series of books printed at Ferrara, one of the first cities in which the printing-press was established. Signor Antonelli, curator of this library, in his work on the Ferrarese printers of the 15th cent., states that during the first 30 years of the 15th cent. upwards of 100 ed.tions were issued from the press of nine printers in Ferrara. Among the most famous was Giambatusta Guarini. from whom Aldus, before settling at Venice, received instruction in printing Greek. The medical traveller will find here the exceedingly rare work of Giambattista Canani: " Musculorum humani corporis picturata dissectio," without date, but referable to the middle of the 16th cent.

In one of the rooms are some very interesting Portraits of Ferrarese Authors, from the earliest period down to Cicognara and Monti; and in another, 18 Portraits of Ferrarese Cardinals, the most interesting of which, from his connection with Ariosto, is that of Cardinal Ippolito d'Este, in whose service the great poet had spent so many painful and unprofitable years.

in a third room, called the Sala d'Ariosto, is his Tomb, brought be by the French from S. Benedetto, on the 6th of June, 1801, the anniversary of the poet's death. The inscriptions, recording the merits of Ariosto as a statesman as well as a poet, were written by Guarini.

The Palazzo Schifanoia, close S. M. in Vado, a pleasure retreat of Duke Borgo d'Este, was decorated for that prince with *frescoes by Cosimo Tura and Francesco Cossa (1468-71). Little of their own work now remains, but the series is still highly interesting as an illustration of life and costume, and a specimen of the Ferrarese School. The principal subjects are the signs of the Zodiac, and events in the history of Borso, among which are some wonderfully The decoraclever portrait heads. tive portion includes a crowd of beautiful children (le Arti Bambine). In a smaller room is a remarkably handsome coffered ceiling, gold on blue, returned down the cornice, and ending with putti in stucco.

In the Piazza Ariostea (B. 3) is a STATUE OF ARIOSTO, standing on a column covered with foliage reliefs by Vidoni (1833). The column once served as a monument to Duke Hercules I., and afterwards to Napoleon.

A cell in the hospital of St. Anna (17, C. 3) is shown as the Prison of Tasso. Over the door is the following inscription, placed there by General Miollis: Rispettate, o Posteri, la celebrità di questa stanza, dove Torquato Tasso infermo più di tristezza che delirio, ditenuto dimord anni vii. mesi ii. scrisse verse e prose, e fu rimesso in libertà ad istanza della città di Bergamo, nel giorno vi. Luglio, 1586. dungeon is lighted by a grated window from the yard; its size is about 9 paces by 6, and about 7 feet high. "The bedstead, so they tell, has been carried off piecemeal, and the door half cut away, by the devotion of those whom 'the verse and prose' of the prisoner have brought to Ferrara. The poet was confined to this room from the middle of March, 1579, to December, 1580, when he was removed to a contiguous apartment, much larger, in which, to use his own expressions, he could philosophise and walk about. The inscription is incorrect as to the immediate cause of his enlargement, which was promised to the city of Bergamo, but was carried into effect at the intercession of Don Vicenzo Gonzaga, Prince of Mantua."—Hobhouse. Few questions have been more debated than the cause of the poet's imprisonment. believe that he was actually insane. Others regard Tasso as neither more nor less than a prisoner of state, whose sufferings were aggravated by the capricious tyranny of Alfonso. biographer, the Abbate Serassi, has shown that the first cause of the poet's punishment was his desire to be occasionally, or altogether, free from his servitude at the Court of Alfonso. In 1575 Tasso resolved to visit Rome, and avail himself of the indulgences of the jubilee; "and this error," says Abbate, "increasing the suspicion already entertained that he was in search of another service, was the origin of his misfortunes. On his return to Ferrara the Duke refused to admit him to an audience, and he was repulsed from the houses of all the dependents of the court; and not one of the promises which Cardinal Albani had obtained for him was carried into effect. Then it was that Tasso—after having suffered these hardships for some time, seeing himself constantly discountenanced by the duke and the princesses, abandoned by his friends, and derided by his enemies—could no longer contain himself within the bounds of moderation, but, giving vent to his choler, publicly broke forth into the most injurious expressions imaginable, both against the Duke and all the house of Este, cursing his past service, and retracting all the praises he had ever given in his verses to those princes, or to any individual connected with them, declaring that they were all a gang of poltroons, ingratefuls, and scoundrels (poltroni, ingrati, e ribaldi). For this offence he was arrested, conducted to the hospital of St. Anna, and confined in a solitary cell as a madman." His own correspondence furnishes evidence of the treatment he experienced; -- for almost the first year of his imprisonment he endured nearly all the horrors of a solitary cell, and received from his gaoler, although himself a poet, every kind of cruelty-"ogni sorte di rigore ed inumanità.''

"On the walls of Tasso's prison are the names of Lord Byron, Casimir Delavigne, and Lamartine's verses on Tasso, written in pencil. Notwithstanding these poetical authorities, with the inscription Ingresso alla prigione di Torquato Tasso at the entrance, another inside, and the repairs of this pretended prison, in 1812, by the prefect of the department, it is impossible to recognise the real prison of Tasso in the kind of hole that is shown as such. How can any one for a moment suppose that Tasso could have lived in such a place for seven years and two months, revised his poem there, and composed his different philosophical dialogues in imitation of Plato? I had an opportunity of consulting several well-informed gentlemen of Ferrara on this subject, and I ascertained that not one of them believed this tradition, which is equally contradicted by historical facts and local appearances. There was enough in Tasso's fate to excite our compassion, without the extreme sufferings he must have experienced in this dangeon. Alfonso's ingratitude was sufficiently painful: a slight on the part of Louis XIV. hastened the death of Racine; and with such spirits mental afflictions are much more keenly felt than bodily Madame de Stael, who was ever inclined to commiserate the misfortunes of genius, was not misled by the legend of the prison of Ferrara: Goethe, according to the statement of a sagacious traveller, maintains that the prison of Tasso is an inle tale and that he had made extensive researches on the subject."--Valery.

Sir John Hobbouse, in reference to "Common tradition had long before assigned the cell to Tasso: it was assuredly one of the prisons of the hospital; and in one of those prisons we know that Tasso was confined. Those," he adds, "who indulge in the dreams of earthly retribution will observe that the crucity of Alfonso was not left without its recompense, even in his own person. He survived the affection of his subjects and of his dependents, who deserted him at his death, and suffered his body to be interred without princely or decent honours. His last wishes were neglected; his testament cancelled. His kinsman, Don Cæsar, shrank from the excommunication of the Vatican, and, after a short struggle, or rather suspense, Ferrara passed away for ever from the dominion of the bouse of Este."

Next to the hospital is the bandthe inscription on the cell, says that | some Palamo Roverella, a good specimen of the terra-cotta Decorated style of the 16th cent.

The Theatre (20, C. 3) is one of the finest in Romagna. The first opened in Italy is said to have been here.

The Casa di Ariosto (18, B. 2) is marked by an inscription composed by the great poet himself:—

Parva sed apta mihi, sed nulli obnoxia, sed non Sordida, parta meo sed tamen aere domus.

Above it is the following, placed there by his favourite son and biographer, Virginio:—

Sic domus haec Ariosta Propitios habeat deos, olim ut Pindarica.

Ariosto built this house between 1526 and 1528, inhabited it during the latter years of his life, and died in it in 1533. When some visitor expressed surprise that one who had described so many palaces had not a finer house for himself, he replied that the palaces he built in verse cost him nothing. After his death nearly all the characteristics of the house, described with so much interest by the poet, were destroyed by its subsequent proprietors; still it remained in the male line of the family, until the middle of In 1811 Count Girothe last cent. lamo Cicognara, when chief magistrate or Podesta, induced the town council to purchase it, as one of those national monuments ought to be beyond the caprice of individuals. The chamber of the poet was then carefully restored, and the circumstance was recorded in the inscription placed under his bust.

The Casa degli Ariostei, in which the poet was educated, is situated in the Via Sta. Maria de' Bocche, near the University. He lived there for the purpose of pursuing his legal studies under the superintendence of his paternal uncles; but he soon gave up law for the more congenial study of poetry and romance. It was in one of the chambers of this residence that Ariosto, with his brothers and sisters, performed the fable of Thisbe and other comic pieces of his own composition. The room is still shown, and is well adapted for such representations. On the death of his father, the poet removed from this house to the one already described.

Some of the private palaces in Ferrara contain good pictures. In the Palazzo Costabili, S. of S. M. in Vado (D. 3), are some Old Testament subjects in grisaille by pupils of Garofalo.

FERRARA TO BOLOGNA.

On leaving the walls of the city the Rly. crosses a canal, and traverses a perfectly level plain, covered with rice, maize, and corn-fields, and immense plantations of hemp. Poplars and campanili also abound. The fields are frequently surrounded with vines trained on elms, illustrating the figure so often met with in ancient Latin poetry, of the marriage of the vine and the elm. Few cottages are seen, but the appearance of the people indicates prosperity and comfort.

It is said to derive its name from an ancient settlement of fishermen, who were led to fix upon this spot by the great number of crawfish in the neighbouring waters. They built a hundred huts (cento capannucce), and this number became the appellation of the town which subsequently arose npon their site. Here was the college of S. Biagio, suppressed on the establishment of the First Kungdom of Italy. The Church contains several of the works of Giov. Francesco Barbiebi, surnamed Guercino (1590-1666), who was born at Cento.

The Casa di Guercino is preserved as a domestic museum of the painter's works It contains a Venus and Cupid, a Vision of S. Carlo Borromeo, and several small pictures of the Virgin and Child. Here Guercino had his school, and remained in the town till driven away by the war between Odoardo Farnese, Duke of Parms, and Urban VIII., when Taddeo Barberini, nephew of the latter, general of the Pontifical troops, determined on fortifying Cento. Here also he was accustomed to receive and regale cardinals who had come to the fair, when his most distinguished pupils served at table, and in the evening performed an extemporised proverb, with which their eminences were enraptured. Queen Christina of Sweden also visited Guercino at Cento.

The Chiesa del Rosario is full of his paintings: he is said to have given the design of the front and steeple, and to have worked at the wooden statue of the Virgin; he is consequently to be seen there as a painter, sculptor, and architect.

In the Piazza there is a statue of the Painter, by Gulletti.

The Pinacoteca contains a fresco of the Virgin and Child with Saints by Lor. Costa; a Holy Family by Gennari; and a fine Virgin and Child with two Saints by Guercino.

A little distance S. beyond the Reno is Pieve di Cento, surrounded with walls, and celebrated for its miraculous crucifix and the College of Sta. Maria Assunta. It possesses a fine *Assumption by Guido. This noble picture was under sentence of removal at the French invasion of 1797; but the people rose against the intended robbery, and prevented it. 100 m. BOLOGNA (185,000), one of the most ancient cities of Italy, was, until 1860, the capital of Romagna, the most important province of the Holy See. It is about 2 m. long by 11 broad, and has 12 gates. It is situated at the foot of the lower slopes of the Apennines, in a beautiful and fertile plain between the Reno, Savena, and Aposa, and is intersected by several small canals. The city is surrounded by a high wall without fortifications. from 5 to 6 m, in circuit. It is the residence of the Prefect of the province, and is one of those interesting provincial capitals which no country but Italy possesses in such The inhabitants still abundance. cherish in their love of freedom the recollections inspired by its ancient motto, Libertas." Bologua has always been the most flourishing and the most advanced in an intellectual point of view of all the cities of the Papal States, although it has never been the residence of a court nor the seat of a sovereign; and there can be no doubt that this prosperity is attributable to the long continuance of its privileges as a free city, and to the freedom of manners and opinions for which its people are remarkable.

History.

The city existed in the time of the Etruscans, and its ancient name of Felsina is supposed to have been derived from that Etruscan king to whom its foundation as the capital of the twelve Etruscan cities, in 984 s.c., is attributed. His successor, Bonus, is said to have given it the name of Bononia, although some antiquaries refer it to the Boil, who occupied the city in the time of Tarquinius Priscus.

In the middle ages Bologna had become independent of the German Emperors during their contests with the Popes; and had obtained from the Emperor Henry V., in 1112, not only an acknowledgment of its independence, but a charter granting to its citizens the choice of the consuls, judges, and other magistrates. It subsequently appeared among the foremost cities of the Guelphic league; and, after Frederick II. had left the war in Lombardy to the management of his illegitimate son Enrice, King of Sardinia, it undertook to make the Guelph party triumph throughout the

Cispadine region. Belogue first attacked Romagna, and forced the towns of Imola, Faenza, Forli, and Cervia to exper the Ghibellines and declare for the Church. The Bolognese next turned their arms against Modena. The Modenese cavalry, entering Bologna one day by surprise, carried off from a public fountain a bucket (secchia), which henceforth was preserved in the tower of Modena Cathedral as a glorious trophy. The war which followed furnished Tassoni with the subject of his mock-heroic poem, La Secchia Rapita. The vengeance of the Bolognese was, however, anything but burlesque; after several bloody battles the two armies finally met at Fossalta, on the 26th of May, 1249. Filippo Ugoni of Brescia, who was this year Podesta of Bologna, commanded the Guelph army, consisting chiefly of detachments from all the cities of the Lombard league, the Ghibellines were led by Enzio; each army consisted of from 15,000 to 20,000 combatants. The battle was long and bloody, but ended in the complete defeat of the Ghibeline party. King Euzio himself fell into the hands of the conquerors; he was immediately taken to Bologua, and confined in the palace of the Podesta. The senate of that city rejected all offers of ransom, and all intercession in his favour. He was entertained in a splendid manner, but kept a prisoner during the rest of his life, which lasted for twenty-two years." Sismonds. In the latter part of the 13th cent, the city became a prey to family feads, and for many years it was harassed by fittee contests for supremacy among rival families. The Geremei were the leaders of the Guelph party, the Lambertazzi of the Ghibel-lines; but their mutual hatred was kept in check by the authorities. The Guelph party at length appealed to Pope Nicholas III., whose mediation was so successful that the city acknowledged him as Suzerain, the tyranny of his legate, however, brought on a revolution in 1834, which ended in the supreme power being seized by the captain of the people, Taddeo Pepol., who kept it with a firm hand until carried off by the plague in 1347. His sons subsequently sold it to the Visconti. For upwards of a century after that event Bologua was subject either to the tyranny of the Visconti, or to popular anarchy; the Bentivogli, taking advantage of these fends, seized and maintained the government about the year 1430, and ruled the city well until the end of the century. After the victory of Julius II. over the Duca Valentino (Cesare Bergia), the supremacy of the Holy See was definitely established in 1507 1512, when Bologna became the seat of a legate.

Bologna is one of the few cities of Italy which have been occupied by British troops. During the last struggle with Napoleon in Italy, in 1814, the Austrian army was supported in its operations on the Adige by a body of English troops, under General Nugent, who landed at the mouth of the Po and occupied Bologna in February of that year.

In 1848 an unjustifiable attempt of the Austrian General Welden to take possession of Bologna was repulsed with great bravery by the Bolognese. During the following year the Austrians were more successful. Having deter-mined to seize on the capital of the Romagna, to counterbalance the occu-pation of Rome by the French, they attacked the city, posting themselves on the heights above it with a force of 15,000 men. The Italian party within the walls resisted for 10 days, when they were obliged to surrender after an heroic defence -From that period Bologue, until 1859, was occupied by the Austrians. On the breaking out of the war between Austria and Sardinia in the spring of that year, the Germans, who had rendered themselves exceedingly unpopular, suddenly withdrew when the townspeople formed a Provisional Government, which continued to govern the city and the province with ability and moderation, declaring at the same time their determination never again to submit to the Papal rule. In 1860, the Bolognese, like natives of all the other cities of Romagna, by an almost unanimous vote, declared in favour of being annexed to the kingdom of Italy, under Victor Bologna has been the seat of a bishopric since A.D. 270, and was raised to the rank of an archbishopric by thregory. XIII in 1583. It has contributed more prelates to the sacred college than and other city of Italy except Rome: among the natives who have been raised to the pontificate were Honorius II., Lucius II., Gregory XIII., Innocent IX., Gregory

XV., and Benedict XIV.

The epithet of Grassa, given to Bologna by the historian Paul Van Merle, of Leyden, in the 15th cent., applies as much to the living and culinary delicacies of the inhabitants as to the productions of its fertile territory. The wines of its neighbourhood are excellent, and the yellow grape (uva paradisa) is much esteemed. Mr. Frank, of the Hotel Brun, has made great efforts of late years to improve the culture of the vine on the hills S. of Bologna, and has produced some very superior wines. The mortadella, everywhere known as the Bologna sausage, still keeps up its reputation.

The dogs of Bologna, so celebrated in the middle ages, and alluded to in the epitaph on King Enzius at S. Domenico, have unfortunately disappeared, and a trace of their pure breed can scarcely now be discovered.

The climate is somewhat relaxing, and the extremes of heat and cold are here severely felt. In other respects, amply provided with the necessaries and luxuries of life, with an intellectual society, to say nothing of its works of art, Bologna is well calculated to be an agreeable and economical residence.

The Bolognese dialect, of all the forms of Italian which the traveller will meet with, is most puzzling. was aptly described by the learned grammarian of the 16th cent., Aulus Gellius Parrhasius, as the raucida Bononensium loquacitas. Forsyth says: "With all the learning in its bosom, Bologna has suffered its dialect—that dialect which Dante admired as the purest of Italy—to degenerate into a coarse, thick, truncated jargon, full of apocope, and unintelligible to Painting. occupies a prominent place in the history of art, and numbers amongst its painters many eminent masters, including: Franco Bolognese, who is supposed to have been the pupil of Oderigo da Gubbio, the missal painter, mentioned by Dante. Bologna (1320), Simone de' Crocifissi skilled in anatomic knowledge (1370), Jacopo Paolo, or (1404), Pietro and Orazio di Jacopo, Lippo di Dalmasio, Maso da Bologna, and Marco Zoppo, scholar of Lippo, and afterwards of Squarcione, at Padua (1474), who founded an academy of great celebrity at Bologna. Francesco Francia (1450–1517) may be considered as the true founder of the school. Raphael, in a letter, says that he had seen no Madonnas better designed, more beautiful, or characterized by a greater appearance of devotion, than those of Francia. Among the scholars of Francia, whose works may yet be studied at Bologna, were his son Giacomo, Lorenzo Costa (1535), Girolamo Marchesi da Cotignola (1550), and Amico and Guido Aspertini (1491). style introduced into the Bolognese school by Bagnacavallo (1484-1542). and adopted by Innocenzo da Imola (1494-1550), a pupil of Francia, was that of Raphael; while that of Michel Angelo was adopted by Pellegrino Tibaldi (1527-1591). Their contemporaries, Primaticcio (1504-1507) and Niccolò Abate (1509-1571), left Bologna to study under Giulio Romano at Mantua, and subsequently settled in France. The school was for a time supported by Lavinia Fontana, Lorenzino (Lorenzo Sabbatini), Orazio Sammachini, and Passerotti; bu gradually declined.

Before the close of the 16th cent, a revival of the school occurred under the Caracci. Lodovico Caracci (1555-1619) " was a young man," says Lanzi, "who, during his earlier years, appeared to be slow of understanding. and fitter to grind colours than to harmonize and apply them." After visiting the works of his predecessors in the different cities of Italy, he returned to Bologna, and, with the co-operation of his cousins, Agostino and Annibale, established an academy.

Their most distinguished pupils were Domenichino (Domenico Zampieri) (1581–1641), his friend Francesco Albani (1578–1660), and Guido Reni (1574-1642), who is considered the greatest genins of the school; and it is 1 well known that no pupil of the Caracci excited so much as he did the jeulousy of his masters. Among the names which figure in the history of the Bolognese school at this period are those of Guido Cagnacci, Simone Cantarini, Francesco Gessi (the best pupil of Guido, and Guercino 1590-1666). Among the scholars of the Caracci who remained in Bologna after this time are Sisto Badalorchi, Alessandro Tiarini, Lionello Spada, Lorenzo Gurbieri, Giacomo Cavedone, Pietro Fuerni, Lucio Massari, and Gobbo de Caracci, so famous as a painter of fruit. The fourth and last period of the school is represented by Carlo (lignant (1628-1719), a successful decorator and painter of 'Putt.'

and the streets themselves irregular and narrow, but in the new parts of the city they are light and handsome.

The main thoroughfares radiate from the central portion of the city like the spokes of a wheel SQUARES, -The Piana Maggiora, now Vittorio Emanuele (E. 5., is described below under the Public Buildings. Behind S. Petronio is the oblong Piassa Galvani, and not far S.E. in the new and pretty Piassa Cavour.

The only Garden within the walls is the Montagnuola (B. 6), a slight elevation, commanding a good view, but now almost deserted. Close to it is the Arena di Pallone Outside Porta Castiglione and Porta Santo Stefano are the Giardini Margherita (H. 7), forming an extensive park, well laid out, and embellished with ornamental shrubs and water.

CHURCHES.

The Cathedral (D. 5), dedicated to St. Peter, is of very ancient foundstion, but has been several times rebuilt. The present edifice was begun in 1605; the front and some of the chapels were added in 1748. The fine Lombard campanile is almost all that remains of the original cathedral. The spacious interior is in the Corinthian style; on each side of the door are rude lions in red Verous marble, on which stand vases for holy water; they probably supported the columns of the portal of the ancient edifice, and are attributed to Ventura da Bologua. Several of the altars have handsome marble columns.

In the 2nd chapel on the rt, is preserved the skull of St. Anna, presented in 1435 by King Henry VI. of England to Niccold Albergati, better known in history as the Cardinal of Santa mourning with the Virgin for the death of the Saviour, by Lodovico Caracci. In the passage leading to the Sacristy there is a curious relief of the 16th cent., on the tomb of Lorenzo Pini, a Doctor of Laws. Here also is a Crucifixion, and a Deposition in terracotta, by Alfonso Lombardo.

The Choir, designed by Domenico Tibaldi, has on the vault of the apse a painting designed by Fiorini and coloured by Aretusi, representing our Saviour giving the keys to St. Peter in the presence of the Apostles; and on the arch above the high altar a fresco of the Annunciation, the last work of *Lodovico Caracci. The gilt bronze ornaments in the 3rd chapel l. were executed at the cost of Benedict XIV., when archbishop of this his native city. On an adjoining pier is the monument of Cardinal Lante; and at the extremity of the N. aisle one to Gregory XV., with his In the Baptistery (1st l.) is the Baptism of our Saviour, by Ercole On St. Peter's Day some costly tapestries are exhibited in this Church, executed at Rome from the designs of Raphael Mengs, and presented by the same pontiff. The Crypt beneath the choir is curious, and contains numerous relics.

was erected in 1530 by Andrea Formigine. The handsome portico was built for the Palazzo Gozzadini, and the reliefs of its pilasters, the work of Lombard sculptors, are well worthy of observation. On the owner's death, before the completion of his mansion,
a Church was built on to the portico.
A doorway with arabesque and other ornaments in relief is particularly elegant.

The interior is well proportioned, but gaudily coloured: in the 2nd chapel on the rt. is S. Carlo Borromeo kneeling before the tomb at Varallo, by Lod. Caracci. 4th, *Annunciation, by Albano; by whom also are

In the 1. transept is an oval *Madonna and Child, by Guido Reni. In 1855 it was stolen and carried to London, but was recovered in 1859. Beside the altar may he seen the wrapper in which "this sacred representation of S. Maria del Suffragio" was brought back to Bologna, let into the wall. Under the 4th altar are some figures on coloured terra-cotta representing the Dead Christ and six mourners. well executed.

- S. Bartolommeo di Reno (C. 3, 4) is generally known in the city as the Madonna della Pioggia. In the 1st chapel l. is the *Nativity, by Agostino Caracci. The two prophets on the vault of the chapel are by the same master. The *Circumcision and *Adoration of the Magi at the sides are by Lod. Caracci. In the oratory, St. Bartholomew, by Alfonso Lombardo.
- S. Benedetto (B. 6) has, in the 1st chapel on the rt. beyond the dome, the marriage of St. Catharine in the presence of four saints, by Lucio Massari. In the 2nd, Annunciation, by E. Procaccini. In the 4th, S. Antonio Abate beaten by demons, and a "Charity" on the ceiling, by Cavedone.
- Sta. Cecilia (D. E. 7), an ancient Oratory, has suffered much from long serving as a passage to S. Giacomo Maggiore, the sacristan of which has the keys. It was erected in 1481 at the expense of Giovanni Bentivoglio, and is celebrated for its *frescoes by early painters of Bologna, restored carefully in 1876.

Commencing on the l. of the altar,

1. The *Marriage of St. Valerian with Sta. Cecilia, by F. Francia. 2. *Valerian instructed in the faith by St. Urban (Lor. Costa). 3. The Baptism of Valerian, by Tamaroccia Baptism of Valerian, by Tamaroccia

4. The Angel crowning the betrothed Saints with garlands of roses, by Chiodarolo. 5. The brothers Valerian and Tiburtins beheaded in the presence of the Prefect. 6. Their funeral. 7. Sta. Cecilia and the Prefect: the last three subjects are by Amico Aspertini. 8. Sta. Cecilia placed in the boiling bath, by Tamaroccio. 9. The *Saint distributing her Riches to the Poor, by Costa. 10. *Her funeral, a very graceful composition, by Francesco Francia.

Corpus Domini (G. 4), better known as S. Catarina Vigri, has a beautiful moulded terra-cotta doorway belonging to an older 15th-cent. building, It is sometimes styled La Santa, the Saint being held in great veneration. Over the high altar, Christ feeding the Apostles, by Marcantonio Franceschini. In the I. transept are six fine commos of rosso de Francia. The Annuaciation, in the 2nd chapel on the l., is by Franceschini, whose masterpiece, the *Death of St. Joseph, is in the 1st, the ceiling of which is also painted in fresco by him. In a closed Chapel behind the 1, transcpt is preserved the body of S. Catarina Vigri, enthroned in state, and gorgeously arrayed.

The great portal is a fine Lombard arch, the best portion remaining is on the N. side, which has a marble Italian-Gothie frieze and cornice. The outer walls were pierced with two ranges of lancet-shaped windows, now bricked up. The *Tomb of St. Dominic, are by Tusi and Salvolini, artists of the 17th cent. The architecture of this chapel is by Terribilia, the 1st picture on the Tiarini. The *fresco on the vault above the altar, representing the glory of Paradise, with the Saviour and the Virgin receiving the said of the saint the founder of the order of Preaching

Friars (1221), the early triumph of Niccolò da Pisa's genius, is in the large chapel on the rt. This great master did not complete the pulpit at Pisa until 25 years after the date of the present work (1225), and consequently we may regard this as the foundation of a new era in that branch of art. The reliefs surrounding the sarcophagus represent in front, Napoleone da Torre Nuova restored to life by St. Dominic in the presence of his family, who are deploring his death; the miracle of the book which cannot be burned: rt. side, St. Peter and St. Paul in heavon giving the charge of converting heretics to the saint; communication to the members of the Dominicum Order: l. side - Miraculous support of the Order. At the back, the threatened death of St. Reginald of Orleans, a disciple of the saint; his preservation by the Madonna; his recourse to St. Dominic; the dream of Pope Honorius III, and its reali-zation. Those on the back are by Fra Guglislmo Anslli. Below the principal reliefs in front is another interesting series of smaller ones by Alfonso Lombardo, forming a kind of predella, executed 3 centuries later. and not superior in delicacy or feeling. The subjects are—the Birth of Christ; the birth of the Saint; his sleep as a child; his charity; and his death. Of the lower series of statuettes, that of S. Petronius, with his church in his hand, is a work of Michel Angelo in his youth (1501), as is likewise the angel on the rt. The other angel and the statues of SS, Francis and Proculus above are, according to Vasari, by Niccolò da Bari, called dell' Arca, from this work. The reliefs on the front of the altar, representing the entombment of St. Dominic, are by Tasi and Salvolini, artists of the 17th cent. The architecture of this chapel 18 by Terribilia, the 1st picture on the rt., the Child brought to Life, is by Tiarini. The *fresco on the vault above the altar, representing the glory of Paradise, with the Saviour and the Virgin receiving the soul of the saint is one of the finest compositions of Guido Reni. The saint burning the books of the converted heretics, on the l. nearest the iron gate, is by Lionello Spada.

In the 1st chapel rt. of the principal entrance, a small picture of the Madonna, called "Del Velluto," over the altar, is by Lippo di Dalmasio. 3rd, Virgin and Child, attributed to Francia. 5th, the Madonna delle Febbri, a good picture of the 15th cent., brought from S. Giorgio, where it had a reputation for curing fever All these are glazed. Rt. patients. transept, St. Thomas Aquinas writing on the subject of the Eucharist, with Monument angels, Guercino. by erected by the Clementine Academy to the memory of Count Marsili, founder of the Institute.

The Sacristy contains the Birth of the Saviour, or "La Notte," by Luca Cangiasi, a repetition of the smaller painting preserved in the Academy. On the l. of the door is a terra-cotta *bust of a Dominican, by one of the Lombardi. S. Jerome' is by Lio-The Intarsiatura of nello Spada. the presses and of the entrance-door are by the artists who executed those in the choir. The large statues of the Virgin and of San Domenico are of cypress wood painted white, and according to the verses inscribed underneath, were carved out of a tree which S. Dominic himself had planted. In the chapel on the rt. of the choir is the *Marriage of St. Catharine, with SS. John Bapt., Peter, Benedict, and Sebastian, a fine work by Filippino Lippi (1501).

In the apse is the Adoration of the Magi, by Bartolommeo Cesi, who painted also 88. Nicholas and Dominic alongside. The *stalls of the choir are inlaid with Scripture subjects Fra Damiano da Bergamo, and Fra Antonio Asinelli, both Dominican friars (1541).

In the l. transept is an inscription on the wall to Enzio, King of Sardinia, son of the Emp. Frederick II., made prisoner by the Bolognese in 1249, and detained here in captivity until his death in 1272. In the long Latin inscription the haughty republic makes the record of its royal captive the object of a higher compliment to itself; the present record replaced in 1731 a more ancient one. In singular contrast to this tomb, the adjoining chapel contains that of Taddeo Pepoli (elected to the supreme authority in 1337), the celebrated ruler of Bologna, by the Venetian artist Jacopo Lanfrani: the sarcophagus rests on a basement, covered with black and white checker-work, the armorial shield of the family. The sculptures represent Pepoli rendering justice to his fellow-citizens. The altar-piece, 88. Michael, Dominic, Francis, and the Saviour, with angels above, is by Giacomo Francia.

The l. transept contains also the Chapel of the Relics; among them is the head of St. Dominic, in a silver case of 114 lbs. weight, made in 1383, at the joint expense of the city, of Benedict XI., and of Card. Matteo Orsini. The body of the Beato Giacomo da Ulma, the painter on glass, is also preserved here. To the rt, of the principal altar is a curious picture of the Paschal Lamb, attributed to Vasari. Opposite the monument of King Enzio is the portrait of St. Thomas Aquinas, by Simone da Bologna, asserted by the annals of the Order to be an authentic likeness, though painted a hundred years after the saint's death, and preserved here for 400 years. The Chapel of the Madonna del Rosario, opening out of l. aisle, contains inscriptions painted on the wall, referring to Guido Reni and his pupil Elisabetta Sirani, who died (1665) in her 26th year; both buried in this chapel. Guido's sepulchral slab is in front of the pavement. Over the altar is a series of small paintings representing the 15 mysteries of the Rosary; the Visitation, and the Flagellation of our Saviour, are by Lod. Caracci; others are by Guido and B. Cesi. In the vestibule leading to the Piazza on the N. is the *tomb of Alessandro Tartagni, of Imola (1477), a celebrated lawyer, by the Florentine sculptor Francesco di Simone: and opposite one of the Volta family, with a statue of S. Proculus, holding an axe, by Lazzaro Casari. In the 2nd chapel on the 1 is S. Raimondo crossing the sea on his mantle, by Lod. Caracci. In the first chapel 1, is a bust of S. Filippo Neri, from a cast taken after his death.

The CLOISTERS contain some inscriptions and ancient tombs, among which are those of Giov. d Andrea Calderni, by Jacopo Lanfrani (1238), and of Bartolommeo Saliceti, by Andrea da Fiesale (1412). There is preserved here a portion of a painting by Lippo di Dalmasio, representing the Magdalen at the feet of Christ, his carliest work, the head of the Magdalen is destroyed. Beyond this, in the same corridor, is the Trinity, with S. Lorenso presenting a Dominican friar, by Petrus Jacannis (14th cent.).

The bronze Statue of St. Dominio, standing on a red-brick column in the Piazza, was cast at Milan in 1623: the Madonna del Rosario, on a marble one, is by Guilio Cesare Couventi. Of the two sepulchral monuments, the more elegant one near the Church is the tomb of the jurist Rolandino Passaggeri, who held the office of Corretare of the corporation of notaries, and who, while holding the office of town clerk, was selected to write the reply of the Republic to the hanghty letter of the Emperor Frederick II, demanding the release of his son King Enzio; the other, at the corner of a street, was raised to a member of the family of Foscherari in 1289 early Christian reliefs forming one of the arches of the canopy are more Both tombs stand under canopies supported by columns.

*8. Francesco (E. 4), begun by Marco Bresciano in 1246, consecrated in 1250, and finished in 1260, is a fine specimen of Italian-Gothic. It was desecrated in 1798, and converted into the custom-house (Dogana), but reopened for worship in 1847. In 1866 the Church was again turned to secular uses, but given back to the clergy in 1886, and is now restored. The restorations are not altogether successful, as an example of pure Italian-Gothic. The grand nave and aisles, with seven pointed arches, are supported by octagonal columns of brick. Many of its interesting sepulchral monuments — the churches of St. Francis throughout Italy being favourite burying-places - were destroyed, or transferred to the Campo Santo at the desecration of the building, but are gradually being replaced The marbie reredos is a fine work by Giacobello and Pietro dalle Massegne (1888), restored in 1848. The reliefs represent the Coronation of the Virgin, with saints. Busts of Saints are curiously perched on the pinnacles which crown the structure. Alexander V was buried here (1410). In the portico of the Piazza Malpighi are frescoes relating to the life of S. Antonio, by Tiarini, Tamburini, Gessi, &c. The mutilated sarcophagus bears the inscription of Accursios, the last of the eminent glossators. Close to it is to be placed the sarcophagus of Rolandino dei Romanzi, now in the Church. The Companile (1397-1405) is one of the finest in Bologua.

In the middle of the Piazza Malpighi stands a restored Column with a Statue of the Virgin, hearing the Barberint arms.

*8. Giacomo Maggiore (D. E. 7). formerly belonging to Augustine hermits, was founded in 1267, enlarged in 1497, but never completed. The brick Campanile is a handsome structure (1472). The doorway has canopy in which the red marble shafts supporting it rest on lions. On each side are two arched recesses for tombs. An agly square window has replaced an elegant wheel, and the barously walled up. The beautiful portice adjoining, which forms one side of the Via Zamboni, was erected in 1477 by Giovanni di Bentivogho. The vaulted nave without aisles resembles a vast hall. It is divided into three portions by cross stokes and best much boldness of execution. There a row of statues over the arches on each side of the nave.

In the 1st chapel on rt., a small fresco of the Virgin, "della Cintura," is covered up by a modern one of 4th. Conversion of St. cherubim. Paul, by Ercole Procaccini. 5th. Christ appearing to Giov. da S. Facondo, by Cavedoni, who also painted the gradino beneath. 6th. *Virgin and Child, with SS. John Baptist, Stephen, Augustine, Anthony, and Nicholas; a fine work in Correggio's manner, by Bartolommeo Passerotti. 7th. St. Alexis bestowing alms on the poor, by Prospero Fontana. 8th. *Marriage of St. Catharine, by Innocenzo da Imola (1536), justly called an "opera Raffaelesca;" "perhaps the most beautiful picture of the master; of most praiseworthy solidity of execution."—Cic. The Saints are John Bapt., John Evan., Joseph, and Mary Magd. 9th. A rich marble Screen. 10th. St. Roch struck with the plague, and comforted by an angel, by Lodovico Caracci. 11th. Doctors of the Church, by Lorenzo Sabbatini; the Archangel Michael, before the Madonna, over the altar, by his scholar Calvaert. 12th. The chapel of the Poggi family, designed by Pellegrino Tibaldi. The Baptism over the altar was finished by Prospero Fontana. The compartments of the roof are by Fontana. The fresco of St. John baptizing, and that in illustration of "Many are called, but few are chosen," are by Pellegrino Tibaldi. "This large fresco is almost grand in its realization of important symbolical idea."—Cic. 13th (first chapel inside the grille). Virgin and Child, with SS. Catharine and Lucia, and the Beato Rinieri, by Calvaert. 15th (said to contain a fragment of the true cross). Ancona, in several compartments, of the Coronation of the Virgin with saints, by Jacopo Avanzi. It bears the inscription, "Lignum Sanctæ Crucis D N J C." The Crucifix on the sidewall is by Simone dei Crocifissi (1370).

18th. The chapel of the Bentivoglio family, the ancient lords of Bologna, at the extremity of the N. aisle, contains a *Virgin and Child, with SS. Fabiano, Augustine, John Evan., and Sebastian (1449), by Francesco Francia—"his most beautiful work in Bologna. Of the angels who surround the Madonna, those nearest to her are especially lovely; among the saints, S. Sebastian is one of the most perfect forms of the 15th cent."—Cic. The Ecce Homo in the lunette above is also attributed to this master. In another lunette, one of the visions of the Apocalypse, in fresco, is by Lorenzo Costa, retouched by Felice Cignani, who painted the Annunciation over the arch. The oil painting, on the rt. side of the Virgin throned, with Giov. Bentivoglio and his wife in adoration, in the presence of their numerous family, interesting as a study of costume and character, is by Lorenzo Costa, Francia's able scholar (1488), as are also the curious ones opposite, representing Petrarch's triumphs: one is a procession of Death drawn on a car by buffaloes, and the other, a female figure, by black elephants. The alto-relievo of Annibale Bentivoglio, Lord of Bologna (1458), on horseback, is by Niccolò dall' Arca. The expressive head in relief of Giovanni II., on a pilaster to the right of the entrancegate, is by Francesco Francia. custode keeps also the key of the adjacent Chapel of S. Cecilia (see above).

On the Choir-screen, immediately behind the high altar, is the monument of Master Nicolas de Fabis, M.D. (1438). Next is that of Alexander Fabro, Knight of Jerusalem, with his half-length in armour. Opposite the Bentivoglio chapel is the monument of Antonio Bentivoglio, father of Annibale I., who perished on the scaffold in 1435, by Jacopo della Quercia. The *effigy, which lies on an inclined plane, represents Dr. Vera of Ferrara (1408), but was removed thence by Annibale and adapted to its present use. The reliefs on the front, added after Quercia's time, commemorate Antonio's eminence as a jurist. Above the cornice are statuettes of SS. Peter and Paul, with Force, Prudence, Temperance, and Faith. 21st (just inside the grille), Virgin | and Child, with SS. Benedict, John Baptist, and Francis, by Cest. 11th on the left, just outside the grille, Martyrdom of St. Catharine, by Tiburzio Passerotte 9th, Presentation in the Temple, by Orazio Sammachini, with Saints on the side-walls, 5th, Monument to Cardinal Aguechi, over the side-door, with statues and reliefs, by Gabriele Fiormi. 3rd, Last Supper. supposed to be a replica by Baroccio of that in S. M. sopra Minerva, at Rome. The frescoes of Melchisedek and Elijah on the side walls, and the Angels of the ceiling, are good works of Cavedone. In the 1st chapel is a miraculous crucifix in wood, the history of which can be traced as far back as the year 980.

The Prazzetts in front of the Church is named after the composer Rossini, who was educated in the annexed Augustinian convent, now converted into the Liceo Filarmonico, or great Music School of Bologus.

*SAN PETRONIO (E. F. 5) is the largest Church in Bologna, and though unfinished, is one of the finest specimens of the Italian Pointed style of the 14th cent. It was founded in 1390, while Bologna was a free city, the architect being Antonio Vincenzi, ambassador of the Bolognese to the Venetian Republic in 1396. The original plan was a Latin cross, and, if the building had been completed, it would have been 750 Eng. ft. long, or 136 more The existthan St. Peter's at Rome. ing portion consists merely of what was intended for the nave and aisles, as may be seen on the outside, where the construction of the transept had been just commenced when the work was abandoned.

Exterior.—The three canopied doorways of the unfinished front are fin examples of Italian-Gothic; they are covered with reliefs representing various events of Scripture history from the Creation to the time of the Apostles, and are ornamented with basts of prophets and subyls. The *central doorway was entirely executed by Jacopo dalla Quercia (1425. The reliefs consist of 32 half-figures of patriarchs and prophets, with the Almighty in the centre of the arch; five subjects from the New Testament in the architrave, and five from the Creation to the Deluge, on each pilaster. Under the arch are statues of the Virgin and Child, St. Petronius, and St. Ambrose. The left doorway is remarkable for the angels and sibyls round the arch, by Tribolo, well known as the friend of Benvenuto Cellini, who has left an amusing record of him in his entertaining biography. The three first subjects on the rt. pilaster are by Alfonso Lombardo, and represent Old Testament scenes. The l. pilaster, Jacob giving his blessing to Isaac, is by an unknown artist. Under the arch is the *Resurrection, by Alfonso Lombardo, admirable for its simple dignity and truth. The right doorway, by Tribolo, has eight subjects from the Old Testament on the pilasters. Under the arch is Nicodemus supporting the dead body of Christ, by Amico; the Virgin is by Tribolo; St. John the Evangelist, by Ercole Seccadenari.

Interior .- " It possesses in a high degree the various peculiarities which characterize the arrangements of the Italian-Gothic-such as the wide and low pier arches whose span equals the breadth of the nave, the absence of the triforium and of the clerestory string, the great empty circles which occupy the space of the clerestory, the extensive doming of the vaults, the shallowness of the aisles, the heavy capitals which surround the piers and the squareness of the piers with their Madonna di Galliera. The angels mook-shafis; all these serve to make by Properzia de Rossi. The walls a wide distinction between this ex- this chapel support the entire and ample and those of genuine Gothic; of the Campanile. Opposite, a and they are rarely found so completely united even in Italian churches. Each compartment of the aisle has two arches, which open into shallow chapels,"- Willes

The ornaments in relief round the great doorway are by Francesco and Petronio Tudolini. Over the pilasters of the side-doors are circular groups in relief, rt. the Annunciation, L. Adam and Eve in Paradise, by Tribolo.

The 2nd rt. (that of St. Bridget), repaired in 1876, is the chapel of the Pepoli, so celebrated in the history of Bologna. The paintings, by unknown artists, on the side-walls (about 1431), are of little value; the figure praying, on the L, bears the inscription, Sofia de Inghiltera fe fa; evidently representing the donatario, or the person at whose expense the work was executed; the Virgin, with saints and the donatario, are by Luca and Francesco da Perugia (1417).

Beyond the 3rd chapel is a monument, by Pacchioni, to Card. Opiszoni, more than 50 years Archbishop of Bologna (1855), who left all be possessed to his adopted city. The fine painted *glass in the 4th chapel is by Jacob of Ulm (1491).

6th, St. Jerome, by Lorenzo Costa, spoiled by retouching. 8th, belonging to the Malvezzi Campeggi families. The marble ornaments on the screen were designed by Vignola The *tarsia-work, by Fra Raffaele da Brescia, was formerly in the choir of San Michele in Bosco.

9th Chapel of St. Antony of Padus. The marble statue of the Saint over the altar is by Sansovino. His miracles, in chiaroscuro, are fine works by Girolamo da Treviso. The painted *glam was designed by Pellegrino Tibuldi. 10th-Coronation of the Madonna del Borgo S. Pietro on the side-wall, by 11th The relief of Francesco Brizzi the Assumption, by Tribolo 1526), the Choir, is a life-size group of the Deposition, by Onofri.

The marble statues of St. Francis and St. Dominic, beside the high altar, are by Girolamo Campagna.

10th 1., Statue of *Sta. Barbara, over the altar, by Tiarini. 9th—the Archangel Michael, by Calvaert (Fiammingo). Curious twisted iron railing of the 15th cent., erected by Antonio Barbaca and his wife Margarita Pepoli. 8th—St. Roch, a portrait of Fabrizio da Milano, by Parmegianino.

7th—the Chapel of the Baciocchi family—contains the Tombs of Princess Eliza Baciocchi, sister of Napoleon, her husband, and three of her children, with a good Virgin and Child with four Saints, by *Costa (1492)—"worthy to be compared with any Francia"—Cic.; and a fine painted sth—the *Annunciation, upon the wall in front, by Costa—"very solemnly conceived"—Cic. The Apostles are probably by his pupils. The martyrdom of St. Sebastian, between the Virgin and the Angel, is assigned to F. Cossa. The tarsia-work beneath was executed in 1495, by Agostino da Crema. The pavement of enamelled tiles dates from the earliest times of this manufacture (1487). On the pilaster between this and the next chapel is a great gilded and much restored wooden Statue of St. Petronius.

4th chapel—the Magi, Paradiso and Inferno, are attributed to Simone da Bologna, or Giovanni da Modena, very early in the 15th cent. In the 2nd chapel, rebuilt by Torregiani at the expense of Cardinal Aldrovandi, whose tomb is placed in it, is preserved the head of St. Petronius, removed by order of Benedict XIV. from S. Stefano. This chapel was gaudily restored in 1743, when the head was brought to it. The 1st chapel was rebuilt and repainted in 1868, and the ancient frescoes of the Crucifixion restored. Between the Chapels are several mediæval crosses, which formerly stood at the gates of the city; one bears the date of 1159, with curious inscription on the back.

On the floor of S. Petronio is the meridian line of Gian Domenico Cassini, 73 yards long: it was traced in 1653.

Residenza della Fabbrica, opening out of the l. aisle, contains a highly interesting series of original designs for the still unfinished façade, by the first architects of the period. Three of these are by Palladio: another bears the following inscription in his own hand, "Laudo il presente disegno," and has, no doubt erroneously, been attributed to him. There are others by Vignola, Giacomo Ranuccio, his great rival; Domenico Tibaldi; Baldassare Peruzzi; Giulio Romano and Cristoforo Lombardo; Girolamo Rinaldi; Francesco Terribilia; Varignana; Alberto Alberti, of Borgo San Sepolcro; and unknown artists. Over the entrancedoor is the marble bust of Count Guido Pepoli, by Properzia de' Rossi, supposed to be that ordered by his son Alessandro, to prove the powers of that extraordinary woman, as mentioned by Vasari. Over another door are four subjects in relief—Joseph accused before Potiphar, Potiphar's wife, the Tower of Babel, and the Entombment of Jacob. The first is believed to allude to the history of her own misfortunes. The life of that celebrated and accomplished woman, at once a painter, sculptor, engraver, and musician, is one of the most tragepisodes in the annals of art. She died of love at the very moment when Clement VII., after performing the coronation of Charles V. (Feb. 26, 1530), at S. Petronio, where he had seen and appreciated her genius, expressed his desire to take her with him to Rome.

The Sacristy contains a series of 22 pictures, representing various events in the history of S. Petronius, from his baptism to his death, by inferior painters.

Over the great door stood the celebrated colossal bronze statue of

Julius II., by Michel Angelo (1508). The pope was represented with the keys and a sword in his l, hand, blessing the Bolognese with his rt. But in 1511, on the return of the Bentivoglio party to power, and by way of reprisal for the destruction of their Palace at the instigation of Julius II, the statue was destroyed by the people, and the brouze, said to have weighed 17,500 lbs., was sold to the Duke of Ferrara, who converted it into a piece of ordnance, under the appropriate name of the Julian. When Michel Angelousked the warlike pontiff whether he should put a book in his left hand, he replied, "A book | no: let me grasp a sword; I know nothing of letters."

8. Procolo (G. 5) belonged before the French occupation to the Benedictine monks of Monte Cassino; its foundation is of very ancient date, but the present Church was built in 1536. In a lunette over the principal entrance is a Virgin and Child with 88, Benedict and Sixtus, by Lippo di Dalmasio. 2nd chapel rt , St. Benedict in ecstasy, by Cest, who is buried in this Church. 4th 1., the Virgin in glory, with St. Benedict below, by Ercole Graziani the younger In the 2nd chapel i, is the marble urn over the altar in which are preserved the bodies of the two martyrs who gave their names to this Church, a soldier and a hishop, found in the ancient subterranean Church in 1390. 1st chapel I., St. Maurus, by Eroole Graziani. On the outside wall, to the l. of the door, is the following inscription, to the memory of a person called Procolo, who was killed by one of the bells falling on him as he was passing under the campanile.

Si procul a Proculo Proculi campana fuisset, Nano procul a Proculo Proculus ipse foret, A.D. 1393.

8. Rocco (D. E. 2) has been converted into a "Camera Mortuaria," where the dead are deposited before being carried to the Campo Santo.

The oratory is covered with frescoes by late Bolognese artists representing events in the life of the saint, and of the patron saints of Bologna.

8. Salvatore (E. 4) was built in 1605. In the 1st chapel rt. is the Beato A. Canetoli refusing the Archbishopric of Florence, by Ercole Graziuni. In the rt. transept, the Virgin holding the infant Saviour to St. Catharine, with St. Sebastian and St. Roch, is by Girolamo de' Carpi. The Coronation of the Virgin, underneath, is of the 14th cent. In the l. transept is a striking *Nativity by Trarini; in the ord L. a fine *Crncifixion with saints, by Innocenzo da Imola; in the 9th (1st chapel on the l.), *St John kneeling before the aged Zacharias, by Garofalo, who has introduced his own portrait, the first on the rt. Guercino was buried in this Church, without any inscription or monument,

The Library of the attached Covent was banded over to the University after 1866. The Church was once the headquarters of English students at the University, who erected here an altar to St. Thomas of Canterbury immediately after his canonisation in 1173. It was afterwards transferred to a private family, and has now disappeared.

Spirito Santo, W. of Madonna di Galliera (D. 5), has a handsome but ruined front in brick and terra-cotta. The pilasters and frieze have arabesque reliefs, and there is a series of five heads over the door.

San Stefano (18, F. 6), the most ancient ecclesiastical edifice in Bologue, and one of the oldest in Italy. is quite a labyrinth of mediaval alterations at various dates of an earlier building. It now forms a group of seven churches, and was most probably originally a Roman basilica, of which various fragments are built into the later work, but none of the original construction remains visible. From the piazza we enter the 1st church, that of the CROCIFISIO (1637), with a 12th-cent, pulpit on its front. In the 1st chapel on the rt. is a painting by Teresa Muratori and her master, Giuseppe dol Bole, regg enting a father supplicating St. Benedict to intercede for his dying ion. Descending some steps on the . we enter the octagonal 10th cent. Church of *San Sepolcro, supposed o have been the ancient Lombard Baptistery. The marble columns are said to have been derived from a temple of Isis, which occupied this site. A pillar of brick was added to each of them in the 12th cent. marble urn beneath the altar, with its ancient symbols, was erected at the same time to receive the body of S. Petronius, who is said to have imparted miraculous qualities to the water of The walls are almost the well. entirely of brick, and over the arches are small windows of two lights. The curious erection in the centre is an ancient Model of the Tomb in the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, with a modern staircase. The 3rd Church is formed out of the ATRIO DI PILATO, an open Court with colonnades. In the centre is a mediæval font, which once stood in the Lombard Baptistery, and bears the name of Luitprand (744). Here are many ancient monumental inscriptions. In a chapel is a good painting of St. Jerome and St. Francis adoring the Saviour on the Cross, by Giacomo Francia, and a painted Crucific, by Simone da Bologna (1370), surnamed dei Crocifissi, from the excellence with which he treated this subject. Behind this is the hall of the Compagnia dei Lombardi, erected by Benedict XIV.; the keys of the gates of Imola, captured by the Bolognese in 1328, are preserved here. open only on the 1st Sun. in Feb. From this Court opens the chapel of the Trinità, also in a Lombardo-Gothic style, with ancient columns and a groined 12th-cent. vault. Ursula, on a pillar to the l., is by Simone da Bologna; the Holy Trinity over the altar is by Sammachini. We now enter the 5th Church, that of the Madonna della Consola-ZIONE. On the walls are several 14thcent. paintings of saints. From this enclosed corridor we descend into the Church, the Confessione, a kind of crypt (usually closed), having | ancient columns with reliefs, and the bodies of two native saints and martyrs, Vitalis and Agricola. of the pillars professes to represent the exact height of our Saviour. turning to the 4th Church, we pass into the Sacristy, which has a Virgin and Child with St. Nicholas and other Saints, by Sabbatini, and a painting by Lippo di Dalmasio. Adjacent is a small handsome *CLOISTER (11th cent.), the upper gallery sustained by twin columns supporting round arches. Some of the capitals on the N.W. side are formed by whimsical figures of men and animals. The 7th Church (usually closed), with its main entrance towards the Piazza, probably occupies the site of the primitive cathedral, founded by S. Faustinianus, A.D. 330, but the present structure. dedicated to SS. PETER AND PAUL, is the 12th cent., with Roman materials built in. On some of the massive piers and coupled columns early frescoes of saints have been discovered under the whitewash. There is an Ionic capital on the last column to the rt., apparently antique. Here is the sarcophagus of S. Agricola To this church, still (9th cent.). restoration, belong several paintings, temporarily placed in the Sacristy and elsewhere.

S. Stefano is celebrated for its relics, among which are the bodies of 40 martyrs, brought by S. Petronius from Jerusalem. (Keys at the Municipio.) There is a curious reliquary with enamels by Jacopo Rossetti (1380).

88. Trinità (G. 7) has, at the 1st altar rt., the Madonna in Glory, with SS. Jerome, Francis, Doninus, and Apollonia, and some children playing with the cardinal's hat, by Giov. Battista Gennari, of Cento.

88. Vitale ed Agricola, giving its name to the street leading towards Ravenna, was consecrated in 428 by St. Petronius and St. Ambrose, but has been restored, and preserves nothing of its ancient architecture. Under the portico, to the 1. of the door, is the slab-tomb of a physician, with relief of a lecture. In the 1st chapel I. is a graceful painting by *F. Francia, " beautiful angels hovering and playing on instruments round an old picture of the Madonna" Cic. On each side of it is a large fresco rt., the Nativity, by his son Giacomo; l., the Visitation of Mary and Elisabeth, with portraits of the donatoru, by Baganeavallo. On the wall close by is a curious relief of a bishop worshipping Christ in the tomb (1362). The column, with a cross of the early Christians, in the opposite corner of this chapel, formerly stood on the spot in the adjoining street where SS. Vitalis and Agricola suffered martyrdom. The 2nd chapel rt. has a Return from Egypt, by Tiarini.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

At the centre of the city is the Piassa Maggiore (now Vittorio Emunuele), the Forum of Bologna in the middle ages: it is still surrounded by remarkable edifices rich in historical associations, the relies of the once formidable republic. It was considered by Evelyn as the most stately piazza in Italy, with the single exception of that of San Marco at Venice. Standing in this square, with his face towards the unfinished front of S. Petronio, the visitor has on his rt. the great mediaval Palazzo Comuuale, on his I. the Portico dei Banchi, and behind him, at the corner, the Palazzo del Podestà. Facing the Church is a bronze Equestrian Statue of Victor Emanuel, creeted in 1888 on the 800th anniversary of the foundation of the University.

The Fontana Pubblica (or di Nettuno) was constructed in 1564, while Cardinal (afterwards S. Carlo) Borromeo was legate. The general design is by Lauretti; the pedestal and the basin are by Antonio Lupi; and the poor figure of Neptune (8 ft. high), with the other figures and bronze ornaments, are by Giovanni Bologna. The cost of the fountain, with its pipes and aqueducts, was 14,0001.

The Palageo Comunale, begun in 1290, and restored in 1888, was, prior to 1848, the residence of the Legate and of the Senator, as it is now of the Civil Governor. Its front still exhibits some traces of the Pointed style in its eight walled-up windows, but the building has been so altered at various periods, that little uniformity remains High up, nuder a canopy, is a Madouna, by Niccold dell' Arca (1494, in terra-cotta, once gilt. The ornaments of the clock are by Tadolini. The entrance g. way is by Galenzzo Alessi (1570), Le bronze statue of Gregory XIII. (Buoncompagni of Bologna), erected at the cost of his fellow-citizens, is by Alessandro Menganti (1588). After the revolution of 1796, in order to save the statue, the inhabitants converted it into that of S. Petronio, their patron Saint. The tiara was changed for a mitre, and a huge pastoral staff placed in the right hand, with the inscription " Divus Petronus Protector et Fater." The pastoral staff is quite out of proportion with the dimensions of the statue.

A grand spiral staircase of 53 steps, by Bramante, leads to the upper halls. The bronze bust of Benedict XIV. and the ornaments over the door, where it is placed, are by Giambatlista Bolognini. The Saloon of Hercules takes its name from his colossal statue by Alfansa Lamburda (1520). On the l. is a hall, covered with frescoes, by late Bolognese artists, and in the adjoining chapel is a fresco of the Virgin , Madonna del Terremoto , supposed to have been painted by the school of Francia in 1505. The Sala Farnese, on the 2nd floor, so called from a bronze statue of Paul III., has roof and walls covered with paintings, representing the history of the city. by Cignani and other artists.

The Palazzo del Podestà was begun in 1201, the front added in 1485 by Bartolommeo Froravanti. It has a portice of nine square-headed arches surmonated by a gallery, and by a second row of arches which separated by highly decorated by pilasters. It was the prison of Enzio, King of Sardinia, and natural son of the Emp. Frederick II., captured by the Bolognese at the battle of Fossalta, in 1249, kept here a prisoner until his death in 1272, and buried in San Domenico. During his long imprisonment, the prince employed his time in poetical compositions, some of which are marked by considerable taste. The young king, moreover, was beloved in his captivity by a fair damsel of Bologna, Lucia Vendagoli, who succeeded in visiting him under various disguises, and attempted his rescue by concealing him in a cask, and having him carried out in it, but a lock of his golden hair hanging out betrayed the secret. The great hall (170 ft. by 74) is still called Sala del Re Enzio. In 1410, the conclave for the election of Pope John XXIII. was held here; in the last cent. it was converted into a theatre; it was afterwards used for the game of pallone; and was latterly degraded into a workshop. The building also includes the Archives of the Notaries (Archivio Notarile), rich in unpublished materials for the history of Bologna, and indeed of Italy during the middle ages. The lofty Torrazzo dell' Aringo, rising out of the midst of the building, was erected in 1264, for the purpose, it is said, of watching Enzio. The statues in terra-cotta of SS. Petronius, Florian, Eligius, and Francis, protectors of the city, on brackets, at its base, are by Alfonso Lombardo.

The Portico de' Banchi, occupying one side of the Piazza, was built between 1400 and 1412; but it is now included, with the Portico Archiginnasio, under the name of Pavaglione, remodelled by Vignola in Here are some of the principal shops of Bologna. Opening out of it is the REGISTRO, formerly the College of Notaries, presented to that body in 1283 by the learned jurisconsult and chief magistrate Rolandino Passeggeri, who is buried in the Piazza di S. Domenico. hall, now converted into a chapel, has a Madonua by Passerotti; the N. Italy.

Sacristy contains, among other documents, a Diploma of the Emperor Frederick II., confirmed by a Bull of Julius II., granting to the Correttore de' Notari the power of creating apostolical and imperial notaries, and of legitimizing natural children. The entrance to the Archiginnasio is also under the portico.

The Mercanzia (E. 6) is the best preserved example of the ornamented Italian-Gothic in the city. It was built in 1294 of moulded brickwork, but assumed its present form in 1499 under the Bentivogli, and has been well restored. The interior contains the Exchange and the Tribunal of Commerce. On the stairs are painted, commencing from the top, the shields of the ten corporations of the city — Cambiatores, Mercanti, Macellari, Merciari, Orefici, Tallegari, Druppi a lana, Drappi e Strazziolari, Speziali, and Bambiriari—and of the Consuls of Commerce from A.D. 1441 to 1813.

A little N. of this building are the two

Leaning Towers, destitute of architectural attractions, but no doubt intended, like other towers and Church fronts in Italy, to be encased in marble. Their bareness is somewhat relieved by the "put-log holes," as they are termed by builders, in which the bricklayers inserted the supports of their scaffolding. The Torre Asinelli, begun in 1109 by Gherardo degli Asinelli, is of massive brickwork, divided into three portions; the lowest has a projecting battlement, occupied by shops; the others diminish upwards in their outward diameter, whilst the inner one increases, owing to the lesser solidity and thickness of the walls as they It is 321 ft. high, and 4 ft. out of the perpendicular. The inclination is to the W., quite opposite to that of its neighbour. It can be ascended without danger, and commands an extensive view, but the visitor is not allowed to go alone. There are 449 steps, divided into flights of 10 each, between which there are convenient landing-places. The lower stairs ascend for a short way round an axis, the remainder being placed against the inner walls. On the top is a kind of lantern or belfry, containing a bell only tolled on very solemn or important occasions.

It does not appear that the inclination of the tower has undergone any change of late years. As to its use, there is every reason for believing that, like many others in Bologna, it was reared from family vanity. It is entered by a low door on the S. side, where the keeper will be found.

The Torre Garisenda, built by the brothers Filippo and Oddo Garisenda, in 1110, is 161 ft high, and nearly 10 ft out of the perpendicular. Some writers have maintained that the inclination of the Garisenda tower is the effect of art, but the courses of brick and the holes to receive the timbers of the floors are also inclined, which they would not have been if the tower had been built in its present form

There are remains of other similar towers in different parts of Bologua, especially two near the Archbishop's Palace, the bases of which are built of blocks of gypsum.

The Cassa di Risparmio, or Savings Bank, in the Via Farini (F. 6), with its handsome wrought-iron railings, is a good specimen of modern architecture. It was designed by Gius Mengoni (1877), who built the well-known gallery at Milan, and has left several monuments of his genius in Bologua.

The University (16, D 7) is the oldest in Italy, and the first in which academical degrees were conferred. It owes its origin to Irnerius, chief of the Glossators and founder of the famous law school of Bologna, who began teaching here between 1070 and 1100. The great tide of scholars had set in by 1120, the University obtained recognition from the Emperor at the diet of Roncaglia in Peror at the diet of Roncaglia in The noble Palace, which includes the content of the University has a staff of the University ha were called by him to sit as assessors. and privileges granted to persons travelling for the sake of study. During the troubled period of the 12th cent. the fame of this University attracted students from all parts of Europe; no less than 10,000 are said to have assembled here in 1262, and it became necessary to appoint regents and professors for the students of each country. Irnerius revived the study of the Roman system of Jarisprudence, which his disciples for nearly two centuries spread over Europe, sending in 1144 to England Vacarius, one of the ablest of their body, and founder of the law school at Oxford. It was at Bologua that the Ecclesiastical Laws were first collected and arranged in a convenient form, since known as the CANON LAW, by the labours of Gratian, a Bene-The faculties of medidictine monk cine and arts were added before the commencement of the 14th cent ; and Innocent VI. instituted a theological faculty some years later. In the 14th cent, also it acquired celebrity as the first school where dissection of the human body was practised; and in 1789 it became renowned for the discovery of galvanism within its walls. This University has also been remarkable for an honour peculiarly in own -the number of its learned female professors. In the 14th cent., Nocella d Andrea, daughter of the celebrated canonist, frequently occupied her father's chair. The name of Laura Bassi, Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, is of more recent date; she had the Jegree of Doctor of Laws, and her lectures were regularly attended by many learned ladies of France and Germany, who were mentbers of the University. Another instance is that of Signorn Mangolina who graduated in surgery and was Professor of Anatomy; and nearer our own times (1794-1817) the Greek chair was filled by the learned Clotila Tambreni. At the present time the University has a staff of 55 profession 1400

University and Library, was formerly [the Palazzo Cellesi. It was built by Cardinal Poggi, the façade being designed by Pellegrino Tibaldi, and the imposing court by Bartolommeo Triachini, a native architect of the 16th cent. It was purchased in 1711 by the Senate of Bologna, to receive the library and the collection of natural history and scientific instruments presented to the city, as the foundation of a national institute, by Count Luigi Ferdinando Marsigli, the friend of Sir Isaac Newton, and a Fellow of the Royal Society of London.

The Palace at first included the Academy of Sciences (Istituto delle Scienze di Bologna), founded in the 17th cent. In 1808 the University was transferred hither.

The halls of the Loggiato and the adjoining chambers are remarkable for their frescoes by Pellegrino Tibaldi and Niccolò Abbate. In the court is a statue of Hercules in grey stone, by Angelo Pio, a sculptor of some repute in the 17th cent. In the upper corridors are several memorials, erected in honour of celebrated professors and others, natives of the city; and in the lower one a handsome monument to Count Rossi, who had been professor here, assassinated at Rome in 1848.

The CABINET OF NATURAL PHILOSO-PHY contains some paintings by Niccold Abbate. The Anatomical Museum is rich; and the various branches of pathological, general, and obstetrical anatomy are well illustrated by preparations and wax models. GEOLOGICAL MUSEUM in an adjoining building contains a good collection of fossils of Italy, and especially of the country around—amongst the latter the head and nearly entire skeleton of a gigantic Dugong, discovered in the pliocene beds at Riota, near Pianora, on the road to Pietramala. Upon one of the walls are suspended the chains by which Count Marsigli was bound when a prisoner with the Turks.

At the top of the building of the University is the Observatory, containing some good astronomical instruments. The view from the terrace of its tower is most extensive.

The University Library (daily 10 to 2) contains about 170,000 printed volumes and 6000 manuscripts; of these, not less than 20,000 volumes were presented by Benedict XIV., who also induced Cardinal Monti, another native of Bologna, to follow his patriotic example. Among the printed books is a copy of the first edition of Henry VIII.'s famous Assertio Septem Sacramentorum adversus Martinum Lutherum: Lond. in Œdibus Pynsonianis, 1512, dedicated to Leo X., with the autograph signature "Henricus Rex." There are about 200 vols. of scientific MSS. by Ulysses Aldrovandi.

Here the late Cardinal Mezzofanti commenced his career as librarian. He was born in 1776, the son of a small tradesman of Bologna, and became celebrated throughout Europe for knowledge of languages, whilst he filled the chair of professor of Greek and Oriental literature in this University. He died at Naples in 1849. At the age of 36 Mezzofanti is said to have been able to read 20, and to converse fluently in 18 languages; at the time of his death, in 1849, he spoke 42. Mezzofanti was called to Rome by Gregory XVI., and appointed to a post in the Vatican Library, under Mai; and when that illustrious scholar was created a cardinal, Mezzofanti was raised to the same dignity. "I do not recollect," said Lord Byron, "a single foreign literary character that I wished to see twice, except, perhaps, Mezzofanti, who is a prodigy of language, a Briareus of the parts of speech, a walking library, who ought to have lived at the time of the tower of Babel, universal interpreter; a miracle, and without pretension too. I tried him in all the languages of which I knew only an oath or adjuration of the gods against postillions, savages, pirates, boatmen, sailors, pilots, gondoliers, muleteers, cameldrivers, vetturini, postmasters, horses, and houses and everything in post! and by Heaven! he puzzled me in my own idiom." A new Hall, dedicated to Mezzofanti, contains the MSS., among which are some interesting ones of Tasso, a number of Voltaire's letters to Frederick of Prussia, letters of Metastasio, Mezzofanti's Catalogues, a number of illuminated Books of Hours, &c. In a small adjoining hall is Mezzofanti's own library, purchased after his death and presented to the University by Pope Pius IX.

The Collegio di Spagna (F. 4) was founded in 1364, by Cardinal Albornoz (4 fr.) The frescoes of its portico by Annibale Caracci, in his youth, have been restored. In the upper loggia is a fine fresco by Bagnacavallo, representing the Holy Family, with an angel above scattering flowers, and the Cardinal founder kneeling in veneration. The Court is handsome, and there is an ornate doorway. In the Chapel is a Virgin and Child with Saints, by Marco Zoppo, and some frescoes by Lappo di Dalmasio. This is the last surviving Codlege of a large number, which existed here in the middle ages, corresponding to those of Oxford and Cambridge.

The Collegio dei Fiamminghi in the Via Guerrazzi (F. 7), established for Belgian students in 1682, has a portrait of the founder, by Guido Reni.

The Collegio Venturoli, so called from the eminent architect of Bologna, who founded it for architectural studies in 1825, occupies the building formerly used as the Hungarian College. The establishment is well managed, and the pupils are educated here until their 20th year. The marble bust of Venturoli is by Professor Demaria.

The Botanical Garden was formed in 1804, on the site of the ancient Collegio Ferrerio de' Piemontesi, a practical school for agricultural students. Here stands the Palazzino della Viola, built by the Bentivogh, and now in a sadly degraded state. In the room used as a lecture-room for the agricultural students are decaying and neglected frescoes, once of much beauty, by Innocenzo da Imola, who was employed by Grovanni II. Bentivoglio to decorate his Casino with mythological subjects. Action transformed into a stag, Diana and Endymion, Apollo and Marsyss, &c.

PICTURE GALLERIES, MUSEUMS, AND LIBRARIES.

The Accademia delle Belle Arti (D. 7, 8) occupies a suppressed convent of the Jesuits. On the ground-floor are several casts from ancient and mediaval sculptures, and a statue of a Duka of Courland, who resided at Bologna, and was one of the protectors of the institution at its commencement.

The *Pinacoteca, on the 1st floor, is open daily from 9 to 3 or 4 (1 fr.; Sun. 11 to 2, free; catalogue, 1 fr.). Some of the paintings were carned off by the French in 1796, and restored after the peace of Paris in 1815.

Besides Raffael's St. Cecilia, the great boast of the Gallery, this Collection includes some good works by Francia, Cossa, and Timoleo della Vite; the majority of its examples, however, being of the later Bologuese School.

Musical instruments, scattered on the foreground, fill it up, but without attracting the eye, a heavy cloudy sky forms the horizon, while high in the heavens a choir of angels, touched with the softest trats, is indistinctly seen."-Bell. "On the earth lie the worldly musical instruments, half broken, unstringed, even the pions organ falls out of the hands of the saints; all are listening to the choir of angels, only indicated in the air above. Raphael gave song to this wonderfully improvised upper group, whose victory over instruments is here substituted for the conquest, itself impossible to represent, of heavenly tones over the earthly, with a symbolism worthy of all admiration," Cic. The lower part of the picture is supposed to have been painted by Raphael's scholar, Giov. da Udine. This beautiful picture was painted about 1515, for the Lady Elena dall' Oho, afterwards beatified, and long stood over the altar of the Bentivoglio charel at San Giovanni in Monte. It was removed by the French, and remained in Paris till 1815. It is tolerably preserved and restored, with the exception of the coarsely over-painted sky,

The Archiginnasio (18 F. 5) occupies the E. side of the Piazza Galvani. (Daily 8 to 5; fee to the civil and intelligent custodian, and to the porter.) It was built as a University for 8. Carlo Borromeo in 1562, by Terribilia, and consists of a handsome Court surrounded by a Doric portico below, and an Ionic loggia above. The professors had previously taught in hired Class Rooms, there being no University buildings

In this Court is the entrance to the small chapel of S. M. dei Bulgari, which has its walls and cenings covered with frescoes chiefly relating to the Virgin, by Bartolommeo Cesi

Under the portico, and in the loggie above, are several interesting memorials of deceased professors: the physician Muratori, by his daughter Teresa; the celebrated anatomist Malpighi, by Franceschini; Valsalva, also a celebrated anatomist, with his bust in relief; Mariani, by Carlo Cignani; and the philosopher Sharaglia, by Donato Creti. All the halls, galleries, and loggie are decorated with the coats of arms of the students of the ancient university, forming a curious and not unpleasing kind of decoration; there are about 6000 of these escutcheons, with the names and country of their owners.

The entrance to the Public Library, or Biblioteca Comunale (11 to 4), is | The Library from the upper loggia was formed in 1801 out of the spoils of suppressed Convents, and its first home was at San Domenico. In 1811 it was enriched by a legacy from the learned Abate Magnani, a native of the city, and was moved hither in 1839. It now contains about 200,000 vols., in a series of halfs with a length of 200 yds. The bust of Mezzofanti is seen over a door. In the last room was given the first representation of Rossini's Stabat Mater. It contains an interesting model of the Teatro Comunale as first arranged, without a pit or any place for the people.

The *Museo Civico (22 E. 5), a very interesting and well-arranged museum, contains all the antiquarian collections formerly in the Archiginussio (10 to 3, 1 fr.; Sun , 50 c.).

The Entrance Hall contains Roman tombs, a well-mouth, and a Statue. Opening out of it on the rt. is a small room with remains of capitals and pavements, and another on the l. with fragments of terra-cotta. The tastefully arranged Court is surrounded with inscriptions, among which is that belonging to the sacred well, which gave rise to the commentary of Paciauds on the "Puteus Sacer" numbered CC. and CCCXXVI.; fragments of latercoli, or military registers; and a large number of sepulchral tablets. Beyond this is another room with architectural remains of the mediaval period.

On the upper floor, reached by a staircase at the end of the Court, is the Museum, divided into two sections, Ancient and Mediæval.

Room I. Bones, flints, vases, bronze weapons, and other relics of primitive dwellers in caves, or in the terramare, or lake-huts, of the submerged plains of Emilia.

Rooms II.-V. Egyptian Antiquities, from the head of Jupiter, while Venus collected chiefly by Nizzoli, Austrian is caressing him. The names of the Consul in Egypt, from whom they were figures are in Etruscan character purchased in 1832 by Palagi, the architect of the Royal Palaces under Carlo relief, Philoctetes healed by Mad Alberto, who bequeathed them to his native city. Amongst the papyri on the walls is one written by the secretary of Ramesis the Great (Sesostris) about 3300 years ago, in the hieratic character. It relates to a slave who had run away from the prophet Rameson Another papyrus, also in hieratics, is of the time of Menephtha I., and is consequently about 3200 years Here is a mummy case of wood, about 2200 years old. It is of the rare waggon-topped form, and is covered with prayers in hieroglyphics. In the centre of Room III, is a limestone Pastoforus (box-carrier), of the Egyptian Triod Osiris, Iris, and Horus, held by a Naos or priest. There are several stelle with reliefs; and many small articles, such as pecklaces and scarabæi. The collection of bronze statuettes of divinities is said to be the richest in Italy.

Room VI. Greek Antiquities, including a fine *Head of a youth, gold ornaments. Attic cases, glass, and statuettes in marble.—Room VII. Roman soulptures, chiefly heads or fragments of statues. Nero with a cloak and sword. Head of Marcians, of Lucius Verus, and of an unknown female.

ROOM VIII. Etruscan Antiquities, including eight vases from Vulei of the form called petachnon, all in the purest style. One with red figures on a black ground, representing Codrus and his friend Ametos, is unusually fine Black ware of Chiusi; Greek vases found in Etruma, one with the name of the maker, Nikostnenes Five lecythoi with white bodies are not to be matched elsewhere in Italy. Here also is a fragment of an *engraved plate, or, according to Chev loghirami, of a mystic micror, called, from the name of its first possessor, the Cospiana Patera. It represents the birth of Minerva, who issues armed whose names are also in Etruscan characters.

ROOM IX. Roman Antiquities. Fragment of an imperial Statue, with relief of women riding on sea-horse, and other devices, on the armour the folds of the tunic most elaborately carved. Bronze statuettes, cotta lamps, objects in glass, and various domestic utensils. A semicolossal bronze foot and a Bacchic vase in marble, both found in the island of Capri; a series of Roman weights in black stone, and some metal weights of the middle ages, among which is one of the time of Charlemagne, with the inscription " Pondus Caroli." Two fragments of marble torsi, the one of Venus coming out of the bath, the other of the same goddess standing; a male torso, attributed to Augustus, found in the Via S. Mamolo; an Isiac table of black basalt, found on the Aventine in 1709. and an elliptical vase of porphyry.

Here are the *results of Room X. the excavations which have been going on near Bologna since 1870. Etruscan cemetery, of ancient Felsina, was discovered 25 ft. below the modern Campo Santo, and the articles brought to light are most interesting. The tombstones are of two forms, one upright and oval, or shaped like the last letter of the Greek alphabet, O. These are covered with symbolic reliefs on both sides; the other spherical, mounted on a quadrangular foot. Amongst the numerous objects found in this ancient cemetery, which is thought to date from 300 to 500 years B.C., perhaps the most interesting is a pail-shaped vessel of bronze, in which were found burned bones, the exterior being covered with curious figures in relief, and arranged in four circles round the vessel. Bronze candelabra, not for lamps, but furnished with spikes, to which the brands were attached; necklaces of glass beads, gold finger-rings and ear-rings, gold bracelets, and fibulæ in gold, silver. and bronze, are amongst the articles The earthenware here exhibited.

vases were much broken. In glass cases are models of the tombs, where the skeletons and objects found therein are shown in situ, with the bronze cistæ, dishes, &c., and the piece of money to pay the passenger's fare to Charon. Near the third window is a unique bronze vessel (situla) of B.C. 400, covered with reliefs representing a procession in which the civil, military, and pontifical dignitaries of Felsina are taking part. the walls of the rooms are suspended photographs which explain the position of the tombs and other circumstances. About 250 tombs have been found with skeletons, and 120 with bronze or earthenware vessels; the number of unburnt bodies would seem to exceed those burnt.

Room XI. Bronze articles, nearly 15,000 in number, found in 1877 by the Church of S. Francesco.

We now enter the mediæval and modern section.—Room XII. Weapons and armour, including some which belonged to Murat.—Room XIII. Majolica jars, from Faenza, Fano, and Peru.—Room Limoges enamels, ivories, musical Very beautiful *ivory instruments. and ebony vase and dish 2 ft. in diameter.—Room XV. Mediæval and Renaissance Sculptures, reliefs, and medals, several of which bear interesting portraits. Ancient Roman coins, Greek ones from Sicily, a collection of Italian and foreign moneys, and a good series of modern medals of sovereigns and illustrious men. There is also a small collection of gems, among which is the Maffei agate, representing Achilles and Ulysses. Ancona on gold ground (No. 194) in the last room—Virgin and Child, with SS. Paul, John Bapt., Peter, and James.—Room XVI. Bronze Statue of Boniface VIII. (1301); altar-frontal of the 14th cent.; group of the Nativity; bells, crosses; *Tomb of Bart. da. Saliceto, by Andrea da Fiesole (1403). -Room XVII. Collection of *Choir books and miniatures, with embroidery and vestments, extremely interesting. On the ground-floor of the Museum are the Archives (Archivio di Stato), established in 1875. (Entrance in the Via Foscherari; adm. free, on application to the learned and obliging director, Prof. Malagola.) Among other treasures it contains the Bulla Aurea, with autographs of Pope Eugenius IV. and the Emp. John Palecologus, who presented it to the Blessed Niccolò degli Albergati, Abp. of Bologna. It gives the proceedings of the Council of Florence in 1439, which healed for a time the schism of the East and the West, and at which the above-mentioned dignitary presided as papal legate. Here also are the Rotoli, or University records, with splendid illuminations,

One of the most curious of the antiquities of Bologna is the celebrated Latin inscription discovered in some excavations of the city. This famous riddle, which gave rise to so much learned controversy in the 17th cent., is as follows:- "D M, ÆLIA LÆLIA CRISPIS, nec vir, nec mylier, nec androgyna, nec pvella, nec jvvenis, nec anvs, nec casta, nec meretrix, nec pvdica, sed omnia; svblata neqve fame, neque ferro, neque veneno, sed omnibys; nec cœlo, nec aqvis, nec terris, sed vbique jacet. Lvcivs Agatho Priscivs, nec maritys, nec amstor, nec necessarivs, neqve mosrens, neque gavdens, neque fleus, hanc nec molem, nec pyramidem, nec sepvlchrvm, sed omnia, scit et nescit cvi posverit.

PRIVATE MANSIONS AND BEMARKABLE HOUSES.

The Palaces of Bologna are numerous, but the works of art which formerly gave them celebrity are gradually disappearing. Their frescoes, however, like their architecture, cannot be exported; and in both these respects there is much to engage the attention of the traveller. They generally consist of a portico in front, opening by a handsome portal into a pies infesting the tables of Riness. court of three sides, the fourth being left open to admit light and air.

Palazzo Albergati (F. G. 3) is a good example of the architecture of Baldassare Perusni (1540). Beneath it some foundations of Roman baths have been discovered.

Palazzo Arcivescovile, N.E. of the Cathedral, the residence of the archbishop, was built in 1577 by Tibaldi, and has been restored and decorated with considerable taste at the cost of the Card. Abp. Oppizzoni. apartments are painted by the most eminent artists of Bologna.

Palazzo Baciocchi (G. 5) is now occupied by law-courts, and called Pal. di Giustisia. The principal front is by Palladio, by whom some of the other details were probably designed. This was the residence of Elisa, sister of Napoleon I. The grand hall is ornamented by Bibbiena, Palazzo Bentivoglio (D. 6, 7) has been frequently the residence of sovereign princes during their visits to Bologua; it recalls the magnificence of the ancient palace of the Bentivogli, destroyed in 1507 by the populace at the instigation of Julius II., who adopted this mode of revenging himself on his great rival Annibale Bentivoglio.

*Palazzo Bavilacqua Vincenzi (F. 5) is attributed to Bramantino, front is a fine specimen of the Diamond Rustic style, surmounted by a good cornice, with two handsome round-headed gateways, over one of which is a balcony. The court is surrounded by a double colonnade, In the centre is a curious *Fountain. In one of the chambers is an inscription recording that the Council of Trent held two sessions here in 1547, having removed to Bologua for fear of contagion.

Palazzo de Bianchi, in the Via S. Stefano (G. H 7), has a fine ceiling by Guido Reni, representing the Haz-

Palamo Bologaini (1525), opp

S. Stefano, has a front with three rows of terra-cotta heads, by Alfonso Lombardo, the lowest being between the arches of the portico. On the other nide of this piazza there are some dilap dated houses, which show traces of former splendour in their terra-cotta and brick-work.

Palamo Bonoompagni Ludovisi, N.E. side of the cathedral (D. 5), was built by Gregory XIII., a native of Bologna (1545), and has been restored. The upper part of the columns of the entrance are covered with elegant arabesque reliefs, and in the cortile there are some similar columns. There are some paintings in the great anteroom on the 1st floor, of events during the Pope's pontificate. This palace belongs to the head of the Boncompagni family, the Roman Prince of Piombino.

Palasso Fantuzzi (now Pedrazzi), opposite the Church of S. Vitale (E. 7), was built early in the last cent., from the designs of Andrea Formigine. At early extremity is an elephant with a castle on its back, the canting arms of the first owners. Within is a hand-some staircase.

Palaggo Fava, opposite the Madonna di Galliera (D. 5), is rich in frescoes by the Caracci. The great hall contains the first *fresco painted by Agostino and Annibale, under the direction of Lodovico, after their return from Parma and Venice: it represents, in a series of 18 pictures, the Expedition of Jason, and is one of the most interesting examples of the Relectic School. The small chamber adjoining is painted by Lodovico, who has represented the Voyage of Eneas in 12 pictures. The next chamber is painted by Albani, with the assistance of Lodovico Caracci: it presents 16 subjects, also from the Eneid. chamber beyond was painted by Lucio Mussari, and the rest by other pupils, the last room being by Cesi; subjects of the Enerd prevail throughout the whole. The paintings of a cabinet representing the Rape of Europa are by Annibale Caracci.

Palazzo Grassi, W. of S. Martino (D 6), has a fresco by Lodovico Caracci, representing Hercules armed with a flambeau, treading on the Hydra; and some curious cameos by Properzia de' Rossi, engraved on peach-stones, and illustrating events of Scripture history.

Palamo Magnani Guidotti, nearly opposite S. Giacomo (D. 6), an imposing design of Domenico Tibaldi, is celebrated for its frescoes by the three Caracci, representing the history of Romulus and Remus, and not inferior either in composition or colour to those in the Farnese Palace. Adjacent is the Palamo Malversi Campeggi, with a fine court; and nearly opposite, the Palamo Malvemi Bonfioli, a fine specimen of palace architecture, by Vignola. In its second court are frescoes illustrating the Gerusalemme Liberata, by Lionello Spada.

Palazzo Malvezzi Campeggi, in the Via Zamboni, contains some tapestries from designs of Lucas van Leyden, presented by Han. VIII. to Card. Campeggi, papal legate in England.

Palazzo Marescalchi, W. of the Palazzo Comunale (E. 4), was built by Dom Tibaldi in 1572. It contains some frescoes by the Caracci, Guido Reni, and Tibaldi.

Palazzo Marescotti, in the Via Rolandmo, near Sau Domenico, is a good specimen of the domestic architecture of the 16th cent.; it is in brick, and has some tasteful windows in moulded terra cotta.

Palasso Papoli, in the Via Castighoue (F. 6), a huge brick edifice, now greatly dilapidated, is inhabited by numerous families. It was erected in 1344, and is still the property of the Papoli family; it has more the appearance of a castle than a palass

from its high wall, surmounted by machicolated defences. Facing the street are three good pointed gateways in decorated terra-cotta. On the opposide of the street is another large Palace of the same name, built in the beginning of the last cent., occupying the site of the ancient palace of the great captain Taddeo Pepoli. It is the present residence of the Pepoli family.

Palazzo Ranneri, in the Via S. Stefano (G 7, built from the designs of Bart. Triachini, is interesting for its paintings by Bolognese masters prior to the Caracci those on the ceiling of the upper hall by Tommaso Lauretti, the Virtues by Lorenzo Sabbatini, the Fall of Icarus by Oracio Sammachini, and the death of Hercules by Tibaldi.

Palazzo Sampleri (adm. 1 fr.), S.E. of San Bartolommeo (E. 6), was celebrated for its pictures, most of which are now in the Brera Gallery. In the 2nd hall the ceiling, painted by Lodovico Caracci, represents *Jupiter with the Eagle and Hercules, "in form, dignity of feature, and magnificence of character," says John Bell, "finely suited to harmonize as a group. The muscular figure and gigantic bulk of Hercules is imposing without extravagance; a perfect acquaintance with the human figure is displayed, with admirable foreshortening and great skill and boldness in composition and execution." The 3rd hall has a ceiling by Annibale Caracci, representing Hercules instructed by Virtue.

The ceiling of the 4th hall, by Agostino Caracci, represents Hercules and Atlas supporting the Globe. The chimneypiece of this hall, by the same master, represents Hercules holding down Cacus, preparing to pierce him with the sharp end of his club. In the 5th hall, the ceiling, representing Hercules strangling Antœus, is by Guercino. "A superb piece, with fine rep-toned colouring, and wonderful Hercules is very grand, but seems to have occupied rather too much of the artist's care Anteus is wanting in vigour; the resisting arm is not drawn with force or balk corresponding to the action; Leither are the figures sufficiently connected. But the whole piece is a work of great vigour and unquestionable merit. In one of the accompanying ornaments of the ceiling of the next room there is a beautiful little painting by Guercino, of Love (I think it should have been Ganymede) carrrying off the spoils of Hercules, the skin of the Nemena iton, and the cub. The motto under it is 'Iter ad superos gloria pandet,'" Bell. There is in this room also a good picture by Salvator Rosa.

Palazzo S. Paolo, nearly opposite the Church (F. 5), has on its entrance-door two bronze lion-headed knockers by Giovanni Bologna.

Remarkable Houses. The Case Bostini, adjoining the Palazzo Sampieri (E. 7), was built in 1825 by the late great "Maestro," who resided here until the Austrian occupation, when he voluntarily removed to Florence, and subsequently to Paris, where he died in Nov. 1868. It is covered with Latin inscriptions in large gold letters, taken chiefly from classic writers.

The Caracci are said to have inhabited the Pal, Marcscotti Guercino, during his residence at Bologna, lived in the small piazza behind S. Niccolò (D. 3). The house of Guido Rem has a fresco of two angels holding a crown, painted by him, on the exterior. The house in which Galvani, the discoverer of that species of electricity to which he has given his name, was born (1737), is in the Borgo delle Casse, No. 1347; over the door is the following inscription:—

percino. "A superb piece, with fine He resided in the Via Ugo Bassi, of the Police of He resided in the Via Ugo Bassi, of the Police of He resided in the Via Ugo Bassi, of the Police of He resided in the Via Ugo Bassi, of the Police of He resided in the Via Ugo Bassi, of the Police the Via della Campagna, leading out of the Via San Donato (E. 6).

THEATRES, AMUSEMENTS, ETC.

Teatro Comunale (19 D. 7) was built in 1756, on the site of the ancient palace of Giovanni II. Bentivoglio, destroyed by the populace at the instigation of Pope Julius II. in 1507. During the entire interval the ruins lay there under the name of Il Guasto (wantenly spoilt), of which the Via del Guasto, to the rt., is a survival. Many other ruined mansions, similarly destroyed, bore the same generic name. The curtain, representing the Apotheosis of Felsina or Bononia, is by N. Angiolini. There is a good opera here in Oct., Nov., and Dec.

Teatro Contavalli (D. 6), erected in 1814, is a part of the suppressed Carmelite, convent of S. Martino. The old convent stairs serve for the approach to the modern theatre. Performances generally in Bologuese dialect.

Teatro del Corso, E. of S. Giovanni in Monte (F. 7), built in 1805, is one of the most popular places of amusement in the city.

Teatro Brunetti, in a side street leading out of the Via Castiglione (G. 6).

Arena del Sole, W. of the Via Galliera (C. 5), for open air entertainments.

Giuoco del Pallone—a kind of tennis —is played occasionally by professonals in a Court near the Montagnola.
A small sum is charged for admission, and the performances are advertised.

The Club Felsineo has rooms in the Palazzo Bolognini, near S. Stefano, but strangers are not admitted, nuless introduced by resident friends.

The Accedemia Filarmonica, No.

614, Via Guerrazzi (F. 7), and the Liceo Filarmonico, in the convent of S. Giacomo, have acquired a European reputation. The Academy was founded by Vincenzo Carrati, in 1666, and has numbered among its members the most eminent professors of the last 200 years. The Lyceum, founded in 1805, by the municipality, as a school of music, is enriched with the unrivalled musical library and collections of the celebrated Padre Martini. The library contains 17,000 volumes of printed music, and the finest collection of ancient manuscript music in existence. There is an interesting collection of portraits of professors and dilettanti, another of antique instruments, and a fine series of choir-books with miniatures.

HOSPITALS.

The Ospedale Maggiore, founded in 1667, but not opened until 1725, has about 500 students. There is a large collection of anatomical figures, but it is inferior to that at Florence. The clinical cases are received in the Clinica dt S. Orsola, just outside the Porta Zamboni (C. 8, 9). In the Borgo S. Giuseppe is the Ospedale de' Settuagenari, and in the ancient Benedictine monastery of S. Procolo is the Ospedale degli Esposti, for foundlings, recently enlarged.

ENVIRONS OF BOLOGNA.

Not far beyond the Porta San Felice (C. 1) is the old Well, where the famous capture of the Bucket took place, by the Modenese in 1325. A commemorative tablet with an inscription has been set up here.

In the opposite direction, beyond the Porta Mazzini (F. 9), is the Portico degli Scalzi, 570 yds. long, with 167 arches, leading to the Church of Gi Scalzi, where are some indifferent paintings of the Bolognese school.

The Madonna di Memaratta, reached by a steep ascent of t hr. outside the Porta Azeglio (H. 4), was built in 1106, and was formerly one the depositories of sacred Italian art. Having been purchased by Cav. Minghetti, it now serves as a library, and is inaccessible. The frescoes attributed to Jacopo Avanzi, Galasso Galassi, Simone da Bologna, and other carly artists of the Bolognese school, are interesting as its earliest efforts, and are described at length in Lord

Lindsay's 'Christian Art.'

The 'Stations' on the ascent lead to the (1 m.) Osservansa, a Franciscan Convent commanding a fine view. In this direction runs the aqueduot (1881), an underground conduit of masonry, 18 miles long, which brings water from the River Repo near Sasso (Rte. 107). Close to the Chapel is the Villa Mezzaratta, with a pleasant chestnut grove, which may be visited by permission of Mr. Frank at the Hotel Brun. In the neighbouring hills are extensive Vineyards, belonging to the same proprietor.

Beyond the Porta Castiglione is the Church of the Misericordia (H. 27), runged in the wars of the 15th cent., partly rebuilt with little regard to the original plan, and now badly restored. At the 2nd altar is a fresco on canvas of the Madonna della Consolazione, by Lippo di Dalmasio; *glass in the round window designed by Francia. 4th chapel, another good window, by the same artist, in the choir, an onimportant Adoration of the Shepherds in a handsome old frame, which formerly enclosed a Nativity of the Virgin by Francia, now in the Pina-coteca. In the l. transept, the Tabernacle, supported by the four Doctors of the Church, is carved in cypress wood by Marco Tedesco of Cremona (17th cent.), who also executed the ornaments of the organ and singinggallery. End of I. aisle, on a pillar, fresco of a Bp. and four monks, School of Francia; 2nd altar I., Madonna and two Saints, by Bagnacavallo.

A pleasant drive of 2 hrs., commanding magnificent views, may be taken through the Giardini Margherita (p. 370) by the Villa Ercolani and Castiglione.

CAMPO BANTO, OR PUBLIC CEMETERY.

About 11 m. from the gate of 8. Isaia (E. 2) is the ancient Certosa, bailt in 1335 by Carthusian monks, suppressed in 1797, and consecrated in 1801 as the Public Cemetery. It was one of the first acts of the government of Napoleon to forbid the burial of the dead within the city. Separate enclosures are set apart for Protestanta, Jews, and ecclesiastics, including monastic individuals of both sexes. The Campo Santo occupies the site of an old Etruscan Burialground, discovered in 1869, which has vielded so many interesting objects, now in the Museo Civico. (Fee, 1 to I fr , according to length of visit.)

The Church contains, in the 1st chapel on the rt., S. Bruno, by Cesi. On the 1, near the entrance is a relief of SS. Hugh of Lincoln and Jerome, On the l., Baptism of Christ, by Elizabetta Strani, painted in her 20th year (1658), with her portrait. The Muraculous Draught of Fishes, Christ driving the Money-changers from the Temple, and four Carthusian baints, on the wall, rt. and l., were the last works of Gessi At the high altar, the Crucifixion, Christ in the Garden, and the Deposition, by Cesi. In an inner chapel, the Annunciation, by Cesi; Christ bearing the Cross, a half-length in fresco, by Lodovico Caracci, and S. Bernardino in fresco, by Amico Asperting. There are some good inlaid Stalls,

The *Campo Santo consists mainly of the two spacious cloisters of the convent, whose large area is occupied by the graves of the poorer classes unable to pay for a privileged site under the arcades. In the large closster are interred adults, the men on one side, females on the other: and in the smaller one children only. There is a separate walled-in space, destined as the last resting-place of Monte Donato to the Villa Guastavil- our Protestant countrymen, and lani, re-entering Bologua by the Porta | all creeds not Roman Catholic. In the small court beyond entrance-ball are the recumbent effigies in white and Istrian marble of Francesco Albergati and Sigismondo Malvezzi (1517), with beautiful arabesques; the monument of the Prothonotary Albergati (1533); and that of Alessandro Zambeccari (1571), with a statue in armour, most elaborately carved (end of the 16th cent.). Between the Protonotario Albergati and the Malvezzi monuments is a large shell in fresco, which at a little distance appears like sculpture.

A kind of Pantheon has been formed for the professors of the University, and their busts (including those of Mezzofanti, Galvani, and others) are placed in a spacious hall.

Statue of Eve, with a serpent in the form of a woman, and a Virgin and Child opposite in relief, to complete the allegory, by Prof. Cincinnati Barussi, last scholar of Canova. The corridor was designed by Mengoni (see Cassa di Risparmio). At the end of it, Marchese Bevilacqua; further on, Young Student, both sitting statues. Marchese Angelelli, Prof. of Greek in the University; above is a statue of Minerva, as Educator of youth. In the Cloister, tomb of Conte Malvezzi, with two *beautiful columns of Astracane marble, from a demolished Chapel in his Palace, Pallavicini monument, by Dupré. Relief of Rossini's first wife, by Thorwooldsen.

Continuing to the 1., we pass the Maiani monument, with a weeping girl; between the two cloisters Gen. Grabinski, with a statue holding a flag and sword; further on in the next corridor, Murat, King of Naples, in hussar uniform; and the brothers Pepoli, where the Saviour is represented as receiving their spirits. Beyond, the Pallavicini monument, having an angel with expanded wings.

In the smaller Cloister, lovely relief of three Minghetti Children, who died in the same year. Next but one to it is a cleverly sculptured veil over a woman's face, represent-good sitting Angel of the Resurreetion; next to it, Lady Lucan, second wife of Lord Lucan of Balaclava, with a statue of Desolation (1871). Hence a corridor leads to the Chapel, in which are frescoes of twelve subjects from the life of S. Bruno, with good half-lengths of the two Catharines in lunettes. A small Clouster reached from this has several fresco Madonnas, one of which is curiously represented as gravida. Close by are the Etrnscan Tombs, with a few open graves. Further on, a good bust of Contessa Barberini in 17th cent. costume (1621).

*Madonna di San Luca, Outside the restored Ports Saragozza (F. 2), which has two lateral routal towers, with a machiculated tower in the centre, is a fine arch designed by Monti, in 1675, as a propylæum er entrance to the celebrated Portico leading to the Madonna di S. Luca. This extraordinary example of public spirit and devotion was commenced in 1674, the first stone being laid between the 130th and 131st arches. The portico is 12 ft, broad and 15 ft. high, and consists of two portions, the Portico della Pianura (plain), and the P. della Salita (of the ascent); it has several angles or turnings in consequence of the irregularity of the ground. The first, consisting of 306 arches, was completed in 1676. Here the Portico della Salita is united to the 1st portice by the grand arch, called, from the neighbouring torrent, the "Arco di Meloncello." The difficulties of the ascent were skilfully overcome; and the money was raised by voluntary contributions, aided by the donations of the corporation and religious communities, as is shown by the inscriptions recording their benefactions. From 1676 to 1730, 329 arches of the ascent were finished, with the 15 chapels of the Rosary; and in 1739 the entire portico was completed, including no less than 635 arches, with a total length of nearly 3 m.

The fine Church, occupying the summit of the Monte della Guardia, derives its name from one of those numerous paintings of the Virgin attributed to St. Luke, said to have been brought to this spot in 1160 by a hermit from Constantinople, and preserved in a recess above the high altar, in a case of marble and gilt bronze. It is still regarded with so much veneration that its annual visit to the city on Ascension Day is the scene of one of the greatest public festivals of the Bolognese. Church, creeted by Dotti in 1731, contains numerous paintings by modern artists, but none of the great Bolognese masters, excepting a Madonna with S. Dominic, and the 15 Mysteries of the Rosary, in the 3rd chapel on the rt., by Guido Reni, one of his earliest productions. The *view is the chief attraction. The rich and glowing plains, from the Adriatic to the Alps and Apennines, are seen spread out like a map, studded with villages, churches, convents, and cities, among which Ferrara, Modena, and Imola may be distinctly recognised. Towards the E. the prospect is bounded by the Adriatic, and on the W. and S. the eye ranges along the picturesque and broken line of the Apennines.

The excursion to San Luca and the Campo Santo, driving from one to the other, will occupy from to 3 to 4 hours. A carriage for two persons can be obtained at the Hôtel Bron for 15 lire, and for four persons, 20 lire.

*San Michele in Bosco is beautifully situated on a hill to the S. of the town, 1 m. beyond the Porta Azeglio (H. 4) This great establishment, formerly attached to a monastery of the Olivetans, and one of the finest examples of monastic splendour in Italy, was suppressed at the French inva-Bion; its magnificent halls were for 22 years converted into barracks and prisons, and its best pictures were carried to Paris. It was assigned as a summer residence to the Cardinal Legate in 1829.

was held partly within its walls; and in 1800, chiefly on account of a munifcent bequest of 2,000,000 frames by Prof. Ruzzoli, a surgeon of Bologna, it was fitted up as an Orthopædic Institute, or Asylum for Lame Children. The main doorway was designed by Buldassars Peruzzi. At the entrance are two beautiful holy water basins in white marble. Tomb of the famous condottiere Armaciotto dei Ramazzoth, by Alfonso Lombardo (1528) weak, ill-drawn figure, in a position awaward in sleep and impossible in death" (Perkins . On each side of the nave are four lovely putti, holding medallions, by Cignans, under those on the rt., good Confessionals in tarsis woodwork. In the 2nd chapel rt. s the Death of S. Carlo in oil, and four frescoes of his life, by Aless Trarmi. The large lunette of St. Michael over the chancel arch, and the cupola above it, are by Canuti. Screen of guided arabesques in soft stone (mucigno). The fine inlaid stalls have been removed to S. Petronio. On the rt. 18.8 large modern group in plaster of the Virgin and Child, supported by four Angels, made by order of Carlo Alberto for the Villa Racconigi, new Turin. A good intarsia door leads to the Sacristy, where is a painting by Bagnacavallo in imitation of Raffael's Transfiguration; at the sides, single figures of the four Latin Fathers, St. Petronius, John Bapt., Benedict, Scolastica, and others. In the Cozo NOTTURNO are frescoes by Innocenzo da Imola of the Annunciation, Death, and Assumption of the Virgin Here Pius IX. said mass, and Victor Emmanuel five years afterwards attended as a worshipper. The octagonal Cloister has ruined frescoes by the Caracci.

E. of the Convent is the Villa Revedin, surrounded with beautiful grounds, which a carriage may enter by permission. *Fine view over the Ravenna, once the capital of the Western Empire, the seat of the Gothic and Longobardic kings, and the metropolis of the Greek exarchs, is one of those historical cities which are best illustrated by their monuments. Within its walls repose the children of Theodosius, and amidst the tombs of its exarchs and patriarchs lie the mortal remains of Dante. A short distance beyond the gates is the mausoleum of Theodoric, king of the Goths: the city ramparts still bear evidence of the breaches made in them by the barbarians who invaded Italy during the Lower Empire; and its half-deserted streets are filled with Christian antiquities which have undergone scarcely any change since the time of Justinian. As the traveller wanders through them, their solitude recalls the feelings with which he may have ridden round the walls of Constantinople; but Ravenna has prescrved more memorials of her imperial masters, and possesses a far higher interest for the Christian antiquary, than 2 D even that celebrated seat of empire. ["Whoever loves early Christian monuments, whoever desires to see them in greater perfection than the lapse of 14 centuries could warrant us in expecting, whoever desires to study them unaided by the remains of heathen antiquity, should make every effort to spend some days at least in this noble and imperial city. From Rome it differs mainly in this that your meditations on its ornaments are not disturbed by the constant recurrence of pagan remains, nor your researches perplexed by the necessity of enquiring what was built and what was borrowed by the faithful. Ravenna has only one antiquity, and that is Christian. Seated, like Rome, in the midst of an unhealthy, desolate plain, except when its unrivalled pineforests cast a shade of deeper solitude and melancholy over it - quiet and lonely, without the sound of wheels upon its grass grown pavement-it has not mercly to lament over the decay of ancient magnificence, out upon its total destruction, except what Religion has erected for herself. She was not in time to apply her saving as well as purifying unctien to the basilicas and temples of preceding ages, or rather, she seemed to occupy what she could replace, and therefore in the strength of imperial favour, raised new buildings for the Christian worship, such as no other city but Rome could boast of.' Cardinal Wiseman

The history of Ravenua embraces a considerable portion of that of Italy during the middle ages, and even of the Eastern and Western Empires.

The accounts by classical writers show that the ancient city was I wilt on wooden piles in the midst of a vast lagune, or awamp, and so intersected with marshes that communication was kept up by numerous bridges, not only throughout the adjacent country, but even in the city itself. The sea, which is now from 3 to 1 m. distant, then flowed up to its walls. Ravenna became a Roman colony at an early period. In the contests between Sylla and Marius it espoused the cause of the latter, for which it subsequently severely suffered; and, judging from an expression in Cicero, was an important naval station at the time of Cresar occupied it previous Pompey.

to his invasion of Italy. Under Augustus its consequence was increased by the construction of an ample port at the (Vitiges) Justinian endeavoured to mouth of the Candianus, capable of affording shelter to 250 ships, and superseding the old harbour at the mouth of the Ronco. He connected the new port with the Po by means of a canal, and carried a causeway to it from the city, which he made his frequent residence, and embellished with magnificent build ngs. The new harbour was called Portus Classis, a name stul retained in the distinctive title of the basilica of S. Apollmaris and the intermediate settlement which arose from the establishment of the port was called Casarea, whose name also was long perpetuated by the Church of S. Lorenzo in Cesarea. Subsequent emperors added to the natural strength of Ravenna by fortifying and maintaining its importance as a naval station. But its true interest does not commence until after the classical On the decime of the Roman empire, Honorius chose Ravenna as the capital of the Western Empire, A.D. 404. The alluvial deposits of the Po had begun to accumulate on the coast; the port of Augustus had been gradually filled up, and the forests of pines which supplied the Roman fleet with timber had usurped the site where that fleet once rode at anchor, and spread far along the shore, thus extending gradually to a greater distance from the city. These and other circumstances combined to make it a place of security; and Honorius, afraid of remaining defenceless at Milau, chose Ravenna as his residence, where he was safe amidst the canals and morasses, then too shallow to admit the large vessels of the enemy. He strengthened the city with ad litional fortifications, and so far succeeded that its impregnable position saved it from the inroads of the barbanans under Radagaldus and Alaric. However, Odoacer, in little more than 70 years after the arrival of Honorus, made himself master of Ravenna, and excognished the Empire of the West, by deposing Romains Augustulus, the last of the Cæsars. His rule, however, had lasted but 15 years when Theodoric, king of the Ostro-Goths, crossed the Alps with powerful army, and after several gallant struggles overthrew Odeacer, and made Ravenna the capital of the Gothic kingdom. Theodoric was surcoaded in the sovereignty of Italy by two of his descendants, and they in turn by a series per the lost provinces, aided by the military genius of Belisarius. The military genius of Belisarius. compaign of that celebrated general and histoge and capture of Ravenna, A.D. 30, are familiar to every reader of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire.

On the disgrace of Belisarius, the conest of Italy was completed by Narses the cunuch, who was established as emeh at Ravenna, A.D. 554. The rank the conferred upon the favourite lieutessi of the emperor was extended to his recessors during the continuance of be Greek sovereignty: the functions of be exarchs corresponded in some meaome to those of the ancient prectorian putets. Their government comprised the entire kingdom of Italy, including Remaitself; and the pope or bishop of the Christian capital was regarded as mist to their authority, possessing many a temporal barony in Rome, but dependent on the exarchate. The territry inderstood to be comprised in the Exercise embraced modern Romagna, the districts of Ferrara and Comacchio, the maritime Pentapolis, or towns extending along the Adriatic from Rimini to Ancona, and a second or inland Pentapolis, including several towns on the eastern declivities of the Apennines. The exarchate lasted 185 years, during which the people of Rome erected a kind of republic under their bishop; and Astaulphus, king of the Lombards, seeing that Ravenna would be an easy prey, drove out Eutychius, the last exarch, became master of the city, and made it the metropolis of the Longobardic kingdom (A.D. 754). The attempt of the Lombards to seize Rome also, as a dependency of the exarchate, brought to the aid of the Church the powerful army of the Franks under Pepin and Charlemagne, by whom the Lombards were expelled, and Ravenna, with the exarchate, made over to the Holy See: "and the world beheld for the first time a Christian bishop invested with the prerogatives of a temporal prince, the choice of magistrates, the exercise of justice, the imposition of taxes, and the wealth of the palace of Ravenna."

After this transfer, the fortunes of Ravenna began rapidly to decline; its archbishops frequently seized the government, and it was the scene of repeated commotions among its own citizens. In the 13th cent. the constitution of Ravenna strongly tended to an aristocracy: its general council was composed of 250, and its special council of 70 persons. In the contests of the Guelphs and Ghibellines, Pietro Traversari, an ally of the former, declared himself Duke of Ravenna (1218), without changing the municipal institutions of the city. His son and successor quarrelled with the emperor Frederick II., who reduced Ravenna to obedience and despoiled it of many of its treasures. The city was shortly after seized upon by Innocent IV., and reduced again to the authority of the Roman pontiffs, who governed it by vicars. In 1275 it was ruled by the family of Novella, lords of Polenta, whose connection with it is commemorated by Dante under image of the eagle which figured in their armorial bearings (Inf. xxvii.).

After some changes the inhabitants were induced by civil tumults, arising from the ambition or cupidity of its powerful citizens, to throw themselves under the protection of Venice, in 1441. Ravenna flourished under the republic; its public buildings were restored, its fortress was strengthened, and the laws were administered with justice and wisdom. After retaining it for 68 years, the Venetians finally ceded it to the Roman See in 1509 under Julius II.: it then became the capital of Romagna, and was governed by papal legates. In less than three years after this event the general Italian war which followed the league of Cambray brought into Italy the army of Louis XII. under Gaston de Foix, who began his campaign of Romagna by the siege of Ravenna. After a vain attempt to carry it by assault, in which he was bravely repulsed by the inhabitants, the arrival of the Papal and Spanish troops induced him to give battle, on Easter Sunday, April 11, 1512. Italy had never seen so bloody a combat: little short of 20,000 men are said to have lain dead upon the field, when the Spanish infantry, yet unbroken, slowly retreated. de Foix, furious at seeing them escape, rushed upon the formidable host in the vain hope of throwing them into disorder, and perished in the attempt about 2 m. from the walls of Ravenna. The French gained the victory, but it was dearly purchased by the loss of their chivalrous commander (see below, Colonna dei Francesi).

At the French invasion of 1796 Ravenna was deprived of its rank as the ! capital of Romagna, which was given to Forli; but it was restored by Austria in 1799, only to be again transferred by the French in the following year. On the fall of the Kingdom of Italy in 1815, Ravenna was again made the chief city of the Papal province; but its ancient glory had passed for ever, and only three towns and a few villages were left subject to its authority. In 1860 it was united to the new kingdom of Italy.

RAVENNA (12,000) is the capital of the province, and the seat of an archbishop, to whom most of the bishops of Romagna are suffragans. Its bishopric, one of the most auctent in the Christian world, is said to have been four ded a p. 44, by S. CHURCHES.

The Cathedral (E. F. 1) was built by S. Ursus, Abp. of the see, in the 4th cent., and called from him "Basilica Ursiana," but it was almost entirely rebuilt in the last cent., and the cylindrical campanile alone remains of the original foundation. In the l. transept are paintings by Guido Reni, representing the Fall of the Manna, and in the lunette the Meeting of Melchizedec and Abraham. The frescoes of the cupola, with the exception of the Archangel Michael, are attributed to his pupils, as well as the Prophets on the pendentives below. Near this, in a lunette, over an arch at the end of the N. aisle, is a fresco of the Angel bringing Food to Elijah, also by Guido Reni.

Enclosed within the W. door are preserved some fragments of its celebrated Door or VINEWOOD, which has been superseded by one of modern construction. The original planks are said to have been 13 ft. long and nearly 1½ wide—a proof that the ancients were correct in stating that the vine attains a great size, and confirmatory of the assertion that the statue of Diana of Ephesus was made of the vine-wood of Cyprus. probable that the wood of the Ravenna doors was imported from Constantinople.

The traveller's attention is particularly called to the Ancient Marbles of Ravenna, which are here more abundant and beautiful than in any town in Italy, except Rome and Venice. In this Church are 18 columns of Marmo Imezio (from Mount Hymettus), four of bigio antico, and two of cipollino. The altars and tombs are rich in marble fragments. At an altar on the rt. of the choir are two columns of cipollino rosso, one of the rarest of marbles, unfortunately mutilated at the back (see S. Apollinare).

The *Baptistery, or "S. Giovanni and in many respects the most interesting of the ecclesiastical edifices here. It is supposed to have been likewise founded by S. Ursus, about A.D. 380, and ornamented with mosaics in 451 by Abp. Neo. It is an octagonal building with five plain sides and two restored niches within the other three. The only ornaments on the exterior are the simple brick cornices below the lines of the side and central roofs, and on the upper part of each wall of the octagon a blind window. On the lower part of one of a these panels is a small antique marble relief of a warrior on horseback, held-ing a wreath.

The interior has two ranges of arcades, the lower resting on eight columns of different orders with marble capitals, placed in the angles of the building: the upper, 24 in number, are dissimilar in dimensions as well as in the style of the capitals. From these dwarf colonnettes spring eight round arches . . . and from the lines formed by them, or rather from the returns below, the 5th-cent, mosaic work commences. On the spandrels, upon oval backgrounds of gold enclosed by acanthus-leaves springing from the capitals of the columns beneath them, and spreading out in lovely scrolls to the right and left over and above the arches, are eight Prophets, grand, noble, majestic figures, draped in white. The ornamentation of the dome is divided into two zones surrounding the central picture, the Baptism in the Jordan, with a representation of the river, having its name placed over it, and in the circumference the Apostles, each with his name and hearing a crown. † "White these figures are full of life, they

The faces have much individuality, but the aim has not been fully attained. They are, together with all the upper portion, including the central picture, inferior to the Prophets below. They evidently belong to a later period."
It is probable "that, through some cause, the mosaics in the dome were injured and wrought anew some half century later." The transparency of the water in the Baptism is remarkable. The prevailing colour of the Mosaics is gold and white on blue, with a little green and saffron. The grand vase under the cupols, which was formerly used for haptism by immersion, is of Marmo Imeria, with two slabs of red porphyry. There is a recess or ambo for the officiation priest. A Chapel contains under in altar a sculptured fragment of the 6th cent., which formerly belonged to the ciborium of the old cathedral. The ancient metal cross on the summit of the building bears an inscription recording that it was erected in 688 by Archbishop Theodorus.

The building is now some 10 A. below its proper level, and it is proposed by the Italian Government to raise the whole structure bodily, so at to prevent any further sinking into the marshy ground,

In the adjoining square are several mediæval and sepulchral urns in marble. In front of the Duomo there is a column of grey granite, surmounted by a statue of the Virgin (1659), one of Luca Longhi's best works, SS. Agata, Catharine, and Cecilia. The altar of this chapel contains the bodies of S. Sergius martyr, and S. Agnellus archbishop, and bears monograms of Sergius Diaconus. The very ancient pulpit is hollowed out from a section of a huge fluted column of Marmo Imesio from some pagan edifice.

i *5. Apollinare Muovo (E. 6), built by Theodoric in the beginning of the 6th cent. as the cathedral for his Arian bishops, was consecrated for Catholic worship by Abp. S. Agnellus, at the close of the Gothic kingdom, and dedicated to S. Martin. It was also called San Martino in Calo Aures on account of its magnificent decorations, and Sacellum Arii from its original destination. It assumed its present name in the 9th cent., from the report that the body of 8. Apollinaris had been transferred within its walls in order to secure it in its real resting-place at Classe from the attacks of the Saracens. 24 marble columns were brought from Constantinople; they have composite capitals, on each of which is an impost with Latin crosses sculptured on it. There is a fine coffered ceiling. The walls of the nave, which rest on these arches, are covered with *Mosaics, executed about A.D. 570. On the 1. is represented the city of Classis, with the sea and ships; then come 22 virgins, each holding in her hand a crown, preceded by the Magi, in the act of presenting their offerings to the Virgin and Child, seated upon a throne with two angels on either side. "This superb mosaic, the finest in the whole of Ravenna, may deserve attention on another account: the earliest monuments of Christian art give little countenance to Mariolatry, or the peculiar veneration to the Virgin which has so long distinguished the Greek and Roman churches. In this mosaic, however, though the presence of the Magi with offerings may seem to denote some relation to the Nativity as an historical fact, the 22 virgins in their company, the angels as it were guarding the Mother and Child, and especially the glory round her head, exclude all but an allegorical or symbolical meaning, and lead to the conclusion that this great corruption of Christianity was established in the Church before the end of the 6th cent., while the absence of similar representations in earlier works would lead to an opposite inference."—H. Hallam.

Opposite is a mosaic of Ravenna, in which are seen the Basilica of San Vitale, and an edifice supposed to represent the palace of Theodoric, from its bearing the word Palatium. 25 saints holding crowns, each having a glory round the head, approach to receive the benediction of the Saviour sitting on a throne between four angels. The first in the procession is in a violet instead of white tunic, and bears the name of Martinus, patron of the Church. Above the windows, on the S. side, are familiar Passion Scenes, beginning with the Last Supper, in which Christ is represented with a beard; on the N. side, Miracles and Parables (without a beard), in the following order, beginning at the W. end.—I. Cripple takes up his bed and walks.—2. Devils and herd of Swine.—3. Paralytic let down from a window.—4. Parable of the Sheep and Goats.—5. Calling of St. Matthew.—6. Veil of the Temple.— 7. On the F. wall is a portrait of Justinian in mosaic. To the rt. in the Choir is the tomb of Card. Malvasia, with a plinth of cipolline rosso, apparently cut away from columns in the Cathedral.

Sta. Chiara (E. 7), a desecrated and half-ruined building, has some Giottesque paintings on the walls and ceiling of its Choir.

Santa Croce (C. 3), built by Galla Placidia in the 5th cent, near her mansoleum, and consecrated by St. Peter Chrysologus, has been sadly rained.

San Domenico (16, D. 4), a restoration of an ancient basilica founded by the exarchs, contains some works by Niccolò Rondinello, a pupil of Giov. Belliui. In the Choir, on the l., Virgin and Child with SS. Dominic, Jerome, Joseph, and Francis further on, Annunciation; opposite, SS. Domenico, and Peter Martyr. In the chapel I. of the Chancel is an ancient wooden crucifix covered with fine linen in imitation of human skin. which is said to have sweated blood during the battle of Ravenna under Gaston de Foix. The form of the Cross is that of the letter Y. The 2nd chapel on the l. contains, in small paintings, the Fifteen Mysteries of the Rosary, by Luca Longhe, whose memorial tablet is nearly opposite, hetween the 1st and 2nd altars. In the 3rd chapel rt. is the Invention of the Oross, by the same artist.

b. Francesco (15, E. 5), supposed to have been erected in the middle of the 5th cent. by St. Peter Chrysologus, on the site of a temple of Neptune, has suffered from modern restorations. It has 22 columns of marmo Imezio. Outside the chapel of the Crucifix, 2nd rt., are two beautiful columns of Greek marble, decorated with *capitals by Pietro Lombardo, by whom likewise are the rich arabesques of the frieze and pilasters. In the 4th chapel rt. is a Virgin and Child, with SS. Francis, Roch, and Sebastian, by Succhi d'Imola, a rare master. The altar at the end of the rt. aisle is an urn consideration.

Upon the wall on the rt. of the entrance-door is a sepulchral slab-tomb of red Verona marble, formerly on the floor, with a relief of Ostasio da Polenta, lord of Ravenna, in the dress of a Franciscan monk, and the inscription: "His jacet magnificus Dominus Hostasius de Polenta qui ante diem felix obiens occubuit mcccxxxxxx die xxv mensis Marni. cujus anima requiescat in pace." The head of Ostasio is beautiful. The Polenta family, so celebrated for their hospitality to Dante and for the fate of Francesco da Rimini, are buried here. On the l. is a similar sepulched stone, on which is sculptured the figure of Enrico Alfieri, general of the Franciscan order, who died at the age of 92, in 1405, as recorded by a long inscription in hexameters. He was of Asti, and probably of the family of the poet. A sarcophagus stands in front of each slab, and another, with figures in relief, close by. Under the raised Choir is a vaulted CRYPT, in the form of a swimming bath, with four columns of marmo Imezio, and an arcade of smaller columns running round the irregularly disposed walls.

N. of the Church is the Cappells Braccioforts, hidden in the walls of which were discovered the boxes of Dante in May 1865 (see below). In it are some ancient sarcophagi. Adjacent, in the old cemetery of the friars, is the mausoleum of Dante. The house at the corner of the little square is that which Lord Byron inhabited for several months on his first acrival at Ravenna in 1819.

Pietro Lombardo, by whom likewise are the rich arabesques of the frieze and pilasters. In the 4th chapel rt, is a Virgin and Child, with SS. Francis, Roch, and Sebastian, by Succhi d'Imola, a rare master. The altar at the end of the rt. aisle is an urn containing the remains of S. Liberius, Scievanni Battista (C. 5), erected by Galla Placidia for her confessor St. Barbatian in 438, was consecrated by St. Peter Chrysologus, but almost entirely rebuilt in 1683. The estimate are chiefly adapted from the ancient building; some of them, however, found in the neighbourhood, and the remains of S. Liberius, supposed site of the palace in which Galla Placidia resided. In the l. transept is the Virgin and Child with SS. Clement and Jerome; in the 1st chapel l., the Virgin and Child with SS. Matthew and Francis, both by Francesco Longhi. The circular Campanile is one of the best preserved specimens of this class of bell-towers, so peculiar to Ravenna; it has six tiers; the upper one of narrow arches, with its terminal cornice and its pyramidal roof entire.

S. Giovanni Evangelista (D. 6), also called S. Giovanni della Sagra, was founded in 414 by the Empress Galla Placidia, in fulfilment of a vow made in a tempest during the voyage from Constantinople to Ravenna with her Tradition relates that, not children. knowing with what relic to enrich the Church, the empress was praying on the subject when St. John appeared to her in a vision: she threw herself at his feet for the purpose of embracing them, but the Evangelist disappeared, leaving one of his sandals as This vision is represented in a relief over the pointed doorway, a work probably of the 13th cent.; the lower part shows St. John incensing the altar, with the empress embracing his feet; in the upper part she appears offering the sandal to the Saviour and St. John, while St. Barbatian and his attendants are seen on the other side. The doorway, especially in the small niches, is richly sculptured with figures of saints, and is a fine specimen of the architecture of the period. diately to the l. of the entrance is an ancient marble chair. To the rt. an immured column, belonging to an carlier Church, shows the level of the original pavement. The Nave has 24 columns of bigio antico. Beneath the high altar, reached by a flight of 13 steps, repose the remains of SS. Canzius, Canzianus, and Canzianilla, martyrs. In the chapel of St. Bartholomew, at the extremity of the l. aisle, are some fragments of a mosaic, representing the storm and the vow of Galla Placidia. The vault of the 4th chapel L is covered with the Evangelists and Latin Fathers, painted by Giotto while on a visit to Dante. All have been more or less repainted. Beneath the choir is the ancient altar of the confessional, in marble, porphyry, and serpentine—a work of the 5th cent. The old quadrangular Campanile contains two bells cast by Robert of Saxony in 1208.

8. Giovanni e Paolo (18, D. 2), a small Church near the walls, with a Romanesque tower, has an ancient and curious ambo at the end of the rt. aisle.

Sta. Maria in Porto (F. 7) was built of the materials of the Basilica of S. Lorenzo in Cesarea, in 1553. The front, adorned with two large ancient columns of cipollino, is of the last cent. In the N. transept is a marble relief of the Virgin, in oriental costume, and in the act of praying—a very early specimen of Christian art. The 4th chapel on the rt. contains the Martyrdom of St. Mark, by Palma Giovane. Choir is an ancient vase in red porphyry, supposed to have been a Roman sepulchralurn. The adjoining cloister was erected in 1507.

Santo Spirito (9, D. 5), called also S. Teodoro, was built in the 6th cent. by Theodoric, for the Arian bishops:

it assumed the name of S. Theodore ! after its consecration to the Catholic worship of S. Agnellus, and afterwards took the present name. *San Vitale (3, C. 3. This magnificent basilica exhibits the octagonal form, with all the accessories of Eastern splendour. As one of the earliest Christian temples, it is of the highest interest in ecclesiological art. It was built in the reign of Justinian by S. Ecclesius, Abp. of the see, on the spot where St. Vitalis suffered martyrdom, and was consecrated by St. Maximianus in 547. It is an imitation of Sta Sophia at Constantinople, and was adopted by Charlemagne as the model of his Church at Aix-la Chapelle. The original pavement is considerably below the present floor, which is oceasionally flooded. The interior has eight lofty arches resting on piers, between which are semicircular recesses in two tiers, each divided into three arches by columns. The spaces between the lower columns open into the circular aisle, and those between the upper into a gallery. Above, the building becomes entirely circular. The 14 columns of the upper story have complicated capitals, some of which bear an anchor, supposed to indicate that they belonged to a temple of Neptone. The 14 columns of the lower range have also Byzantine capitals; and on each of the imposts are two monograms. The pilasters and walls are covered with large slabs of Greek marble and cipullino rosso, the latter entirely spoilt by being splayed, so as to form a geometrical pattern. The colossal dome was painted, early in the 18th cent., in the most barbarous taste, and

The spandrels are partially filled with others of larger size, twisted only at the point and arranged vertically. The walls and vault of the choir are covered with *Mosarcs of the time of Justinian, as beautiful and as fresh as 🐽 the day when they were finished; invaluable as specimens of art no less than as studies of costume. The most elaborate are those of the tribune, representing on the l. the Emp. Justinian holding a vase with offerings; he is surrounded by courtiers and soldiers, and by St. Maximianus and two priests. In the compartment on the opposite wall is the Empress Theodora with a similar vase, which she offers to two courtiers, attended by the ladies of her court, in varied and elegant costumes; the expression of some of the figures is remarkable, considering the material. In the vault above in the Saviour on the globe between archangels; on His rt. St. Vitals receiving the crown of martyrdom; on the l. S. On the rt. in the Chancel is *Relief of the "Throne of Neptune," with a sea-monster extended beneath it; a winged genius holds a trident on the rt., and on the l. two other genii are seen bearing a large conque shell. The ornaments are pilasters of the Corinthian order, a cornice with tridents, dolphins, shells, and two sea-horses. Opposite is a modern copy. Beside them are three columns of verde-antico and one of Egyptian breccia, belonging to the baldacchino over the high altar of the original Church. Several chapels surround the basilica; that of the Holy Sacrament, opposite the Sacristy, has on the altar a gilded ciborium attributed to Michel Angelo.

In the passage leading to the Sacristry is a good relief of a sacrisice, supposed to have been one of the decorations of a temple dedicated to Augustus. Opposite are 7th cent. reliefs of Daniel in the lion's den, Christ with four figures under palm trees, and the Raising of Lazarus.

The Tomb of the Exarch Isaac, "the great ornament of Armenia," is in a recess of a closed passage (50 c.). It was erected to his memory by his wife Susanna, and bears a Greek inscription on the cover recording the fame he acquired in the east and in the west, and comparing her widowhood to that of the turtle-dove. The urn containing his ashes is of marble, with reliefs of the Adoration of the Magi, the Raising of Lazarus, and Daniel between the Isaac was the 8th exarch of Ravenna, and died in that city, according to Muratori, A.D. 644. In the same recess are some Roman and early Christian sculptures and inscriptions.

The *Mausoleum of Galla Placidia (5, C. 3), or Church of SS.

Mararo e Celso, is also shown by the custodian of S. Vitale. This once magnificent sepulchre was built by the Empress Galla Placidia, daughter of Theodosius the Great, sister of Honorius, and mother of Valentinian III., the third, fourth, and fifth emperors of the West, towards the middle of the It is in the form of a 5th cent. Two doves are drinking from a basin of water—a Christian emblem borrowed from the antique. The first authenticated instance of the use of the cross on large monuments is said to be found here. On the walls are full-length figures of prophets. the arch over the door is the Good Shepherd; behind the tomb of the empress is the Saviour with the Gospels in His Hand; and in each of the lateral arches are two stags at a fountain, surrounded by arabesques and other ornaments. The high altar, in the centre of the mausoleum, composed of three massive slabs of Oriental alabaster, was formerly in S. Vitale, and is referred to the 6th It has reliefs of an early cent. Christian period.

The massive marble *SARCOPHAGUS. which contains the ashes of Galla Placidia, was once covered with silver plates; but these have disappeared. together with the other ornaments with which it was originally decorated. In the side next the wall was formerly a small aperture, through which the body of the empress might be seen, sitting in a chair of cypress wood, clothed in her imperial robes. children having introduced a lighted candle, in 1577, the robes took fire, and the body was reduced to ashes; since that time the aperture has remained closed.

In the recess on the rt. side of the Mausoleum is another marble Sarco-Phagus with Christian symbols, which contains the remains of the Emperor Honorius II., brother of Galla Placidia; and on the l. is that of Constantius III., her second husband, father of Valentinian III. Beside the entrance-door are two smaller sarco-phagi, said to contain the remains of the tutors of Valentinian, and of Honoria, his sister. These sarcophagi are the only tombs of the Cæsars, oriental or occidental, which now remain in their original places. The mausoleum of Galla Placidia stands as a monument of the dreadful catastrophes of the Lower Empire. She was born at Constantinople, and died at Rome in 450, was a slave twice, a queen, and an empress; first the wife of the King of the Goths, Alaric's brother-in-law, who fell in love with his captive, and afterwards of one of her brother's generals, whom she was equally successful in subjecting to her will a talented woman, but without generosity or greatness, who hastened the fall of the empire—whose ambition and vices have obscured her misfortunes.

The extensive Benedictine Convent of S. Vitale, to the W. of the Church, has been turned into Barracks. It encloses three large Renaissance Cloisters, of which the central one, with fine coupled columns and Corinthian capitals, is extremely handsome.

The PALACE OF THEODORIC (24, E. 6) served as the residence of his successors, of the Exarchs, and of the Lombard kings. The only portion remaining is a high wall, in the upper part of which are eight small marble columns, supporting round arches, and a wide recess over the entrance-gate. On the rt. of the latter is a large porphyry urn let into the wall, on which an inscription was placed in 1564, stating that it formerly contained the ashes of Theodoric, and that it was originally placed on the top of his mausoleum. Most antiquaries, however, now consider that it was a bath; the only argument in favour of its having been the sarcophagus of Theodoric is that it was found near his The palace was chiefly mausoleum ruined by Charlemagne, who, with the consent of the pope, carried away its ornaments and mosaics, and removed to France the equestrian statue of the king which stood near it

In spite of the poor taste of the building it is impossible to approach the last resting-place of the great poet without feeling that it is one of the most ballowed monuments of Italy.

The remains of the poet, who died here on the 14th Sept., 1321, at the age of 56, were originally interred at San Francesco; but on the expulsion of his patron Guido Novello da Polenta from Ravenna, they were with difficulty protected from the persecution of the Florentines and the excommunication of the pope. Car-dinal Bertando del Poggetto, legate of John XXII., ordered his bones to be burnt with his tract on Monarchy, and they parrowly escaped the prefanation of a disinterment Bernardo Bembo, then Podestà of Ravenna for the republic of Venice, and father of the celebrated cardinal, erected a mausoleum on the present site, from the designs of Pietro Lombardo. This monument was re-built in its present form in 1780, at the cost of Cardinal Valenti Gouzaga. It is a square edifice, with a small dome, internally decorated with stucce ornaments little worthy of such a see pulchre. On the vault of the cupoli are four medallions of Virgil, Brunets Latini (the master of the poet) Can Grande della Scala, and Guide da Polenta, his protectors when in exile. On the walls are two Latin inscriptions, one in verse, recording the foundation by Bembo, the of the dedication of Cardinal Course

The Tome of DANTE (19, E. 5) is the "Poets sai temporis prime tatori." Above the marble sarcophagus which now contains the ashes of the poet is a relief of his half-figure by Lombardo: he is represented sitting at his desk with his book; surmounted by a crown of laurel, with the motto Virtuti et honori. The inscription in Latin hexameters on the urn is supposed to have been written by himself. † Although it had been suspected that the remains of Dante no longer lay in the mauso-leum erected by Card. Valenti Gonzaga, it was only on the occasion of the great sexcentenary anniversary of the poet's birth, celebrated with extraordinary enthusiasm throughout Italy on the 14th of May, 1865, that this suspicion was fully verified. In making some repairs on that occasion, by destroying a wall in the old Braccioforte chapel annexed to San Francesco, a wooden box was discovered, bearing a double inscription, stating that it contained the bones of the poet, removed here by Fra Antonio de' Senti in Oct. 1677. ()n opening the box, it was found to contain the nearly perfect skeleton of a man of Dante's age at the time of his death, and stature. It was subsequently ascertained that the urn in the mausoleum was empty, or only contained a few small bones, and which were wanting to complete the skeleton in the wooden box; further documentary evidence has been since produced to show that these were probably the remains of Dante, but no clue has been yet discovered as to the circumstances that caused the removal. Perhaps it was brought about by the fear of the friars to whose care these precious relics had been entrusted that the Florentines might one day succeed in getting back the remains of their great countryman, as they had attempted on three different occasions, and especially in 1519, when they petitioned Leo X., himself a Florentine, in a document to which the great name of Michel Angelo was affixed, offering to erect a monument to the Divine Poet in his native town, with the following characteristic subscription :-- "Io Michelagnolo schultore, il medessimo a vostra Santita, supplico offerendomi al divin poeta fare la sepulin questa citta." The bones found in the wooden box were placed in Lombardo's urn in the mansoleum with great pomp and exultation, the poet being now considered the symbol of a United Italy. The wooden box itself has been removed to the public library.

mentioned. Châteaubriand is said to have knelt bareheaded at the door before he entered; Byron deposited on the tomb a copy of his works; and Alfieri prostrated himself before it, and embodied his emotions in one of the finest sonnets in the Italian language:—

O gran padre Alighier, se dal ciel miri Me tuo discepol no indegno stormi, Dal cor traendo profondi sospiri, Prostrato innanzi a' tuoi funerei marmi, &c.

Lord Byron's lines referring to the tomb of the poet and the monumental column of Gaston de Foix will occur to the reader:—

I canter by the spot each afternoon
Where perished in his fame the hero-boy Who lived too long for men, but died too soon

For human vanity, the young De Foix!

A broken pillar, not uncouthly hewn,
But which neglect is hastening to destroy,
Records Ravenna's carnage on its face, While weeds and ordure rankle round the base.

I pass each day where Dante's bones are laid:

A little cupola, more neat than solemn, Protects his dust, but reverence here is paid To the bard's tomb, and not the warrior's column:

The time must come when both, alike decay'd,

The chieftain's trophy, and the poet's volume,

Will sink where lie the songs and wars of earth,

Before Pelides' death, or Homer's birth.

With human blood that column was cemented,

With human filth that column is defiled, As if the peasant's coarse contempt were vented

To show his loathing of the spot he soil'd. Thus is the trophy used, and thus lamented Should ever be those bloodhounds, from whose wild Instinct of gore and glory earth has known Those sufferings Dante saw in hell alone.

Near the tomb of Daute is the house occupied by Lord Byron, whose name and memory are almost as much a sociated with Ravenna as those of the great "Poet-Sire of Italy." He declared himself more attached to Ravenna than to any other place, except Greece; he praised "its delightful climate," and says he was never tired of his rides in the pineforest; he liked Ravenna, moreover, because it was out of the beaten track of travellers, and because he found the higher classes of its society well educated and liberal beyond what was usually the case in other continental cities. He resided in it rather more than two years, "and quitted it with the deepest regret, and with a presentiment that his departure would be the forerunner of a thousand evils. was continually performing generous actions: many families owed to him the few prosperous days they ever enjoyed: his arrival was spoken of as a piece of public good fortune, and his departure as a public calamity." The house of Lord Byron is now a Café at the corner of the Via Giuseppe Mazzini and the Piazza Byron (E. 4); it was here that our great poet resided for eight mouths after his arrival in Ravenna on the 10th of June, 1819. Over the entrance has been placed the following inscription commemorative of the fact '-" Il x Giugno MDCCCXIX, come appena giunse in Ravenna, entrava questa casa, allora Grande Albergo, e que otto mese abitava, Giorgio Byron, Poeta Inglese, Lieto delle Vicinanze al Sepoloro di Dante, Impaziente di visitare l'Antica Selva, che inspirò già il Divino e Giovanni Boccaccio." He subsequently removed to the Palazzo Guiccioli, in the Via Porta Adriana, now Cavour (D. 3), where he continued to reside until his departure for Pisa at the end of Oct. 1821. The 'Prophecy of Dante' was composed here, at the suggestion of the Countess Guiccioli; and the translation of the tale of Francesca da Rimini ' was "executed at Ravenna. where five centuries before, and in the very house in which the unfortunate lady was born, Dante's poem had been composed "The 'Morgante Mag giore,' 'Marino Faliero,' the fifth cauto of 'Don Juan,' 'The Blues,' 'Sardanapalus,' 'The Two Foscarl,' 'Cain.' 'Heaven and Earth.' and the 'Vision of Judgment,' were also written during his residence at

The Chapel is the one which was built and used by St. Peter Chrysologus in the 5th cent, without alteration, no profaning hand has yet been laid on its altar or mosaics. walls are covered with large slabs of marble, and the ceiling still retains its mosaics as fresh as when ther were first executed. On the vault are the Evangelists, with their symbols; on the inside of the arches, the Saviour; opposite, the Virgin, each flanked with six Apostles; on the rt., female Saints; on the L., males. Behind the altar, the Virgin, between heads of SS Vitalis and Apollinams-to the rt., the Saviour formerly in the tribune of the Cathedral.

In the Vestibule is a collection of ancient Roman and Christian inscriptions, marbles, capitals, and reliefs, with other fragments of antiquity. Boy and Girl with a vase; large torso in porfido rosso, outside a window, fine column of paronazzetto brecciato. In the "Appartamento Nobile" is 8 bust of Cardinal Capponi by Beenini, and of S. Apollinaris by Thornoldies. On the 3rd floor is the small Archiepiscopal library, which still retains the celebrated MS, on papyros whose extraordinary size and preservation have made it known to most literary antiquaries: it is a brief of the 12th cent, by which Pope Pascal II confirmed the privileges of the archbishops. The most ancient diplomas preserved in these archives are said to date from the 5th cent.

The Museo Nazionale occupies the buildings of the Carthusian monatery of Classe, including the Church of S. Romusldo On the first floor in the Biblioteca Comunale, founded by Abbot Caneti in 1714, and subsequently enriched by private musical cence and by the libraries of suppressed convents. It is lodged in fine hall, followed by several subsequent, and coutsing upwards of ones, and coutsing upwards of the libraries of suppressed convents.

vols., 700 MSS., and a large collection | of first editions of the 15th cent. Among its MS, collections, the most precious is the celebrated Aristophanes, copied in the 18th cent. by Cyrillus Machirius, a Florentine, long known as unique. It is said that Eugene Beauharnais wished to purchase this MS.; but the inhab., being resolved not to lose so great a rarity, concealed the volume. A MS. of Dante, on vellum, with good initial miniatures, of the 14th cent., another Dante, of still earlier date; a small Officium, most beautifully written on parchment, with lovely miniatures of histories of Christ, of the 14th cent., ending with an invocation to all the saints to relieve its writer from his worldly ailmeuts, amongst which his toothache is particularly mentioned; and another Officium, with numerous illuminations, &c., on violet vellum, especially one of the Crucifixion. Among the princeps editions, which range from 1465 to 1500, are the Decretals of Boniface VIII., on vellum, 1465; Pliny the Younger, on vellum, 2 vols, Venice, 1468, the Bible, with miniatures, on kid, 1478; St Augustine, De Civitate Dei, 1468; the Dante of Lodorico and Alberto Premontesi, 1478. Among the miscellaneous collection may be noticed, the History of the Old and New Testument, in Chinese, printed on silk, and a series of upwards of 4000 rolls, beginning with the 11th and ending with the last cent., chiefly relating to the Canons of Sta. Maria in Porto.

The Museum consists of several rooms, forming a suite to those of the Library, and, besides a good miscellaneous collection of vases, idols, bronzes, majolica, and carved work in ivory, contains a rich cabinet of medals, ancient and modern. The ancient are arranged in three classes: 1. Medals of the free cities; 2. Consular; and 3. Imperial, In the 2nd class is a *bronze one of Cicero, struck by the town of Magnesia, in Lydia: it bears on one side his profile and name in Greek characters, and on the other a hand holding a crown with a branch of laurel, an ear of corn, and a bunch of grapes, with the inscription in Greek "Theodore of the Magnesians, near Mount Sipylus." It is supposed to be a unique specimen. There is a very interesting series of the coins of the Sovereigns of the Western Empire found about Ravenna, especially golden ones of Galla Placidia with a cross on the obverse, of Valentinian III., Anastasius, Heraclius, &c., with Christian emblems. The modern collection is also arranged in three classes: 1. Medals of the Popes from Gregory III.; 2. Medals of illustrious personages and of royal dynasties; 3. Coins of various Italian cities. In the 1st class is a fine medal of Benedict III., interesting because it is considered conclusive as to the fable of Pope Joan. In the 2nd class is a complete series of bronze medals of the House of Medici, 84 in number, of a uniform size. Among the avories one is remarkable as representing several of the miracles which are seen in the paintings on the Catacombs at Rome, such as Jonas, the raising of Lazarus. the raising of the Paralytic, &c., with two venerable figures in the centre. The Museum also contains portions of beautiful gold ornaments of ancient armour, discovered some years ago in excavating the new docks on the canal; they are supposed to have belonged to Odoscer, whose tomb may have been hereabouts; unfortunately the greater part of them were melted down: also a beautiful tabernacle of lapis lazuli and precious marbles.

The Refectory, a fine hall, with good carved wooden ceiling and doors, contains one of the elder Longhi's best works, a *fresco of the Marriage in Cana, into which he has introduced his own portrait and several of his Ravennese contemporaries The veil thrown over the woman on the l. of Christ was added by his daughter Barbara, to satisfy the scruples of S. Carlo Borromeo, then legate here. On the ceiling are Camaldoli monks, by Francesco, son of Luca Longhi.
The CHURCH OF S. ROMUNLOO has been fitted up as a museum of Byzantine and Roman sculptures, with other antiquities, including a remarkable capital from the ruined Church of S. Michele in Affricisco. There is also an exquisitely perforated panel of a concello (altar railing), with a gilt cross in the centre. In the transepts are Remaissance works, and in the chapels of the nave some second-rate pictures.

In the clossters are several inscriptions, both pagan and early Christian, most of which were found about Ravenna; and a series of Roman tiles, or Signa Tegularia, bearing the makers' names. On one of these tiles is the impression of a sandal, very like the sole of a modern shoe with its hobnails. Here also has been set up the old doorway of the Convent of S. M. in Porto.

The adjacent Accademia delle Belle Arti (10 to 2, 75 c.) contains a good collection of plaster casts of ancient and modern sculpture; attached to it are schools of design for young artists. On the rt. of the entrance is a room with pictures, including a Virgin and Child, with SS. Benedict, Apollonia, Barbara, and Paul; a portrait of Carlo Arrigoni, an Adoration of the Shepherds, a Pieta, with the Abbot of Classe and S. Bartholomew; and a small Virgin with the sleeping Child, all by Luca Longhe; Martyrdom of the Quattro Incoronati, by Ligozzi; and a great number of small paintings of the Hyzantine School. On the floor is a fine mosaic pavement, found at Classe, with a vase of flowers and peacocks in the centre. In a room upstairs is the beautiful recumbent *effley of Guidarelle Guidarelli, called Braccioforte, formerly at San Francesco, and a Virgin and Child, with 85. Thomas Aquinas, Mary Magd., Catharine, and John Bapt., by Rondinelli.

The Palazzo Giulio Rasponi (E. 3) has a ceiling painted with the death of Camilla, queen of the Volsei, by Agricola The queen is the portrait of Queen Caroline Murat, one of whose daughters married into the Rasponi family. In a corridor upstairs are two ronation of the Virgin with Angels, and a portrait of a man with a dog There is also a small Virgin and Children, with SS. Jerome, Mary Magd. John Evan., and Francis, and the Pieth above, by an unknown master.

The Hospital, attached to the Church of S Grovanni Evangelista, D. 6), was founded by Archbishop Codronchi in 1826. In the court is a cistern said to have been designed by Michel Angelo.

The handsome Teatro Alighier (22, D. 5) was opened in 1850.

GATES.

Porta Adriana (C 2), a handsome entrance of the Doric order, was erected in 1585, on the supposed site of the famous Porta Aurea, built under Claudian and ruined by the Emp. Frederick 11.

Porta Alberoni (E. 8) was built by Cardinal Alberoni in 1739. Immediately outside of it are the modern port of Kavenna and the road leading to the harbour on the Adriatic and to the Pineta.

Forta 8. Mamante (G. 5), of the Tuscar order, so called from a neighbouring monastery dedicated to S. Mama, was built in 1612. Near this the French army of 1512 effected the breach in the walls by which they entered and sacked the city.

Porta Naova (G. 7), designed by Bernini, in the Corinthian order, to cupies the site of the P. San Lorenzo rebuilt in 1653 under the name of P. Pamfilia, in honour of Innocent X, by whose arms it is surmounted. The road from it leads through the Borgo of Porta Nuova to the Basilica of S. Apollmare in Classe.

Porta Sizi (G. 5), in the Dorie of was rebuilt in its present form 1568.

Ports Serrata (B. 5), so called because it was closed by the Venetians during their possession of Ravenna, was reopened by Julius II. under the name of P. Giulia.

The Fortress (B. 6) was erected by the Venetians in 1457, and then esteemed one of the strongest in Italy: it was partly demolished in 1735 to fornish materials for the Ponte Nuovo over the united stream of the Ronco and Montone, and little now remains but the foundations.

ENVIRONS.

The Port of Ravenna (C, D 8), much frequented by coasting craft, consists of a long basin, with quays on either side; from it commences the canal that leads to the Adviatic. 4 m. distant, on the canal, is the hut where Garibaldi was concealed after his retreat from Rome in 1849. The length of this canal is about 7 m., and a broad road has been made along its rt. bank, which contributes much to the accommodation of the city.

The *MAUSOLEUM OF THEODORIC, more generally known as S. M. della Rotonda, is about half a mile from the Porta Serrata, immediately beyond the Rly. It was erected by Amalasuntha, daughter of Theodoric, in the 6th cent. On the expulsion of the Arians, the zeal of the Church in promoting the Catholic worship ejected the ashes of the king as a heretic, and despoiled his sepulchre of its ornaments (Gibbon, c. 39). It is built of blocks of limestone from Istria, resting on a decagona, basement, each side of which has a recess surmounted by an arch formed of 11 llocks of stone curiously notched into each other. A double oblique flight of steps leads to the upper story, or sepulchral chamber; they were added to the bailding in 1870. The upper story is also decagonal externally, and appears to have been surrounded by columns forming a circular portico, several of the bases of which were N. Italy.

discovered in digging out the ditch that now surrounds the building. In one of the sides is the door. Over this is a broad projecting band encircling the monument, above which is a row of small windows, the whole surmounted by a massive cornice, with rudely-sculptured reliefs. The vault stones of the doorway are curiously notched into each other, forming a straight arch or lintel. The roof is formed of a single block of limestone containing fossil shells, 36 feet in its internal diameter, hollowed out to the depth of 10, th the shape of an inverted bowl; the thickness of the centre is about 4 ft., and of the edges about 2 ft. 9 in The weight of this enormous mass is estimated at above 200 tons. On the outside are 12 pointed projections perforated as if designed for handles; they bear the names of the Apostles, but it is difficult to conceive how any statues could have stood on them; they more probably served in moving this huge solid mass of Istrian marble -indeed, these names look comparatively recent. The summit is flat, and upon it may have stood a statue of the Gothicking. It is now divided into two unequal portions by a large crack, produced, it is supposed, by lightning. The interior of the upper chamber is circular, with a niche opposite the door, in which probably stood a sepulchral urn, although, when carefully examined on the outside, it appears to have been added after the mausoleum was finished. The chamber in the basement is in the form of a Greek cross: the fine door opening into it, as well as that to the sepulchral one above, is turned towards the

the Gothic style towards the end of the 11th cent. by the Beato Pietro Onesti, called It Peccatore, in fulfilment of a vow to the Virgin made during a storm at sea. In the nave on the 1. is the ancient excephages deposited in 1119. It was believed that the entire Church was once covered with frescoes by Giotto, and the choir and E, chapels still retain some admirable *frescoes by his pupils. On the i. wall are the Nativity and Presentation of the Virgin, the rt. wall contains the Death, Assumption, and Coronation of the Virgin, with the Massacre of the Innocents below. Under the arches are heads of Apostles, below, SS Paul and Peter; in front of the chancel arch, Rinaluo and Anthony the Abbot; on the ceiling, the Evangelists with their symbols, and Doctors of the Church. The last figure on the rt. in the Presentation fresco is said to be a portrait of Giotto; on the opposite wall, looking out of the window, Francesca da Rimiui. Chapel on the 1., Pope Giovanni asking permission of Theodorie to build a church; Theodorie puts him in prison. On the E, wail, a good figure of St. James. Chapel on the rt., Calling of St. Matthew above, Healing of Lepers below. At the end of the apse, l. the three Maries, rt. the Unbelief of Thomas. Under the E. arch, heads of virgin saints. The quaurar gular basement of the Campanile is considered to be the lower part of the ancient light-house 'phares) of the port, from which the Church derives its name.

From this Charch the pedestrian may walk in } hr. along the bank of the canal to the Ponte Nuoro (see below).

S. APOLLINARE IN CLASSE. This magnificent Basilica is a purer specimen of early Christian art than any which can be found even in Rome. It lies on the road to Runini, 3 m. beyond the Porta Nuova, and may be reached by train from May to Oct., but only in one direction. (See Time Table.) Carriage there and back, returning by S. Maria in Porto Fuori,

About I in beyond the Gate stood the splendid Basilica of S. Laurentius en Cesaren, founded (A.D. 396) by | saint, beneath the high alter, is offered

S. M. in Porto within the city. This act of spoliation was opposed by the citizens, but the monks to whom the basilica belonged had obtained the consent of the pope, and the cardinal legate, Capi di Ferro, completed the work of Vandalism by sending all us columns excepting two (see alove), together with its precious marbles, to Rome. The aucient basilica was the last relic of the city of Cesuren, which had existed from the time of Augustus. Nearly 2 m. from Ravenua, the united stream of the Ronco and Montone is crossed by the Ponte Nuovo, a bridge of five arches, erected while Cardinal Al-beroni was legate of Romagna. The road crosses the marshy plain, with its unhealthy rice-fields, towards the pine-forest and the grand basilica of

S. APOLLINARE IN CLASSE, erected. in 534, by Julianus Argentarius, on the site of a temple of Apollo, and consecrated by Archlishop St. Maximianus in 549. It formerly had a quadriportious in front, of which, however, no portion now remains. It is built of thin bricks or tiles, in the manner of Roman edifices of classical times. Over the door may be seen the brouge hooks used to sustain the awning on festivals,

The interior, 173 ft. by 93, is divided by 24 elegant columns of grey marble (greco rigato), with horizontal markings, into a nave and nisles of lofty and imposing proportions. The columns, which rest on square pedertals, are surmounted by panetured capitals, on which again rest quadrangular imposts, with crosses sculptured on the sides towards the nave. Above the round arches is a elerestory of double semicircular windows. 🛦 flight of broad steps leads to the tribune, which is circular internally, and polygonal on the outside. The floor of the nave is green with damp; and the subterranean chapel of the Honorius, chamberlain of the Emp. filled with water. These portraits were painted at a comparatively modern period; they come down in unbroken succession to the last archbishop, who is the 129th pre-ate from The mosaics the commencement which originally occupied their place disappeared with the marbles which once covered the walls of the aisles, when the latter were carried off by Signsmondo Malatesta, to adorn his Church at Rimini. In the middle of the nave is a small marble altar, dedicated to the Virgin, "Martyrum Regine," by St. Maximianus, in the 6th cent.; beneath lay the body of St. Apollinaris, until removed to the crypt in 1174. In each aisle are four marble sarcophagi of archbishops, covered with reliefs and Christian symbols; the 1st l, is that of S. Felix, the 4th that of Johannes V On the wall in the middle of the N. aisle is an inscription, which seems not to be older than the 18th cent, beginning, "OTHO III. Rom. IMP," and recording how, as a proof of his remorse for the murder of Crescentius, "ob patrata crimina," he walked barefooted from Rome to Monte Gargano, and passed the 40 days of Lent in this basilies, "expiating his sins with sackcloth and voluntary scourging" At the end of the aisle is the chapel of the Holy Cross, and near its entrance a very curious tabernacle of the 7th cent., over the 14th-cent, altar of S. Felicola, raised by Petrus, a presbyter. A little further W. is an ancient capital, used as a holy water basin. Two of the sarcophagi in the S. nisle contain the remains of Graziosus of the 8th and Theo tosius of the 7th cent. All these tombs stood originally under the portico in the fore court. An inscription on the wall of this aisle, opposite the other, records that the body of St. Apollmaris formerly was deposited behind a grating in it. On each side of the grand entrance is a surcophagus of marble, larger than the preceding, but covered with similar ornaments and symbols.

The high altar, beneath which rests the body of the saint, is rich in marbles and other ornaments; the modern canopy over it is supported by four columns of the rare mar ble known as biuneo e nero untico. The ancient episcopal chair of S. Damianus has been divided, to form ends for a species of seddia. The tribune, and the arch in front of it, are covered with *Mosarcs of the 6th cent., in fine preservation The upper part on the vault represents the Transfiguration; the hand of the Almighty is seen pointing to a small figure of the Saviour introduced into the centre of a large cross, on a blue circular ground studded with stars. On the top of the cross is the Greek monogram for "Jesus Christ, the Saviour, the Son of God." On the arms are the Alpha and Omega; and at the foot the words "Salus Mundi." Outside the circle, and on either side of the hand, are Moses and Elijah; below are three sheep, indicating the Apostles-Peter, James, and John-who witnessed the Transfiguration. In the centre is St. Apoll.naris, in his episcopal robes, preaching to a flock of sheep-a common emblem of a Christian congregation. Between the windows are portraits of SS. Ecclesius, Servius, Ursus, and Ursicinus, in pontifical robes, blessing the people. On the l. wall is represented Abp Reparatus obtaining privileges for his diocese from the Emperor Constantinus Pogonatus, who is seen in the centre of the composition, with Reparatus and ecclesiastics. to whom the Emperor delivers a scroll, on which is inscribed the word Privilegia. On the rt wall the sacrifices of the Old Law: Abel, who offers the lamb, Melchizedec the bread and wine, and Abraham his son Isaac On the W. face of the arch is a series of five mosaics: above, the Saviour, and the symbols of the Evangelists; lower down, the cities of Bethlehem and Jerusalem, from which a number of the faithful, under the form of sheep, are ascending toward our Lord; beneath the cities is palm, the symbol of victory; follow the archangels Michael and Gabriel, and half-figures of St. Matthew and St. Luke, all the subjects being divided by handsome mosaics of arabesque ornaments. In the crypt, which is entered by passages from either side, is the sepulchral urn of St. Apolinaris. This urn contained the remains of the saint from 1.74 until 1725, when they were placed beneath the high altar. The open stone book close to the S. entrance is called the breviary of Gregory the Great.

The round Bell-tower is a fine example of a style of campanile peculiar to Ravenna; it is entirely of brick, 120 ft. high, and can be ascended through the sacristy by a series of ladders to a height of 100 ft., from the top the rome is very fine, embracing the pire-forest and the sea beyond to the E.; to the S. the Apennines, with Case a and Be theora at their base; and, in fine weather, the Alps of the Tyrol and Styna on the N. The tower contains only two small bells.

The ancient town of Classis, of which this noble basilica is the representative, was one of the three quarters of Ravenna in the time of Augustus. It was, as its name imports, the station of the Roman fleet, though now 4 m. distant from the sea. Classe was totally destroyed in 728 by Liutprand, king of the Lombards.

The celebrated and most interesting *PINETA, OF PINE FOREST (Pinus Pinca), was seriously injured by the severe winter of 1880. It has nearly 3 m. beyond the Basilica, and the Rly, to Rimini skirts it as far as Cervia. It may be reached also by a road which passes the tomb of Theodoric, or through the Porta Alberoni This venerable forest extends along the shores of the Adriana for a distance of 25 m., from the Lamone N. of Ravenna to Cervia on the S., and covers a sandy tract, varying in breadth from I to 3 m., thrown up by the sea, and separating it from the inundated region on the W. It affords abundant sport; and the produce of Its cones yields a considerable revenue.

No forest is more renowned in classical and poetical interest, its praises have been sing by Dante, Roccaccio, Dryden, and Byron; it supplied Rome with timber for her fleets, and upon the masts which it produced the banner of Venice floated in the days of her supremacy. One part of the forest still retains the name of the Vicols de' Poete, from a tradition that it is the spet where Dante loved to medi-

Boccascio made the Pineta the scene of his singular tale Nostrigio degli Onests, the incidents of which, cuding in the amprous conversion of the ladies of Ravenna, have been made familiar to the English reader by Dryden's adoption of them in his Theodore and Henoria. Count Gamba relates that the first time he had conversation with Lord Byron on the subject of religion was while riding through this forest in 1820. "The scene," he says, " invited to rengious meditation; it was a fine day in spring. 'How,' said Byron, 'raising our eyes to heaven, or directing them to the earth, can we doubt of the existence of God ?-or how, tarning them to what is within ts, can we doubt that there is something more noble and durable than the clay of which we are formed?'" Pineta inspired also these beautiful lines in the 3rd canto of Don Juen:-

La Colonna de' Francesi. Beyond the Porta Sisi, 2 m. S. of Ravenna, on the banks of the Ronco (close to Ponte Cella, the first Stat. of the Forli tramway), is a square pillar erected in 1557 by Pietro Cesi, President of Romagna, as a memorial of the battle gained by the combined army of Louis XII. and the Duke of Ferrara over the troops of Julius II. and the King of Spain, April 11, 1512. Four inscriptions on the medallions of the pilaster, and an equal number on the sides of the pedestal, record the events of that memorable day. Lord Byron mentious the engagement and the column in a passage quoted in the description of the tomb of Dante, and commemorates the untimely fate of the heroic Gaston de Foix, who fell in the very moment of victory.

The monument of such a terrible engagement, which left 20,000 men dead on the field, and made the Chevalier Bayard write from the spot, "If the king had gained the battle, the poor gentlemen have truly lost it," is little funereal or military; it is ornamented with elegant arabesques of vases, fruit, festoons, dolphins, and loaded with long tautological inscriptions, and one of them is a rather ridiculous jeu de mots. The speech that Guicciardini makes Gaston address to the soldiers on the banks of the Ronco is one of the most lauded of those pieces, diffuse imitations of the harangues of ancient historians. Besides the illustrious captains present at this battle, such as Vittorio and Fabrizio Colonna, the Marchese della Palude, the celebrated engineer, Pedro Navarra, taken prisoners by the French, and Anne de Montmorency, yet a youth, afterwards constable of France under four kings, who began his long military career amid this triumph, several persons eminent in letters were there— Castiglione and Ariosto; Leo X., then Cardinal de' Medici, as papal legate to the Spaniards, was taken prisoner. The bard of the Orlando, who has alluded to the horrible carnage he witnessed, must have been powerfully impressed by it to paint his battles with so much fire. In several passages of his poem Ariosto attributes the victory on this occasion to the skill and courage of the Duke of Ferrara. It has been stated that Alfonso, in reply to an observation that part of the French army was as much exposed to his artillery as the army of the allies, said to his gunners, in the heat of the conflict, "Fire away! fear no mistake—they are all our enemies!" Leo X. redeemed the Turkish horse which he rode on that day, and used it in the ceremony of his possessio (taking possession of the tiara at St. John Lateran), celebrated on April 11, 1513, the anniversary of the battle. He had the horse carefully tended till it died, and permitted no one to mount it.—Valery.

In 1200, when Rimini belonged to the German Empire, Otho III. sent into the Marches as his viceroy Malatesta, the ancestor of that illustrious family to which Rimini is indebted for its subsequent importance. His descendant Galeotto was created lord of Rimini by Crement VI. It passed from the Malatesta family to the Venetians by sale, and reverted to the pope after the battle of Gera d'Adda. The Malatesta chieftains often endeavoured to regain it, but in vain, and the treaties of Tolentino and of Vienna confirmed it to the The name of Malatesta recalls the fine passage of the Inferno in which Dante describes the lord of Rimini as " the old mastiff" :-

This great medieval family has long become extract; that of Rome, which has assumed the name, was ennobled at the end of the last cent by the pope. The celebrated council between the Arians and Athanasians was held here in 359.

At the S. extremity of the Corso is the *Arch of Augustus (Porta Romana), one of the most remarkable monuments on the E. coast of Italy, and built of travertine. It was erected in honour of Augustus, and commemorates the grantude of the inhabitants for the repairing of their roads. It is simple and massive, with two Corinthian columns on each side; above the arch are medallious, with the heads of Neptune and Venus on one side, and of Jupiter and Minerva, with a fine bull's head, on the other. The pediment is proportionately small, being scarcely larger than the breadth of the arch: a great part of the superstructure is of the middle ages.

In the market-place (Piazza Giulio Cesare), the ancient forum, is a pedestal with an inscription, recording that it served as the suggestum from which Cæsar harangued his army after the passage of the Rubicon:—C Cæsar Diet Rubicove superato Civili Bel. Commille. Stos his in Foro ar addocut. Near this is an isolated Chapel, on the spot where St. Anthony preached to the people (see below).

The *Bridge of Augustus, which spans the Marecchia, the ancient Ariminus, is still one of the best preserved Roman constructions of its kind in Italy It was begun by Augustus in the last year of his life, and completed by Tiberius; it has five arches, and is entirely built of white Istrian limestone. The principal have a span of 27 ft., and the width of the piers is nearly 13. The river at this point separates Romagna from the ancient maritime Pentapolis, the modern province of Urbino and Pesaro.

The Church of E. Giuliano, 5 min. further N., has at the high altar a fine martyrdom of St. Julian with the Virgin and Child and SS. Peter and Paul above, by Paolo Veronese. Below is the sarcophagus of the Saint, and the stone which was tied round his neck when he was thrown into a well. At the 2nd altar 1, is a curious early picture of the life of St. Julian, in compartments, by Bittino da Fuenza, 1357.

Over the high altar at 8. Girolamo is a large painting of the saint by Guercino. Around the Church are numerous small subjects in chiaroscuro from the life of St. Jerome. On the rt. of the entrance, a curious Renaissance Holy Water basin in white marble. In the passage, a good relief in terra-cotta of the Saint's Death (18th cent.).

The *Cathedral of S. Colomba we originally built in the 14th cent. the Italian-Gothic style, but redu into its present form by Sigismondo Paudolfo Malatesta, from the designs of Leon Battista Alberti, in 1450. It is considered the master-piece of that architect, and is an interesting link in the history of the Renaissance style. The front, consisting of four fluted halfcolumns and three arches, is unfinished, but the S. side has a series of seven arches on panelled piers detached from the wall, elevated on a continued lasement, concealing without altering the Gothic windows Under the arches are seven large sarcophagi in the medieval style, whereit are deposited the asnes of the emment men whom the Malatesta dukes had collected around them,poets, orators, philosophers, and soldiers. The effect produced by these tombs is as grand as the idea of making them an ornament to his Church was generous and noble. The interior retains much of its original architecture in the pointed arches of the nave. To the l. of the entrance door is a recumbent relief of a Malatesta Abp. The whole building is covered with the armorial bearings of the Malatesta family; the most striking and frequent of these ornaments are the rose and elephant, and the united initials of Sigismondo and his wife Isotta.

In the 1st chape! I. is a fine Malatesta sarcophagus. On the walls of the 1st chapel it are some *wonderfully sculptured angels in flat relief, whose complicated draperies and flowing outlines suggest the hand of Agostino di Antonio di Duccio (1470), who wrought the beautiful front of S. Bernardino at Perugia. In the 2nd chapel (closed), which contains the relies, is an interesting fresco, by Pietro della Francesca, of Sigismondo kneeling before his patron \ he erected. It is signed "Petri di only for their subject, Among the sepulchral monuments are those of Sigismondo himself (1468, between the entrance and the 1st chapel; his favourite wife Isotta, in the 3rd chapel (of S. Michael), in which the statue of the archangel over the altar is said to present her likeness, both by Ciuffagui, a pupil of Donatello; his brother, "olim principi unue protectori", bis step-son (1468; and the illustrious females of his house, "Malutestorum domas heroidum sepulcrum." In the 3rd chapel rt., the bronze fruits and flowers at the base of the piers are supposed to be by Ghiberti. In the 2nd chapel l. is a colossal painting of St Francis receiving the Stigmata, by Vasari. The pilasters at the eatrance to the principal chapels under s pointed arch, with their low screens, are all worth careful study. At the door of the 2nd rt. is an old broken Chair of S. Gaudentius, patron of the city, and a small sarcophagus, ia which were found the bones of several martyrs. The 1st of the arched chapels on each side has on its pilate ters statuettes in niches; the 2nd, children in relief on blue ground; the 3rd, fanciful representations in white relief-on the l., Months, on the rt. Signs of the Zodiac, probably by Matteo dei Pasti. The first two screeus are of Greek marble, the think of red Verona. In the Sacristy, a Marviage of the Virgin, by Benedella Coda, and a Holy Family with SS. Barbara, Jerome, Joachim, and Catarine, by Luca Longhi.

Rimini was created a bishopric A.D. 260; its first prelate is supposed to have been S. Gaudentius, of whom there is a Statue on the front of the Bishop's Palace,

The PINACOTECA in the Palazzo del Comune, Piazza Cavour, contains a noble *altar-piece, in excellent preservation, of SS. Dominic, Sebastian and Roch, with predella of three small subjects, by Domenico Ghirlandaio; a *Pieta, by Giov. Bellini — a delicate and deeply-felt picture (Morelli); a Holy Family, ascribed to Perino del Vaga; Virgin and Child with SS. Dominic and Francis, by Benedetto Coda; SS. Sebastian, Jerome, and Lawrence, of the Umbrian School; and S. Dominic presenting the rules of his Order to the Pope, with the Madonna and Saints above, School of An adjoining room has some good tapestries. In the square is a handsome fountain and a bronze Statue of Pope Paul V.

The Castel Malatesta, or Fortress, now mutilated and disfigured by unsightly barracks, bears the name of its founder: the rose and elephant are still traceable upon its walls, with the date 1445.

On the ground-floor of the Scuole (Plan 8) is a small Museum of Antiquities, and a Library of 25,000 vols., founded in 1617, by Gambalunga, the celebrated jurist. With the exception of a few classical MSS., and a papyrus known by Marini's commentary, the interest of its MS. collection is chiefly local. On the first floor is the Museo Matteini, devoted to Natural History.

There is no part of the Divina Commedia so full of touching teeling and tenderness as the tale of guilty love which Francesca revealed Its interest is increased by to Dante. the recollection that Francesca was the daughter of Guido da Polenta, lord of Ravenna, who was the friend and generous protector of Dante during his exile. The delicacy with which she hints her crime in a single sentence is equalled only by the passage where the poet represents himfainting with compassion when he heard the story and the bitter weeping of the condemned shades ;--

"Noi leggiavamo un giorno per diletto Di Lancilotto come Amor lo strinse: Soli eravamo, e senz' alcun sospetto. Per più flate li occhi ci sospinse Quella lettura, e scolorocci 'l viso; Ma solo un punto fu quel che si viuse Quando leggemmo il disiato riso Esser baciato da cotanto amante, Questi, che mai da me non fia div:so, La bocca, mi baciò tutto tremante; Galeotto fu il libro, e chi lo scrisse -Quel giorno più non vi leggemmo avante." The ancient Port, situated at the mouth of the Marecchia, has been gradually destroyed by the sands brought down by that stream; and the marbles of the Roman harbour were appropriated by Sigismondo Malatesta to the construction of his Theodoric is said to have cathedral. embarked his army in this port for the siege of Ravenna. It is now the resort of numerous small vessels occupied in the important local fisheries. Close to the river (Plan 5), on the l. of the road leading to the Port, is the Chapel of S. expressive of the author's gratitude for the hospitality he experienced there during his long exile.

A good road leads from the Borgo to (12 m.) S. Leo, but a bridgeless river has to be crossed, which is sometimes impassable after rain. ½ hr. from the Borgo a short cut turns off to the l. at a Tavern, rejoining the high road at the foot of the last ascent.

—3 hrs. fast walking from the Borgo to S. Leo.

CASTEL DI S. LEO is remarkable as the place where Cagliostro, the celebrated impostor, died in exile in 1794. The place is very picturesquely situated on a rock. Carriage-road thence up the valley of the Marecchia, by Badia Tedalda, to Pieve S. Stefano in the upper valley of the Tiber, and thence by the sanctuary of Alvernia to Bibbiena and Florence. The mountains over which it passes—the Alpe della Luna—are highly picturesque; the road at its highest point commands a view of both the Adriatic and Mediter-S. Leo is supposed to occupy ranean. the site of a Temple of Jupiter, which stood on the summit of Mons ferretranus, corrupted into Monte Sferratri.

The *Cathedral of four bays, with slightly pointed arches, has neither triforium nor clerestory. The Chancel is raised upon a double flight of 20 steps, over an ancient Crypt with columns. Close to the door is a very beautiful column of cipollino turned upside down. Opposite the door is a good but ruined painting of the Virgin and Child with SS. Leo and Marino. There is a lofty square detached campanile.

The Parish Church below has two broken columns of cipollino, and a baldacchino over its font, supported by four columns of marmo Imezio, taken from the tomb of Duke Orso, now destroyed. Both the churches are built of stone in small courses, and exhibit picturesque bits of work outside.

The highest point is occupied by the Rocca, or Fortress, now a Prison, and not always accessible. It contains the Torrione della Regina (wife of Berengarius), and the Cella (prison) of Cagliostro.

Milan is described in Rte. 51.

This line runs S.E. through country in some parts exceedingly marshy, intersected with numerous canals and streams. The maize (Gran Turco), though beautiful in flower and in ear, is, when ripe, arid in appearance, and ungraceful.

Tramway also as far as Lodi.)

The rice-plantations are remarkably unhealthy; sickly labourers superintend the distribution of the water. clad like miners, in coarse clothing. When crossing a canal they are frequently obliged to plunge into the water, out of which they come wet and covered with mud, carrying with them germs of fever. They are not the only victims, for the harvest labourers seldom gather in the crop without being seized with rigors, the air being polluted by the stagnant waters.

4 m. Rogoredo Junct. Here the Rly. to Pavia (Rt. 54) turns off to the rt.

[A short distance to the rt., on the Vetabbia, is the very ancient Church of San Giorgio di Nosedo, annexed to a former residence of the Abp. of It was founded in 571, by Alboin, King of the Lombards, and has the remains of a curious fresco.

About 1 m. lower down the river stands the *Church of Chiaravalle (1221), the first Cistercian monastery established in Italy (suppressed in

The Order was founded by St. Bernard, Abbot of Clairvaux in France. In 1134 he crossed the Alps to attend a conneil at Pisa and, on his way back, paid a visit to Milan. His presence excited the most enthusiastic feelings; and within a year after his departure this monastery was built. It is in the Lombard style, and has a very remarkable central tower. The body of the fabric is left perfectly plain, and serves only as a base for the leading features of the design. The tower alone is enriched. Octagonal, in three stories, decreasing upwards, and pierced with oblong circular arches, it is surmounted by a circular brick spire. The octagonal portious are enriched with Lombard galleries, which give an appearance of lightness, and attract the eye to that part of the building on which it is interded to rest. The spaceous Church is damp, deserted, and defaced by whitewash, but interesting from its connection with the history of Becket. The double row of 15th-cent, stalls is exceedingly beautiful; but their reliefs, representing events in the life of St. Bernard, were much injured in 1848, when the Church was used as barracks. At the top of the great staircase to the rt. of the choir is a fresco by B Luini.

This morastery was the favourite retirement of Ottone Viscouti, the celebrated Abp. of Milan, who died in it. His tomb is still shown; beneath the inscription are shields of arms, amongst which are the fleurs-de-lys of France.

Behind the choir are several monuments of the powerful family of the Torriani, who selected it for their last resting-place. Here has Pagaro della Torre (1241), the most distinguished of his race, and near him several of his descendants. This family was at the head of the popular party, and for two or three generations governed Milan, keeping the nobles in anbjection.

The country round was reclaimed by the labours of the Cistercians, who were in agriculture almost what the Benedictines were in literature. They invented the system of artificial meadows, called prate di Marcita, which Lombardy owes so much of a prosperity.]

11 m. Melegnano (4000), on the Lambro Steam Tramway S.E. t Stat' Angelo.

Here, on the 14th Sept., 1515, Francisi won, in the first year of his reign, the victory by which he acquired a transic and delusive glory. Having invade the Milanese territory for the purpose classified his commercial rights, he wastacked at Melegnano by the Swiss, whom the defence of the Milanese territory had been entrusted. The battlewas continued with great obstance during three entire days, and the Swiswere at length compelled to retreat, good order, but leaving 15,000 dead up the field.

Me egnano was also the scene of a hard fought battle on the 7th June, 1869 between the French and Austriana, which both sides suffered severely; the French commanded by Marshal Banguay d llilliers, the Austrians Benedek, forming the rear-guard of army retreating after the disaster Magenta.

Beyond Tavazzano we cross the Muzza, one of the many canals dirrigation with which this distribution abounds. The carriage road, on the approach to Lods, is raised upon a causeway above the plana A fine avenue of plane-trees borders it on either side.

21 m. LODI (19,000).

The original settlement of the citizens, Lodt Vecchio, is about 5 m. In It was founded by the Boin, and having been colonised by Cneim Pomperus Strabo, father of Pomperus Pompeia, Cicero calls it simply Lune. The conversion of Laus into Lod shows how, by the employment of the oblique cases, the Latin language was corrupted into the modern dialect.

The men of Lods were the condensatively of the Milanese, who, in 1111 entirely destroyed the city. "The region between Milan and Lodi was of the standing. It originated, according to Arnulf, in the resistance made by the inhabitants of the latter city to an attempt made by Abp. Eribert to force a bishop of his own nomination upon them. The bloodshed, plunder, and conflagrations which had ensued would, he says, fill a volume, if they were related at length."—Hallam.

After the destruction of Milan, the Lodigiani, who had fled to Pizzighetone, came (1158) before Barbarossa, as suppliants, weeping and bearing crosses, and requesting a home; and accordingly he gave them a village then called Monteguizone, granting them investiture by the delivery of a banner. The spot is said to have been fixed upon by Frederick himself; it was defended by the river Adda, and lies in a tract of exuberant fertility: thus arose the modern city.

The inhabitants removed from the ancient city the relics of their patron mint, Bassianus, which they deposited in the bromo, a Lombard building, of which the interior has been modernised. The porch is supported by griffins; perhaps not only the design, but even a part of the materials, may have been brought from old Lodi. This is certainly the case with respect to a relief of the Last Supper, a remarkable monument of early Christian art, anterior to the settlement of the Lombards. The eyes are of enamel. Some paintings in tempera on the walls near the high altar are by Guglielmo and Alberto da Lodi.

The Church of the Incoronata, hy Giov. Battagio, a pupil of Bramante, begun in 1476, is a beautiful specimen of the Renaissance. It is an octagon, and contains exquisite decorations, on eiling and walls, and carved Canbria. Here are some good paintings of Calisto Piazza, usually called Calisto da Lodi, born here early in the 16th cent. He was an imitator of Titian, and "a very unoriginal artist," Cic. The subjects are the Passion, the Life of St. John the Baptist, and that of the Virgin: the heads have great beauty. The Church of S. Francesco, a good Gothic edifice (14th cent.), has some old frescoes, and rich decorations.

The Piazza, surrounded by arches, is fine of its kind.

The terrible passage of the Bridge of Lodi, and the heroic conduct of the young Bonaparte at the head of his grenadiers, May 10th, 1796, need no commemoration. The bridge was on the eastern side of the city, over the Adda, and has been rebuilt.

The Lodi district is the chief country for the production of the cheese usually called Parmesan. In the country it is called Formaggio di Grana. The territory in which the cheese is produced is 20 m. wide from Pavia to Milan and Lodi, and double that in length from Abbiategrasso, near the Ticino, to Codogno, near the confluence of the Adda and Po. cows set apart for this production are about 80,000. More than 12,000 are imported every After 7 years they are worn d sold. The cheese produced out and sold. from a cow is, on an average, 340 lbs. in a year. It is sold twice a year, in May and Sept. The average price is from 92 to 100 fr. for 171 lbs. total production of the year is about 12,500 tons. After two or three years' seasoning in the warehouses of the merchants, which are principally at Codogno, province of Lodi, and Corsico, province of Milan, the weight of the cheese is diminished 5 per cent. The whole of the better kind is sent out of the country. The quantity exported to Great Britain is comparatively small.

Three kinds of pasture are used for the cows; viz. the marcito (flooded

mendow - land); irrigatorio stabile | (irrigated grounds); erbatico rotative meadow grounds). The marcile (rot ten) is formed by dividing the land into many small parallelograms, sensibly inclined to one side. The water which fills the little canals amongst them overflows these spots slowly, and by the inclination of the ground falls into the opposite canal. From this it is diffused over other parts, so that the whole meadow country is continually flooded, from which there is maintained a rapid and continual vegetation in the heats of summer and the frosts of winter; at the same time no marshy weeds prevail. The grass is cut 5 times a year, and to some parts below Milan, in the mealows even 9 times. The erbatico, or rotation meadow, alternates with the cultivation of rice, grain, flax, Indian corn, and cats.

The very low reliefs on the pedestal represent to burn the flying the attempt bridge thrown over the Scheldt by Farnese during the siege of Antwerp (1585), and the interview with the envoys of Queen Elizabeth, Ypres, to negotiate the peace (1591). Alessandro was succeeded by his son Ranuccio. Gloomy, suspicious, covetous, and merciless, one of the first acts of his reign was to burn nine women accused of witchcraft. Ranuccio was constantly in dread of the vengeance of the nobility, whom he insulted and oppressed. A supposed conspiracy enabled him, in 1612, to wreak his vengeance upon them. the 19th May the scaffold was raised before the windows of his palace; and Barbara San Vitale, Countess of Colorno, one of the most beautiful women of her day, was brought forth, shown to the people, and beheaded; she was followed by Pio Torelli—his bead fell also; San Vitale, Marquis of Sala, succeeded, and four others of the principal families. The execution lasted 4 hours, the duke looking on with savage delight. He wished to extirpate these families; and to this end inflicted horrible treatment upon the children of San Vitale. The son and nephew of Torelli escaped; and the latter, taking refuge in Poland, and having married the heiress of the Poniatowski family, became the ancestor of the last king of that unhappy country.

*Palazzo del Comune was erected by the merchants of Piacenza The lower part is of red and in 1281. white marble, in the Pointed style; the upper half is of brick with round windows and terra-cotta ornaments, elaborate and delicate in the details. Above these is a marble cornice with brked battlements along the top, and a tower at each angle. Mr. Street speaks of it as a building of unusual and striking design—a capital example of the use of brick and marble.

The building opposite is the modern Palazzo del Governo. On the S. side of the square is the Teatro Filodram-N. Italy.

CHURCHES.

The *DUOMO (C. 5), consecrated by Pope Innocent II. in 1133, is in the ancient Lombard style with 16th cent. additions. The porches are curious; the central one dates from 1564. the archivolt are sculptured small reliefs of the signs of the zodiac, the sun and moon, stars, planets, comets, and winds. The two lateral ones. of an earlier period, are ornamented with rude reliefs of the Annunciation. Visitation, Nativity, and Adoration of the Magi. The pillars that support these arches rest upon quaint crouching human figures, with a kind of saddle beneath the columns; and the whole exterior is full of curious details. A window in the apse is remarkable, the moulding of the archivolt standing out from the wall, with which it is connected by four grotesque heads. The Campanile (300 ft.), erected in 1333, consists of a square brick tower with an open belfry on the summit; to a window in it is affixed an iron cage, like that at Mantua, placed there in 1495 by Lodovico il Moro, to expose to public view persons guilty of sacrilege and treason.

The interior has an imposing Nave, long spacious aisled transepts, and an elevated choir approached by a double The Church is 360 flight of steps. long, 210 wide between the transepts, and 125 high. Its wide arches rise from massive columns: over the crown of each arch a statuette is let into the wall, and on several of the pillars are small tablets with reliefs representing workmen of various descriptions—a wheelwright, carpenter, smith, and many othersdenoting the Crafts who contributed to the expense of erecting the building. The *Choir-stalls are richly carved with traceries in relief, by Gian Giacome, a Genoese (1417). At the intersection of the nave and transept rises the octagonal capola, surrounded both without and within by a gallery of Lombard arches. Six of the eight sides are painted in fresco by *Guercino; the E and N E compartments are by Morazzone. A nearer view of them may be obtained from the colonnade which runs round the top of the drum, but the ledge is rather narrow, and has no rail. The subjects are-Prophets, Sibyls, chours of angels, and Biblical scenes. These frescoes have been injured in a peculiar marner: birds getting into the dome have flown against them and scratched them. The Gueremo frescoes are very remarkable for their great power in colour and skill in execution of fresco on a large scale, and have less of the heaviness asnally pervading the works of this master. At the great distance from which they must be seen, they are quite satisfactory, and fine specimens of interior decorations."-C. W. C. Lower down, on each side of the windows, are figures of Charity, Truth, Chastity, and Humility, by Franceschini. In the choir are frescoes by *Lodovico Caracci, full of neademic power and skill, showing great knowledge of the human form and much grandeur of contour; the colours are distemperlike, but in as perfect preservation as if but just done. The Assumption, in the choir, as well as the Sibyls and Saints, on either side, are by C. Procaccini. The *Virgin surrounded by Angels, on the vanit of the apse, is a magnificent work of L Caracci. On the vault over the high altar, the Coronation of the Virgin is by C. Procaccini; the choirs of angels, and the Fathers of the Church in Hades, by L. Caracci. The Nativity of the Virgin and the Salutation, over the arch of the organ gallery, are by the same painter. The Visitation and the Descent of the Holy Spirit, over the arches on the opposite side of the choir, are by C Proceccini.

In the chapel on the l. of the choir, the St. Martin dividing his Garment with the Beggar, by L. Caracci. In the 2nd chapel on the rt. is a strange painting, attributed to Andrea and Elisabetta Sırani, representing 😘 10,000 crucified Martyrs, who, ascording to the legend, consisted of an army of 3000 Roman soldiers miraculously converted to Christianity, and 1001 more troops sent against them, who followed the example, -an execution said to have occurred by the advice of Sapor, in the reign of Hadrian. Near the alter of Santa Lucia is a curious painting of the 16th cent., representing the Madonna and Child, by Bartolino de Piacenza. The Ancona over the great door was painted in 1497 by B Grepallo (Stat ettes by Antonio Burlenghi, at the expense of a member of the Lands family. In the Sacristy is a good relief of the Assumption 17th cent.).

The Crypt is a complete Church of itself, with transcepts and chor, supported by 100 columns with varied capitals.

Sant' Agostino, by Vignola, has an imposing front. The nave is supported by 34 Dorie columns of granite.

Bant' Antonino (D. 4), the original Cathedral, founded A.D. 324, upon the spot where St. Barnabas preached to the people, was rebuilt in 1592 The N. porch, or Paradiso, is a bold arch of brick, with a pretty rose-wind and pinnacles above (1950). The marble doorway, with men and monsters and some delicate carving, should be noticed. The sauctuary and choir were painted by Camillo Gapassetti of Modena, who died in 1628, at an and age. The subjects are principally facthe Apocalypse, and the drawing exaggerated. In the Sacristy is a 14th cent, painting upon wood representing incidents from the life of the pairon saint. The choir stalls are good, and there is an old central tower. Then are two mediaval sercophesis outside the W. door.

Close by to the E. is Ben You style. The painting in the large chapel on the rt., and the fresco in the cupola above it, are by Malosso of Cremona (1607).

by the Knights Templars. In the cloisters are some curious fragments of paintings of very early date. At the 2nd altar rt. is St. Hyacinth, by Malosso, with the Virgin and Child, attended by pretty boy-angels. There is a fine tomb of Orazio Scotti, Count of Montalbo, by Algardi, in a chapel 1. of the choir.

*A. M. di Campagna (C. 1) was erected from the designs of Bramante, originally in the form of a Greek cross, but altered towards the end of the last cent. by lengthening the choir, to the destruction of several "The cupola frescoes by Campi. and chapel, painted in fresco by Pordenone, show to what extent colour may be carried in fresco. The orange and blue, azure and gold, purple and red, are as rich as in the Venetian pictures, and similar in treatment; the design not more severe, and with the same fierce dash in execution."— C. W. C. On the l. of the W. door is a specimen fresco of St. Augustine, complete and careful in finish, and very beautiful in colour, but awkward in the drawing. In the 1st chapel 1. is an *Adoration of the Magi, by Perdenone. In the luvette, the Natwity; on the wall, the Birth of the Vigin; above it the Flight into Expt. The colossal St. Sebastian and St. Roch at the next altar, with four smaller subjects above from the life of St. Francis, are by Camillo Procaccini. Beyond this is the Chapel of St. Catharine, entirely painted by Porlenone: the altar-piece, in oil, repreints the Marriage of St. Catharine; St. Paul on the rt., is a portrait of the artist, and the Virgin of his wife. On the side-wall is a magnificent fresco of St. Catharine disputing with the doctors, into which the painter has also introduced his portrait in the doctor sitting on the ground with an open book before him. These fine works were executed in 1546 for Countess Scotti Fontana.

The CUPOLA, likewise by Pordenone, is painted with Scripture subjects. Immediately under the circular opening of the lantern, upon which is painted the Almighty, and on the bands which divide the panels, are children playing with animals among festoons of flowers. Below the dome, on the frieze of the entablature, are subjects from heathen mythology—1. Neptune and Amphitrite with seamonsters: 2. Rape of Europa; 3. Silenus drunk, borne by Fauns and Satyrs; 4. Bacchus with Fauns and Satyrs; 5. Hercules strangling the Serpents, and other figures expressive of his Labours; 6. Jupiter hurling lightning at the Giants; 7. Diana hunting, with Nymphs and Satyrs; 8. Venus and Adonis, with Cupids, Nymphs, and Satyrs. On the piers which alternate with pillars in supporting the entablature, are figures called Apostles, probably by Bernardino Gatti, who painted the drum below these piers with subjects from the life of the Virgin. The pendentives are by Pordenone. These frescoes may be well seen from the wide gallery which runs round the drum, behind the pillars and piers. In a series of Scripture histories, forming a kind of frieze over the arches of nave and choir are,—Tobias and Raphael, by Daniele Crespi; Ruth and the Reapers, by Tiurini; and the Apparition of the Angel to Lot and his Wife, by Guercino. In the Choir, behind the high altar, are some wellcarved Stalls, and a painting of St. Catharine, by Pordenone. On the rt. of the entrance is St. George, painted by Gatti, in competition with Pordenone for the execution of the above frescoes.

Ban Savino (C. 7) was founded in 903, and rebuilt in the 16th cent. The crypt is probably as old as the 10th cent.: the pavement is tessellated, representing the signs of the zodiac.

San Sepolero (C 2) is a good specimen of brickwork, by Bramante (1531).

San Sisto (A. 3), entered by a fine Atrium, was rebuilt in the beginning of the 16th cent. Its nave is s. pported by columns of grey granite, but is spoilt by excess of decoration, in bad taste. Behind the high altar stood Raphael's celebrated Madonna di San Sista, now at Dresden, which, in 1754, the monks sold to the Elector of Saxony and King of Poland, Frederick Augustus III., for 8000l., a copy, by Avanzini of Piacenza, is now in its place Among the paintings which remain are the Slaughter of the Innocents, by Camillo Procaccini; Sta. Barbara, by Palma Giovane; the Martyrdoms of Sta Martina, by Bassano, and of St. Fabian, by Paolo Farinato-all on the walls of the choir. The immense monument, in the 1, transept, of Margaret of Austria (1586), wife of Ottavio Farnese, was sculptured by Giacinto Fiorentino. The intersiatura of the stalls, representing architectural views, is much damaged

The Palazzo Farnese (B 4) occupies a portion of the site of the citadel erected by Galeazzo Visconti, in 1395, to protect Piacenza on the side of the Po. It was erected in 1558 by Margaret of Austria, from the designs of Vignola, and the remains of its ornaments may be traced on its dilapidated walls. It has long been converted into barracks, From a closed window on the W. side the conspirators who assessinated Pier Luigi Farnese showed his corpse to the people, and afterwards hurled it into the ditch below.

pentagon, begun by Pier Luigi Farnese in 1547, was strengthened by the Austrians, and occupied by a garmon until 1859

Palazzo dei Tribunali, in the Vui delle Benedettine (B. 5, 6) This old brick building has a rich Remaissance doorway, much injured. The runed Church of S. Eustachio, opposite, has some interesting details of ornamental brickwork.

The Biblioteca Pubblica (10, C.4), of 120,000 vols, contains a remarkable psalterium of the 9th cent, bound mailver, and an early Dante.

The Istitute Gazzola was founded by a Spanish officer for the maintenance and education of girls, who also receive marriage portions, and as a school of design.

The Ospedale Grande (C 1) conta a considerable space of ground.

The Promenade on the old ramparts offers fine views of the distant Alps and Apennines, and glimpses of the Po, studded with its willows islands.

The names of both the hills are said to have reference to the catastrophe; Rovinazzo being derived from rovina, and Moria No coins have been from Morte. found of a later period than the reign of the Emperor Probus; and hence it is concluded that the catastrophe took place during, or not long after, his short reign.

Velleia, though it must have been a city of considerable note, is nowhere directly mentioned by any ancient author; but there is an indirect notice of it in Pliny, in relation to the census of the Roman empire taken by Trajan, on which occasion there were found to be at Velleia six persons exceeding 110 years of age, four of 120, and one of 140. The subterranean treasures were first obscurely known in the 17th cent.; and for a long time those who were in possession of the secret worked the mine with much profit: the larger bronzes went to the bell-founders, the coins and ornaments to the goldsmiths of Piacenza; but in 1760, the circumstances having been made known to the Duke of Parma, regular excavations were begun, and in the course of five years many statues, inscriptions, and smaller articles were found, which have been deposited in the museum at An Amphitheatre, Temples, Parma. and a Forum, have been discovered; none of the walls are more than 10 ft. in height, the mighty crush having thrown down the upper part. excavations have not been continued for several years.

The nearest Rly. Stat. to Velleia is Fiorenzuola (see below).

On the l. bank of the Trebbia, 25 m. S.W. of Piacenza (dil. in 6 hrs.), is the desecrated Benedictine Monastery of Bobbio, formerly celebrated for its Library, which supplied some valuable MSS. to the Ambrosian Library at Milan. The Church of S. Colombano contains in its crypt the sarcophagi of the canonized abbots.

The Steam Tramway to Rivergaro and Bettola (Rte. 60) will help the pedestrian.

PIACENZA TO PARMA.

On quitting Piacenza the Rly. runs at a short distance N. of and parallel to the ancient Via Emilia (so called from Emilius Lepidus, who constructed it B.C. 187), which took a wide circuit from Bologna, passing through Modena, Parma, and Piacenza, to Milan. On the l. is

San Lazzaro, so called from an ancient hospital for lepers, upon the site of which is now erected an Ecclesiastical Seminary. The celebrated Cardinal Alberoni, who was born in the neighbouring town of Fiorenzuola, left all his property to this institution in 1752. In the Cardinal's Saloon are S. Francesca Romana, by Taddeo Zucchero; two paintings of Warriors on Horseback, by Borgognone; his own portrait, by Polidoro da Caravaggio. In the Church is the monument of the Cardinal founder, and a good Christ on the Cross, by C. Pro-The Library contains 20,000 caccini. vols., amongst which is a copy of Alberoni's works, with MS. additions and annotations.

53 m. Cadeo, like San Lazzaro, is a memorial of ancient piety; for here, in 1110, one Gisasphus, a citizen of Piacenza, founded a hospital, Casa di Dio, or Ca Deo.

Crossing the Arda torrent we reach

56 m, Fiorenzuela (6700), supposed to occupy the site of the Roman Fidentia, near which Sylla obtained a victory over Carbo. It has some mediaval relics. From one of its towers hang chains, to which, it is said, crimmals were bound. The Church of San Frorenzo has some carved work in the choir worth notice; and the Sacristy contains some relics of ancient art, amongst others a fine specimen of Niello.

[Rough road S.W. to (20 m.) Velleta (see above). It passes through Castel Arquato, a decayed but interesting little town on the Arda. The Palazzo Pubblico is a good Gothic building. Near Castel Arquato is Monte Zago, abounding in fossil shells and marine animal remains, in a high state of preservation. The Cortesi palæontological collection, now in the university of Parma, where it has remained unpacked for more than a quarter of a cent., was principally formed from fossils found in this neighbourhood.]

From Fiorenzaola we continue near the line of Roman road through a fertile territory. The country on the I., extending to the Po, was once called the State Pallaviene, from the celebrated fam.ly who held the sovereignty of it. "From that time the shrine of St. Donnino became one of the most frequented in Italy, and received oblations which led to the construction of a temple on a larger scale.

"The existing *Duomo is a large building, and has undergone various alterations. The oldest part of it is in the Lombard style, but the very curious and rich front belongs to times when the imitation of the Roman reliefs succeeded to the monstrous imagery of the 7th and 8th It cannot be older than the 12th cent, although the barbarous character of the sculpture might seem to indicate a remoter antiquity. The projecting portals, the pediment over the doors, the pillars resting on animals, are all features of the latter part of the 11th and the 12th cent,"--G. Knight.

In the lateral Porch of Taurus, the heads of bulls are introduced; in the Porch of Aries, the pillars rest upon kneeling rams, and the ram's head is introduced in the capitals, while the sun represented by a human head surrounded with rays appears in the archivolt. Some sculptures of the porches are taken from Scripture history, others from Pagan. Hercules is wrestling with the lion. A square tablet containing the relief of a woman in a charlot drawn by dragous, holding a torch in either hand, is the same design which at St. Mark's, Venice, is called Ceres or Proserpine. Among the sculptures on the walls of the apse are the Hunt of the Soul by the Demors, under the emblems of the stag and the hounds, and the "Petra Solis," exhibiting the sun, followed by an inscription in uncial letters. The interior of the cathedral, which is scarcely altered, is as interesting as the outside. arypt is worth visiting, 69 m. Castelguelfo, with an ancient castle. One portion is in ruins, others are partly modernized; but the bold projecting machicolations still remain, as well as the original outline, testifying to its feadal grandenr. The walls are now covered with ivy. It was called Torre d' Orlando, not from the Paladin, but from Orlando Pallavicini, who held it for the Ghibelline party; but being besieged and taken (1407) by Ottono Terzi, the lord of Parma, and a great leader of the opposite faction, he changed its name to Castelguelfo, in benour of his victory.

[6 m. E. lies Rocca di Pontenellato,

In the Villa San Vitale is a room painted in fresco by Purmegianino, on the plan of Correggio's more celebrated Camera di San Paolo at It is supposed that the artist took refuge here when persecuted by the confratermity of La Steccuta, and painted the room out of gratitude to his protectors. The subject is the fable of Actseon, represented in 18 lunettes, above which are children on the roof of the grotto. In one of the lunettes is the portrait of a beautiful Countess of San Vitale; in another are children embracing each other, One of the hunters in the 2nd lunette is the painter's portrait. Diana throwing water in the face of Action is very graceful. The room is badly lighted, but the frescoes are in excellent preservation.]

6 m. S.W. of Borgo (Tramway) are the mineral baths of Balsomaggiore. Part of the treatment consists in inhaling the vapour from the springs, and the waters have a considerable reputation for the cure of scrofulous and kindred diseases.

From this spot, and during the remainder of the journey, the views of the Apennines, ranging along the southern horizon, are very fine.

Soon afterwards we reach the banks of the Taro, in the winter season a rapid torrent rushing to the Po; in summer there is a wide waste of stony bed. This river was the boundary between the Gaulish and the Liguria us to

During the whole winter tribes. season the passage was attended with much difficulty and peril. Such dangers so often occurred during the middle ages, that bridge-building was undertaken as a work of Christian charity; and the first bridge over the Taro was erected about 1170, by the exertions of a poor hermit of Nonantola, who, stationing hunself by the side of the Via Emilia, begged until he had collected sufficient money to build it. But, after sustaining repeated damage from the violence of the river, the hermit's bridge was finally carried away in 1345, and ill replaced by a dangerous and inconveulent ferry, until the present magnificent *bridge of 20 arches, 640 yds. long, was completed in 1821, by Cocconelli and Ferrari, at a cost of 86,4f 0l Colossal statues representing the Parma, Taro, Enza, and Stirone, resting upon their urns, adorn the abutments at each end.

Situated in the territory of the Books Gauls, Parira was reduced to a Rooms. colony as early as B.C. 187; lestroyed during the wars of the Trams crais, it was rebuilt by Julius Calsar and Angustus; but so complete has been the subversion of the ancient colony of Lejidus, that a few inser; tions, mutuated sculptures, and objects of jewellery, are all that remain of Roman times In the middle ages, like most of the large town in Italy, it was successively governed at a republic and by some of its creat fami-lies, the most remarkable of the latter being the Torzi, the De' Rossi, the Pallavicini, and the San Vitalit. John II. shtained it from the Dukes of Miles. in 1531; it remained a p. ssession of the Popes until 545, when Paul III mids it over, as well as Pincenza, to his natural son, Pier Luign Farnese, with the title of duke. In 1815, the Vicins Congress assigned the Duchy to Marie Louise, Ex-Empress of France, and in 1859 the widow of Charles HL was obliged to give it over to the Emy of Italy. The town is said to nave be called Parma from its similarity to form of a shield. But the torrent Panel which rims through the city, crossed by three bridges, besides the Riv. Fridge most probably gave its name to the buildings which arose upon its banks. When the city was under the authority of the Popes, it was represented by $ female figure sitting on a pile of shired, and holding a figure of Victory, with the inscription Parma aurea. Parma suffered from an earthquake in 1832.

Principal objects of interest, in topographical order: --

*Baptistery, *Cathedral; San Giovanni Fyangelista; Teatro Farnese; Library; *Museum of Autopi-tics; Picture Gallery; *Cameia & San Paolo; S. Alessandro; *L Steccata; Plazza Grande; Universit Giardino Ducale; Stradone Boulevards.

The *Cathedral was consecrated by Pope Pascal II, A.D. 1106; many portions are much later. The exterior of the W. front is almost unaltered. From the centre rises ! octagon tower and dome. The principal front is in the Lambard series BEDO has on cach side colosed him red Verona marble, sculptured by G. Bono da Bisone, in 1281, the one grasping a serpent, the other a bull. The other sculptures of this portal are by Bianchini (1493), and represent the sun mystically placed in the keystone of the circular arch; the principal occupations of the months on either side; the hunt; the allegory of the pursuit of the soul by the fiend over the lintel. A few Roman inscriptions are built up in the walls.

The nave, excepting some Gothic interpolations and modern additions, is in a fine Lombard style, and the arrangement of the triforium is remarkable. The *frescoss upon the cupola were executed by Correggio, The subbetween 1522 and 1530. ject is the Assumption of the Virgin. The painter has imagined that the octagon, or drum from which the cupola rises, embraces the space on earth in which stood the sepulchre of the Virgin; for this purpose, upon the octagon itself, from which the great vault springs, runs a balustrade, above which rises a candelabrum at each of the angles, with a number of boys engaged in lighting tapers, or burning incense and odoriferous On the balustrade, and in front of the base of the cupola, stand the Apostles, looking upwards with astonishment, as if dazzled by the great light of the celestial host who transport the Virgin; and above, heaven appears open to receive her. The angel Gabriel descends to meet her, and the different hierarchies of the blessed circle around him. In the arches under the cupola, or on its pendentives, are represented the Four Protectors of the City of Parma-Ss. Hilary, Bernard, John the Baptist, and Thomas—attended by Angels symbolical of the virtues of the Saint, and with the emblems and ornaments of his dignity. St. John, holding a lamb—angels around, darting through the clouds; St. Thomas, also surrounded by angels, some bearing exotic fruits, emblematical of this apostle's labours in India; St. Hilary, looking down upon the city with an expression of kindness and protection; while St. Bernard, kneeling, is imploring on its behalf. The decay of these frescoes is to be chiefly attributed to the old insufficient roof over the dome, which still exists under the new leaden one, added to save the wrecks of Correggio's works from destruction. Their present deteriorated state has also been partly attributed to Correggio having used an intonaco containing a proportion of sand. A closer inspection of them may be obtained by ascending to the roof, from four small openings in the A good aid drum of the cupola. towards their study and comprehension will be the examination of the beautiful copies in the Pinacoteca by the late Professor Toschi and his pupils.

The vaultings of the choir and nave are by Girolamo Mazzola, cousin and scholar of Parmegianino. The sides of the nave are by Lattanzio Gambara, who worked here from 1568 to 1573. These frescoes are academical in treatment; they want brightness; the subjects are confused, and not well adapted for mural decoration. By G. Procaccini are King David an

Petrarch held preferment here. By his will, in which he most truly styled himself inutile Archidiaoono, he directed that, if he died at Parma, he should be interred in this cathedral. In 1713 a cenotaph was erected in the chapel at the extremity of the rt. aisle to his memory by Cicognari, one of the canons.

The Chypt is large, well lighted, and supported by 28 marble columns with varied capitals. In a chapel on the rt is the Shrine of San Bernardamo degli Uberti, Bishop of Parma (1133. The saint is represented between angels supporting his mitre and pastoral staff. The reliefs were designed by Girolamo Mazzola. The later of a later date, as they bear tomb of Burtolommeo Prato (1539) has weeping figures full of expression; the drapery is of good execution, the background is a mosaic of gold, rare in a work of such modern date. Further on the rt. is a large chapel with some early frescoes of the Madonne seated on a rich Gothic throne, fiae and broad in character, with three saints and the donor, a bishop. The heads of saints round the base of the vault are good specimens of the 15th cent.

The square Lombard CAMPANIES is divided into storics by three cornices, with an open belfry on the summit.

The adjacent *Battisterio, one of the finest in Italy, 18 an irregular octagon of red and grey Verona marble, unusually lofty in proportion to its diameter. It was commenced after the designs of Benedetto Antelani m 1196. The powerful and feromous Ezzelino da Romano, who, in the middle of the 13th cent, governed the north of Italy in the name of the Enperor, forbade access to the quarries of the Veronese territory, from which the marble for the Battisterio was obtained. In consequence of this and other interruptions it was not finished until 1821, which will account for the variations in style.

It is encircled with four tiers of small columns on the outside, forming as many open galleries, which, with more observance of ancient rules than is usually found in the Lombard style, support continued architraves, the whole surmounted by a drum with phasters. There are three elegant portals, covered with sculptures; round the base of the tower is a band of sculptures in high relief of dogs bears, Lons, centaurs, sphinxes, and griffins. The interior has 16 sides. from which spring converging ribe that form a pointed dome vanlt is lighted by 24 windows, the intervals covered with paintings supposed to have been executed woon after its completion or early in the 1340. are of a later date, as they bear tolino da Piacenza, who lived towards the middle and end of the 14th. These paintings, arranged in rows or compartments, represent the Apostles, and the symbols of the Evangelists: in the second row the Saviour in the act of benediction; the Virgin in a blue mantle, with the prophets; scenes in the history of St. John the Baptist; various saints and prophets: in the niches prophets and saints: and in the lower row histories of St. John the Baptist, with the Baptism, and subjects from the life of Christ. Many display a vivid colouring and a vehemence of action often carried to exaggeration. Among them is the Volto Santo of Lucca. In the centre of the floor stands a very large octagonal Font, cut out from one block of yellowish-red marble, by Johannes Pallassonus (1298). In a corner is a smaller font, covered with Runic foliage and strange animals; it stands on a lion setting his paws upon All the children born in Parma are still brought here for bap-The stalls of inlaid wood-work were made by Bernardino Canoccio The Baptistery is a Colin 1493. legiate Church, having a chapter of six canons and a provost, besides inferior officers; its registers go back to 1459.

The Church of *San Giovanni Evangelista (2, C. 7) was attached to a large Benedictine monastery which dates from the 10th cent. The interior was designed by Zaccagni, a native architect, and begun in 1510; the exterior is later (1607), by Simone Mosca of Orvieto: the design is good and striking. The long nave and aisles are supported by fluted pilasters with Ionic capitals. *frescoes on the cupola by Correggio, now damaged and obscured by damp and smoke, represent a vision of St. John. As the last surviving apostle, he beholds, in a moment of ecstasy, his companions in heaven, who form a circle around their Divine Master, resplendent in glory. He kneels upon a rock, his arms leaning on a book, which is supported by a number of boy-angels, of whom the very clouds

This is a much smaller work than the Duomo, and was painted between 1520 and 1524, when Correggio was only 26 years of age. The figures in the pendentives are much injured by the peeling off of the plaster. The heads and expression of the saints in the group below are more complete and appropriate than in those of the Duomo. Correggio also painted the vault of the apse in the choir. When the Church was enlarged in 1584 the monks thought that the frescoes could be detached, but they crumbled and broke in the operation. On that occasion was procured the fragment of the Coronation of the Virgin now preserved in the Palace Library. A copy made by Aretusi replaces the original, but a more accurate one by An. Caracci may be seen in the Pinacoteca. Correggio also is a small fresco of St. John writing his Gospel in a lunette over the sacristy door.

The detached Campanile, the highest in Parms, was erected in 1614. It is square below, and surmounted by an octagonal lantern and belfry. From the gallery there is an extensive view. The monastery, with its three handsome quadrangles, surrounded by closters, has been turned into barracks.

The *Madonna della Steccata (3, C. 5) was begun about 1521, from the designs of Francesco Zaccagni, A figure of the Virgin painted on the wall of a house first attracted the devotion of the people of Parma; and from a palisade , Steecato) built round it, it acquired the name of the Steo. cata. The present Church is in the form of a Greek cross, with a semicircular apse at the extremity of each branch In each angle of the arms of the cross are smaller chapels. In the choir are some celebrated paintings by Parmegianino: over the I. pilaster of the entrance arch, Moses breaking the Tables of the Law; Adam and Eve, the Sibyls, and the Virtues over They have become so the organ. dark that it is difficult to see them. Of the Moses, Sir J. Reynolds says: "We are here at a loss which to admire most -the correctness of drawing or the grandenr of conception. As a confirmation of its great excellence, and of the impression which it leaves on the minds of elegant spectators, I may observe that our great lyric poet [Gray], when he conceived his sublime idea of the indignant Weish bard, acknowledged that, though many years had intervened, he had warmed his imagination with the remembrance of this noble figure of Parmegianino," The painter was engaged at weekly wages by the Fraternity of the Anninciation, to whom the Church then belonged; but being much addicted to alchemy, to which he gave his time when he should have been at work, they sued him at law,

The interior of the capola, by Sojaro or Gatti, represents the Assumption, for which he was paid 1400 golden scudi in 1566, It is an imitation of Correggio. At the back of the altar is a Flight into Egypt, by Fiammingo, and in the chapels rt. and I are frescoes of the Nativity and Descent of the Holy Ghost, by Girolamo Mazzola. In the chapel on the l of the entrance door is a Madonna and Child between SS. John Baptist and Luke, by Fil. Maszola. In the chapel between the choir and the N transept are the tombs of Sforzino Sforza, son of Francesco Sforza II. (1523), sleeping in death, his head resting on his helmet, by Agrate, and a bust of Ottavio Farnese (1567), by Brunts Count Guido da Correggio, a full-length statue, rising above a sarcophagus of yellow madle, by Barbieri (1568. In the S. masept, in which there is a large painting of St George by Franceschine, is a memorial to the Duchess Maria Louisa, consisting of a group of the Dead Christ, by Bondoni, a native artist. In the vaults beneath are the sepulchres of the dukes of the house of Bourbon, and of some of their Farnese predecessors The most interesting is that of Duke Alessandro . the sarcophagus are his helmet and his long bladed Spanish rapier, The remains of the other princes are in vaults bricked up in the wall, a marble tablet recording the name of each. Upon his death, Anselmi was called in. His principal painting here is a Coronation of the Virgin on the wault by Parmegianino.

Following the same street, and passing the theatre, we soon arrive at the Piazza di Corte. near which, in a narrow square on the rt., stands

San Lodovico (5, B. 6), formerly attached to a monastery of Benedictine nuns, containing the monument of Count Neipperg, second husband of Marie Louise, by Bartolini of Florence. Adjacent is the *Camera di San Paolo, painted by Correggio about the year 1519, in the adjoining convent, by order of the Abbess, Giovanna da Piacenza (keys at the Picture Gallery). vault of this room, which at the springing of the curve is perfectly square, converges in the form of a dome, divided into 16 concave compartments, supported by as many reeds, transforming the whole dome into a bower. Under these medallions are 16 lunettes containing mythological subjects in chiaroscuro:—The Three Fates; Suspension of Juno; Bacchus nursed by Leucothea-Lucina; Ceres; a group of Satyrs; Endymion and Adonis; Minerva; the Graces. A splendid figure of Diana in her car, setting out for the chase, remains over the elegant chimney-piece. The circumstance that Donna Giovanna bore a crescent in her coat of arms may have been the first motive for introducing the figure and sports of Diana into these paintings. An adjoining chamber, very similar in form, is painted by Alessandro Araldi, principally with groups of figures. In the lunettes over each wall are profane and Christian subjects. The roof is covered with arabesques, interspersed with portraits and small medallions; on the chimney are the arms of the abbess (three half-moons), which are frequently introduced into the paintings here by Araldi and Correggio.

At the time when Giovanna lived great irregularities prevailed in the more opulent nunneries. The abbesses. even when untainted by grosser vices, indulged, without the least restraint, in the gaieties and pleasures of the The Vatican was, however, world. alarmed by the progress of the Reformation; and, under the rigid Adrian VI., the nuns were commanded to observe the vows which they had made; disorders in the conventual establishments were reformed: the doors of San Paolo were closed, and the poor abbess died within a month The paintings remained afterwards. almost forgotten until about the year 1795, when the duke caused them to be examined.

- 8. Sepolcro (C. D. 8) has a Madonna and saints, in the 1st chapel rt., by Parmegianino, whose celebrated picture of the Madonna della Scodella was formerly in this Church.
- S. Uldarico (E. 6), a very ancient conventual foundation on the site of the Roman theatre, has a Nativity over the principal altar, by Gir. Mazzola.

The Palazzo della Pilotta (B. 5) is a somewhat gloomy and rambling pile of great extent. One portion includes a cortile of fine proportions, but unfinished. It was begun by Ranuccio Farnese I., in 1597.

Entering under the gateway of the palace, by which the road passes to the bridge, and ascending the wide staircase, a rich heavy portal is seen in front. This is the entrance to the TEATRO FARNESE, built in 1618, by Aleotti, for Duke Ranuccio, and opened in 1628, upon occasion of the marriage of Duke Odoardo with Princess Margaret of Tuscany. It is said to be the first theatre in which boxes were introduced. The whole is of wood, and has been well restored. (Keys at the Picture Gallery, 50 c.)

The Tipografia del Governo is known to the bibliographical world as having been under the direction of the celebrated Bodoni. Among his collections may be seen various fine specimens of typography, and different methods of printing music.

Correggio was employed six months in the widows house printing the picture, and, when it was unished, she was so well satisfied with it that she gave him, besides his board, two cart-loads of faggots, a quantity of wheat, and a pig. The widow hestowed the painting upon the Convent of St. Anthony at Parma in 1527, and it speedily acquired a European reputation. Don John V. of Portugal in 1549 offered 460, 00 fr. for it. The magistrates of Parma gave notice to the duke, and he stopped the bargain by removing the picture and placing it in the cathedral Here it continued till 1756. when a French painter obtained an order from the reigning duke to make a copy of it. left unfinished by him, as we learn from an inscription, which says that it is better to see them unfinished by his hand than finished by any other. They represent the Rape of Europa, Triumph of Venus, and Marriage of Peleus and Thetis. On the window side is Apollo and Daphne. In the centre of the ceiling are three Cupids, and other subjects in lunettes above the four sides, "Although slight and coarse in execution, the classical stories they represent are pleasingly told, and with much poetic feeling; particularly that one of Peleus and Thetis, where the coy modesty of the lady, the enjoyment of the Cupids, and the general languid voluptuousness are successfully treated."--

A second room is decorated with allegories representing various scenes of enjoyment. A third room contains mythological subjects. There is also a large collection of portraits of the members of the houses by which Parma has been ruled.

96 m. REGGIO Junet. (19,500), a flourishing city, Regeum Lepidi recolony from Æmilius Lepidus. devastations of Alaric, and the restoration of the city by Charlemagne, have offaced almost every vestige of antiquity. A Roman statue, of fairly good workmanship, but lacking both arms, in built into the corner of a house near the Palazzo dei Becki. A statue, which is called that of Lepidus, is preserved in the Palazzo del Comune. There are several Roman inscriptions and cippi in the cortile and porticoes of that building.

The Duomo is of the 15th cent. The unfinished front is ornamented with marble columns, and recumbent on the pediment of the great door are statues, larger than life, of Adam and Eve, by Clementi (1518). They are imitations of the "Morning and Evening" in the Medicean Chapel at Florence. There are also statues of SS. Chrysanthus and Darius, the patron saints, Within is the *Tomb of Ugo Rangoni, Bishop of Reggio. He is represented larger than life, giving his blessing. Also a bronze group at the high alter, representing Christ Triumphant, and the statues of SS. Prosper, Maximus, and Catharine in the tranthe choir is the tomb of Bishop Spanu (1508). In the 3rd rt. is a good re cumbent effigy of 1581, and in the 20 l, a Virgin and Child with two Saints by an unknown Master.

The ancient Basilica of San Profi pero, behind the cathedral, was es tirely rebuilt in the 16th cent. Bit colossal marble lions which supported the Lombard postals are at the door One grasps two skulis with his him paws; others have the usual rams an serpents. Within, the structure grand and regular. Fine, but demaged frescoes by Campi and Procaccini, of the Last Judgment, Heaven Purgatory, and Hell, decorate the vaultings. Other paintings are by Tiarini. In the sanctuary are some statues, a crucifix, and massive ornaments, in silver.

The House in which Ariosto was born (1474) is close to the Palazzo del Comune. It has no appearance of age, and nothing but the tradition to render it remarkable. On the W. side of the town is the *Madonna della Ghiara, a Greek cross, with five cupolas, begun in 1597 from the designs of Balbs, and completed by Pacchione, who added the vaulting of the cupola. The archi-tectural details are good. The interior is covered with frescoes in good preservation. A series of Scripture histories, by Luca Ferrari (1605-1654) of Reggio, the disciple of Guido, are explained or allegorised by short mottoes; as, for example, Rebecca at the Well, Hausit aguas ingaudio de fonte Salvatoris. A similar series is by Tiarmi of Bologna (1668), who lived during the greater part of his life at Reggio. A third series is by Lionello Spads (1622), painted in competition with those of Tiarini, and superior in colouring but inferior in design. By Desani (1657), a papil of Spada, 18 ? series of figures at the foot of the the sculptor, over his tomb, is by his orders, with the virtues supposed papil Pacchione. Reggio has a good public LIBRARY, and a Provincial Museum. In the letter are the collections of the celebrated Spallanzani, who was born (1729) at Scandiano, within the district. Reggio is also the country of Vallianieri, Toschi, and Paradisi. There is an active trade here in wine, wilk, cheese, and hemp, so that the place has an air of prosperity.

The Theatre, to the N. of the central Piazza, is unusually large for a provincial town, and claims rank with those of Milan, Naples, and Barcelona.

Rly. N. to Guastalla, N.E. to Correggio and Carpi, S. to Ventoso.

A road leads S.S.W. from Reggio by the Pass of Sassalbo and Fivizzano, to (60 m.) Sarzana, through a country offering little interest or scenic character. At (12 m.) Pecorile (790 ft.), where the first steep ascent begins, a rough road turns rt. to (12 hr.) Canona.

Canousa is however best reached by Bibbiano, Piazzòla, and Ciano, on the broad torrent of the Enza. Carriage there and back, returning by a varied route, 15 or 25 fr. Horse from Ciano to Canousa and back, 5 fr. Side saddles must be brought from Reggio. From (15 m.) Ciano (700 ft.) a path mounts S.E. to (1 hr.) Rossena, where there is a picturesque Castle, the summer residence of Count Opizzoni. On an eminence to the S. is an ancient Tower, supposed to communicate by an underground passage with the Castle. The view is extensive, but strange rather than beautiful, the hills being absolutely bare, and the country desolate in the extreme. An hour further E. is Canossa, conspicuous on its craggy height (1900 ft.). At its foot is the miserable village, where a cottager keeps the key. The ruins are by no means picturesque, the walls are not castellated, and there is little to see but remains of a small Chapel with two broken columns. is only as a pilgrimage to a *famous historical site that the excursion is recommended. Canossa formerly contained Seven Churches, in correspondence with the Seven Basilicas of Rome, of which one only, that of S. Biagio, at the E. foot of the hill, remains. At Canossa the Emperor Henry IV., after supplicating during three days, barefooted and bareheaded, obtained absolution from Pope Gregory VII. in 1077. Not a trace remains of the Church of St. Nicholas. where Henry had his interview with the Abbot of Cluny.

A rough path descends E. to (1 hr.) Pecorile, or N.E. to (1½ hr.) Salvarano (see map). On the return drive from Ciano the traveller should take a road to the rt. at (4 m.) Piazzòla, passing on the rt. the Quattrocastella, four picturesque wooded mounds in a row, once belonging to Countess Matilda of Tuscany (1115). The third Castle is inhabited. Thence through (9 m.) Cantone to (17 m.) Reggio.

On quitting Reggio, the train continues E. to MODENA (31,000), the ancient Mulina, in a plain between the Secchia and Panaro, possesses nothing but the features of land and stream to recall its early history.

Its principal sights may be conveniently visited in the following order:-

*Cathedral; *S. Giovanni; S. Agos-tino and Museo Lapidano; *S. Francesco, S. Pietro, S. Biagio; S. Vincenzo; Palazzo Ducale; *Picture Gallery; Public Gardens.

From the Rly. Stat. a broad and stately avenue, the Corso Vittorio Emanuele, leads to the Palazzo Reale. Another broad street, the Corso di Via Emilia, traverses the city from E, to W.

The *CATHEDRAL, E. 3) "is a building of extreme historical and architectural value, and has fortunately been left with so few alterations that we can make out its history with fair cer-tainty. The ground-plan consists of a nave with aisles terminated at the E. end by three semicircular apses. There is a sacristy on the N. of the choir assle, and a tower to the N. of this. There are two doorways on the S. side, three at the W. end, and one on the N. A grand crypt, with arches on slender shafts, occupies the whole | conical helmets of the 11th cent space under the E. bay. The access whose names are written in barbard to the choir is by stairs against the characters, and other subjects.

aisle walls, not later than the 13th cent. The choir is divided from the aisles by screens of the same age. Cathedral is said to have been founded in 1099, but an inscription on the S. wall gives the date of the consecration of the building by Pope Lucius III., in July, 1184. I believe that the former date represents the age of the plan, and of most of the interior columns and arches still remaining, but that before the later date the whole exterior of the cathedral had been modernized, and the groining added inside. The work of both periods is extremely good and characteristic. The columns of the nave are alternately great brick piers and smaller circular columns of red marble. The great piers carry cross arches between the groining bays, and each of those in the nave is equal to two of those in the a.sles. The main arches and the triforium openings of three lights above them, are seen both in the nave and aisle, the vaulting of the latter being There is also a unusually raised. plain clerestory, and the vaults are everywhere now quadripartite. The outside elevation of the side-walls is very interesting. Here we seem to have the old assle wall with its cavesarcade raised in the 12th cent., with a deep arcade in each bay enclosed under round arches, which are carried on half columns in front of the buttresses or plasters. They make the side-walls very rich in their effect, independently of the two porches, a projecting pulpit and various reliefs inserted in them."- G. E. Street.

The portals exhibit ornaments and reliefs of different periods, from the 12th down to the 14th cent, material of walls, roof, and piers is uniformly brick, and there is a fine W.

head of one of the figures, at a e-door, appears the name of Artes Bretania. Some ancient Roman criptions and tombs are built into walls.

The S. side of the Duomo, which erlooks the market-place, has two od doorways, each with an upper ry, and a handsome arcade. At S.E. extremity are four reliefs, resenting events in the life of S. minianus; amongst others, his pelling the Devil from the Daughter the Emperor Jovinian; they were Iptured in 1442, by Augustinus de rentiâ. To the l. of this is a naissance pulpit.

The marble columns of the nave have itals approaching Corinthian. An ar-piece in the 2nd chapel l., of mixed thic and Renaissance, has an abunce of curious small statues in terrata. In the 3rd chapel l. is the liest known specimen of Modenese

Deprived of his dominions at the French invasion, a principality was created for him in the Briesgau, but he would not accept this compensation, and died as a private individual at Treviso, 14th Oct., 1803. He married Maria Theresa Cibo, Sovereign Princess of Massa Carrara, the last heiress of the House of Cibo Malaspina. They had an only child, Maria Beatrix, who married the Archduke Ferdinand of The duchy of Modena had been previously secured to her by the treaty of Versailles. She died at Vienna in 1829, at an advanced age. The last deposed sovereign of Modena, Francesco V., is her grandson. Her monument is by Pisani, a Modenese sculptor. Beyond it is the plain tomb of Lucia Rusca, mother of Claudio Rangoni, designed by Giulio Romano.

The *Campanile, or Ghirlandina, so called from the bronze garland which surrounds the weathercock, is 315 ft. high, and is one of the finest in N. Italy. There are six stages with round arches, and two octagonal tiers above, the lower of which was finished in 1315, by Enrico da Compione. A modern spire crowns the whole.

In this tower is preserved, suspended by an iron chain, the old worm-eaten Section, or wooden bucket taken by the Modenese from the Bolognese in the affray of Zappolino, Nov. 15, 1325; it was deposited here by the victorious Geminiani, as a trophy of the defeat of the Petroniani, with wonderful triumph, as described by Alessandro Tassoni (Secchia Rapita, Cant. i. 63).

torian, erected in 1853.

5. Giovanni Battista (E. 2) has an impressive group of the Entombment, in coloured terra-cotta, with five lifesize females and two males, by Guido Mazzoni (1476).

8. Agostino (E. 1) has, on the 1. of the high altar, a bust of Carolus Sigonius (1585), and to the rt. of the entrance a remarkable group of the Deposition from the Cross, in painted terra-cotta, by Begarelli. The figures, as large as life, are full of animation. "If this clay could become marble," exclaimed Michel Angelo, "woe to the antique!"

The neighbouring Palazzo, formerly the Monte dei Pegni (Pledges), has been fitted up for the reception of the various art-treasures of the city. Under the porticoes round the court, and on the ground-floor, are Roman and mediæval monuments and sculptures, comprising the Museo Lapidario. Here are several huge mediseval sarcophagi, brought from desecrated churches. On the first floor is the Biblioteca Estense, brought from Ferrara in 1598 by Cesare d'Este, on his expulsion by Clement VIII It contains 120,000 vols. and 3000 MSS., and is well arranged (open daily from 10 to 5). Three of the most learned men in Italy during the last cent.—Laccaria, Tiraboschi, and Muratori—have been its librarians. Among the treasures are a portion of the Acts of the 9th cent., a Dante with ministare the 14th cent., and a collection several hundred Provençal poems.

On the second floor is the Mosso Crvico, containing a large and fingroup of the Virgin and Children, by Begarelli, in brown clay, from the Chiesa Nuova; a Head of Christ by Solario; Virgin and Children, with SS. Peter, Paul, Bartholomew, and Gemignano, by Dosso Dossi; and Virgin and Child by Correggio. The paintings now in the old Pinacotes are to be removed to this Museum Here also are some marbles, coince the classical curiosities, flint implements, medizeal carvings, crosses, chariot, horse-trappings, and armone

The Palasso Ducale (D. 8, 4) was begun in the 17th cent. Much was added by the late Duke, and the 8.W. front is fine. It contains numerous courts, with open staircases, galleries, and aroudes, and now serves as a Military School,

S. Domenieo (D. 8) was the Chapel of the Ducal Palece. In one its corridors is a dark Chapel, containing a group of the Magdalene, with 88. Peter, Paul, and others, by Begarelli. Adjoining this Church, but in course of removal to the new Museum (see above), is the PICTURE GALLERY (Galleria Esionse), badly arranged, and seen with great difficulty.

The grand Este Gallery was sold in 1745 to Augustus III., Elector of Saxony, for only 56,000L, and these 100 paintings are now the chief ornsent of the Dresden Gallery,

The present collection of paintings exceeds 500. There is also an extensive series of Original Drawings of the old masters.

The Savena and the Idice (Idex) torrents are crossed to 11 m. Quaderna; the neighbouring village of S. Niccolò is supposed to stand on the ancient Claterna, a Mutatio on the Via Æmilia.

15 m. Castel S. Pietro, a fortified town (11,000), on the Sillaro (Silarus), erected in the 13th cent. by the Bolognese.

23 m. INOLA (12,000), on the Santerno, the ancient Vartrenus, occupies the site of Forum Cornelii. It is generally considered to have been founded by the Lombards. In the middle ages its position between Bologna and Romagna made it an important acquisition in the contests for power: it was successively held by different chiefs, and was united to the States of the Church under Julius II. As one of the stations of the Æmilian Way, it was a place of some importance; it is mentioned by Cicero, and by Martial in his 3rd Ep.

Among its public establishments are a Hospital, Theatre, and small Public Library, containing a MS. Hebrew Bible on parchment, of the 13th cent, much prized by Cardinal Mezzofanti.

The Cathedral, dedicated to S. Cassianus the Martyr, contains the bodies of that saint and of St. Peter Chrysologus, Abp. of Ravenua, who was born here about A.D. 400. Vassalva, the anatomist, was also born at Imola in 1666. The first bishop was Cornelius (422), in the pontificate of Celestin I. Pius VII. was bishop of Imola at the period of his elevation to the pontificate in 1800, as also was Pius IX., in 1847.

The works of Innocenzo ds Imols (1494-1550) must not be looked for in his native town; he lived almost entirely in Bologus, and appears w have found little patronage in the city of his birth.

Leaving Imola, we cross the Santerno by a handsome modern bridge.

27 m. Castel Bologuese Junct., so called from a fortress built there by the Bolognese in 1380. In 1434 it was the scene of a decisive battle between the Milanese commanded by Piccinino. and the Florentines by Niccolò da Tolentino and Gattamelata. The army of the Florentines, amounting to 9000 men, was completely overthrown : Tolentino, Orsini, and Astorre Manfredi, lord of Faenza, were made prisoners, together with the entire army, except 1000 horse; and what was more remarkable, only four were left dead on the field, and 30 wounded.

[At Riola, 11 m. S.S.W., in a picturesque valley of the Apennines, are some ferruginous mineral springs frequented in July and August.]

[The Rly. to Ravenna branches off here (Rte. 99).] Beyond Castel Bolognese, the Senio (Sinnius) is crossed.

32 m. FAERZA (86,000), on the site of the ancient Faventia, is celebrated in the history of the civil wars for the victory of Sylla over the party of Carbo. A tradicion says that the place derives its name from Phaeton. It stands on the Lamone (Anemo), and is surrounded by walls.

Faenza is memorable in Italian history for its capture by the English condottiere, Sir John Hawkswood, then in the service of Gregory XI. : he entered the town March 29, 1376, and delivered it up to a frightful military execution and pillage, 4000 persons, says Sismondi, were put to death, and their property pillaged. Among the masters under whose sovereignty Facuza figures in the middle ages, the Pagant will not fail to suggest themselves to the reader of Dante. The poet, in the passage alluding to the Machinardo Pagano under his armorial bearings, a lion azure on a field argent, says, in reply to the inquiry of Guido da Montefeltro,-

La città di Lamone e di Santerno Conduce il leoncel dal nido bianco, Che muta parte dalla state ai verne. Ist. urvil.

Lamone's city and Saterno's range Under the ilon of the snowy lair, Inconstant partisan, that changeth sides, Or ever summer yields to winter's frosts. Cary's Trans.

Faenza was one of the first Italian cities in modern times where the manafacture of earthenware was introduced; whence the adoption of the name faicure for pottery into the French language. The manufacture still exists, although it has been long surpassed by the productions of Umbria and the north Faenza is now celebrated for its inland furniture.

Leaving the Stat., we turn I. into a broad street, cross the Canal, and some reach the Church of A. Francesco. Over the altar of the 1st chapel it is a beautiful door of abony and ivery by Gatti of Rome (1888). In front of the Church is a sitting marble State of EVANGELISTA TORRICELLI, the natural philosopher and mathematician, who invented the barometer, born here in 1643.

The Cathedral, originally at S. L. Vecchia, was consecrated in 1551. lst rt., good copy of a Disputation by Dosso Dossi, of which two original heads are preserved in the Pinacoteca. The Ferniani Majolica Factory is worth a visit (see Plan). In the Palazzo Ferniani are some good paintings, including a Madonna with Saints, by Palmezzano, and another by Luca Longhi; Venus by Aldrovandi; Marriage of St. Catharine on copper, by Dosso Dossi; and Flight into Egypt, by Franceschini.

The Zanelli Canal, so called from Signor Zanelli, by whom it was opened in 1782, connects Faensa with the Adriatic. It commences at the Porta Pia, and, after traversing the plain N.N.E. for 34 m., falls into the Po di Primaro at S. Alberto.

The country around Faenza is not to be surpassed in richness and fertility: it was praised by Pliny, Varro, and Columella, and is still the object of admiration to every agricultural traveller.

[Rly. to Marradi for Florence (Rts., 109).]

On leaving Faenza the Rly. crosses the Lamone, and afterwards the Montone (Aries or Vernex). The latter stream unites with the Ronco (Bedesis) 2 m. S. of Ravenna, and thence flows E. into the Adriatic, 40 m. FORLI (17,000), a handsomely built and prosperous city, in a pleasant and fertile plain.

It is built on the site of the Forum Livii, founded by Livius Salinator after the defeat of Asdrubal on the banks of the Metaurus. During the middle ages it was a place of some importance as a free city, but at length fell into the bands of the Malatesta and the Ordelass princes. The latter, so well known in the 14th and 15th couts., became exting in the person of Luigi Ordelaffi, who died in exile at Venice in 1504, after having in vain offered to sell the pricepality to that republic. For it became fief of the Church almost immediately after that event, in 1504, under Julius if. The Ordelassi are mentioned by Pante under the figure of the green lion borns on their coat of arms, in a passage containing an allusion to the defeat of the French army at Forli by Guido da Montefeltro. (Inf. xxvii.)

Cornelius Gallus, the poet, Flavio Biondo, the historian, and Morgagni, the anatomist, were natives of the town. To the last-named there is a Statue in the Courtyard of the Ginnasio.

Soon after leaving the Stat. we turn I. at the city walls, and enter the town by the Barriera Mazzini. Nearly m. further is the spacious Piams Vittorio Emanuele, on the E. side of which stands the Church of S. Mercuriale, in the form of a basilica dedicated to SS. Thomas the Apostle and Mercurialis, first bishop of Forli. Over the entrance is a curious marble group of the Three Kings, erroneously attributed to Bansovino. 6. Girolamo contains in the 3rd chapel rt. a very fine *Conception, by Guido. The first chapel rt is painted in "fresco, the lunette by Melozzo, the lower part by Palmezzano. The subject is the legend of St. James; in the upper portion are introduced the portraits of Girolamo Riario and Catarina Sforza, dressed as pilgrims, and those of the painters in the composition Opposite is the recumbeneath. bent *effigy of Barbara Astorgi Manfredi (1466), a wicked woman, who is yet styled "ottima" in her epitaph. On the vault, Evangelists and Pro-phets, by Meloszo. The 3rd chapel has a Virgin and Child, with SS. Catharine, Dominic, Anthony of Padua, and Sebastian, by Palmessano; the donatoris are supposed to be portraits of G. Riario and Catarina Sforza, with their two sons: the predella of the Last Supper, with beautiful figures of saints between its compartments, is by the same painter: the Virgin and Child in a glory of cherubs on the roof is by Melozzo. In the 2nd chapel L is a Crucifixion, by F. Mensocchi. In the 2nd rt. is the tomb of the celebrated anatomist Morgagni (1682-1771).

The Church of the Servi has a good Renaissance monument immediately to the rt. of the entrance, with a relief of the Adoration of the Shepherds, and the Resurrection in the lunette. It was erected during his his wife, Catarina Paulucci. Over the altar of the Sacristy is an Aununciation, by Palmessano, and in the Chapter-house a fresco, wrongly given to Giotto.

Opposite is the Pinacoteca, established in the Collegio, or Ginnasio Gregory the Comunale, formerly a convent of missionaries. Many of the paintings have been presented by noble families of the town, others procured by exchange, and the rest from suppressed Convents or desecrated Churches. Over a table of veined Greek marble at the end of the room are two small paintings attributed to Giotto, and two others, with more reason, to Fra Angelico. On the rt. is a cabinet containing portfolios of drawings and sketches by Canova; they belonged to Cav. Missirini, the secretary of the great sculptor, and were presented by him to the museum of his native town. On the walls are sketches and drawings by Carlo Cignant, for his paintings in the Cathedral and elsewhere. In the centre of this cabinet is a bust of Pino Ordelaffi, attributed to Donatello. The Citadel, near the Ports Resuldins, on the S. side of the town, was founded by Cardinal Albornos in 1359, and cularged by the Ordelaffi and the Riari (1479-1481); it is now used as a prison.

The rained Ramports recall many bistorical associations of the middle ages. In the 15th cent, the sovereignty of Forh and Rimini was vested in Girolamo Riario, nephew of Sixtus IV. He was one of the chief actors in the conspiracy of the Pazzi, and had married Catharine Sforzs, natural daughter of Gian Galeanso, an alliance by which he secured the powerful protection of the Dukes of Milan. His enemies did not venture to attack openly a prince so protected; but at the instigation, it is easid, of Lorenzo de' Medici, the captain of his guard and two of his own officers stabbed him while at dinner in his palese of Foril. The conspirators throw the body out of the window, and the pepalese dragged it round the walls,

The incurgents, having seized his wife and children, and thrown them hate prison, proceeded to demand the keys of the citedal; but the commander refused to surrender unless ordered to do so by Catharine herself. The conspirators socordingly allowed her to enter the gates, retaining her children as hostages for her return; but she had no sooner entered within the walls, than she gave orders to fire on the basingers. When they threatened to recent this by inflicting summary vengeance on her children, she mounted the ramparts and exclaimed, "If you kill them, I have a son at Imola; I am pregnant of another, who will grow up to avenge such an execrable act." The populace, intimidated by her courage, did not execute their threat, and the house of Sform shortly afterwards avenged the indignities sho had suffered. In 1499 Catharine again defended Forit against the combined forces of France and the Church under Coosar Borgia and Ives d'Allegre; but after an heroic struggle, in which she is described as coutseting every inch of ground, retreating before her assallants from towar to towar, she was captured and sent a prisoner to Rome. Machiavelil, although the counsellor of the elliance with Borgia, calebrates the "magnesimous resolution" of this remarkable woman. The citadel, consisting of fear low round towers, with a central square castle or herp, is the only portion of the old defences in tolerable preservation, ancient Forum Popilii. It was rained by Grimosidus, king of the Lombards, in 700. 4 m. S. is Bertinoro (1550), an episcopal town, picturesquely situated on a hill, whose alopes are famous for their vines. It was one of the ancient flefs of the Maintenta family, by whom it was surrendered to the Charles. Under Alexander Vi. It became the property of Canar Borgia. It was contains a large educational establishment

The view from Bertinoro, over the valley of the Po, extending, to the Alps, is very fine. At the village of Polenta, 4 m. farther S., originated the Novella family, better known in history as that of Polenta, lords of Ravenua in the 13th cent., and protectors of Dante in his exile.

The river Savio (Sapis) is crossed under the walls of Cesena by a fine bridge constructed of Istrian limestone by Clement VIII.

45 m. CESENA (9000), still retaining the name of the last town of Cisarpine Gaul on the Æmilian Way, is prettily situated in an agreeable and fertile country, on the slopes of a hill overlooking the plain watered by the Savio. Cesena is one of the earliest episcopal sees in Italy; the first bishop was St. Philemon, A.D. 92. In the turbulent pontificate of Gregory XI. the town was ferociously piliaged by the ornel Cardinal Robert of Geneva, whom the Pope sent into Italy from Avignou with a company of foreign adventurers. He entered Cesena, February 1, 1877, and ordered all the inhabitants to be massacred. mondi says that he was heard to call out during the fearful scene, " 1 will have more blood! Kill all! Blood | blood !"

The Cathedral, which is entirely of brick on the outside, has a good round 14th-cent. W. doorway. The nave is a reduced copy of the Duomo at Florence, and has some admirable sculptures. 3rd chapel rt., St. Leonard, School of Donatello. 4th, the risen *Christ between SS. Caracci, Head of a blind Boy Spanish School, Gurl reading. Guido Reni, Head of the Angel Gabriel. Unknown (15th cent.), single figures of SS. Roch, Sebastian, and Christopher.

The *Library, shown by the Custods of the Picture Gallery, was founded by Domenico Malatesta Novella, brother of Sigismund, lord of Rumini in 1551; it contains 50,000 vols., and 400 MSS. Many of the latter were executed by order of Malatesta himself, when that illustrious warrior returned to Cesess severely wounded. They were be-queathed by him to the Franciscus friars, with an annuity of 200 golden ducats for its maintenance. oldest and most curious are the Etymologies of S. Isidore, of the 7th of 8th cent. It was in this library that Paulus Manutius shut himself up 19. collect materials for his editions.

The Library has two beautifully sculptured doorways, and a Hatt with columns and ancient desks, like pews to which are chained the MSS. On the doors are elephants, the badge of the Malatesta family. Here also are four suits of armour, used at local tournaments (last time in 1838, and From the Cathedral the Contrada Statue of Maurice Busanist, The Dandini leads W. to the Piazzetta sician (1787).

A street running S. from the Piazzetta leads to the Piazza Vittorio Emanuele, in which is the Town Hall, and opposite to it the Hotel Leone d'Oro. Further on is the imposing Castello, of excellent brick work, with walls running up the hill. Its upper part serves as a Prison.

About a mile S.E., on a commanding hill, is the handsome Church of S.M. del Monte, by Bramante, where many Roman urns and other relics have been found. Pius VII., a native of Cesena, took the vows as a Benedictine monk in the adjoining monastery, and was long known there as the Padre Chiara-

The Church consists of a wide nave with six recesses on either side. 18 steps lead up to the choir, which is lighted by a dome, and has stalls carved with single figures in good perspective. Beneath is a semi-crypt. At the end of the rt. aisle is a good painting of the Virgin and Child, with SS. Joseph, Benedict, Mary Magd., and Jerome. *Beautiful view towards the sea.

A few miles S. of Cesena are the sulphur-mines, which in a great measure supply the sulphuric acid works of Bologna, and the sulphur refinery at Rimini. The sulphur is beautifully crystallized, and is imbedded in the tertiary marine marks.

The Rly., on leaving Cesena, crosses the little river Pisciatello, supposed by many to be the Rubicon, and farther on the Rigossa; between Cesena and Savignano, by the roadside, stands a column on which is inscribed a Senatus-Consultum, denouncing as sacrilegious any one who should presume to cross the Rubicon with a legion, army, or cohort. It was considered authentic by Montesquieu, but no doubt is now entertained that it is apocryphal. Beyond it the carriage-road crosses the Fundaina, by the bridge of Savignano-a remarkable Roman work, N. Italy.

built of travertine, little noticed by travellers. The small stream which flows under it has also been considered the true representative of the Rubicon, the line of separation between ancient Italy and Cisalpine It unites with the Rigossa and Pisciatello, and falls into the Adriatic about 6 m. lower down. Cramer, following Cluverius, thought that these united streams, which are here known as the Fiumicino, must be identified with the Rubicon; the strongest argument in favour which is the distance of 12 m. given in the Peutingerian Table; but we shall presently arrive at one which has much more claim than either of them to be identified with that celebrated stream.

61 m. Savignano (2393) has been considered to mark the site of Compitum Vix Æmilix; but many antiquaries place that ancient station at Longiano, a village a few miles farther inland, where ruins with several relics have been found. The town was fortified by Innocent VI. in 1361. [Good road S.E. to (20 m.) San Marino, which has long been a conspicuous object on the rt.]

Before arriving at

63 m. Sant' Arcangelo, birthplace of Clement XIV., the high road crosses, by a Roman bridge, the Uso. a considerable stream, which is called to this day Il Rubicone. It flows directly into the Adriatic, after a course of about 25 m. from its source between Monte Tiffi and Sarsina, rising about midway betweeen the Savio and the Marecchia, and running parallel to the latter river for several miles. At its mouth it is a copious stream, and its course leads to the conclusion that it is more likely to have formed a boundary than any of the The peasantry, who can have no interest in upholding the theories of antiquaries, to this day give it the name of II Rubicone, and the decir sion was in favour of this stream in a lawsuit declared at Rome in 1756, in which the question was involved. The | several streams between Cesena and Rimini which have been considered to be the Rubicon are the Pisciatello, rising near Monte Farnetto; the Rigossa, near Roncofreddo; the Fiumicino, or river of Savignano, near Sogliano, all uniting into a single channel before entering the sea, where it is crossed by the high road from Ravenna to Rimini; and the Uso. The Rly. now runs due E.

Verona is described in Rte. 73. At the (2 m) Porta Nuova Stat. the Rly. turns S.W. through a fertile plain, but presents little of interest. The country on the rt. of the line is celebrated as the scene of some of the most bloody actions between the Piedmontese and Austrians in 1848.

7 m. Dossobuono Junct., where the Rly, to Rovigo turns off S.E. 5 m. W. lies Somma Campagna, from which Charles Albert blockaded Radetsky in Verona.

12 m. Villafranca (7400). Here the regotiations between the Emperors of in order to appreciate the strength of this fortress and the peculiar which put an end to the war, 11th its situation.

July, 1859, were conducted. The fine old Castle was founded in 1199 by the Veronese; but the present embattled brick building is of the 14th cent. 5 m. W. is Custozza, where, after a most sanguinary and protracted contest, the Piedmontese were worsted on the 25th of July, 1848, and obliged to re-cross the Mincio. In 1866 there was another fierce struggle bers between the Austrians and Italians commemorated by a monument in the form of an obelisk, which is visible from the Rly.

[5 m. W. of Custozza are Volegoli (2000) and Borghetto, on opposite hanks of the Mincio. The Scaligerian Castle of Vateggio, on the E bank, has a lofty keep. This is an imporant military position, as affording an easy passage of the Mincio. Here the French crossed in August, 1796, after the battle of Castiglione; the Piedmontese in 1848—the Austran on both occasions retreating to Verom; and again the French in pursuit of the Austrians, after their defeat Solferino on the 24th June, 1859. Va leggio is the centre of a rich silk district. The fortified bridge or cannot way between it and Borghetto was built in 1393 by Gian Galeans Visconti, who has in this fabric exhibited his passion for architectural magnificence. His engineers found a Roman substructure, upon which they erected this causeway, at each end of which was a lofty gate-tower, and in the centre the bridge over the Mincio: the latter has long been broken down. The causeway is 602 yds. long, battlemented either side like the bridge at Vo rona, and defended by lofty turren.

18 m. Roverbella (3400) is at some distance on the rt, of the Stat.

23 m. S. Antonio. This was the of station of Mantua before the Rly, was continued, and pedestrions will do well to slight here and walk much the Further on, the Tramway joins the Rly. on the l., and the train passes the CITADEL OF MANTUA, where the Tyrolese patriot, Andreas Hofer, after his betrayal to the French, was shot by order of Napoleon in 1810. A small marble monument has been erected to him by the Austrian soldiers. The body was removed in 1823 to Innsbruck.

The Rly. now crosses the lagoon, skirting on the l. the Argine Mulino, a curious Bridge connecting the Citadel with the Town.

26 m. Mantua Junct. (Rte. 57).

The Rly. now runs S. through an uninteresting country, crossing the Po at 33 m. Borgoforte, where is a Castle erected in 1211.

38 m. Sussara Junet. (Rly. S.W. to Parma.)

55 m. CARPI (6000), on a branch of the Secchia.

At the N. end of the large oblong Piazza stands the Cathedral, built by Baldassare Peruzzi in 1520. At the end of the l. aisle is a figure of Christ holding the Cross, by Begarelli, and Statues of Faith and Charity, by Prospero Clementi. The slabs of white marble and cipollino, on the Pulpit, with Evangelistic symbols, and a curious sleeping figure, belong to the Chiesa Sagra, or Old Cathedral, an 11th-cent. Lombard building, of which a fragment only remains. Within is the sarcophagus of Manfredo Pio, one of the Lords of Carpi, with elaborate sculptures by Sibilio Guarnieri (1352). The Castle, which stands between this little Church and the Piazza, is a very picturesque mass of brickwork.

On leaving Carpi, the Rly. continues S., crosses the Secchia, and falls into the main line between Milan and Bologna shortly before reaching Bologna is described in Rte. 95, The Riy, runs W., crosses the Keno, and then, turning S., follows is 1 bank. The scenery is striking, and the engineering of the line wonderful, especially on the descent to Piston Views generally on the l.

6 m. Casalecchip. Here we cross the Steam Tramway which connects Bologna with (20 m.) Vignola, on the Paparo.

Casalecchio was the scene of a buttle in which Giovanni Bentivogho was defeated by the army of Gian Galeszzo, on June 26, 1402 The allied army of Florence and Bologna, under Benti via and Bernardo de Serres, had recamped at Casalecchio, contrary to the judgment of the latter general, who was anxious to have retired within the walls of the city. While they were waning in reinforcements from Florence, the lanese, under Alberrigo da Barbiera, gave battle. The Bolognese troops weary of the tyranny of lient vogila refused to fight; Bernardo de Semi was taken prisoner; the inhabitant encouraged by the faithless promise made by Gian Galeazzo that he would restore their republic, opened the galoss the Milanese, and two days afterward Hentivoglio was mardered by order Barbiano. In 1611, Casalecchio we de Channont, general of Louis over the troops of Julius II., commanded by F. M. della Rovere, Duke of Urbino. It was fought on the 21st May, and was called "the day of the ass-drivers," because the French knights returned driving asses laden with their booty.

The Rly. skirts the base of the low hills that border the valley of the Reno on the W., and in the narrow defile of Il Sasso (at the foot of a cliff over-hanging the torrent), cuts through some good super-positions of the molasse or sands of the pliocene formation on the blue sub-Apennine marls.

12 m. Sasso, where the Setta flows into the Reno from S.S.E. An underground Aqueduct of Roman times, recently restored, carries water from this point to Bologna. The Rly. follows the crooked valley of the Reno torrent, the bed of which is in summer nearly dry. The mountains on each side rise to a height of 3000 or 4000 ft., and are covered with scrubby bush. The lower parts are scantily clothed with chestnut-trees. There are some deep cuttings and a short tunnel before reaching

Villa Aria is a Museum of Etruscan antiquities discovered in an ancient necropolis at Misano, towards the river. (Permission from Conte Pompeo Aria, Via S. Stefano, Bologna.) Four tunnels, some remarkably good specimens of bridges over the lateral torrents, and numerous embankments lead to 25 m. Vergato, where we cross the rapid and sometimes dangerous torrent of the Vergatello. The appearance of the country changes: the valley of the Reno widens; the hills on either side becoming rounded and less precipitous. Tertiary marks and sandstones give way to calcareous rocks of the cretaceous or eocenic period.

30 m. Riela, at the end of a tunnel 1580 yards long. On the other side of the Reno rise the rugged peaks of Monte Ovolo and Monte Vigese; by a terrific landslip from the latter the village of Vigo was overwhelmed in 1851. Continuing along the 1, bank of the river, the restored castle of Savignano is a picturesque object, in the angle formed by the junction of the Reno and Limentra on the 1. Crossing the Reno and penetrating a spur of hills by the tunnel of Casale, 1½ m. long, the Rly. enters a picturesque amphitheatre surrounded by verdant hills, on the summit of which are seen, to the rt., ruins of mediæval towers. The Sella torrent, and afterwards the Reno, are crossed before arriving at 37 m. Porretta (fair buffet), a village of 3000 inhab., celebrated for its mineral waters and baths, which are much frequented in the summer months (1130 ft.).

The waters, 89° to 101° Fahr., issue from a sandstone rock of the cretaceous period; they contain a variable portion of sulphuretted hydrogen and carbonic acid gases, and in some localities so large a quantity of carburetted hydrogen as to make its collection profitable for lighting purposes. This application of natural gas was first made by an ingenious shoemaker, named Spiga; since which a part of the village has been lighted with it. Besides these gases, the waters contain muriate, bromate, and carbonate of soda, and a peculiar pseudo-organic matter. They are used both in the form of baths and internally, and are considered to be efficacious in chronic glandular obstructions, in rheumatism, paralysis, and nervous affections generally.

Monte Cardo, which rises behind the village, emits carburetted hydrogen from fissures in the sandstone, which ignite on the approach of a light, as in the case of the emanations of Pietramala and Barigazzo. (Rte. 108.)

Leaving Porretta, the Rly. passes through a short tunuel. The mineral spring of Porretta Vecchia (89° Fahr.) is situated in this defile, and is principally resorted to by drinkers. The valley then expands; woods of oak clothe the sides of the hills, the line ascending more rapidly. The Reno is crossed by the Ponte della Ven-Beyond this is a narrow turina. gorge of 10 m., in the course of which are passed thirteen short tunnels, the river being repeatedly crossed. The longest is the Galleria del Balone. The train then emerges into an amphitheatre of hills, in which is situated 46 m. Pracchis (2025 ft.), on the highest point of the line. During the journey from Bologna the Rly. has passed through 23 tunnels, having a total length of 6 m., and crossed the Reno 19 times.

[Carriage in 1] hr. to Gavinana (2500 ft.), a mountain village in a pleasant situation, with chestnut woods and fine air. 1 hr. further is San Maxcello (2100 ft.), | m. beyond which is the Villa Margherita, a favourite Pension in Summer. 7 m. from Pracchia is Cutigliano (2200 ft.,, on a projecting ledge which rises above the valley of the Lima. 3 hrs. further, in a splendid position on the summit of the ridge which divides Tuscany from Modens, is Abetone (4500 ft.), also called Boscolungo, much frequented during the summer months by English visitors who have spent the winter in Florence or Rome.

The train now penetrates the central ridge of the Apennines by a Tunnel nearly 11 m. in length (41 min.). After passing a third tunnel the viaduct of Piteccio is seen some 1200 ft. below. To reach this, the Rly, makes a circuit of 10 miles round the mountain, descending rapidly. On the S. slope of the line are 18 tunnels, two of them over 1 m. in length. On coming out of the sixth there is a fine view on the I. over the plains of Tuscany. The line continues to descend, sweeping round the mountain, and passing through a tunnel of 1162 yds. to

55 m. Pitoccio. The village is seen below in the valley of the Ombrone, and the Rly. is carried over one of \ the finest works of engineering on the | Bologue. line—a Viaduot, of 18 arches in 3 of the village. Two other lofty via- is Pietremals. About 14 m. E. ranges, high above the church tower ducts across ravines are passed. The tower on the hill to the rt, is moderate and built on the supposed site of the defeat of Catiline (B.C. 60). The Etc. now reaches the plain of the Ombroad skirts on the l. the beautiful grounds of the Villa Puccini, and soon passes under the medimval walls of 🕍 city to reach 61 m. Pistola Junet. (Buffet), for which, and for the remainder of the Rly. to 82 m. Florence, see Handbook for Central Raly.

ROUTE 108.

BOLOGNA TO FLORENCE, BY PIETRA-MALA AND THE PASS OF LA PUTA-CARRIAGE-ROAD.

This road across the central chair of the Apennines may be driven in about 18 hrs., but is now seldom cost by travellers. The scenery is often picturesque, but there are long reaches of bare uninteresting country, and the ascents are steep.

Leaving Bologna, the road sout enters the valley of the Savena, which it crosses, rising very gradually slong the rt. bank of the river, through t fertile district, and passing by the villages of Rastigniano and Musiano to 12 m. Pianoro, situated close to the Savena, The road now quits the river, and the ascent of the Apennius may be said to commence. ditional horses are required, with oxen for the very steep ascents. The are several fine points of view or the plains of Bologua and the valley of the Po.

24 m. Lojano. From this elevated spot is seen a long chain of dutast Alps, the vast plain of the Po and the cities of Mantus, Verous, Padas, and tramala is an interesting phenomenon, called "i Fuochi." It occurs in a very limited space at the base of Monte di Fo, and consists of emanations of inflammable gas. When ignited, the flames rise about a foot from the ground, and should be witnessed by night: they burn most brightly, and rise to a greater elevation in rainy or stormy weather. Round the orifices from which the gas issues, a carbonaceous deposit like soot is formed, as occurs in an ordinary gas-burner. Volta explained the phenomenon as being due to emanations of carburetted hydrogen (coal-gas) from the subjacent arenaceous rock, which contains vegetable remains. Similar phenomena are met with in other parts of the Apennines,—at Barigazzo, Porretta, &c. At Acqua Buja, 1 m. W. of Pietramala, a similar emanation of inflammable gas, passing through water, only becomes ignited on the approach of a light to the bubbles as they reach the surface.

32 m. Filigore (2040ft.). 3 ro. to

The road now skirts the base of Monte Beni (4080 ft.) and the Sasso di Castro (4135 ft.). The geologist will find much to interest him here. The mountains are formed of serpentine, which has broken through the subjacent cretaceous rocks.

40 m. Covigliajo, at the foot of Monte Beni. A further ascent brings us to the 44 m. Pass of La Futa (2987 ft.). From this pass, which in winter is at times impassable from snow, a rapid but well-managed descent leads to 51 m. Monte Carelli. The road now runs on the summit of a spur of the Apennines, before descending into the valley of the Sieve, celebrated in the history of the middle ages and in Italian poetry under the name of Val di Mugello. Hence a road on the rt. leads to (8 m.) Barberino, and thence to Prato and Pistoia.

55 m. Le Maschere, commanding a remarkable view. "It overlooks the brow of a mountain which, although covered with trees, is almost perpendicular; while on the plain far below lies the beautiful vale of Arno, bounded by a circle of magnificent hills, sometimes rising in acclivities, sometimes in polished knolls or bold promontories, cultivated to the very summit with the vine and olive, interspersed with fruit and forest trees, and thickly studded with villas, convents, and churches, presenting an aspect of extraordinary animation and beauty. Turning from the contemplation of this rich, lively, and cultivated landscape, to the bold country spread abroad among the Apennines behind, you behold a prospect finely contrasting Nature in all its most polished splendour with the wild and majestic grandeur of mountain scenery."—John The handsome villa here belongs to Count Gerini of Florence; it is reached by a fine avenue of trees from Le Maschere.

58 m. Cafaggiolo, on the rt. bank of the Sieve. A short distance beyond it the old road from Bologna to Florence, through Firenzuola and Scarperia, falls into our route. About 4 m. further we pass the village of Vaglia, on the Carza torrent, whose l. bank the road follows to Fontebuona. On an eminence on the l., surrounded by cypress plantations, is seen the Servite convent of Monte Senario, which forms so remarkable an object in the landscape N. of Florence. The large mediæval castle or Villa of Cafaggiolo, formerly a favourite residence of the Medici family, and often inhabited by Cosimo Pater Patriæ, has passed by purchase into the hands of Prince Borghese of Rome.

of m. Fontebuona. The ascent beyond is very steep. A short distance on the l. is Pratolino, once a favourite seat of the Grand Dukes of Tuscany, situated on the southern slopes of a hill, embosomed in fine trees. The villa, designed by Buontalenti, for Francesco de Medici, son of Cosimo I., to receive Biance Capello, has long been demolished. Besides the grottoes, fountains and labyrinths of Pratolino, there is a colossal monster, called the Statue of the Apennines, 60 ft. in height. The rapid descent hence to Florence, along an excellent road, is one of the most interesting drives in Europe. Every eminence is studded with villas. the country, rich in vineyards and olive-groves, seems literally "a land of oil and wine", cultivation appears in its highest perfection; the Etruscan fortress of Fiesole, with its Arx now occupied by the Franciscan Convent, rises magnificently over the opposite bank of the Mugnone, and Florence, with its domes, campaniles, and battlemented towers, bursts upon the view. This approach recalls the remark of Ariosto, that if all the villas which are scattered as if the soil produced them over the hills of the Val d'Arno were collected within one wall, two Romes could not vie with Florence (Rime, cap. xvi.).

72 m. FLORENCE is entered by the Porta San Gallo. (See Handbook for Central Italy.)

Fognano, an inconsiderable village on the l. bank of the river. The views of the Appenines, covered with woods of chestnut-trees, are very pleasing. The Lamone, here nearly dry during the summer months, is an impetuous and dangerous torrest in the rainy season. Following its l. bank, and afterwards crossing and recrossing the stream, we reach Marradi (2200), one of those strange Italian vi.lages only met with out of the high roads. Here the Rly ends. Dil. onward. The valley becomes very narrow; the precipices on each side merely allowing room for the river and the road.

t m. beyond Marradi, at La Biforca, the Lamone receives the Compigno torrent on the 1.; the road continues along the Lamone for 5 or 6 m., until it reaches Crespino, formerly the sent of a Vallombrosian monastery. Not far from it is the picturesque cascade of Valbura. From Casaglia commences the ascent of the central chain, which is crossed at 10 m. Casa di Alpe, or Casaglia (2980 ft.). The road now descends rapidly along the Razotta torrent to Puliciano on the Elsa, and from thence to 20 m. Borgo San Lorenzo (3500), situated on a fertile plain near the l. bank of the river, the principal town in the upper part of the valley of the Sieve, generally called the Mugdlo. Its Church, dedicated to San Lorenzo, is an edifice of the 13th cent., as appears from an inscription bearing the date 1263: the campanile is nearly a cent, later.

Rly. onward, passing Ban Piero, a large village near the confluence of the Carsa and Sieve. At Montorchi the Rly. turns E., approaching the N. slopes of Monte Senario. It then follows the course of the Mugnone through a deep glen, having on the L the hill on which the Etruscan arx of the ancient Fesule stood, and Monte Rinaldi, well known amongst Tuscan exchitects for quarries of building stone, on the rt. Emerging from this ravine, we pass on the l. the Ponte della Badia, so called from the neighbouring convent, founded by Cosimo dei Medici, and reach

FLORENCE TO FORLÌ, BY DICOMANO AND THE PASS OF S. BENEDETTO.—CAR-RIAGE-ROAD.

A pleasant drive of two days,

Leaving Florence, we follow the Rly. and the rt. bank of the Arno as far as

- 12 m. Pontassieve Stat. (see Hand-book for Central Italy, Rte. 7). Here our road strikes off N.E., leaving on the rt. the road to Vallombrosa, and ascends the valley of the Sieve to flammable gas, similar to those at Pietramala, near the hamlet of Querciolano on the l. of the road.
- 22 m. Dicomano, an old town, prettily situated at the junction of the Sieve and Dicomano torrents. The road now follows the river of San Godenzo, and the ascent becomes steep.

- on the rt. bank of the Montone; the most important town of Tuscan Romagna. S.E. runs a road across the pass of Le Forche to Galeata and (15 m.) Santa Sofia, in the upper valley of the Ronco. Our road continues along the Montone, between Monte Grosso on the rt. and Monte Torcello on the l. After 5 m., a good road strikes l. across the pass of Monte Trebbio to Modigliana, a very ancient town of 3000 inhab., probably the Castrum Mutilum of Livy.
- oastle. (Near this commence the Miocene deposits, which are seen forming precipices of almost horizontal strata behind the village; they rest on the Eocene limestones and marls forming the centre of the chain, and are succeeded by the Pliocene or sub-Apennine marls and sands which extend to the valley of the Po.)
- Salsubium—celebrated for its mineral waters, which issue from the Miocene beds, and contain iodine. They have proved efficacious in glandular and scrofulous, affections. Castro Caro has a picturesque mediæval Castle, on a mass of marine breccia or Panchino, which rises precipitously above the town.

The old road was much frequented in the middle ages by persons going to Rome from countries beyond the Alpst hence the names then given to it of Strada Francesca and Romea. Berceto, a picturesque ancient town in the midst of the mountains. The church is Gothic; the piazza, fountain, and the whole scene around, are Here the Rly. for the present comes to an end, and the traveller goes forward by diligence or carriage. Pontremoli (3400), derives its name probably from a shaky bridge over the Magra (Pons tremulus). the traveller finds himself amongst a new race, and many buildings have a distinct character. Situated triangle formed by the junction of the Magra and Verde torrents, Pontremoli consists of an upper and lower town, the former surrounded by massive and picturesque fortifications. As the key to one of the most frequented passes of the chain between Tuscany and Lombardy, it has repeatedly changed masters. Some of the old towers were raised in 1322 by Castruccio, the lord of Lucca; others by the Genoese, when they held possession of the Lunigiana. Pontremoli also belonged for a time to Milan, as the armorial bearings of the Sforza princes show. The lower town has a more modern aspect; the Duomo, unfinished, was begun in 1620. The Annunziata in the S. suburb was built in 1471; within stands a small octagonal temple of white marble and good workmanship.

The Rly. descends the l. bank of the Magra, passing several ruined castles,

Filattiera, with an old Castle of the Malaspina family, the feudal lords of the Lunigiana. At Villafranca the Bagnone torrent flows in from the N.

ROUTE 121.

NICE TO GENOA, BY SEA.

Fraissinet and Co. run steamers once a week in about 9 hrs. (95 m.). They are chiefly for cargo, but have tolerable accommodation for passengers. The voyage is very agreeable in fine weather.

The boats usually hug the land, off which the wind blows during the winter season, passing close to the Cape of Villefranche with its lighthouse, and crossing the Bay of Beaulieu, during which the views of Eza, Roccabruna, and Monaco are very fine. The Cape of San Martino is then passed, and beyond it Mentone, separated from Ventinigha by a low sandy beach and escarped cliff, beyond which, on the hills, are seen several picturesquely situated villages. Mortols is the first village beyond the Italian frontier, in the midst of an olive grove; Bordighers may be recognised by its plantations of palm- is the Capadelle Male, surmounted by trees. A high cape beyond shuts in a lighthouse, the only one between Remo, the principal hotels of Villafranca and Genes. The town which are seen along the beach; the Laigueglia and Alassio, the island whole country behind forming a vast amphitheatre covered with olivegroves, and these higher up capped with vines. The mediaval town of San Remo is on the hill-side, the modern one on the shore at its base. Some way beyond we round the Capo Verde, with its Church; then the hamlet of Torre delle Armi, with a square tower and the wide valley of Taggia. Beyond is the fishing village of S. Lorenzo, from which the Rly, skirts the shore to Parte Maurizio, on a high promontory, forming a very picturesque headland. Its little port, where the steamers sometimes stop, as well as the neighbouring one of Oneglia, are protected from S.E. winds and seas by artificial Beyond Oneglia we pass close under the headland which separates the valleys of Oneglia and Diano, in which are the villages of Diano Marina on the shore, Diano Costello on a till to the l. inland, and Cervo, with a large Renaissance Church. On the K.

Gallinaria, and Albenga—easily recognised by its red towers—Loano, and Finale, are successively passed before coming abreast of the Capo di Noli. Beyond are Noli, Spotorno, the island of Bergeggi, Vado, and Savona.

Beyond Savona numerous villages are passed, the coast becoming more thickly inhabited; the principal towns being Albissola, Varazze, Cogoleto, and Arenzano, all thriving maritime localities, before reaching Voltri. Beyond it the steamer passes before Pegli and its beautiful valley, Cornigliano, and San Pier & Arena, before rounding the lighthouse point, from which the view of the city of Genoa is magnificent.

One of the greatest drawbacks to this voyage is the confusion on landing. The tariff for boats, including a moderate quantity of luggage, is 1 fr. The custom-house officers are civil; 1 fr. will be ample remuneration for the porters who carry luggage to the Stat. or hotels. Persons proceeding to Spezia and Leghorn on the day of arrival may have their luggage transferred to the steamers for these ports, which will avoid all trouble and expense of landing, and perhaps custom-house visits.

N.B. For a detailed description of this Route as far as the French frontier, including Nice, Monaco, Turbia, and Mentone, see Handbook for France, Part II.

The great majority of travellers naturally make use of the Rly. along the coast, although, from its low level and the numerous tunnels, they thus lose much of the delightful scenery. It is hardly worth while to drive the whole of the way from Nice to Genoa: but between Nice and Mentone, and between San Remo and Savona, the from the carriage-road are magnificent. From Nice to Mentone there are two roads; one over the mountains by Turbia, having splendid scenery all the way; the other by the sea, through Villefranche and Monte Carlo, commanding exquisite views from a lower level. From San Remo to Alassio is a drive of 5 hrs., halting at Porto Maurizio and Oneglia. From Alassio to Savona, about 7 hrs. stopping at Albenga and Finalmarina. Good light landaus with two horses can be hired at Nice or San Remo for 50 frs. a day, and 5 frs. to the coachman.

Nice (67,000) is fully described in .

the Handbook for France.

Persons having only a few hours to spare should at least visit the Public Garden and the Promenade des Anglais. They should also ascend to the Château, standing between the town and the port. A winding carriageroad leads to the top, whence there is an admirable view of the mountains and sea-coast as far as the promontory of Antibes. Nice is deserted by strangers, and most of the hotels are closed, from the middle of April to middle of October.

On leaving Nice, the Rly. traverses long tunnel under the limestone hill of Montboron, emerging on the beautiful bay of Villefranche, and after passing through a low athmus at the base of the chiffs, runs along the seashore to

9 m. Monaco (2500). The Rly. Stat. is at Condamine, in a depression between the town on the rock and the notorious gambling establishment of Monaco, which has a station of its own at 10 m. Monte Carlo. Lift from the Stat. to the garden-terrace in front of the Casino (25 c.). Concerts daily at 2,30 and 8. The line now runs through a lovely district, with vines, olive and carouba-trees, leaving the green Cape of S. Martino on the rt, before reaching 15 m. Mentone (11,200), lining the margin of a wide bay, which is divided into two parts by the steep and dirty Old Town (130 ft.). 2 m further, at the Pont St. Louis, the carriage-road crosses the frontier. Near the bridge on the Italian side, and a little below the road, are some caverns, in which have been found the remains of extinct quadrupeds, fint implements, and in one, old human skeletons. The carriage-road makes a long ascent over the promontory. At Mortola it passes through a fort on the edge of the cliff, The fort above the town, with the approaches on the W., forms a frontier defence on the Italian side.

and cuttings, and crosses the Roja, which descends from the Col di Tenda (Rite. 9) before reaching 22 m. Ventimiglia (Buffet). Both the Italian and the French Custom Houses are at the Station, and here luggage is examined in either direction. There is a stoppage of about an hour: money can be exchanged at the Station, and travellers go forward by The Rly, time is also another train changed, Paris time giving way to Roman time; the latter being 41 min. in advance of the former; that is to say, 3 o'clock Parıs time is 3 k 41 min. Roman.

Ventimiglia (6500) is the ancient Albium Intermelium, and the capital of the Intermelia, a Ligurian tribe. The Roman town stood on the low ground now occupied by the delta of the Nervia. From its position on the brow of a hill commanding the road along the sea-coast, Ventunglia has always been an important inditary position, and its possession was much contested in the middle ages by the Genoese, the Counts of Provence, and the Dukes of Savoy. Before the French Revolution it formed the freetier town of Piedmont. It boasts of having had St. Barnabas for its first bishop.

The Cathedral is an old basilies with a modernised nave and good choir; the principal entrance is a good specimen of the Gothic peculiar to the Riviera. In the Romaneeque Church of St. Michael, having good crypt, are two Roman milestones found here, one bearing the number DXC., and inscriptions of the reigns of Augustus and Antonina

On the rt., about a mile beyond the Stat., are some ruins of a Roman Theatre.

A sandy flat is now traversed, and the Rly, crosses the Nervia by an elegant stone bridge, approached by an elevated causeway. an elevated causeway. N. of Dolce Acqua is Isola Buona (1200), with paper mills and cold sulphurous springs. 4 m. further is Pigna, with a good stained-glass window and some 15th-cent, frescoes. Above it is a sulphurous spring (80° Fahr.), with Baths.] A flat sandy plain, formed by the detritus of the neighbouring sandstone (tertiary) hills which extend from Ventimigha, is followed nearly as far as 25 m. Bordighera (2800), a favourite winter resort for invalids. Its aspect is S.S.W., which gives it more evening sun in winter than San Remo, and it is well sheltered from the N. and There are numerous charming excursions in the neighbourhood. Here the date-palm is extensively cultivated, not in single specimens, but in large groves; and these trees, said to have been introduced by a community of Dominican friars, conturies ago, give an oriental aspect to the country around. Some of them are bound up or swathed at their summite, in order to prevent their leaves becoming green, as they are required for the Church ceremonies of Palm Sunday. The inhabitants of Bordighera possess the privilege of furnishing them for this purpose to the Chapter of St. Peter's. This exclusive right is said to have been accorded by Sixtus V. to reward the ingenious suggestion of a sailor from this place, during the erection of the great obelisk of the Vatican, who, seeing all offorts unavailing to raise the column when it had reached a certain height, called out to wet the cables (in spite of the prohibition against speaking enforced by a penalty), by which the desired effect, well known to all seafaring people, was instantly procured, of shortening and tightening them. The best Palm-groves lie opposite the E. side of Capo S. Ampeglio. 1 m. further E. is the Chapel of the Madonna della Ruota, with an Annunciation in alabaster. ‡ m. beyond is a sulphurous spring (70° Fahr.).

29 m. Ospedaletti. 1 hr. N.N.E. on a steep hill stands La Colla, with a Library of 6000 vols., and a small Picture Galler, bequeathed by Padre Rambaldi (1803-1865).—Portrait of Card. Leopoldo dei Medici, and a Bey's Head, both by Sustermans. Virgin and Child, by Lorenzo di Credi. Holy Family, by Fra Bartolommeo. The remaining pictures with great names appear to be copies.

32 m. San Remo (16,000), a flourishing, and thoroughly Italian town, the chief place of the province, is picturesquely situated on a declivity descending to the sea-shore, covered by a thick wood of olive-trees. The streets which climb the hill, at right angles to the sea, are narrow, tortuous and steep, arched over and crossed by buttresses of masonry, and extremely picturesque. In the neighbourhood there are numerous carriage-roads. which afford pleasant drives. An aqueduct brings fresh water in iron pipes from the springs at Badalucco. The principal Church is very ancient, and in the ordinary Gothic style of the country. Near San Siro is a Hospital for Lepers, The Villa Zirio, above the Corso di Levante, E. of the town, was the residence of the Crown Prince Frederic from Nov. 3, 1887, to Mar. 10, 1888. There are two English Churches. and a Presbyterian Church, in stone and terra-cotta.

4 m. E. is the Church of the Madonna della Guardia on Capo Verde. *Magnificent panoramic view.

7 m. N. is Ceriana, which has a very Eastern look. (Carriage there and back, 14 or 20 fr.) 2 hrs. N.N.W. is the village of S. Romolo (1700 ft.), at the foot of Monte Bignone (4300 ft.), which may be ascended thence on foot or on donkeys in 3 hrs. A very pleasant walk may be taken W. along the shore to (3 m.) Capo Nero,

San Remo is much frequented as a winter residence. An absence of the cutting winds which occur sometimes at Nice, and a freer circulation of six than at Mentone, give it certain advantages over both. The chimate is, softer than at the former place, and more bracing than at the latter.

The Rly, and high-road continue along the beach through Arma, with an old square castle at the entrance of the village.

27 m. Taggia (5000), the residence of Giov. Ruffini (Dr. Antonio). The village hes 3 m. up the valley. ½ hr. E. is Castellars.

39 m. S. Stefano, a fishing-village lying along the beach, on which a heavy surf usually breaks.

41 m. San Lorenzo, beyond which is a tunnel through the lowest part of the promontory, on which stands

46 m Porto Maurizio (8000), one of the most characteristic towns of the Riviera, standing on a high promontory projecting boldly into the sea, and overlooking its little tranquil port, generally crowded with the picturesque coasting vessels of the Mediterranean. The Church, a handsome building, with a portice of Corinthian columns in two rows, was erected at the sole cost of the late Marchese Brignole Sale of Genoa, the owner of a large estate here. The neighbourhood produces much oil.

48 m. Oneglia (Buffet). The town (8000) was bombarded and burnt by the French under Admiral Truguet in 1792. Andrea Doria, the great Genoese admiral, was born here in 1468. In the autumn the fronts of the houses are often seen hung with the inflated pig-skins in which the wine is kept. A wire Suspension Bridge, with piers of white marble, crosses the Impero torrent at the entrance to the town. (Toll for carriages 21 frs.). Oneglia, together with Porto Maurizio and Diano, suffered severely from the earthquake of 1883. A road runs N. to (45 m.) Ceva (Rte. 6).

A long tunnel leads to

53 m. Cervo, on a hill overlooking the road, with a large Renaissance church.

56 m. Andora. After crossing the Merula, on the l. is the haunted Castle of Andora, a ruin. Here, it in said, a Papal Nuncio was murdered, and the curse pronounced in consquence has depopulated the adjoining territory. Beyond this the promottory of Mele is passed by a long tunnel.

58 m. Laigueglia, where Gallinam, a pudding-shaped island, and Capo di Noli come into view.

60 m. Alaszio (5000), a place of some commercial activity, and a winter resort. favourite | English gentlemen have built ville here, some of which are surrounded by beautiful gardens, In summer Alassio is a favourite bathing-plan with the Italians, the shore having two miles of fine hard sand. There is an English Church open for service in the winter. Fine view from the Madonna della Guardia.

Alassio is said to derive its name from Alassia, a daughter of the Emperor Otho the Great, who fled to the forests in this part of the Riviers with her betrothed Aleramo.

After a short tunnel under the Capo di Santa Croce, the island of Gallinara is passed about 1 m. from the shore. Its name is said by Vario and Columella to have arisen from its containing a particular species of domestic fowls; which so multiplied as to overrun the island.

Here opens out the beautiful and fertile valley of Albenga. It is watered by the river Centa, one of the few streams of the Riviera which are perennial, 4 m. 2 m. further is San Fedele, with a ruined feudal castle, and 2 m. beyond it Villanuova, a very curious but deserted old town, surrounded by mediæval fortifications. From hence, passing over a marshy plain, frequently overflowed by torrents, we reach

5 m. Garlenda. In the Church is the Martyrdom of St. Erasmus, by Poussin, well painted, though the subject is disgusting. The Virgin and Child, between St. Benedict and St. Maur, by Domenichino, is painted with great delicacy and sweetness. It was proposed to sell it for 20,000 fr., and to purchase an organ, and otherwise embellish the Church, but the peasantry rose en masse and prevented the completion of the bargain. From Garlenda to Albenga direct, 8 m.]

64 m. ALBENGA (4200), chief town of the district. Both within and without, the aspect of this ancient metropolis of a Republic which was of sufficient importance to be courted as an ally by Carthage is very striking. Three lofty brick towers, besides smaller structures of the same nature, frown over its narrow streets in all the sternness of the feudal ages. these, the loftiest is the Torre del Marchese Mulaspina, in front which, at the basement, are three lions couchant. The second is the Torre dei Guelfi. The third is annexed to the Casa del Comune. These towers derive much of their effect from their bold machicolations and battlements. They have the aspect of castles of romance; and here Madame de Genlis has localised her story of the Duchess of Cerifalco, immured nine long years in a dungeon by her barbarous husband.

The Cathedral is an ancient Gothic building: over the doorways are some reliefs, exhibiting knots and imagery N. Italy.

of a Runic character. The interior is modernised. The Baptistery is an octangular building of the 9th or 10th cent., supported within by Corinthian pillars. It contains early Christian mosaics, with a curious recessed monument enclosing a sarcophagus.

Albenga is one of the unhealthy spots of the Riviera. The frequent inundations of the Centa rendered the ground about it marshy; and the insalubrity was increased by numerous flax-steeping grounds. These, however, are now confined to the vicinity of the sea, at some distance from the town.

Albenga was occupied by the French in 1794, and became the centre of their military operations; and in 1796 Napoleon made it his headquarters. In 1797 it formed a part of the Ligurian republic, an incorporation which terminated its independent political existence; for, although previously subjected to the supremacy of Genoa, Albenga had continued to be governed by its own magistrates and laws.

A Bath and other Roman antiquities have been discovered in and about Albenga; and the Ponte Lungo, ½ m. E. on the road to Genoa, is of Roman construction, at least in the piers. It was built by the Emperor Honorius.

The Rly. regains the shore and skirts it to 69 m. Borghetto Santo Spirito. 2 m. inland lies Toirano. The cave of Sta. Lucia in the adjoining hill is filled with stalactites, and beautiful of its kind; one of its recesses is fitted up as a chapel.

70 m. Loano (3800), the principal fief of Luigi Fieschi, so celebrated for his unsuccessful conspiracy. Loano was the scene of the first victory of the French Republicans in Italy, 24th Nov., 1795, when Scherer and Massena defeated the Austrians with great loss.

71 m. Pietraligure (1000). The Rly. pierces the Headland of Capra coppa (lame goat) by a tunnel.

73 m. Borgio Verezzi. The village is on the hill to the l., and above it are four little villages and a church, all close together, but quite distinct.

m. Finalmarina (2000), the capital of a marquisate, which anciently belonged to the family of Del Caretto. Towards the end of the 15th cent. the town, passing to the kings of Spain, was strongly fortified, and the ruins of their numerous forts are still seen upon the heights. The Genoese, after a series of contests, acquired the marquisate by purchase in 1713, from the Emperor Charles VI. The principal Church of St. John Baptist, richly decorated in gold and colours, was designed by Bernini. 10 min. inland is Finale Borgo (3800), whose Church of S. Biagio, in part ancient, contains a curious marble pulpit and a monument to Cardinal del Caretto. On the heights above is the Castello Gavone, a picturesque ruin with a fine view. One of the towers is fronted with stone cut in facettes. E. of the Marina is Finale Pia, with an old Lombard Church tower.

The Rly. now passes through several tunnels, the last of which pierces the Capo di Noli.

80 m. Noli (1000), picturesque from its brick towers, and wall mounting a hill to the Castle above the town. Like Albenga, it was a republic, and preserved its own government under the Genoese, until both were devoured by their Gallic invaders. The 11th-cent. Church is near the Stat.

82 m. Spotorno, from which is seen towards the E., near the shore, the rocky little Isola di Bergeggi, now uninhabited, with some ruins of an abbey and a castle.

84 m. Bergeggi. At the foot of the cliff is a stalactitic cavern. A tunnel pierces the Capo di Vado, on the top of which is a fort. Beyond it is gained a very fine view of the bay, with Savona and Genoa.

Vada Sabatia, some ruins of which were discovered near the parish Church.

90 m. SAVONA Junct. (Buffet), a flourishing city (20,000), the third on the Riviera, Genoa being the first, and Nice the second. The town has been modernized by the construction of handsome arcaded streets, lined with huge blocks of houses. Large quantities of pottery are made here. Savona, Mago the Carthaginian deposited his spoils after the capture of Genoa. The acropolis of the Ligurian city stood on the Rupe San Giorgia, now occupied by a Fort. The once ample port is small and shallow, having been spoiled by the Genoese in 1528. They blocked it up by sinking hulks filled with stones, and the deposit of sand and silt did the Here is considerable ship-building activity, vessels of 1000 tons being frequently seen in construction.

The Cathedral was built in 1604, an older and more curious structure having been demolished to make way for the fortifications. This former cathedral had been enriched by Pope Julius II. (Giulio della Rovere), who, born at Albissola close by, was bishop of this see at the time of his election to the Papal dignity. Some of the ornaments of the present cathedral are his gifts, having been saved from the demolished structure; as, for example, the admirably *inlaid and carved stalls of the Choir. The frace of the Madonna della Colonna, by Robertelli, is so called because it was painted on a pillar in the ancient Duomo, from which it was ingeniously detached, and placed in its present situation. In the 1st chapel rt. is an Assumption, with the Nativity, and SS. Catharine, Peter, and Francis, by Lodovico Brea. On the frame are the canting arms of the house of Rovere —an oak-tree, surmounted by the cardinal's hat. It was the gift of Pope Julius; and as almost every picture in Italy has its story, it is said with respect to this, that Julius Angelo with a halter, or something as bad, because he did not paint fast enough, employed seven painters upon this work, in order to get it soon out of hand. Several of the altars on this side have handsome marbles. the transepts are modern paintings of There is a curious painted and gilt relief of the Assumption in the N. transept, brought from the old Duomo. In the 4th chapel l. are some fine intersia panels. The Font is scooped out of an elaborately carved square capital. Close by is a rich Byzantine Crucifix. Beside cathedral stands the Sistine Chapel, founded by Sixtus IV., uncle of Julius II., as a place of sepulture for the Rovere family. His father was but a poor fisherman, though of noble descent. In the N. porch of the Cathedral there is an Inscription in his honour (1477).

In the church of S. Domenico is an Adoration attributed to Albert Dürer, and a Nativity, by Antonio Semini (1st Chapel l.). In the cloister is a bust to the memory of Chiabrera, one of the best Italian poets of the 17th cent., beneath which is an inscription written by Pope Urban VIII. Chiabrera was born here, and the place is full of reminiscences of him. Wordsworth translated some of his pieces. His villa is near the Church of San Giacomo, in which he was buried. The house in which he was born has the motto chosen by himself: Nihil A handsome ex omni parte beatum. Theatre was erected to his memory in 1853.

At the Ospedale is a small Pinacoteca.—Ant. Semini (1500), Nativity with St. Francis and a Bishop. Giov. Mazone (1400), Nativity with S. Bernardino; Annunciation with Saints. Giottesque, Virgin and Child on wood. Donatello, relief of Virgin and Child.

In the Madonna di Castello is a good painting by Foppa, and in S. Giovanni (Scuola dei Poveri) a Nativity by Brizio, a Carmelite friar.

One of the towers of the port is decorated by a colossal statue of the Virgin, beneath which, in large characters, is engraved the following inscription:—

In mare irato, in subita procella Invoco te, nostra benigna stella.

It is part of a popular hymn sung by the sailors and fishermen on this coast.

No. 56 in the Via Pia is the house in which Pius VII. was a prisoner. It bears a Latin couplet with the date 1809.

Parallel with the Port runs the Via Quarda Superiore, with several interesting staircases and doorways.

The Poet Wordsworth wrote of the neighbourhood: "There is not a single bay along this beautiful coast that might not raise in a traveller a wish to take up his abode there; each as it succeeds seems more inviting than the other; but the desolated convent on the cliff in the bay of Savona struck my fancy most."

Rly. W. to San Giuseppe di Cairo (Rte. 6), for Turin or Alessandria, passing (4 m.) Santuario, so-called from the Pilgrimage Church of the Mudonna della Misericordia, worth a visit for its singular and picturesque situation. The Church is built on the spot where a miraculous appearance of the Madonna is said to have taken place in 1536; and, though of such recent origin, the devotion of the Riviera so increased its treasures, that they were thought only second to those of Loreto. The greater part of these disappeared under the French; but the Sanctuary has been replenished, particularly by a crown of silver studded with gems, placed on the head of the image by Pope Pius VII. He was kept a prisoner at Savona by Napoleon I., and his desk broken open to steal from it the ring of St. Peter. Marino and Chiabrerain poetry, and Bernardo Castello in painting, exercised their talents in honour of this sanctuary. The Church is lined with marble, and filled with faded paintings of Castello, containing nearly the whole life, legendary as well as scriptural, of the Virgin. The Presentation of the Virgin is by DoElisabeth and the Virgin, by Remini.

Leaving Savona, the Rly, runs inland through tinnels, coming out at Albissola. The town is at the opening of a pleasant valley, and stretches along the shore. Albissola Superiore, 1 m. inland, contains a palace of the in which Pepe Jul. is was born, though Church of the Madonna della Concordin are some good paintings by Fiasella and Ansaldo.

Along this part of the Riviera may be seen villas, sometimes high above the road, sometimes on its level, with their gardens gay with bowers, terraces, trellis walks, and the brightest profusion of trees and shrubs and flowers. These gardens are generally in the old-fashioned, regular style, and are mostly entered by a lefty gate, once surmounted by armorial bearings.

95 m Celle. In the Church of St. Michael is a picture of the Archangel, by Pierino del Vaga, painted by him in fulfilment of a vow made during a storm.

The Villa Doria was built by Canzio for Adamo Centurione, one of the richest merchants of Genoa, in the time of Charles V. When the emperor was preparing for his expedition, his treasurer borrowed 200,000 crowns from Centurione, who immediately paid over the amount in ready money, and then forthwith sent a receipt in full to Charles V., who cast it into the flames. similar story is told of the Fuggers of Augsburg.

Behind it rises the hill of La Madonna del Gazo, crowned by a chapel, with a colossal statue of the Virgin. *Magnificent view. The Villa Serra, with its terraces and hanging gardens, is striking. The monastery of Sant' Andrea is now the Villa Vivaldi.

114 m. Cornigliano, a flourishing town with extensive manufactures of printed calicoes. The Palazzo Serra has a fine elevation. On the height above is the Church of Santa Maria Incoronata, which contains a Holy Family, by Pierino del Vaga, of great sweetness, but in a bad condition. Below this is an oratory attached to a convent, with some frescoes of merit; the ceiling is attributed to P. del Vaga. In the neighbourhood is a large Convalescent Home, founded by the Duchess of Galliera.

The Polcevera, which descends from the Apennines near the great tunnel (Rte. 11), is crossed by a bridge built at the expense of the Durazzo family. Here Masséna signed his capitulation with Lord Keith and the Austrians for the surrender of Genoa, in June

Genoa is the chief outlet on the Mediterranean for the manufacturers of Switzerland, Lombardy, and Piedmont; and they import many foreign articles cotton, sugar, &c. through it. About 12 000 sailing vessels and steamers, with an average of 500 tous each, enter the harbour annually. The trade of Genoa has doubled itself within the last 10 years, the annual imports being now valued at 16 millions and the exports at 4 millions sterl ug. As a proof of the increased activity of the Port may be cited the necessity of piercing the Apennines at Busalla with a second tunnel, the traffic on the angle line having become wholly unmanageable.

The deep and extensive harbour is protected by two moles. It is somewhat exposed to the S.E. wind and to the heavy swell which follows gales from that quarter; but is protected generally by a series of moles and piers, and has been furnished with commodius basins, at a cost of 1 million sterling, of which two thirds were contributed by a legacy of the late Duke of Galliera. Genoa is now one of the first commercial norts in the Mediterranean, and a formidable rival to Marseilles, especially since the enlargement of accommodation for the mercantile matine, by the removal of the naval arsenal to Spena.

Manufacturers of silks, velvets, damasks, thrown silks, paper, soap, and the usual trades of a scaport town, employ many of the inhabi-

The lighthouse should be ascended (1 fr.) for its extensive *view and interesting reflectors, which are visible 20 m. to seaward. Close to the foot of the lighthouse is the quarantine establishment. On the N. side of the harbour is the Darsena (dockyard and arsenal) established in 1276; cost being furnished out of the spoils taken by Tommaso Spinola. in 1861, the Italian Government made Spezia the principal naval depôt, and the activity which used to reign here has in consequence declined.

The city has been repeatedly increased in size, and its walls as often enlarged. The first modern fortifications were erected in 935 near the Stat. of Santa Limbania, on the Steam Tramway to Voltri. In 1155 the Genoese raised another circuit, for the purpose of resisting the threatened attacks of Frederick Barbarossa. Some of the gates are yet standing. Such is the *Porta Vacca, a fine and lofty arch between two towers, leading into the Via del Campo (B. 4).

Another circuit was begun in 1327. In this many of the previous suburbs were included. The ramparts afford agreeable promenades, and are connected on the E. with the Acquasola Garden.

The 3rd circuit, at a considerable distance from the 2nd, encircles all the heights that immediately command the town and harbour, and forms an immense triangle. It is strengthened at different points by stronger works in the form of forts, such as the great citadel of Sperone (1650 ft.) 4 m. due N. of the town. An extensive system of detached redoubts has been added on every peak from which the city or its defences can be threatened. place has thus been rendered very

Within these walls Massena sustained the famous mege of 1800. The city was invested on the land side by the Austrian troops, whilst the British fleet under Lord Keith, blocksded the port. Massena was at length starved out, and he evacuated the city on the 4th of June, 1800, after a blockade of 60 days, during which the garrison and mhabitants suffered the greatest misery from famine. Of the 7000 troops under Masséna, only 2-0 were ht for service when they surrendered. The number of the mhabitants who died of the famme, or of disease produced by it, exceeded 15,000. The present garrison amounts to 7000 men, but treble that number would be necessary to man its works in the event of a siege by any great continental power.

An interesting walk of 10 m. may be taken round the fortifications, following the road on the inner side, from the Lanterna (C. 1) to the Forte dello Sperone, passing a chain of Forts on the way. The road, which commands fine prospects over the town and hart our, and afterwards overlooks the eneuroling valleys of the P. leevera and Bisaguo torrents, re-enters Genoa by the iron bridge over the latter stream (D. 6).

The *Via di Circonvaliazione, a fine road winding at a high level between the Piuzza Munin (B. 6) and the Albergo dei Poveri (A. 4), affords a charming walk or drive. The road finally descends to the Piazza Annun-

The streets in the older parts of the town are very steep, and often inaccessible to wheel carriages; nor are the smaller vicoli convenient for footpassengers. Thence S., bearing sites wards S. W., to S. Muria di Cariguna, for the sake of the view from the cupola.

Retarming to S. Stefano, and passing its E. end on the l., we reach the *Acquasola Garden, and cross the gay and planted Putzet Corrette to the Villetta di Negre. From the Piazza the broad Vis Roma, with the Galleria Mazzini on its l., runs down to the Piazza Deferrira, from which tarning rt. at a sharp angle into the Via Carlo Felice, we reach the Via Nuova and its prolongations with the string of Palaces, of which the I data Rosso, recognised by its real co-mr. in the most important. Then follows the Annunziata, at the entrance to the Via Balbi. In this street will be seen (rt.), the *Durazzo Palace and (h) the *Balba, and further on the Palazzo Reale At the W. end of the Via Balbi is the Peazza Acquainth with the monument to Columbus, the Rly. The monument consists of a huge square pediment, at the corners of which are seated figures of Geography, Discretion, Steadfastness, and Religion; higher up is a circular pedestal decorated with prows of galleys, on which stands a marble group of Columbus and a woman representing America. On the pediment below are four reliefs, representing events in the life of Columbus. The inscription is in excellent taste; it is simply "A Cristoforo Colombo la Patria." The Italians are naturally proud of the discoverer of America, although they took no part in his voyages; and there is usually to be seen in the harbour some vessel bearing the illustrious navigator's name. In the Piazza Corvetto is a bronze equestrian of Victor Emanuel, Barzaghi, erected in 1886; and at the foot of the Villa di Negro a marble Statue of MAZZINI, by Costa.

The *Via degli Orefici (B. 4) strikes through the heart of the old part of the city, and derives its name from the traders who inhabit it. the revolution the goldsmiths formed a guild or company, possessing many privileges and possessions, all of which are lost. One relic they yet preserve -a picture of the Virgin and Children, with St. Eloy, patron saint of the smith' craft, whether in gold, silver, or iron. It is upon stone, framed and glazed, at No. 131 in the goldsmiths' street, and surmounted by a wrought canopy. It is attributed to Pellegro Piola (1607-30), and is said to have excited so much envy on the part of his master, Castello, that he caused his pupil to be assassinated. When Napoleon was here, he desired much to remove this picture to the Louvre. "We cannot oppose you by force," said the goldsmiths, "but we will never surrender it;" and accordingly he yielded, and the picture remains.

The goldsmiths of Genoa excel in a beautiful fine Filigree, of silver, or silver gilt, which they work into lets, wreaths, and other articles, principally designed for female ornaments. They sell them by weight, at a price about 15 per cent. above the value of the metal. These ornaments are very pretty, and are hardly to be procured out of Genoa. Over a door on the rt. (No. 128), ascending from the Port, is a 15th cent. *relief of the Adoration of the Magi.

Public Promenades.—The *Acquasola, a garden-grove, on the old fortifications, is a favourite resort of all classes. Military band three times a week, in summer from 7-9 P.M., in winter from 2-4. At one side is the large Caffè d'Italia, with a tower which commands a good view. The Palazzo Peschiera to the N.E. is the 'Pink Gaol, occupied by Charles Dickens during the winter of 1844-5. Christmas Story of 'The Chimes' was written in it. N.W. of the Acquasola is the Villetta di Negro. From its more elevated position, it enjoys a still finer and more extensive view. The garden has been laid out and planted, and the Casino in the centre rebuilt as a Museum, in which are the geological Collections of the late Marchese Lorenzo Pareto, the zoological ones of Marchese Giacomo Doria, Beccari, Antinori, and D'Albertis, the traveller in New Guinea, with others formed by the late Duke of Genoa, great-uncle of the present King.

The Villa Scoglietto (A. 2), belonging to Signor Rosazza, has a beautiful garden, with an admirable view (1 fr.).

CHURCHES.

The *CATHEDRAL of San Lorenzo (C.4) was constructed in the 14th cent., but the doorways and other details of the previous building, erected in the 11th cent., were preserved, and used up as materials. The triple *W. doorway is transition work of about 1205. The N. and S. doorways also belonged to the earlier edifice, but have been much altered in the rebuilding, and fresh shafts or colonnettes were added to the outside of the S. doorway in 1311. The N. doorway was rebuilt in 1621.

There are traces in this edifice of the taste which prevailed at Pisa and Lucca. Some of the columns of the portal were taken from Tortosa and Almeria, as part of the spoil won at the capture of those cities in 1148, Two of them are twisted palm-trinks. Among the vestiges of an early period are the curious ornaments on the N, exhibiting monsters and Rume knots, and some rude reliefs encrusted in the outer walls. Over the principal entrance is a relief of the Martyrdom of St. Lawrence, with some quaint figures of the 13th or 14th cent.; and several parts of the outer walls are Pagan reliefs, which formed the front of Roman sarcophage The lions of Carrara marble were placed at the W. front when the steps leading to it were restored. The handsome S. tower dates from the early part of the 16th cent., that on the N. being unfinished. The cupola was erected by Alessi in 1567,

The Nave (1307-12) is preceded by an elegant inner Cotnic porch with a groined roof, formed of alternate courses of black and white marble; over this porch is a gallery for the Doge when he came to hear mass. The nave is separated from the aisles by Cornthian columns supporting nine pointed arches of brown Polcevera serpentine; upon these arches rests an entablature with a long inscription in Gothio characters, over which rises a second tier of round arches. There is no triforium, properly speaking, the walls of the arches being continued to the roof without an intermediate floor. The clerestory is pierced by mean square modern windows Against the N. door is a fine Gothic Tomb.

In the chapel at the end of the M. aisle is a Crucifixion with Sebastics and other Saints, by Baroccio, a good work, with all the painter's faults of prettiness. The Choir has beautifully carved stalls, with backs of coloured intarsia-work. On the ceiling a a large fresco, the Martyrdom of L. Lorenzo, by Teverone. The ancient manuscript chair-books are fine volumes of their kind. At the Palkevicini Chapel on the l, is a detached saders and their allies divided the booty; and the Genoese, under the command of Guglielmo Embriaco, selected this precious vessel as their portion. No stranger was allowed to touch the Catino, under heavy penalties: and the attempt to try the material by any test of its genuineness or hardness was punishable with fines, imprisonment, or even death. and sceptical travellers, as Keysler and the Abbé Barthélemy, in spite of these precautions, saw enough to lead them to suppose that the Catino was glass, which is now fully confirmed. But the perfection of the material, as well as of the workmanship, must always cause it to be considered as very remarkable monument, remote antiquity. The dish is hexagonal, with some slight ornaments, which appear to have been finished with the tool, as in gem engraving. The colour is beautiful, the transparency perfect; but a few air bubbles sufficiently disclose the substance of which it is made. The Catino was sent to Paris; and when reclaimed was so carelessly packed that it broke The fragments have by the way. been united by a setting of gold fili-The keys of the cabinet are kept in the Palazzo Municipale (fee, 5 fr.). Another valuable relic is the Cassone di San Giovanni, a shrine made in 1437 by Teramo di Daniele. It is a combination of Gothic panels, tracery, and finials of the most delicate workmanship in silver gilt. The sides are covered with the history of St. John; the figures being almost detached from the background.

On the N., at No. 12, Via Arcive-scovado, is a small 13th cent. Cloister of round arches, originally in two stories. Only the N. side and part of the W. remain.

Many churches were demolished during the French occupation. Among those which remain, the most important are alternate courses of white and black marble, is remarkable.

8. Ambrogio (C. 4) was built for the Jesuits at the expense of the Pallavicini family. The interior is covered with showy marbles, mosaics, gold, and colours. The 3rd chapel on the rt. has a colossal Assumption by Guido Reni, a powerful composition, with fine heads, "one of those masterpieces which leave one cold," Cic. The Circumcision, over the High Altar, by Rubens, was painted before he came to Genoa, in ignorance of the height and the position whence it would be seen, and in it "he still struggles with the conception and colour of the Caracci," Cic. Ignatius healing a Demoniac, in the l. aisle, "is in conception, form, and colour of a refined noble naturalism. which immensely surpasses the Neopolitans: in the Saint, for instance, the Spanish nobleman is still represented, his expression immensely brought out by the cunning indifferent character of the priests and chorister boys around him," Cic. The four fine Corinthian columns at the high altar are of Porto Venere marble.

The Annunziata (A. 4) was rebuilt in 1587 and decorated at the expense of the Lomellini family, formerly sovereigns of the island of Tabarca off the N. coast of Africa, which they held until 1741, when it was taken by the Bey of Tunis. The interior, rich in marbles, has been regilded and restored in a gaudy style. Over the entrance, in a bad light, is the Last Supper, by Procaccini. In the 1st chapel on the l. are three horrible but vigorous martyrdoms, by Genoese artists.

The Annunziata di Portoria, N. of S. Stefano (C. 5), has a good Renaissance double doorway.

8. Cosma (C. 4) has a good roundheaded doorway, six old columns in the nave, and a 14th. cent. Virgin and Child on gold ground to the l. of the high altar.

Ban Donato (C. 4) stands on the site of a more ancient edifice, some of whose columns, in granite and cipolline, it retains. At the first alter on the l. is an Adorution of the Magi, by a Netherlandish master, The octagonal bell-tower is of an early period.

Ban Giovanni di Prè (A. B. 4) was built by the Knights of St. John, m the 13th cent. some of the round arches of the original edifice are still visible; the present cutrance has been cut into the tribune at the E. extremity of the old Church, at a later period. It was in a rich convent attached thereto that Urban V. resided on his return from Avignon. Some remains of the ancient Clouters may be yet seen. Here also Urban VI caused to be barbarously executed five cardinals, made prisoners at the siege of Lucera in 1386; the 6th, Cardinal Adam of Hertford, 18 said to have been spared in consequence of the intercession of his countrymen, then influential at Genoa. In making some excavations the skeletons of these unfortunate victims of Papal vengeance were discovered. The CRYPT, now used as a warehouse, dates from 1261, but is singularly like English work of a century earlier. Most of the capitals are cushioned, but some are carved, and these are of later character. The head of S. John the Baptist in a recess over the doorway, with an inscription round it, is very curious. The letters have small letters inserted in them, a custom of the 11th cent, or earlier,

The uppermost inscription commemorates the great naval victory of Scorzola (Sept. 7, 1298) gained by the Genoese, under Doria, over the Venetian fleet commanded by Andrea Dandolo, both being amongst the most honoured names in the military annals of Italy. Maurus, Eleuterius, and Maximus, brought here from Istria by Pagano Doria. On the l. is a well-carved Organ-loft.

In the Crypt beneath the high altar is the tomb of Andrea Doria, also by Montorsoli, who executed the stucco designs in the vault representing the deeds of the great Andrea. In the adjoining *Cloister (early 14th cent.), are several sepulchral inscriptions of the Doria family, brought from the suppressed church of S. In the adjoining Piazza are some curious specimens of 15th domestic architecture. Over the door of the House in the S.W. corner is an inscription stating that it was given to Andrea Doria by the Republic: Senat. Cons. Andrex de Oria Patrix Liberatori Munus Publicum. Here A. Doria lived—it was in this small square that he assembled his fellow-citizens in 1528, to consult on the means for driving off the French, by whom Genoa was then besieged. The doorway has some beautifully sculptured arabesques. Over the door of a House facing the W. front is a curious relief of St. George and the Dragon, with the Virgin and a Doge of Genoa; and on another a long inscription relative to the victories gained by one of the Doria family, to whom it belonged. S. of the Church is another ornamented doorway, surmounted by a relief; and at No. 1 Via David Chiossone, leading out of the Piazza to the N.W., is a curious relief representing a conqueror in a triumphal car drawn by centaurs.

Near S. Matteo are the Industrial Schools (Scuole Techniche), the staircase leading to which is decorated with encaustic tiles, made at Savona.

San Siro (B. 4), the most ancient Christian foundation in Genoa, is associated with important events in its history. It was until 904 the Cathedral, under the title of the Basilica dei Dodici Apostoli. In this church the assemblies of the people were held

[†] This mode of construction was confined at Genoa to public edifices and to buildings erected by the Commune. The four great families of Doria, Grimaldi, Spinola, and Fieschi, alone among the patricians, had the privilege of employing it.

Here Guglielmo Boccanegra was proclaimed Capitano del Popolo in 1257. Hithert) the powers of government had been wholly enjoyed by the anstocracy. This revolution first broke down the barrier; and although the office of Capitano del Popolo d.d not continue permanent, it prepared the way for great changes in the constatution. Here, in 1339, Simone Boccanegra was created the first Doge of Genoa, amidst cries of " Veva il popolo!" marking the influence by which he had been raised. His election was, in fact, the crisis of another revolution: the government was completely transferred from the nobles to the people.

The actual Church exhibits few traces of the original edifice, but the companile behind is of early date. The interior is handsome, in the Renaissance style. PALACEST AND PICTURE GALLERIES,

The most striking Palazzi in Genoa are those of the Via Garibaldi (formerly Nuova), Via Nuovissima, and Via Balbi. "The usual disposition exhibits a large hall supported partly on columns leading to a court surrounded by arcades, the arches of which likewise rest upon columns. Sometimes, on one side of the street these courts are on a level with the external pavement; while on the other the rapid rise of the ground compensated by a flight of market steps. Beyond this court is the grad staircase rising on each hand, and further still is frequently a small parden, shaded with oranges; so far the composition is admirable. The ion perspective of halls, courts, columns arches, and flights of steps, produce a magnificent effect. But the chief merit of the buildings her in the parts. There are internally home apartments, but by no means of man nificence corresponding to that of the entrance."- Woods. Many of the contain pictures by Rubens and La dyck, both of whom resided here, as the number of portraits left by the latter borders on the moredible.

The more remarkable are -

Palazzo Adorno (not always visible) No. 10, Via Garibaldi, designed by Alessi. The four emment families the Capellazzi (Adorni, Guarchi, Fregosi, and Montaldi), from 1550 W 1528, contested amongst themselve the government of the republic. The are here some good freecoes b Taverone, the subjects being take from Genoese history. The picture include '-Dejamra and Hercules ! the Garden of the Hesperides ! The Arcivescovado (Archiepiscopal : Palace) contains some good frescoes by L. Cambiaso.

*Palamo Balbi Senarega, No. 4, Strada Balbi (Adm. 10 to 4, 1 fr.). A fine palace, built in the early part of the 17th cent., from the designs of Bart. Bianco and Pier Ant. Corradi. The court is surrounded by Doric colonnades. The rooms are richly decorated, and give a good idea of the dwellings of the wealthy Genoese aristocracy: the vaulted ceilings are painted by native artists. The Picture Gallery ranks third in importance in Genoa.

The GREAT HALL (SALONE) is a magnificent square room, and contains -Vandyck, *Equestrian portrait of Francesco Maria Balbi; Bernardino Strozzi (Il Cappuccino), Joseph interpreting the Chief Butler's Dream. 2nd Room.— Titian, Virgin and Child, with SS. Palazzo Durazzo (formerly Brignole), in the Piazza Brignole, with two colossal Terms at the portal. The vestibule is decorated with modern arabesques and frescoes. Here is preserved an extensive collection of Engravings, said to exceed 50,000 in number.

*Palazzo Brignole Sale, also called Palazzo Rosso, from the outside being painted red, is in the Strada Nuova, No. 18: its front is very extensive, and, were it not for its colour, the architecture would appear to advantage. A splendid suite of rooms on the second floor contains the extensive Picture Gallery (Adm. on Mon., Thurs., and Sat., 10 to 3; Library on Mon. and Thurs.). Hand catalogues in French and Italian in each room.

The Duchess of Galliera, only daughter of the late Marquis Brignole, with the consent of her husband, munificently presented this Palace to the city in 1874, with its gallery, library, and other contents, and an endowment for its maintenance.

ROOMS I. and II. contain ceiling decorations and portraits.

ROOM III.—Guercino, *Cleopatra; Strozzi, Cook plucking a Swan; Charity; L. Cambiaso, Holy Family.

ROOM IV.—(SALONE), a magnificent square hall, the ceiling decorated with armorial bearings. Frescoes by Deferrari are on the roof. On one of the tables is a large model, in white marble and bronze, of a monument to Columbus, executed by Razzi at the expense of Marquis Brignole. Pictures by Domenico Piola, and Guido Bono, Genoese artists.

ROOM V.—STANZA DELLA PRIMA-VERA.—Paris Bordone, Lady's portrait; Titian, Man's portrait; Moretto, *Botanist (1533); Tintoretto, Man's portrait; *Vandyck, Marcantonio Giulio Brignole Sale on horseback, and his wife; Prince of Orange in armour Portraits of father and son; Titiun, Philip II.; Gracomo Bassano, Portraits of father and son; Paris Bordone, *Man with red sleeves, "a won-

Palazzo Cambiaso (Gambaro), at the corner of the Via Garibaldi and Plazza Fontane Morose (No. 2), an excellent specimen of architecture, Genon-a bronze tolde, contamos to the proportions being barmonious award made A. U. C. 655, by Com without superfluous ornament. Adjacent is the Palazzo Carrega (Cataldí), by G B. Castello (1560), with a handsome staircase.

Palazzo Cattaneo, near the Church of San Giorgio (C. 4), has eight portraits by Vandyck in a room on the second floor.

Palazzo Municipale (Dorio-Tura). Via Gariba.di, No. 9, built by Reco Lurago, of Como, for the Doge Nice cold Orimaldi, from whom it passed to one of the Doria family, created Duke of Tursi, The fine front flanked by terraces with open arcades, upon which rest gardens In the lower cortile are some very medical frescoes relative to the visit to General of Don John of Austria, removed from the Ducal Palace. On the stairs and frescoes by Carlone, removed from the demolished Church of S. Set tiano, and a statue of Joseph Mazzo by Saccomanno. On the first floor be the Council Chamber, is a bust of Columbus; a box, supported by hollow pillar, containing some miceesting MSS of that great navigator and three autigraph letters one to the Bank of St. George, transmitting his will (1502), by which he bequeathed one-tenth of all he possessed to that establishment, and another to Oderigo, the Genoese agert a Spain, complaining that the bank bed never acknowledged the receipt of the will. No trace of the will has been discovered amongst the records of the Banco di S. Giorgio. The two notes heads of Columbus and Marco Pale by Salviati, were presented to the off by Venice in 1868.

In the next room is a Madonne between St. Jerome and a History b Gerard David, of Bruges , a Crue fixion, by some old Necherlands master (not Darer); and a tripty ske with the Adorat. in of the May. & ..

Here also is one of the most remarkable monuments of the history of Marcus Minutius and Q. F. Rufus, between the Genuenses and the Viturii, supposed to be the inhabitants of Langasco and Voltaggio, in the upper valley of the Polcevera, who had been disputing about the extent of their respective territories, and had appealed to the Senate from the local authorities. The table was discovered in 1506 by a peasant when digging his land near Piedimonte, 6 m. from Genoa. He brought it to Genoa for the purpose of selling it as old metal; but the Senate purchased it for the commonwealth.

In an adjoining cabinet are Paganini's portrait; his violin, attributed to Stradevarius; and a piece of embroidery representing the martyrdom of St. Lawrence, said to date from A.D. 1001—a gift of the Greek Emperor Palæologus.

Palazzo Giorgio Doria, 6, Via Garibaldi (not always shown), contains a fine full-length portrait of a Lady, by Vandyck; the Duchess of Sforza Cesarini, School of Leonardo da Vinci; and a Shepherd and Shepherdess, by Benedetto Castiglione.

Palazzo Doria (A. 3). The gardens, towards the sea, form a fine feature in the panorama of the port. This pile was given to the great Audrea Doria, in 1522, and partly rebuilt by him in The stately feelings of this Doria, who is emphatically called "Il Principe" (for that title of dignity had been granted to him by Charles V.), are expressed in the inscription which is engraved on the exterior of the edifice: "Divino munere, Andreas D'Oria Cevæ F. S. R. Ecclesiæ Caroli Imperatoris Catolici maximi et invictissimi Francisci primi Francorum Regis et Patriæ classis triremium IIII. præfectus ut maximo labore jam fesso corpore honesto otio quiesceret, ædes successoribus instauravit, sibi æt M.D.XXXVIII." Doria's architect was Montorsoli, a Florentine; but many portions were designed by Pierino del Vaga, who, sorrowful and needy, driven from Rome by the calamities which had befallen the Eternal City N. Italy.

when stormed by the Imperialists in 1527, was kindly received by Doria. He worked here, not merely as a painter, but as a general decorator; and it was Doria's express wish to reproduce in his palace, as much as possible, the magnificence of the buildings which Raphael had adorned at Rome. Andrea died in 1560, at the age of 92.

The decorations introduced by Pierino are still to be seen, after having undergone restoration (1845), on the staircase, in the vestibule, and in some of the rooms. The best is the defeat of the Titans by Jupiter, on the ceiling of the Saloon. Here also is a portrait of Andrea with his favourite cat, and a handsome chimney-piece. In the gallery that leads to the terrace above the garden are por-Andrea Doria and his of traits The figures are in a semifamily. heroic costume; Andrea Doria is grey-headed, his sons are helmeted. and supporting themselves upon their shields. In the garden are walks of cypress and orange, fountains, statues. The fountain in the and vases. centre represents Andrea in the character of Neptune, by Carlone. the other side of the Rly. is another garden, with a monument raised by Giovanni Doria to Il gran Roldano, a favourite dog (d. 1605, aged 9): here also is a grotto built by Alessio, now almost a ruin, and a colossal Statue of The successive employ-Hercules. ments held by Doria enabled him to acquire great wealth. With these riches he kept a fleet of 22 galleys; a force with which he turned the scale against the French, and accomplished the deliverance of Genoa (11th Sept. 1528) from the heavy yoke which they imposed.

It was under Doria's influence and counsel that the form of government was established in Genoa which lasted till the French revolution. He was offered the ducal authority for life, and there is no doubt but that he might have acquired the absolute sovereignty (see p. 500). The elder branch of the Doria family, to whom this palace belongs, since its alliance with the Papal family of Pamphili, resides at Rome.

Palazzo Ducale, in the Piazza Nuova (C. 4), was formerly the residence of the Doges of the republic, who held office for two years. The great dungeon tower, with its grated windows, is the only part of the 13th cent. building which now remains. The Palace now contains the law courts, the prefecture, and offices connected with the public administration, as well as the telegraph office. The front is ornamented with columns, and statues of Genoese worthies. The vestibule, forming a large hall, is supported by 80 columns of white marble: a fine staircase leads, on the rt., to the apartments of the governor, on the 1. to the hall of the senate. The latter is decorated with indifferent paintings. of subjects connected with the history of Genoa. Of these, the best are copies from pictures of Solimena, that existed before the fire of 1777, the Deposition of the Relics of St. John the Baptist, and the Discovery of America by Columbus. There is also a large picture by I. David, representing the battle of Meloria. The hall also contained statues of the great men of Genoa. These were destroyed by the republicans of 1797, and upon occasion of the fête given to Napoleon as the restorer of the liberties of Italy, their places were supplied by statues of straw and wicker work, coated with plaster of Paris, which still remain. The great hall, 130 ft. by 55, has 56 columns and pilasters of broccatello marble, with yellow marble pediments.

Palazzo Marcello Durazzo, formerly della Scala, 1, Via Balbi, was erected in the 17th cent., by Bart. Blanco. The beautiful court is surrounded by a Doric colonnade of white marble, from a corner of which opens the *flight of stairs, designed by And. Tugliafice, which gave the Palace its at the accession of Elizabeth pare. It is rich, but confused in not then reconcile himself to details. Babraham in Cambridgeshire, and became afterwards allied by marriage with the Cromwells. The palace contains a fine staircase. The collection of pictures formerly here is dispersed amongst co-heiresses, the largest part being removed to the Pal. Marcello Durazzo.

There is another large Palazzo Pallavicini (Luigi), in the Piazza Fontane Amorose (No. 27).

Palazzo Reale, 10, Via Balbi (open daily), formerly belonging to the Durazzo family, was purchased by the King of Sardinia in 1815, and splendidly fitted up by Charles Albert in 1842, as a royal residence. It is the largest and handsomest palace in Genoa. The front is nearly 300 feet in length; it was built from the designs of G. A. Falcone and P. F. The greater part of the Cantone. pictures have been removed to the Royal Gallery at Turin.

Among those which remain are a good portrait of the Lombard School, and the Woman taken in adultery, attributed to Moretto.

Palazzo Serra, Via Garibaldi, No. 12, by Alessi—a green house with large Terms at the door. The gilding of the saloon is said to have cost a million of francs, and with the white marble reliefs, caryatides, mirrors, and mosaic pavement, procured for this palace its name of the Palazzo del Sole.

Palazzo Spinola, Via Garibaldi, No. 5, a large and fine building, has Frescoes by Semino; Agostino Spinola on horseback, by Vandyck; a remarkable portrait of a Philosopher in a black dress, by Sebastiano del Piombo; a finely preserved and beautifully painted circular picture of the Virgin and child, by Beccafumi; a Madonna, by Vandyck; and a Holy Family, with two Saints, by Luini, "excellent, pro-- bably by Andrea Salaino," Cic.

black marble; in front are five niches containing statues of members of the family, with inscriptions in Gothic characters beneath. Within are frescoes by Cambiaso of the Combat of the Titans, executed at eighteen years

There is a third Pal. Spinola in the Salita di S. Catarina (B. 5), which has been curtailed in the course of recent street improvements.

*Palazzo dell' Università, Via Balbi, No. 5, was erected at the expense of the Balbi family, from the designs of Bart. Bianco, and for the use of the Jesuits, who held it until their expulsion in 1773. The vestibule and the noble cortile are amongst the finest specimens of the kind. Two huge lions flank the staircase. The halls are decorated with frescoes in honour of the Jesuits by Genoese painters, and with oil pictures. Hall of Medicine contains some bronze statues by Giovanni Bologna; in the Great Hall are six Virtues by the same sculptor; and in a third room above are a number of reliefs in bronze. The bronze relief of the Entombment is by Francavilla. The Museum of Natural History contains a good collection of the birds and fishes of this part of Italy. The Library (open daily) contains 70,000 vols. There is also a collection of ancient Genoese The University consists of three faculties, Law, Medicine, and Humanities. In each there is a senate composed of twelve doctors, by whom the degrees are conferred. In the Church belonging to the University is a relief in bronze, and in the Sacristy a good Descent from the Cross, both by Giov. Bologna. Behind the University Palace is a small Botanic Garden; in the court leading to it several curious inscriptions removed from suppressed churches, and on the top of the palace a Meteorological Observatory.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The Accademia delle Belle Arti, clos built of alternate courses of white and to the Theatre in the Piazza Deferre 5 K 3 was founded by the Deria family. The society consists of Protettori, or subscribing patrons, and of working academicians. The building contains numerous schools in the different departments of art, attended by a large body of pupils. On the stairs are four fine columns of Porto Venere marble, from the suppressed church of San Domenico.

The 1st room contains a beautiful *Coronation of the Virgin by Luca della Robbia, with SS. John Bapt., Mary Magd, Bernardino, Francis, and two others. In the 2nd room are several good single figures of Saints, by unknown masters. Then follows a sinte of rooms with modern pictures, bronzes, majolica, and casts.

The Public Library (in summer 7 A.M. to 10 PM, in winter 8 to 11), on the second floor, contains nearly 50,000 vols., including many useful modern works.

In the Land Arsenal (A. 3) are many curious objects, formerly deposited in the Ducal Palace: a rostrum of an ancient galley, Roman, or Carthaginian, found in the port; a connon of wood bound round with iron, said to have been employed by the Venetians in the defence of Chioggia, when attacked by the Genoese fleet; a good store of halberts, partizans, and other weapons, many of unusual forms.

The Exchange, or Loggia de' Banchi (B 4), is an interesting monument of the ancient commercial splendour of Genoa. It consists of a large hall, the sides of which are supported by arches now glazed in, built by Galeazzo Alessi The roof is skilfully (1570-1596). constructed, the tie-beams being concealed in the concave of the ceiling; and the quantity of wall upon which the roof rests is so small, that the whole is considered as a very bold effort in construction. The fine marble STATUE of Count Cayour is by Vela. In front is the place of meeting of the corn and oil merchants—an animated scene during the hours of business.

The historical Banco di San Giorgie (B. 4), now degraded into the Custom-house, was the most ancient banking and trading company in Furope It was founded in 1346, and is admed with statues of local worthies, but in no longer shown. On the 1st floor are the Archives.

The Teatro Carlo Felice is an elecutatructure. It was opened in 1828, and ranks in size after the Scala at Mi'm, the S. Carlo at Naples, and the Theorem of Reggio. It is opened for opera and ballets during carnival and spring. Other Theatres are the Politeans Genorese, E. of the Villetta Dinegro, opera and contedy, Paganine B. 54 the same, and various min i places of popular resort, for equestrian performances, pappet-shows, and most.

In the Via Carlo Alberto, near the Piazza Darsena (A. B. 4), is a Statistic of Columbia sin a niche, with an inscrition; and beside it a small group representing Andrea Dorra in the act of refusing the ducal crown and Pal. Dorla).

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS

The great Albergo de' Poveni A 4) was founded in 1655, by Emanuel Brignole, and unites the care of the poor within its walls to the administration tration of many charitable endowness for their benefit. It is a stately building, about 190 yds. square, encloses four large courts. In the centre of the cross which forms the ground plan of the inner washer Chapel, so placed that all the manife can witness the celebration of the Mass without leaving their tels 🚨 the altar is a beautiful marble reid attributed to Michel Angelo. In 🛰 chapel is a statue of the Virgin cending to Heaven, by Punct, me of his best works. This establishment will contain 1300 persons.

The Ospedalo di Pematone (1) was founded by Bartolommeoderla a Doctor of Laws, in 1424, and) from the designs of Andrea Orsolini. It is a large building, adorned with statues of benefactors and supports, on an average, 1000 patients and 3000 foundlings. In front is a fountain with a bronze STATUE OF BATTISTINO BALILLA, a Genoese boy of 15, who on Sept. 5, 1746, threw a stone at the Austrian soldiers who had taken possession of the city under Gen. Botta Adorno, and gave the signal for a spirited and successful resistance.

The Istituto Sordo-Muti, or Deaf and Dumb Asylum, founded by Ottavio Assarotti, a poor monk, in 1801, is celebrated throughout Italy.

The Regio Manicomio (Lunatic Asylum), outside the Porta Romana, is an extensive modern building, consisting of six wings, converging towards a central edifice. It contains 700 patients. The large Hospital of St. Andrew (D. 5) was built by the architect Parodi, at the expense of the munificent Duchess of Galliera.

In and about Genoa there are as many as 15 Institutions styled Conservatorie. They are all intended for females, and all are religious foundations, and regulated according to the monastic system, though the inmates do not take vows. Some are houses of refuge for the unmarried; some penitentiaries for those who wish to abandon their evil courses; some are schools for the higher branches of education; some asylums for girls who are either orphans or the children of parents unable to maintain them. Of these, the largest is that of the Fieschine (B. 6). It was founded in 1762 by Domenico Fieschi, for orphan girls, natives of Genoa, and now contains about 250 inmates; they are employed upon various light works, such as lace and embroidery, but principally in the manufacture of artificial flowers. Half the profits belong to the workers; and with these they are often enabled, not only to relieve their relations, but even to accumulate a little money. The situation of the house, to which large gardens are annezed; is very beautiful,

The *Campo Santo (Public Cemetery) at Staglieno, about 1½ m. outside the Porta Romana, in the valley of the Bisagno, is open daily from 10 A.M. until sunset. (Cab, there and back, waiting an hour, 5 fr.; 2 horses, 7 fr. Omn., 25 c.) It was designed in 1838 by Resasco, and has cost about 44,000l. It consists of a grand quadrangle surrounded by a cloister, in which are arranged the vaults and monuments of the wealthier classes. In some The monucases a vault costs 1500l. ments are chiefly by native artists, including Santo Varni, Gagini, &c. Only the poor are placed in the ground; the rest occupy receptacles for which the lowest sum charged is 500 fr. In the centre of the N. side of the quadrangle is a fine circular chapel, approached by a grand marble staircase. The gallery round the dome is supported by 16 Doric columns, 27 feet high and 11 feet in circumference, every one of a single piece of black Como marble. In the centre of the quadrangle is a colossal statue, 27 feet high, of Faith, by Santo Varni. Far up the hillside in the rock lies Giuseppe Mazzini, in a massive granite tomb, with bronze gates (1872).

This part of the Riviera passes The Rly. through a larger proportion of mountumels to tainous country than that on the western side of Genoa. It has less of a southern aspect, but it has similar beauties of wide-spreading views over the loveliest land and water; it is also finely indented by gulfs and bays, affording good anchorage for the many vessels which enliven the brilliant sea. The most beautiful part is the 8 m. between Rapallo and Chiavari.

RAILWAY.

Much delay was caused in completing this line by the difficulties of the route, and nearly 50 tunnels are pierced between Genoa and Spezia—no slight impediment to the enjoyment of the scenery.

Local trains, in addition to the ordinary traffic, run twice daily in 2 hrs. between Genoa and Chiavari, stopping at 25 stations on the way.

On leaving Genoa (Rte. 122) the train backs out of the Terminal Stat. (Piazza Principe), and then runs in the opposite direction through a long tunnel under the city to the E. Stat. (Piazza Brignole). The Bisagno is crossed, and another tunnel leads to 4 m. Sturla, where we reach the sea. The villages of Quarto and Quinto, which follow in succession, were evidently stations at the 4th and 5th milestones along the Roman way.

The Church of San Siro has much gilding and some tolerable paintings. At Sestri the road turns picturesque object. There are several Albaro (p. 501).

The Church is richly though gaudily decorated with marble, painting, and gilding, in the style of the Annunziata at Genoa. The Genoese coral fishery is principally carried on by feluccas fitted out in this neighbourhood. Very pretty coloured silk lace and elegant flasks, the glass of which is almost unbreakable, are here made. Omn. to Rapallo four times a day by a very Close by, on the charming road. Higher up is a Villa built in 1884 by the late Earl of Carnarvon, where the Crown Prince and Princess (Empress Frederic) stayed in Oct. 1886.]

> 19 m. Rapallo (11,500), a flourishing sea-port, and a pleasant winter residence. It spreads beautifully along the shores of the bay, set off by the churches and a lofty leaning cam-panile of many open stories. The houses are chiefly on arcades. On the sea-shore is a picturesque tower, similar to those on the Riviera di Ponente. Probably it was erected after the towns had been plundered by the corsair Dragutte, the terror of Italy and Spain, who, landing here in the night of 6th July, 1549, sacked the town and carried off a great number of captives.

> The principal Church contains some paintings and curious inscriptionsone supposed to be a dedication of the place by the Emperor Lewis II. in 856. Lace is manufactured here.

Rapallo is celebrated for a festival in honour of the Madonna, which continues during the first three days of July. The processions last throughout the whole night; the illuminations extend along the coast for 3 or 4 miles, the lamps being hung upon stakes fixed into the sands.

2 hrs. N.E. rises the Chapel of Montallegro (2015 ft.), surrounded by fine mountain scenery. It was founded about 1557, in honour of a painting cast on shore from a ship-wrecked vessel, to which are attributed miraculous powers. The picture is of Greek workmanship, and execrable as a work of art.

On the descent, a path to the rt. leads through ilex woods to Rapallo by the Church of S. Ambrogio, commanding lovely views.

An excellent carriage-road ascends; S.W. from Rapallo to (4 m.) Ruta, passing San Lorenzo della Costa, where is an old German triptych of the Marriage in Cana, Martyrdom of St. Andrew, and Raising of Lazarus. Also a Holy Family and Martyrdom of the patron Saint, by Luca Cambiaso. From Ruta a path turns 1. along the ridge of the hills to the (1 hr.) Semaforo (2015 ft.), a *Telegraph Station commanding splendid views. the foot of the final ascent a path descends rt. to San Rocco, and another 1. to Porto Fino. From the latter, on reaching the (1 hr.) crest of the hill, a path descends steeply rt. in ½ hr. to San Fruttuoso, a desecrated monastery in a picturesque solitary site, near the sea, at the opening of a deep ravine. It is now occupied by fishermen. The dilapidated Church was restored in In a sepulchral chapel in the cloister are some good Gothic tombs, in very neglected condition, of the Doria family. A little further is a cave on the beach where a boat may be taken round the point of Porto Fino, and along the rocky coast, to Pagi, near S. Margherita—a pleasant row of 2 hrs. (3 fr.).

In walking from San Fruttuoso to (2 hrs.) Porto Fino, just above the first house on the ascent towards the Semaforo, a path turns rt., and bearing well to the l. on the summit of the ridge, joins the main path from the Telegraph Station.

From Ruta a path strikes N. along the crest of the hill, passing a very ancient desecrated Church, to the (14 hr.) Cappella di Caravaggio, conspicuous on the summit of a conical hill. *Panaroma very fine, including | luxuriantly, even in the very sand the range of the Apennines inland, | the shore; and at some points of the

From the foot of the rough stairs by which the final ascent is made, a path descends steeply in an hour to S. M. di Campo, 2 m. by road from Rapallo.

Beyond Rapallo, the Rly. skirts several beautiful little bays, with short tunnels between them, but much of the fine scenery is lost.

21 m. Zoagli. Here most of the famous Genoa velvet is made. *carriage-road between this point and Chiavari ascends high above the sea, winding in and out of several deep ravines, and offering some of the finest coast scenery in Europe. At the top of the ascent is the Church of S. M. delle Grazie, with damaged frescoes by Piaggia (1508), worth lacksquarevisit.

24 m. Chiàvari (12,000), chief city of the province, in the centre of a wide Many of the streets are lined with arcades, whose arches are pointed and circular, with capitals which would puzzle an architect by their similarity to our early Norman, though probably not older than the 16th cent.

of the municipality.

Around Chiavari the agave grows

when these plants constitute the foreground, and the fantastic, mosque-like cupolas of the churches are seen in the distance, the scene assumes almost an oriental character. On leaving Chiavari the large monastery of Santa Chiara is passed on the l. and the Entella is crossed to 26 m. Lavagna (6000), busy with its slates and ship-building. The path leading to the slate-quarries passes near to the Church of San Salvatore, founded by Innocent IV., a native of the town (1243-1254), and completed by Adrian V. Both pontiffs were of the Fieschi family. The quarries, though not very picturesque in form or colour, are striking from their extent. slates (Laragne) are of a good quality, and might be split into slabs of 10 or 12 ft. in length, but for convenience of carriage they are reduced to about 3 ft. by 4. An argument for the antiquity of the employment of this material is found in the name of the Tegullii, the Ligurian tribe who inhabited this part of the coast previous There are to the Roman conquest. other quarries between Lavagna and Sestri, but nearer the sea. A strange red Palace, with bartizan towers, is The large here a conspicuous object. white marble Church is one of the most imposing on the Riviera and the adjoining Campo Santo has some handsome tombs.

[Carriage-road to Spezia (two horses, 50 fr.). The road runs inland, and ascends through a bare country, terraced on shoulders of the hills, and passing many lateral valleys whose sides end in headlands stretching into the sea. The most considerable village seen on the coast is Moneglia. The road, winding amongst rocks scantily covered with grass, ascends to

7 m. Bracco (1350 ft.), in a comparatively fertile nook, screened by still higher summits, and looking down a long green vista on the blue sea far below. The view embraces the Bay of Moneglia, Sestri, and its high promontory, the bay of Rapallo, and the headland of Porto Fino beyond. The ascent continues to 14 m. Osteria Baracca (2235 ft.), where cultivation nearly ceases. The views both towards the sea and inland are very fine.

The geologist will find much to interest him between Sestri and the Pass, where he will be able to examine one of the finest eruptions of serpentine in Italy. On the ascent the serpentine may be seen piercing through the beds of calcareous slate, of the age of our chalk. Some good sections may be observed near the pass: in the cuttings made for the post-road the serpentine and diallage rocks will be seen not only forming veins or dykes in the limestone, but through each The country E. of the Pass is other. cut into deep ravines, and wherever the serpentine appears, the bareness and desolation so characteristic of this rock in every part of the world are 19 m. Mattarana (1600 ft.). Further on is the village of Caradano inferiore, whence a steep ascent leads to Roverano, where there is an interesting contact of the serpentine with secondary strata. This low pass leads into the ravine, near which, at its junction with the Vara, is situated the village of 26 m. Borghetto.

The road hence lies for a time near the bed of the Vara, a tributary of the Magra, and, after ascending the Retto torrent to San Benedetto, or La Foce di Spezia (p. 507), a long descent, during which the traveller will enjoy many beautiful peeps over the subjacent bay and the distant mountains of Carrara, leads to 40 m. Spezia.]

Beyond Sestri the Rly, quits the coast, passing behind some considerable hills. Numerous tunnels lead to 35 m. Moneglia (2000), with remains of its mediaval fortifications and battlemented wall on the hill to the W.

43 m. Lövanto (5000), a good bathing place, surrounded by overhanging hills. Rough road N.W. to (8 m.) Osteria Baracca (see above). In the Church of the Minor Friare is a painting attributed to Andrea del Castagno, one of the first who practises oil painting in Italy. The subject is St. George and the Dragon, and the action is that for which Pistrucci was so much criticised in his design on the sovereigns of Geo. III. The spear is broken, and St. George is despatching the moneter with his sword. The picture was carried off by the French, and the Louvre number is yet upon the frame. The principal Church (1463) is a fine building, though sadly modernized. Several of the houses bear marks of antiquity. A small district in this neighbourhood belonging to five villages or communities, and thence known as the Cinque Terre, is remarkable for the beauty of its scenery, the primitive simplicity of its inhabitants, and the excellence of its wine. The vineyards in some places overhang the sea.

46 m. Monterosso. This Church (1307) is also after the Genoese model. The sanctuary of the Madonna di Soviere on a lofty rock commands a most extensive prospect, reaching to the island of Coraca. The annual feast of the Virgin (15 August) is attended by great numbers of people from the adjoining ports. The coast between the Capes of Monterosso and Porto Venere is extremely bold and urid.

48 m. Vernazza. The "vino amabile" of this district had anciently a very high character. From Vernazza on about 150 acres of ground, a came the Vernaceat, quoted by Boccaccio extensive Dockyard S W. of the and Sacchetti as the very paragon of in which the largest non-clad to good liquor. The present growth however, seems to have declined in quality. Oranges and lemons grow well, and the fan-palm and the cactain opuntia flourish. Four tunners, the last of which is more than a nule long!

57 m. SPEZIA (29,000), a busy fortified town, the chief naval arsenal of Italy, situated in the deepest part of its bay, which is formed by branches of the Apennines advancing into the sea. There is much trade in wine and oil, which are produced abundantly from the hills around; while in the neighbourhood are important quarries of paving atone and marble. Orange and remons are exported to the shores of the Black Sea.

Spezia is much frequented by Italian families for sea-bathing, and by the English as a health-resort in winter.

The beautiful country is studded with villas, each in its own thicket of luxuriant foliage, intermingled with the olive and the vine. An ancient Castle or tower, upon which the "biscia," or viper, of the Visconti . yet to be seen, and a round citadel built by the Genoese, are conspicuous objecta.

The Gulf of Spexia was known by the ancients as the Gulf of Luna Its situation is accurately described by Strabo as a geographer, and its chimate. by Persius, who found a retreat on its war are built and repaired. Permission to view can be obtained at the British Vice-Consulate.

In front of the Arsenal is a marble Statue of General Domenico Chiodo, the constructor. In Sept. 1890, Adm. Principe Tommaso, Duke of Genoa, laid the first stone of a new Mercantile Port, which will add very considerably to the commercial importance of the town.

The beautiful scenery of the Gulf of Spezia can be best seen by coasting along its shores in a boat. The road on the W. side affords a beautiful drive as far as (8 m.) Porto Venere (carriage, 10 frs.). Steamer twice daily in 1½ hr., there and back, 50 c.

There are eight coves on the W. side of the gulf. Beginning at the N., they occur in the following order:-1. Marolla, to which the pedestrian should cross from Spezia by boat, so as to avoid the long circuit round the Arsenal; 2. Cassa di Mare, in the mouth of which rises the Polla spring. This remarkable phenomenon results from the gush of an abundant submarine freshwater spring, in reality a natural artesian well on a gigantic It occupies a circular space 25 ft. in circumference, and sometimes rises above the adjoining sea-level; 3. Fezzano; 4. Panigaglia, where Napoleon wished to make his dockyard; 5. Delle Grazie; 6. Varignano, where is the quarantine ground for vessels arriving at Genoa, an extensive lazzaretto, and fortifications; 7. La Castagna; 8. Porto Venere (2200), at the extremity of the S.W. promontory of the Gulf, one of the most picturesque places on the coast. The temple of Venus, from which this town is supposed to derive its name, stood probably on the site of the dilapidated Gothic Church of San Pietro, striped black and white, in a lonely spot close to the sea, from which there is a magnificent view. At San Lorenzo, in the village above, are two interesting early paintings, and a doorway with spiral columns. The marble of the rock upon which Porto Venere stands -black, with gold-coloured veins-is ceedingly beautiful. The Genoese acquired Porto Venere in the year 1113, and encircled it with walls and towers, of which some portions remain. Four of the most illustrious families of Genoa were sent to rule the colony. The dialect of the inhabitants is still pure Genoese, differing from that of the neighbouring villages.

Opposite Porto Venere is the island of Palmaria, a mile across, and S. of it the two smaller ones of Tino and Tinetto. In Palmaria are quaries of the marble called Portor, which has brilliant yellow veins on a deep black ground, like that of Porto Venere. Louis XIV. caused a great deal of it to be worked for the decoration of Versailles. The island commands fine views of the Gulf of Spezia. There is a large circular fortress on it, now a criminal prison. Upon Tino is a lighthouse.

The new drive of La Foce, a round of 2 hrs. (10 fr.), gives the best general view of the Bay, Arsenal, Carrara Mountains, and distant Apennines.

On the E. side of the gulf is Lerici, anciently belonging to the Pisans, who fortified it against their rivals both of Lucca and of Genoa. A good road of 10 m. leads to it, by Pitelli. (Steamer from Spezia.) The CASTLE is picturesquely situated on an advancing point, which, sheltering the little cove behind it, forms the harbour. It was at Lerici that Andrea Doria transferred his services from Francis I. to Charles V., and thus gave that preponderance to the influence of the house of Austria in Italy which affected the political situation of the country for so long a time. Lerici is a busy little town, many of its inhabitants being engaged in the building of merchant vessels. Near Lerici are extensive lead works belonging to an the ores being English company, brought from Sardinia.

The Villa Casa Magni (now Macarani), between Lerici and (1 m.) S. Terenzo, was the residence of Shelley the poet in 1822. Here he saw various spectres and apparitions. His yacht was upset in a squall on July 1st, between this place and Leghorn, and his body cast ashore near Viareggio.

A good carriage-road connects Lerici with that between Spezia and Sarzana, falling into it near the bridge over the Magra (see below).

The extreme S.E. point of this beautiful gulf is Punta Bianca, or White Cape, alluding to its marble. A little within it is the Punta del Corvo or Cape Crow, although one side of it is where Dawhite, being formed of the same limestone. The entrance to the gulf is guarded by forts, one upon the Punta di Santa Teresa, N.W. of Lerici, and three on the W. side—the batteries of Palmaria, Pessino, and Santa Maria, of the properties of the propert

The Ligurian commentators unanimously maintain that the well-known description in Virgil of the gulf in which Æneas took refuge after the storm was suggested by the Gulf of Spezia. But that description is closely imitated from the Odyssey, and excepting the island, which Virgil has added, the Gulf of Spezia resembles Homer's harbour quite as much as Virgil's. The two passages are Æn. i. 159–169, and Odyssey, N. 96–112.

Rly. N. to Pontremoli for Parma

(Rte. 113).

On leaving Spezia the Rly. follows a rising ground at the head of the bay, ascending gradually the ridge of hills that separates it from the valley of the Magra, and descending to the river near the village of 61 m. Vezzano Junct. Here the Pontremoli branch turns off l. Four tunnels are passed before reaching 63 m. Arcola. The town, which is singularly picturesque, stands perched on a hill, with a high tower and fine walls; Trebbiano, equally well situated, is a little lower down. After emerging from another tunnel the Rly. crosses the Magra on the same bridge as the carriage-road, a handsome construction of 12 arches, about 3 m. from the sea. A good carriage-road from the bridge trikes off rt. to (4 m.) Lerici.

The Magra (Macra of the Romans) divided the territory of Liguria from the Lunigiana, and the ancient Liguria from Etruria, as it did in more modern times the Genoese from the Tuscan possessions.

Above the W. bank of the Magra, and below Monte Marcello, are the ruins of the monastery of Santa Croca, where Dante sought a refuge, chicdendo pace, as he himself expressed, on his being expelled from Florence; it was also visited by Charles V. and Francis I.

66 m. SARZANA (10,500), now capital of the province of Levante, was the Roman Sergiana, also called Luna Nova, to distinguish it from Luna Vecchia, which it supplanted. ancient government, which subsisted till the French invasion, was rather remarkable, being vested in an assembly called the "Parlamento," not, like the Parlamento of Florence, a primary or democratic meeting, but a mixed aristocratic representative body, composed of nobles, artificers, and peasants, from the district included within the jurisdiction of the municipality.

The *Duomo, built of white marble (1355-1474), is an interesting specimen of early Italian-Gothic. In the W. front is a good and unaltered wheelwindow. The front is remarkable for its simplicity. The interior, although much modernised, still preserves its three fine round arches, separating the nave and aisles, supported by elegant octagonal piers; the transepts, which are short, contain two rich and florid Gothic altars. There is a Massacre of the Innocents in the chapel at the end of the rt. aisle, by Fiusella, surnamed Sarzana, born here in 1589. On the front are three statues, one of Pope Nicholas V. (1447-1455), Thomas of Sarzana, who was a native of this town. Though born of humble parents, he was entirely free from the weakness of nepotism. He was the maificent protector of the Greeks wh driven into Italy after the fall of Co stantinople; an event which, es it said, he took so much to heart, the hastened his end. He was also the founder of the greatest literary repository of Italy—the Vatican Library. It was also from Sarzana that the imperial family of France derived its origin, as shown by the researches of Signor Passerini. The name of Buonaparte, a kind of sobriquet in its origin (as Malaparte was in the Gherardesca family), became the patronymic of a junior branch of the Cadolingi, Lords of Fucecchio, which had settled in the province of Lunigiana, and neighbourhood of Sarzana, where, as proved by contemporary documents, a certain notary called Buonaparte lived in 1264. It was the chief of this branch who emigrated to Corsica (Ajaccio), and from whom descended the family of Napoleon. The genealogy of the Counts of Fucecchio can be traced as far back as the middle of the 10th cent., so that the Imperial family may boast of an origin almost as remote as that of their Bourbon predecessors on the throne of France. The Buonaparte family of S. Miniato was of Sienese origin, and was supposed generally before Signor Passerini's researches, and by the first Napoleon himself, to be that from which the Imperial house derived its origin.

The Castle and the ancient fortifications of the city form an extensive mass of buildings.

The picturesque fort of Sarzanello, above Sarzana, was built by Castruccio Castracani degli Antelminelli, the celebrated Lord of Lucca, for the purpose of defending the territory against the Malaspina princes, from whom it was won. It is a finely preserved specimen of ancient military architecture, with a commanding keep.

Beyond Sarzana the Rly. runs through a fertile plain bounded by the Apennines, of which the views from the train are magnificent. From 73 m. Avenza Junct. a branch line runs N. to Carrara. This place, and the remainder of the Rly. to 103 m. Pisa, are described in the Handbook for Central Italy (Rte. 2).

KILLARNEY.

THE LAKE HOTEL.

The only Hotel in Killarney situated on the Lake Shore, and the only one visited by the Prince, Princess of Wales, and Prince Albert Victor, on their recent visit to Killarnev.

THE HOTEL lately came under new Proprietor and Management; is newly fitted up, and nothing left undone to meet the views of Tourists with regard to comfort and economy. NOTICE OF THE PRESS.—It (THE LAKE HOTEL) is situated on the Bar of Castle-NOTICE OF THE PRESS.—It (THE LAKE HOTEL) is situated on the Bar of Castle-lough, on the eastern shore of the Lower Lake, directly on the water's edge, and within ten minutes drive of the Station. The Pleasure-Grounds cover an area of sixty acres, and are richly wooded and tastefully laid out with evergreens, &c. Adjoining the Hotel is the Abbey of Muckross—access at all times. The situation of the Hotel is unsurpassed; occupying the centre of the circle, described by the mountain ranges of Maugerton, Torc, Eagle's Nest, Purple Mountains, Glena, Toomies, Dunloe Gap, and Carrantual; it concentrates in one view all that is graceful, picturesque, and sublime in the scenery of Killarney. The Bed-Rooms and Sitting-Rooms face the Lake, and the arrangements of the Hotel are all that can be desired.—Harney's Handbook for Travellers in Europe and Hotel are all that can be desired.—Harper's Handbook for Travellers in Europe and E. BERNESE OBERLAND. | BERNESE OBERLAND.

PRINCIPAL place for Tourists in Switzerland; also interesting as the Confederation meeting place. The real key to the Bernese Oberland. Naples, Constantinople and THUN are, according to ALEX VON. HUMBOLUT, the three most beautiful places in the world. As a climatic health resort, 571 metres above the sea, sheltered from the north wind, the variations of temperature scarcely being felt, THUN is coming more and more into notice, and few other places are more suitable for a prolonged summer stay. Peculiar facilities for excursions to all parts of the Bernese Oberland and over the Brunig. First Railway, Steamboat and Postal communication. Regular Pleasure Trips on the Lake. Orchestra. Fine views of the grants of the Oberland Alps. The Thunerhof Hotel is a house of the first rank and much liked by the Tourist world. Park-like grounds. Station for the steamers. Complete comfort.
